A narrow gauge railroad runs about 110 miles to Cali, the chief city of this department, said to be a fine little city of some 25,000 inhabitants. We obtained several copies of the Relator, its daily paper, which is quite creditable and gave us the latest news from home and a report of brewing trouble between Peru and Chile. Beyond Cali the railroad extends in two directions for almost 100 miles, and affords the best means of reaching Bogota, the capital of the Republic, 250 miles back among the high mountains. This portion of Colombia has many valuable products and with the improvement of the harbor would afford much trade both in and out. The Colombian government is now spending several hundred thousand dollars on a big concrete pier which will provide dock facilities for big ships. When the channel is dredged and marked, the harbor of Buenaventura will be one of the best. Three small rivers emptying here and others nearby give transportation in small steamboats for a considerable area.

We were unusually fortunate in that Senor Marco Fidel Suares, the president of Colombia, passed through during our stay. He had been inspecting the platinum mines up the San Juan River, and came into Buenaventura on a tug, the Bolivar. Landing, he was met by the local and department officials and escorted to his waiting train. He is rather large for a Latin American, and swarthy, but dignified. He is considered an able man, and, although a Conservative and not very popular, is seeking to promote every interest of his country. In visiting and studying the outlying departments, he is pursuing an almost unprecedented course, which may bring results. It would be unfair to judge Colombia as a whole by this village. Even as a poor, dirty port, it makes an American wish that its wonderful possibilities might be realized, because, transformed, as Colon in the Canal Zone has been, it might become a great seaport. The climate is not bad. Although it is under the equatorial sun, while we were there, at the beginning of its summer, we did not suffer with heat. Indeed it was like a May day in Southern Dixie.

The Republic of Colombia offers some of the greatest opportunities in the world. Its area is nearly twice that of Texas and its population one-third more, while its natural resources are unusually rich and varied. It has vast forests which furnish fine lumber and vegetable ivory and rubber, and immense areas of splendid grazing lands. It might easily become one of the greatest cattle countries. Its agricultural possibilities are enormous. Even now it is the second coffee-producing country, being surpassed by Brazil alone. It is admirably adapted to the production of cocoa, the bean from which chocolate is made, and sugar cane, tobacco, and bananas flourish. In the highlands apples, peaches, berries, potatoes, wheat and barley are successfully grown. The mineral wealth is beyond calculation. Russia alone produces more platinum. Practically all of the world's emeralds come from Colombia. Gold is found in every section, and silver, mercury, copper, iron, asphalt, lead, coal, and petroleum abound. There are also salt mines and pearl fisheries.

Transporation facilities are poor, as there are only 700 miles of railroad, and with the exception of the Magdalena River, navigable 900 miles, there are few waterways, and the highways are for the most part mere trails.

The location of Colombia is fine, as it fronts both the Carribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean, and it consists largely of elevated plateaux, with narrow, fertile coastal areas. Three ranges of the Andes run through the interior, where an elevation of 18,400 ft. is attained. These conditions give diversified country and climate. Although in the torrid zone, the climate is generally pleasant. Bogota, the capital city, with a population of 150,000, is at an altitude of 8,564 feet, and has an average temperature of 53 degrees. It is beautifully located.

The government, under the Constitution of 1886, is a centralized republic, and is fairly stable. It has had its revolutions and may have others, but under whatever party, the leaders are anxious to maintain the respect of the strong powers, and fair protection is afforded foreign interests. The financial condition may be judged by the fact that the peso is at par, and paper money is readily converted into gold.

While there are universities at Bogota (founded in 1572), Medellin, and Cartagena, and schools of mines at Madellin and Pasto, and 31 normal schools, education, with only 335,000 pupils in 5225 very ordinary elementary schools, is not really reaching the people.

While our government is held responsible for the secession of Panama, the feeling is not hostile, and if our Congress appropriates the proposed $25,000,000 as an indemnity, as should be done, the Colombians will become reconciled and our relations thoroughly friendly. The desire of Colombia to have the full recognition of the great powers and the need for outside capital tend to stabilize relations. The best-informed foreign residents seem to believe that outside capital may now be safely invested in Colombia.

On account of its proximity to us and our easy access to its west coast now furnished by the Panama Canal, our interest in the development of this rising republic is great. Representatives of our commercial and economic organizations should visit and study Colombia and in every way promote amicable relations. This the House Ship Company is endeavoring to do.

DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Durant District Conference convened in Kilmichael, May 27 to June 1, inclusive. The evangelistic spirit was in evidence throughout and the sure enough, old-time shouting was heard again. Seldom has there been manifest in recent years greater spiritual power during any of our conferences. The business of the conference was transacted without haste, though there were no unnecessary delays. Every item of business received due consideration. The preaching was done by W. R. Goudelock, Acona; T. L. Oaks, Sallis; W. H. Mounger, Lexington; P. F. Luter, Tchula; M. E. Scott, Black Hawk; A. L. Davenport, Ackerman, and W. L. Stormont, Durant.

Resolutions relative to both Bishop Kilgo and Bishop McMurry were adopted, and are appended to this report.

Pastors' reports indicated that progress is being made, that harmony prevails throughout the district and that supreme in the minds and hearts of preachers and laymen is a deepening desire to recover our spiritual high tide. The conference expressed its appreciation of the services of Rev. R. O. Brown, who gave up the work of presiding elder of the district on advice of physicians. Brother McCorkle has made a splendid beginning on the district and has the esteem, love and cooperation of all the preachers and people generally. Rev. J. W. Raper is in high favor with his people. The kindness and hospitality of the people of Kilmichael in entertaining a district conference is hard to surpass.

The following were elected delegates to the annual conference: Dr. Wilburn, B. S. Kent, Kilmichael; R. E. Wilburn, Lexington; F. A. Howell, Durant; J. H. McKinnon, Weir; W. J. Newsom, J. T. McLeod, Mrs. T. J. Lee, Louisville. Alternates: G. D. Burt, Coila; J. H. Sullivant, Kosciusko.

Revs. Ben P. Jaco, Robert Selby, M. M. Black, B. F. Lewis, were present and represented the Centenary work, Emory University, Millsaps, and the Mississippi Orphans' Home.

The next session of the district conference will be held at Weir, Miss.

Brother McCorkle in his presidency of the district conference was capable, efficient and brotherly. He loves his preachers and they love him.

The attendance, interest, and results achieved were very satisfactory to all. The district conference members, for the greater part, remained over Sunday and enjoyed a high day unto their souls.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM, Sec'y.

Bishop Kilgo.

On May 11, the Christian Advocate carried the following announcement: "Bishop Kilgo's health being somewhat impaired and some relief being advised by his physician, he was left without responsibility for the supervision of Annual Conferences, and he was asked to exercise his best judgment in connection with such episcopal work as he may find it judicious to attempt." Thus it has come to pass that our beloved church has temporarily lost the services of one of her most efficient chief pastors.

Therefore be it resolved by the Durant District Conference, in session at Kilmichael, Miss., on this 28th day of May, 1920, That our great church can ill afford at this time to lose the benefit of his wise counsel and safe leadership, and that even in his temporary retirement Southern Methodism has sustained a grievous loss.

Be it further resolved, That we assure him of an abiding esteem and solicitude and of our heart's best wish that his restoration to health may be speedy and complete.

Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Bishop Kilgo, and that copies be furnished the church press, with request that they be given publication.

A. C. McCORKLE,
P. E., Durant District.
E. H. CUNNINGHAM,
Conf. Sec'y Durant Dist. Conf.

Bishop McMurry.

Since, in the Providence of God, it became necessary for the North Mississippi Conference to have a change of episcopal supervision, on account of the illness of Bishop Kilgo,

Therefore be it resolved, That we, the Durant District Conference, extend to Bishop McMurry our warmest welcome into pulpits, our homes and our hearts.

Be it further resolved, That our confidence in his wisdom and love for the church prompts us to solicit his close investigation of our methods of work, and that we invite his complete frankness in directing us in this sacred service.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the conference and that a copy be sent Bishop McMurry and also to the New Orleans Advocate.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT FUND.

My Dear Brother Carley: At the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, the Board of Finance determined, by the help of God, to better the conditions of our superannuates. This determination was unanimously voiced by our Conference, and Bishop Kilgo appointed Rev. A. C. McCorkle to represent the Conference in raising a sufficient sum to give the needed aid. The Conference estimated that it would take $265,000 to give anything like necessary relief, and it was with great enthusiasm that Rev. A. C. McCorkle went to the task of raising this amount, the first $15,000 of which is to be used for the needs of those claimants who are calling on the Board for immediate relief. The other $250,000 is to be faithfully administered as a perpetual endowment fund, the interest only to be used for the benefit of these worn-out preachers, their wives, widows and dependent children.

Brother McCorkle made good, very good for the time that he was in the work. But recently he has been appointed to the Durant District to take the place of Brother R. O. Brown, who has been forced to give up the district because of ill-health. On last Monday, May 31, the executive committee of the Board of Finance met in Winona and elected Brother J. H. Bell to take up the work laid down by Brother McCorkle; and Brother Bell is enthusiastically entering upon this great and important work. It is to be hoped that this enthusiasm will continue to grow because of the warm sympathy and response that he meets on every hand. Who will be the first to say or do a thing to discourage this man in this noble undertaking?

I hardly think that there is any cause that will more effectively appeal to the hearts and purses of men and women that have money than this. Have we not been too slow in recognizing our obligation to these worthy ones? Many institutions that have been organized for money-making have retired their worn-out labor on a living salary. Yet the North Mississippi Conference paid their dependents the meager sum of about $100 per individual last year. How long, O Lord! how long will our great church be willing to treat the men and women who have done so much to make this country fit to live in and do business in, with such careless and heedless indifference? I can't believe that this is satisfactory to many of the large business men of North Mississippi. Men that have means, I pray you see Brother Bell, or write him at once for any information that you may desire. How can our well-to-do people meet their record in the skies when many of their old pastors are actually suffering for the necessaries of life? There are thousands of people in North Mississippi that can give $5 a year for five years, and there are many that can pay that much cash and the same for four years to follow, and there are many that could give much larger sums.

Brother Bell will come among you representing one of the most sacred causes that I know anything about, and I plead with you who are able, to receive him with a free and open heart ready to give. Yes, it is true that you have been beset with drives; but the only drive that has been on for the old preacher is to the poorhouse. But you may say, "Well, he is used to that," and it is too true, but did you not help to put him there, and are you determined to keep him there? Will you not divide a few of your comforts with him? He will not be here long. When you help this cause you are helping yourself along the way to heaven, and many of you need help, and much help too. I am much of the opinion that many of the rich will lift up their eyes in hell and cry for some old neglected pastor to bring them one drop of water to cool their parched tongues.

Yours cordially, W. S. SHIPMAN,
President Board of Finance, North Mississippi Conference.

PROGRESS IN THE ORPHANAGE CAMPAIGN.

Practically $200,000 is already pledged outside of Shreveport for the expansion of the Ruston Methodist Orphanage, and, with a goal of $500,000, the committee in charge is actively at work laying the groundwork for the raising of the balance. Elaborate entertainments are being planned, and novel features in the way of publicity are to be produced, and the BIG FOUR in charge of the campaign feel satisfied that when their work closes on the 20th they will have raised enough money to insure a permanent home for 350 orphans.

Campaign Director Nickerson received the following telegram recently:

"Ruston, June 3, 1920.

"George K. Nickerson, Shreveport: At a committee meeting to-day of six representative citizens there was pledged $30,000. Think Ruston and Lincoln Parish will raise a quota of $50,000.

"O. E. HODGE, Chairman Citizens' Committee."

The above is typical of the spirit being manifested in the Orphanage Drive outside of Shreveport. One philanthropist in Minden will give $25,000 to the campaign, and with this magnificent donation Webster and Claiborne Parishes are expected to raise $50,000.

The churches in the Monroe District have accepted $25,000 quota and the Citizens' Committee expect to raise a like sum.

In the city of New Orleans, the churches are pledged to raise $25,000, and the citizens, through Hon. Donelson Caffery, vice-chairman, are expected to double that sum.

Big gifts already pledged amount to $50,000 more, and it is believed before the campaign ends, and in the course of the next year, several memorial cottages, each caring for 25 orphans, will grace the grounds at Ruston, the contribution of big oil men. And then the great city of Shreveport is to be heard from. So is Alexandria, Baton Rouge and Houma. Then, down in Iberia, Henry Pharr, vice-chairman, will be heard from.

And so the Big Four, namely, Judge W. G. Banks, of the Palmer Trust, executive chairman; W. Scott Wilkinson, State Chairman of the Citizens' Committee; Judge B. F. Roberts, City Attorney of Shreveport, and George K. Nickerson, Campaign Director, are joyful and confident that Ruston will soon have the greatest orphanage in the State, and the call of 200 kiddies will have been answered.

Guy Empey has finished his great picture of the Orphanage, and his representative and one of Mr. Nickerson's men have gone to New York to develop the films, and are expected to be back in time for its stellar production during this week.

The personnel of the State-Wide Committees, as far as compiled, is as follows:

Judge W. G. Banks, Shreveport, La., Executive Chairman; Hon. W. Scott Wilkinson, Shreveport, La., Executive Chairman of Citizens' Campaign.

State Committeemen for their respective districts are: Homer District, Mr. W. A. McKenzie; Minden and Webster Parish, Dr. R. D. Webb, Minden; Ruston and Lincoln Parish, O. E. Hodge, Ruston, Chairman of Citizens' Committee.

Presiding Elders of the State: Briscoe Carter, Shreveport District; J. M. Henry, Ruston District; J. G. Snelling, New Orleans District; C. D. Atkinson, Monroe District; H. W. Bowman, Lake Charles District; Martin Hebert, Houma District; A. S. Lutz, Baton Rouge District; H. W. May, Alexandria District.

Houma District—J. A. Robichaux, Houma, Committeeman; E. R. Jackson, Jeanerette, Vice-Chairman.

Baton Rouge District—W. S. Holmes, Baton Rouge, Vice-Chairman; Jacob Abels, Ponchatoula, Committeeman.

Lake Charles District — A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, Committeeman; Henry Pharr, New Iberia, Vice-Chairman.

New Orleans District—Rev. C. C. Weir, Algiers, Committeeman; Donelson Caffery, New Orleans, Vice-Chairman.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Bogalusa, Chairman Speakers' Bureau, Southern District.

STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

We are planning for a rich feast at Grenada College, Aug. 4-11. It will be the occasion of the first Standard Training School for Sunday school teachers, superintendents and pastors. The General Sunday School Board will send us five or six of their strongest teachers, and two or three will be supplied from our own territory. Our younger teachers and pastors especially cannot afford to miss this school. It will be a good time and place to spend the week from Aug. 4 to 11. Watch the Advocate for further announcements.

POLLYWOG PHILOSOPHY.

The tadpoles all sat in the river and said:
"How lucky we are to be all tail and head!
Just think how we'd feel if we were as absurd
As a goggle-eyed fish or a feathery bird!"
"Oh, worse still!" they cried,
"We would wish we had died,
If, instead of our being such nice pollywogs,
Mother Nature had made us all into green frogs!"

The dignified frogs sat on green lily pads
And said: "How absurd to say we sprang from tads!
From the little black tadpoles all tail and all head!
Why, if it were true, we would wish we were dead!
But it cannot be so!
For how could we grow
So beautiful if we had been pollywogs?
No, no! We have always been dignified frogs!"

And the feathery birds, high up in the tree,
Sang: "The world is as funny as funny can be!"

THE QUEEN OF AN OLD-FASHIONED GARDEN.

"I hate this old, ugly garden," Rosebud complained to Mother Bush one morning as she opened her eyes and gazed on the flowers around it.

"Why, my child," Mother Bush answered, "I'm surprised to hear you say such things! You're only a tiny bud and should not begin to grumble thus early in life."

"I know I'm young," Rosebud answered, "but why did you choose such an unsightly place for me to grow in? I'm not an old-fashioned flower; I want to grow in some one's front yard, or grace some vase in a beautiful home. I don't want to stay here where I'm not appreciated."

"You've forgotten the gardener, Rosebud, child," Mother Bush answered, "and the dear little cripple boy who comes to visit us every day and praises your beauty."

"Yes, I had forgotten," Rosebud replied, "but still I'd like to leave this old-fashioned garden."

"Good-morning, Rosebud," modest black-eyed Susan exclaimed softly. "Your exquisite perfume awoke me."

"And you awoke me, too," laughed Verbena.

"I think it's delightful to be awakened every morning by such a fragrant odor," interrupted Sunflower.

Rosebud proudly lifted her head a little higher and gazed at her companions in astonishment.

Why, it wasn't so bad, after all, to grow in a garden of old-fashioned flowers, and receive the admiration she did, even though she was grouchy. "Maybe it would be as well to smile and endure the place," mused Rosebud. Then a little wind came through the garden, and Rosebud put on her best smile, swayed to the right and to the left, and all the flowers of the garden began to whisper among themselves of the sudden graciousness of their favorite.

Suddenly there were voices in the garden and Rosebud fluttered her petals, for she recognized the voice of the cripple boy as one of the speakers.

"I want to show you the queen of my garden," the little boy was saying when he reached Rosebud. "Here she is."

Gently the stranger touched the delicate stem upon which Rosebud reposed.

"Oh, you beautiful thing!" the visitor cried in admiring tones, caressing the flower, and turning to her companion she said:

"Of all your flowers, I'd like best to wear this rose. Of course, I know it wouldn't last long, but when it fades I could toss it aside."

"Toss my rose aside!" the little cripple exclaimed. "Toss the pride of my garden to the streets where it would be trampled down! I couldn't let you do that, because I've been working for three years to perfect this rose, and now that it has bloomed I am going to let it grace the garden as long as it is beautiful, and when it begins to fade I am going to plant it so that it will grow into another bush, and some day in this manner you will see a whole row of beautiful roses growing in my garden."

The speakers moved on, while the old-fashioned flowers gazed on their queen with adoring eyes, for never before had she smiled so sweetly upon them. And as the voices died away in the distance, Rosebud cuddled closer to her mother's side.

"Oh, mother," Rosebud whispered, "I'm so sorry I complained. I didn't know how fortunate I was to be a single rose in a garden of old-fashioned flowers."

"It's an opportunity, my child," Mother Bush replied.

"I realize it, mother dear," Rosebud answered, "and from now on I will take advantage of the opportunity and try to live to the beautiful name my companions have given me, and I'm so glad it is I, mother, who bears the name, 'the queen of an old-fashioned garden.'"—Alice L. Whitson, in Queen's Gardens.

THE OLD TOAD.

"O Dolly, come here!" cried Don, loudly.

"Where are you, where are you?" called Dolly from the bedroom where mother was just tying a pink ribbon on her hair.

"In the garden," replied Don. "Do hurry and see what I have found!"

"Run along," said mother, as she gave Dolly a gentle little push.

So Dolly hurried away to grandma's flower garden. She could see Don standing very still near the old syringa bush, watching something on the ground.

"What is it, Don?" asked Dolly, as she ran toward him.

"Look there, under that rosebush," answered Don. "See that fat toad?"

"Oh, how ugly he is!" whispered Dolly, with a little shiver.

"Yes, isn't he?" agreed Don. "See those big warts all over him. I'm going to make him jump."

"Don't touch him, Don; he might bite."

"Bite— pooh, I'm not afraid. If he bites, I'll kill him," said Don, boastfully.

"What's that? Kill what?" asked grandma, who was working among her hollyhocks.

"This toad," answered Don. "But I shan't kill him unless he bites me."

"Why, he won't bite you, dear," said grandma, smiling. "If you kill him, I'll lose my best garden helper."

"Your helper, grandma!" cried Dolly, in surprise. "What do you mean?"

"Yes, he certainly is my helper," answered grandma. "He helps me keep the garden free from bugs and worms."

"Does he really?" asked Don, as surprised as Dolly.

"Indeed he does," said grandma. "He catches them with his long, slender tongue, which flies out of his mouth as quickly as a dart."

"Oh, I should like to see him do it," said Dolly.

"Perhaps if you're patient, you may," said grandma, "although I've heard people say that Mr. Toad doesn't often eat when any one is looking at him."

"Let's try and feed him," suggested Don, eagerly.

"Yes, let's," echoed Dolly.

Though the children soon found a fat bug and a tempting worm and offered them to the toad, he paid no attention to the dainty morsels, but sat winking and blinking in the sunlight.

"I do wish he would eat," said Dolly, in a disappointed tone. "I should like to see his long red tongue."

"Perhaps we can play a trick on him," said grandma. "Bring me some currants, Don, and find me a long grass-stem, Dolly."

Placing one of the currants on the grass stem, grandma told the children to stand quietly beside her, back of the toad. Then very slowly and carefully she lowered the red currant on the tip of the grass-stem before Mr. Toad's eyes. Suddenly there was a quick flash of his tongue and the currant was gone! Don and Dolly danced about the old toad and clapped their hands gleefully.

"You see now how quickly he can catch the bugs and the worms which hurt my flowers," said grandma.

"He is your garden helper— we can see now he is," said Don.

"We'll be good to you, fat toad," said Dolly. "Come, Don, let's tell mother what a fine garden helper grandma has!"— Ella Shannon Bowles, in The Christian Register.

MAINTAINING THE HOME BASE—A THREE-MINUTE TALK.

The Christianization of the world is the work of the church, and in this work the United States has a large part. It is here that Protestant Christianity has, perhaps, reached its highest degree of activity and efficiency, and it is from this source that power must be furnished to carry on operations in lands that are still benighted.

But our ability to supply this power is dependent upon our maintaining a virile religious life in our own hearts and in our institutions. The currents of ungodliness are running with tremendous force at the present time, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to preserve undiminished spiritual vitality. Somehow or other, men seem to be thinking in terms of the material more than ever before, and economic welfare is by many made the goal of all endeavor. While the church is in full sympathy with every movement that has as its end the betterment of the physical conditions of living, its primary concern is with the souls of men, and it must never allow anything to interfere with its supreme mission.

It is a self-evident truth that we can hope to accomplish no more abroad than we are able to do at home. If we are not strong enough to carry the burden of our immediate responsibility, we certainly cannot hope to lighten the load of those across the seas. Unless we can make America a Christian country in fact as well as in name, we stand a very poor chance of evangelizing those countries which are still in the midst of heathen darkness. A religion that cannot save a civilized people, cannot very well be expected to do much for those who are not far removed from savagery.

The necessity is upon all of us, therefore, of carrying out the plans we have already made for the extension of the work of the church, and of developing our resources, material and spiritual, to the point where we shall be able to meet the demands that are becoming heavier every day. We need to renew in our own hearts the fires of spiritual devotion, and kindle throughout our own land a flame of evangelistic fervor that will protect us from the chilling blasts of formality and worldliness that threaten us, and that will enable us to carry the warmth of the gospel to all the nations of the earth. The least that our missionaries have a right to expect of us is that we do at home what we are asking them to do abroad.

THE ORPHANAGE CAMPAIGN IN LOUISIANA.

The friends of dependent children in this State should not allow anything to interfere with the successful carrying out of the plan to raise half a million dollars for the enlargement and equipment of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston. The reports that have been made of what has already been accomplished are altogether encouraging, and there is every reason to believe that the full amount will be quickly subscribed when the appeal is specifically and definitely made.

It is very gratifying to know that a good many contributions of large sums have been made to this most worthy cause, one man having given $25,000; but this is a work in which everybody should have a part, and the smaller subscriptions of those who are not able to give large amounts will be received with equal pleasure. It is to be earnestly hoped that the campaign will be so organized throughout the State that every member of the Methodist Church especially, and as many others as possible, shall have the opportunity of contributing to this great cause. We are sure that if the children of happy homes controlled the purse-strings of their parents, every orphan in Louisiana would be able to find a place within the sheltering walls of this noble institution. We venture the assertion that the contributions of such children will be no small part of the total amount raised.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

It was our privilege to be present at part of the Commencement exercises of Millsaps College on Monday and Tuesday of last week. We hope to have soon a full account of all the proceedings from a competent pen, and we shall not, therefore, undertake to do more than make mention of a few things that impressed us during our brief stay.

The outstanding feature of material improvements during the session just closed is the completion of the new dormitory, so long and so badly needed and so satisfactorily supplied. Occupying as it does a commanding position on the campus, it attracts attention for its beauty and impresses the visitor with its commodious and home-like appearance. By its erection, one of the great drawbacks to an increased attendance of students has been removed, and it is confidently expected that its facilities will be taxed to the utmost during the next session. Only two of the three units have been completed thus far; when the third is added, Millsaps College will have a dormitory that will compare favorably with any similar building in the land.

The attendance of the alumni of the institution was not very large, but the meeting of the Alumni Association was full of interest. In spite of the fact that the college itself has not thus far sought or seemed to care especially for the co-operation of the alumni in the development of its plans, the alumni themselves felt that it would not be out of keeping with the proprieties to do what they could to assist in enabling their Alma Mater to reach the highest possible degree of efficiency and usefulness, and action was taken looking to as close co-operation between the alumni on the one hand and the college authorities on the other as might be possible. It is earnestly hoped that such a spirit of co-operation will be developed as will soon put Millsaps on an equal footing with other institutions of the State in the matter of attendance and in the development of a spirit of loyalty that will place this great institution of the church in the forefront of the educational forces of the State.

We heard only good things of the sermons by Bishop W. B. Murrah on Sunday morning and Dr. U. G. Foote on Sunday evining. We can bear personal testimony to the high quality of the address of Dr. R. H. Bennett on Tuesday morning.

PREACHING TO SAVE.

Preaching, as does everything else, gets its chief value from the motive that inspires it. A man's ministry should have in it all the elements that help to make strong Christian character, such as instruction, inspiration, development of moral strength, and the like; but it should always have as its main purpose the saving of people from their sins. As the Son of Man came to seek and save that which was lost, so ought the preacher to proclaim that message of salvation as his chief business in life.

In preaching a gospel of salvation, two things are indispensable: the sinner must be made to realize that he will inevitably be lost if he continues in sin, and he must be made to know that a way of escape has been provided. When he has been brought face to face with this realization and this knowledge, he may be depended upon ordinarily to do the only sane thing possible—repent and believe.

It is apparently only too true that men have, to a large degree, lost the sense and feeling of guilt. Sin is not looked upon as an awful crime against self and against God which merits and will incur eternal damnation, but merely as an indiscretion in conduct which meets the disapproval of a few puritanical—almost fanatical—souls; and repentance is too often nothing more than a good-natured acquiescence in the desire of friends and loved ones to comply with the outward forms of religious observance.

Never was emphasis upon the damning effect of sin more greatly needed than now. We are preaching to save men—and many of them do not know that they are lost! We must tell them—kindly, tenderly, lovingly, but plainly. As the watchman upon the walls was not guiltless unless he gave warning of approaching danger, so must we suffer the consequences of our neglect if we do not warn sinners of their fate and point them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Our church at Marion, Miss., which was blown down early in the year, has been rebuilt.

The Advocate office enjoyed a call from Dr. G. A. Brumfield, of Tylertown, Miss., on Thursday of last week.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, honored the office with a call on Thursday, June 10.

We regret very much that we were not in the office when Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, of Amite, La., called one day last week.

Material is being put on the ground and the site is being excavated for a new $40,000 church at East End, Meridian, Miss.

A note from Rev. Paul H. Grice, of Meadville, Miss., informs us that present prospects point to a fine year's work on that charge.

Rev. George Fox, of Bunkie, La., is planning for a revival meeting early in July, in which he is to be assisted by Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth preached the Commencement sermon for Southern Methodist University last Sunday, and Judge E. B. Perkins delivered the Baccalaureate Address on Tuesday.

We thank Miss Louise Gorton Wynn, a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Wynn of Ruston, La., for an invitation to attend the graduating exercises of Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Texas, on Tuesday of this week.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, visited the Monroe District Conference and other points in North Louisiana recently in the interest of the Memorial Home for Young Women in New Orleans.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Felicity Church, New Orleans, has rented the Keener cottage on the Seashore Camp Grounds, where his family will spend the summer. Brother Townsley, however, will "stay by the stuff" at Felicity.

Mr. Sam H. Meyer, a leading merchant of New Orleans, well and favorably known to Louisiana and Mississippi Methodists, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Ahrens in Washington, D. C. Before returning to New Orleans, Brother Meyer will visit the principal trade centers of the East.

Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D., has recently conducted a great revival meeting at Atoka, Oklahoma.

We learn from the Alabama Advocate that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is seriously considering making his home in Birmingham, Ala.

Rev. J. M. Corley, of Lumberton, Miss., is being assisted in a revival meeting this week by Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Felicity Church, New Orleans.

Mrs. W. L. Hunter, district secretary, requests us to announce that the Newton District Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society will be held at Union, Miss., June 29-30.

Rev. H. D. Knickerbocker, D.D., one of the most widely known ministers of our church, preached the Commencement sermon for the Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge last Sunday.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary Secretary and Treasurer for Louisiana, is actively engaged in the work of his office, having spent the past two weeks in visiting various points throughout the State. His energy and large business experience are accomplishing splendid results.

Rev. B. F. Bullard, of the Houlka charge, North Mississippi Conference, writes that everything is about ready for the revival services at Houlka, which will begin on the first Sunday in July. Rev. W. M. McIntosh will do the preaching. We thank Brother Bullard for an invitation to attend the meeting.

Bogalusa, La., is planning for a great revival campaign to be held in September. Rev. John B. Andrews, of Gravette, Ark., and Professor C. Plummer Curry, of Greenwood, S. C., have been secured to lead the meetings. Both men are widely known and are affiliated with our Board of Evangelism.

Louisiana Avenue Church, of this city, has recently raised the last installment of its debt on its elegant parsonage, and with the exception of a small balance due on its paving bill, which has practically been provided for, the church is now free of all incumbrance. Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt is the pastor.

Speaking of preachers' sons, Rev. A. J. Gearheard informs us that Roger Dee was graduated as valedictorian of the grammar grades in Bogalusa, La., last week, and that he won first honors during Scout Week by raising a fourth of all the money secured by a Scout Troop of thirty-two. He is twelve years of age.

The sudden death of Col. R. P. Linfield recently was a great shock to his host of friends throughout Mississippi and the Gulf States generally. He was long identified with the public school system of Mississippi, but for several years had been associated with Col. R. B. McGehee in the management of the Gulfcoast Military Academy. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and sorrowing relatives.

We are requested by Brother J. W. Fontenot, of Crowley, La., to announce that the Lake Arthur Camp Meeting will begin at Lake Arthur, La., on Thursday, July 8, and continue through Sunday, July 18. Rev. H. C. Maitland, evangelist, will have charge of the services, assisted by pastors from surrounding communities. Professor C. C. Conley will be in charge of the music. All pastors cooperating in the meeting will be entertained absolutely free of charge.

Rev. H. M. Ellis is just in receipt of a telegram from Bishop W. F. McMurry stating that he will be in attendance at the Seashore Divinity School during part of its sessions. He will deliver the address at 11 o'clock on Thursday, July 1. The program of the Divinity School for this year is in keeping with the high standard that has been maintained since its establishment. We know of no better place for a preacher to spend his vacation. Laymen, also, will find it a delightful place for ten days of recreation and inspiration.

A most deplorable tragedy occurred in New Orleans on Wednesday of last week, when the young son of Brother R. O. Randle accidentally discharged a revolver, the bullet striking his young brother and producing instant death. The children were visiting at the home of their aunt. The heartbroken parents have the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in their terrible bereavement. Brother Randle is one of the leading laymen of the Louisiana Conference, a son of Rev. Robert Randle, now an honored superannuate.

We learn from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate that Bishop Warren A. Candler was unanimously elected chancellor of Emory University at the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees, and that Dr. Franklin N. Parker was elected acting president of the University. The past session of the University was a most successful one, more than 1200 students having been enrolled in all departments.

Dr. Lewis Oliver Hartman, formerly secretary of the Foreign Department of the Board of Sunday Schools, has been elected editor of Zion's Herald, to succeed the late Dr. E. C. E. Dorlon. He is the author of a number of books, and has been a frequent contributor to the church press. He is looked upon as splendidly equipped for the position to which he has been called, and it is confidently predicted that Zion's Herald will maintain, under his editorial supervision, the leading place it has held for a long time in religious journalism.

We received the following telegram on Monday of this week: "We urge claims of Southern School of Methods, Forbing, La., June 27-July 4. Interdenominational, beautiful assembly grounds, thorough courses for all Sunday school workers. Every Sunday school in the State should be represented by one or more workers. Superior instruction, a fine outing." The telegram was signed by Rev. Geo. S. Sexton, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Rev. Jasper K. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Claude L. Jones, pastor of the First Christian Church, all of Shreveport, La.

Strong opposition has developed in Jackson, La., to the bill introduced in the General Assembly of Louisiana providing for the sale of the old Centenary College property to the East Louisiana Insane Asylum for $3000. It is understood that two wealthy graduates of Old Centenary are desirous of securing the property for the purpose of turning it into an orphanage. The statement has appeared in the public press that they are willing to spend $150,000 or more in putting the property in good repair. It is understood that they are willing to turn it over to the Methodist Church in due time. Methodism in Jackson is making good progress under the pastorate of Rev. F. B. Hill.

MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

No event in Mississippi life should be of more interest to the Methodist Church than that which pertains to Millsaps College.

The twenty-eighth session, which closed on June 8, 1920, was of unusual interest. During the session, 284 students have matriculated in the different departments: the health of the student body has been remarkably good, due, doubtless, to the presence and oversight of the college physician as much as to the excellent sanitary conditions. The two new dormitories which have been erected at a cost of $80,000, and which have accommodated a large part of the pupils, are provided with every modern convenience and assure the greatest comfort. The third, Murrah Hall, will be completed at an early day, thus assuring comfortable lodging to the large increase of attendance upon the institution.

The Board of Trustees gave unusual time and thought to the needs of the College and dealt liberally with all those interests which the needs of a great college demand.

In response to a proposition from the General Educational Board, which disburses the funds of the Rockefeller Foundation for the endowment of worthy institutions, and especially looking to the better pay of professors, with a proposition to donate a certain sum for that purpose provided the Board would secure an additional amount, it was resolved by the Board to accept the offer and to plan for its execution.

Under this proposition Mississippi Methodism has a double incentive to be liberal during the great Educational Campaign which will soon be launched. Millsaps, we found, stands in the forefront of education and this is another opportunity for our people to increase to greater usefulness our great College.

Echoes from the Alumni banquet gave evidence of their great interest in the future welfare and greater usefulness of the institution.

Twenty young men and one young woman received degrees from the College.

Two greater deliverances have not been given from the rostrum of the College than the sermon by Bishop Murrah at eleven o'clock on Sunday and the Annual address of Dr. R. H. Bennett, of Lynchburg, Va. Dr. U. G. Foote, of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, was happy in his thoughts and suggestions before the "Y" Associations of the College on Sunday evening.

Millsaps College has great claims upon Mississippi Methodism and the Methodists in Mississippi should not stop short of so equipping, maintaining and supporting their great school that her influence may broaden and deepen with the years.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE DURANT DISTRICT.

At the end of the third round I am going to get out a bulletin of the whole district, showing the amount assessed for pastors' salaries and the amount paid, also the amount assessed for the benevolences and the amount paid, in order that each charge may be able to tell just where it stands as well as compare theirs with other charges. This should make each preacher get up and move towards the end, so his charge, as well as record, will show up well with the best.

Now, brethren, we should at the very least be able to report half out on our benevolences at the third quarter, and we can do so if we will get on the trail and keep on it until the work is done. Will you do it? Try this; start early, hit hard, stay long, pray much, be pleasant, and don't say to your people that it can't be done, for it can and must be done. Can your elder depend on you? God and the church are watching you, and we all, to a large extent, make our appointments. What kind of an appointment do you want this fall? If you want a better one than you have, leave the one that you have better for the other man. Last but not least, nothing short of hard work is worthy of God's servants, and if we are willing to pay the price to do the work, it will be done. Will we do it?

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. E. C. Driskell, Greenwood Springs, Miss., 2; Rev. A. A. Simms, Johns, Miss., 2; Rev. J. Wilson Brown, Springfield, La., 2; Rev. C. M. Crossley, Hattiesburg, Miss., 7.

As a drop of water poured into wine loses itself and takes the color and savor of wine; or as a bar of iron, heated red-hot, becomes like fire itself, forgetting its own nature; or as the air, radiant with sunbeams, seems not so much to be illuminated as to be light itself; so in the saints, all human affections melt away by some unspeakable transmutation, into the will of God: for how could God be all in all if anything merely human remained in man?—Bernard of Clairvaux.

Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

On April 16, 1920, the death angel called upon Rev. FONCE A. LEWIS to pay the debt that sooner or later we all will have to pay. Brother Lewis was born July 5, 1878, and died April 16, 1920. Brother Lewis united with the Methodist Church in 1901, and has been loyal to the cause until he was called from our midst to his final reward. Bro. Lewis was a loving husband and father. He left a wife and six children to mourn their loss. They feel that their home has almost been broken up, but their faithful friends and relatives have stood by them in their great time of need. While we all miss him, we have faith to believe that he is far better off, for he said in his last moments that there wasn't anything in his way. May God's richest blessings rest upon his dear wife and little ones, is my prayer to God. REV. J. W. SPILLERS.

JOHN PIPKIN CARRUTH.

On January 17, 1920, the hearts of his loved ones and friends were made sad because John Pipkin Carruth, the dear "Uncle John P.," of Auburn was called Home. A soul went back to its Maker and thus brought a happy consummation to a useful life which began in Pike County, October 21, 1838. Mr. Carruth came from the two noted families, the Adams and the Carruth, founders of two branches of our churches—the Presbyterian and Methodist. As a young man it was his privilege to take part in the serious issues which the people of our South were facing in the sixties. His first vote was cast in favor of the Union; but, like every good citizen, he assented to the will of the majority. Insofar as is known, he was the first from Amite County to shoulder arms and march under the "Stars and Bars."

His first enlistment was with the "Summit Rifles" in May, 1861. He outlived all of these first comrades except Mr. Louis Scherck, of New Orleans. Because of physical disability, he was discharged from the army in March, but his ardent patriotism would not let him stay out and May found him again in the service—this time in Company H, 29th Mississippi. At Fort Hudson he surrendered and was paroled by the enemy. A third time he enlisted and served in the cavalry under Col. DeMonteel until the close of the war. Many interesting facts are told by those few surviving comrades in gray of Mr. Carruth's bravery and devotion. It was he who bore Col. Cage, mortally wounded, from the battlefield. At the close of the war, with many of his comrades, he assumed the task of helping to build from the bottom. He came back to a bed of straw from the field, However, he possessed the courage and energy to lay down the gun cheerfully and take the hoe. So earnest was his labor, that he was able to stand among the most prosperous planters of this section.

In February, 1865, Mr. Carruth was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Wells. Of this union there survive eight children, forty-five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. On April 4, 1895, he was married to Miss Ary King, who, with one daughter, survives him. To these, all, he has left a rich legacy—for "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches and loving favor than silver and gold."

Mr. Carruth was ever prominent in the business and civic life of his county and did much for the upbuilding of his community. Men had confidence in his sound judgment and utmost faith in his action. It is worthy of note that no enterprise with which he was connected ever occasioned the loss of a single dollar to a creditor. When a mere lad, Mr. Carruth's heart turned to his Father and he united with the Methodist Church. This denomination honored him with official relations and he was ever loyal to the trust. The strength of his character and the beautiful influence of his life were shown when the host of friends gathered at the Adams Methodist Church to pay tribute to his memory.

The services were conducted by Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College, assisted by Rev. W. W. Murray, the local pastor, Rev. H. A. Gatlin, of Tylertown, Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Summit, Rev. H. M. Ellis, of McComb, and Rev. J. T. Leggett, of Brookhaven.

In his home, his community and his church he shall be missed; but his influence lives on. For in these "his hands were faithful till the sun went down." A FRIEND.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

When Run-Down

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"My mother has always relied on Dr. Pierce's medicines and kept them for use in her family. When I was a girl, through over-work I became in very poor health. I lost in flesh, became very weak and nervous, my limbs and back ached all the time. I suffered from functional irregularity and was a physical wreck when my mother had me take Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and just a few bottles completely restored me to good health. I would advise all women or girls who suffer to give 'Favorite Prescription' a trial."—MRS. E. GIESLER, No. 710 Octavia Street.

Good looks in woman do not depend upon age, but upon health. You never see a good-looking woman who is weak, run-down. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best women's tonic there is. It is 50 years old, and its age testifies to its goodness.

NOTICE FROM THE PUBLISHING AGENTS TO CUSTOMERS.

We think it due to the church we serve and to the Publishing House to make the following statement: For the past year or so we, with all publishers, have labored under certain difficulties which are peculiar to the times through which the country, and indeed the world, is passing as a result of the recent World War.

1. The condition of the paper market has been, and still is, such as is without precedent in the history of the publishing business. It is almost impossible to buy paper at any price. We have been foresighted in making arrangement for our supply hitherto and successful in as full measure as any printing concern with whose operation we are acquainted, but for months past we have lived from hand to mouth and have sometimes been necessarily late in getting in paper in time to meet the demand for our periodical literature. This is due to two causes: First, the mills cannot meet the demands upon them; and secondly, the railroads have been so congested as to make delivery of such orders as the mills can fill exceedingly slow and very uncertain. This is largely due to the strikes of different classes of transportation employees, which have been of frequent occurrence, and to inadequate equipment after the tremendous strain of the past three years.

2. When we ship goods to our customers promptly, the delivery is delayed by conditions we cannot control. Thousands of postal employees have left the service for higher wages in other fields, and their places have been filled by inexperienced men. This causes delay and confusion in operation and results in many complaints from customers who are served by mail. Every mail order house in the country has the same experience in this regard. There are other causes in transportation under present conditions which make for delay, and over which shippers have no control.

3. The graded system of Sunday school publications is printed by a syndicate of denominations. Because of the large cost of securing the matter and producing the literature, no one denomination could undertake the work alone. Also, in the interest of economy of production, it was advisable that the work for all the denominations be done at one place. This literature is manufactured in New York. Up to last fall all demands were met without difficulty. Then came the unauthorized strike of the printers, which forced practically every large printing house in New York to cease all production for eight weeks. Almost immediately after this came the trouble with the freight handlers, draymen, and longshoremen of New York, making the publishers unable to ship the goods when they could again produce them. This has caused the delay and confusion of recent months, which it is evident the publishers had no means of avoiding. This difficulty has now been overcome, and we sincerely trust will not recur.

We are doing all that we can to meet the expectations of our customers with promptness, and we trust that they will remember the troubles which beset all business in these days of readjustment and will not hold us accountable for conditions which we do not and cannot control.

SMITH & LAMAR, Agents.

FROM AMITE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: As we are over here in the pastorate and so well fixed and serving such a delightful people, we feel just like letting you know about it. When we arrived, quite a few of the members met us and placed us in our friend's, Judge R. R. Reed's, auto and drove us around to the parsonage, where we found another crowd waiting for us with breakfast ready. After introductions and greetings, we were invited in to enjoy the breakfast. After the departure of our good friends, we looked around and found a well filled larder, with many things too numerous to mention.

We have been here five Sundays and they have been very delightful in every respect. The congregations have been good at each service. Sunday school, Epworth League and the Woman's Missionary Society all are moving on so nicely. Brother Lutz, our elder, came to us on the 28th and held our second quarterly conference, and to his delight found things moving on in good shape. Brother Dan Kelly, one of our evangelists, is here conducting our revival meeting, and from all indications we are going to have a real revival. We are doing our best to make the people see that the "Upper Room" is what they need and not the "Supper Room." I see that Dr. Steel is still moving things for God.

If you can get off, run up and spend a Sunday with us.

Yours fraternally,
LASTIE N. HOFFPAUIR, P. C.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

By Rev. O. W. Bradley.

It was my pleasure to attend the Commencement of Grenada College. I greatly enjoyed the sermon of Bishop J. M. Moore. It was good to see more of this simple, consecrated and cultured scholar and minister of Christ. He has never found out that he was elected bishop.

At last, one can work for Grenada College and be true to his conscience. He can advise any girl to go there and feel he has done her a life-long favor. As to buildings, Grenada has the best and most beautiful building of its kind in Mississippi. Not a cheap thing was put in it. It will be there 500 years from now. Take your daughter to see it and she will go there. Even before this new building, Grenada College has not advertised for three years, and girls have been turned away each year.

As to scholarship, let this speak for that part of Grenada College: one man wrote for every name in the Senior class—looking for teachers. As to religious influences, the report of the Y. W. C. A. answers—"Every girl in college has made a profession and belongs to a church. Sixty-four tithe." Besides, it was good to hear of Bible classes and teacher-training in courses; several got certificates in the latter. That would be a great report for a preacher at Conference.

Give our educational institutions a chance. Don't say you are against the Educational Drive. Folks will protect their pockets without any help. Put it on if we get only $10, because schools need it and folks need to give.

MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Sunday, the 6th, was spent with Rev. R. E. Rutledge on the Lake charge. We visited Laurence and Eureka. At Eureka they reorganized their Sunday school, ordering their literature for the next quarter. They pledged to meet at least once a month and to keep the literature in the homes of the people. These people are very scattered and it will be harder to develop their Sunday school than in most places. Let us trust that their efforts will be crowned with success.

The Laurence Sunday school has an enrollment of 60 and an everage attendance of 80. I do not know of any other school that has this record. There are some fine features about the school at Laurence. We trust that this school will take on new life and do better work than ever before.

Wednesday night was spent at Madison. This is another good school. They are planning some needed improvements on their church and with a little effort can reach a high mark.

In looking over the report from the Williamsburg District Institute, I ran across this interesting information, that the schools in the circuit had 160 members; with an average attendance of 85 per cent in the Sunday school and an average of 100 per cent in the preaching services. This is very gratifying.

I am anxious for each circuit, especially the rural circuits, to institute the "Four-Times-A-Year-Institute." I have some of the leaflets suggesting plans, and will be glad to take the matter up with those who are interested. I believe that if we can get the "Four-Times-A-Year-Institute" in our circuits, we will have no trouble in increasing effectiveness of our Sunday school work.

Have you had Sunday School Day? If you have not, please observe the day as soon as possible. If you have not received your Sunday School Day programs, let me know and we will supply you.

If you have any interesting features about your work, tell us about them and tell us your troubles. We will be glad to hear from you. If there is any way in which you can use the office, do so. If you need help and find that we are not able to serve you, let us know and we will try to be prepared; but above all pray for the work and the workers. Yours In Him,

JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Brother Pastor, Brother Superintendent, Brother or Sister Anybody, send me the names of the persons you hope to get to attend the S. T. S. to be held at Grenada, August 4-11. This is the first important step for you to take without delay.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Corinth District, is diligent in looking after all the interests of his large district. His men made fine reports on the observance of Sunday School Day.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, takes up the work of the district informally. He gives every man a chance to tell what he is doing and how he does it. Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Amory, made a notable report on his prayer meetings. He invests a lot of religion, sense, and work in this important service. The Field Secretary had the right of way in presenting the Standard Training School to the members of this district conference.

Rev. R. A. Meek, presiding elder of the Sardis District, dispatches business easily and rapidly, but gives time to every interest committed to his care. The preachers and laymen are deeply interested in the S. T. S. and we expect not less than fifty students to attend this Training School from this district.

The Sardis District Sunday School Institute will be held at Oakland, June 22. We hope to have a delegate from at least half the charges in attendance. Send the names of those who expect to attend to Rev. W. F. Rogers, Oakland. To do this is good Christian courtesy.

If you have not received your Sunday School Day programs, please let me know. It is not too late to observe the day and will not be too late the Sunday before Conference. If we regard this obligation lightly, so will we pass over other duties to suit our convenience.

The Brooksville Sunday school observed the day with fine results. Brother Glenn and his excellent teachers rejoice that seven united with the church on profession of faith. They made the services truly evangelistic.

We may send out thousands of letters and circulars giving publicity to the Standard Training School to be held at Grenada College, August 4-11. This kind of advertising is profitable, but, after all, we get the best results by doing personal work. Therefore, if we have a large attendance at this school, we must secure a large number of people who will do heart-to-heart work with individuals. One thing any one can do and that is to send to me names of those you think might attend. Who will be the first to do this?

The Fifth Sunday Institute ought to be used in every circuit in the Conference. The Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, has magnified these meetings for the past four years with the best of results. Such a meeting was held at Salem, on the Toccopola circuit, May 29 and 30. Mrs. L. G. Fant and I went out and held three services Saturday. On Sunday I preached; a "Mother in Israel" shouted the praises of God, a score of young people asked for prayer, three were converted, and four persons, including the superintendent, Mr. M. L. Riley, enrolled for the S. T. S. to be held in Grenada, August 4-11. The leading men in the church pledged to see that these young people should have the means to attend this school. Suppose such a meeting had been held in a dozen circuits on that day? Something out of the ordinary would have happened.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY.

It is not too late to observe Sunday School Day. The Publishing House has issued two different programs. Get the one best suited to your school, or make your own program if you want to. The thing to do is, have the service. Give the people an intelligent opportunity to support the work.

This appeal is especially for the pastors and superintendents in the North Mississippi Conference.

E. S. LEWIS,
Chairman S. S. Board.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

HIGH TIDE OF ZEAL MARKS EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The North Mississippi Epworth League Conference convened in the First Methodist Church of Corinth, June 1. In attendance were young people from over the North Mississippi territory, who came together that they might get a larger vision of the Epworth League and its great work.

The first service was held Tuesday evening. Words of welcome were given by local Leaguers, and the response was made by Rev. W. R. Lott, of Holly Springs, after which Mr. E. O. Harbin, a representative from the Central Office in Nashville, gave a splendid address.

The program was continued Wednesday by an early morning prayer and consecration service, which was conducted by our president, Rev. J. H. Holder.

The nine o'clock session devotional was conducted by Dr. C. G. Hounshell, Life Enlistment Secretary of the Board of Missions. The organization and appointment of committees then followed. More than sixty delegates from all parts of the Conference were enrolled and a high tide of earnest spiritual zeal characterized the entire body.

The afternoon devotional was lead by Miss Helen Boulware, who was also a representative from the Central Office. Miss Boulware's address, later in the afternoon, was a real inspiration.

At the evening service, stereopticon slides were put on the screen and a comprehensive explanation given by Dr. Hounshell, who dealt especially with the Epworth League's Special in Africa. Immediately after the service, a most delightful reception was tendered the Conference at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Cockrau. A very delightful program of music was rendered by the local orchestra, after which delicious ices were served, and the guests departed with praises of their host and hostess.

Again, Thursday morning, early prayer was conducted by Rev. Melville Johnson, of Batesville. The devotional of the morning session was conducted by Miss Boulware, after which a business hour was had, when it was voted that the next session of the Conference would be held at Grenada College next summer.

The following officers were elected. President, Rev. W. R. Lott; vice president, J. O. Tyson; secretary, Miss Lilly Mullins; corresponding secretary, Miss Ione Mansker; treasurer, V. H. Stevenson; Conference life service superintendent, Melville Johnson; superintendent of evangelism, Rev. Geo. Baker; Era agent, Robert Mevers; junior superintendent, Mrs. R. P. Neblett; superintendent of publicity, Rev. E. H. Cunningham.

Department superintendents were selected. For the First Department, Miss P. P. Dalton; Second Department, Miss Vera Salmon; Third Department, Rev. J. P. Brooks; Fourth Department, Mrs. V. P. Stephenson.

District secretaries were named in the order of the districts in the Conference: Aberdeen, Frank Henderson, Tupelo; Columbus, Miss Lucile Weems, West Point; Corinth, Mrs. C. M. Curry, Ripley; Durant, Rev. W. L. Stormont, Durant; Greenville, Miss Olive Wynn, Merigold; Holly Springs, Miss Haidee Curd, Holly Springs; Sardis, Miss Dorothy West, Sardis; Winona, Rev. J. B. Randolph, Winona.

During the afternoon, there was a real treat in a trip to Shiloh battlegrounds, tendered by the local Leaguers. At the evening session Dr. Hounshell addressed the Conference, and final adjournment was taken.

A high tide of zeal marked this Conference, and young people from over the Conference go out with a greater vision of the Epworth League and its great work.

A. C. McCORKLE, P. E.

It is the presence and power of Christ we need and seek now. The sin, cruelty, and sorrow of the past four years have made us feel the need of God. The problems that lie on the horizon stagger the bravest heart and stoutest mind. To begin the new era we need God's help just as God's power and presence among men at the Incarnation and birth of our Lord began the new era for the world.—Canadian Churchman.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

"Mississippi Room at Scarritt."

Some time before the annual meeting of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society, it was brought to the attention of certain of the officers that the room at Scarritt bearing their Conference name was in great need of repairs, refurnishing, and general replenishing, and that it would not compare favorably with the other Conference rooms in any particular. This was all that was necessary, for, of course, the Mississippi Conference could not bear to think of Council drawing near, with its attendant visits to Scarritt, and of the girls who occupied it being ashamed of their room, as compared with the rest; so on the Conference floor a sufficient amount was easily and quickly pledged to refurnish the room throughout. The money was sent to Miss Gibson, who, with the two girls, bought new and very attractive chairs, book cases, two small desks, and other pieces to match, as well as a beautiful art square in two tones of tan. Under the skillful touch of its two inmates, dainty touches here and there, combined with its new furnishings, now make the Mississippi Room one of the most attractive and desirable rooms in the whole building.

It has been a genuine joy to those members of the Conference who took part in this little act of love, just as always happens when some deed of real service brings us in closer personal touch with others; and it was a matter of pride to the two Conference officers who were privileged to visit in the room, and bring back to the others the grateful thanks of the dear girls who enjoy the gift.

There still remains the need of a few articles of minor importance, which will add much to the attractiveness of Mississippi Room; so if there are any persons or auxiliaries who have not redeemed their pledge, please do so at once, and send the money to Mrs. C. R. McQueen, Social Service Superintendent, Meridian, Miss.

Only one Conference is ahead of this in the matter of representation at Scarritt, and we feel that the best is none too good for the seven splendid girls whom we call our own, and who will so soon represent us on the home and foreign fields.

Mrs. GEORGE H. THOMPSON,
Corresponding Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Mission Study Courses Recommended for 1920-21.

The general theme for the year 1920-21 is, "The Bible and Missions." The following books are recommended for study:

Adults—"The Bible and Missions," by Helen Barrett Montgomery; "The Church and the Community," by Ralph E. Diffendorfer.

Young People—"A Better World." By Tyler Dennett. A book on the practical aspects of the church in community service, by Ralph A. Felton, is in the making and will have a name when it comes from the press.

Juniors—"Lamplighters Across the Sea." By Margaret T. Applegarth. A book of stories appropriate to the theme, "The Church and the Community," by Rev. Jay T. Stocking, will be ready in a few weeks. The title will be announced later.

In addition to these books, two books on stewardship are recommended for study: "Money the Acid Test," by David McConaughy, and "The New Christian," by Ralph Cushman. The books should be studied by every woman in the church. A new conception of stewardship and a larger sense of duty and responsibility will be created by the study of these books, and no woman can afford to lose the inspiration to be gotten from them.

It is interesting to note that the year 1920 has been designated as Bible year. It is most appropriate, and we do not believe that it was by accident that the general theme for mission study was chosen in line with the thought of the leaders who asked that this year be observed with special reference to study and distribution of the Bible throughout the world. Valuable material on the Bible has been prepared by the American Bible Society, Bible House, Astor Place, New York, and may be had on application.

A Personal Message.

I clipped the above from Mrs. H. R. Steele's Council Report. If your Auxiliary hasn't a Mission or Bible Study Class, send for your books at once and report a class to me, when you send in your second quarter's report, the end of this month (June).

I had only 35 reports the first quarter, and I know that we have at least 100 Mission and Bible Study Classes. So many women write to me for report blanks. Remember, women, that no loose-leaf record blanks are sent out, but your record blank for Mission Study Superintendent is found in the Corresponding Secretary's Record Book. If you haven't record book of this sort, write at once to Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for one.

When we read on Page 148 of our May "Voice," we find that the Christianization of America was upon the heart and conscience of many of the Council speakers.

Through Mission Study, let us enlarge our interest and activity along this line. Miss Mable Howell says, "If we do not succeed in Christianizing America, we may as well bring home every foreign missionary."

If Mrs. Snelling can give me the space on the "Woman's Page," I want to send in the name of every Mission Study Superintendent sending me a report for the second quarter, ending June 30, 1920.

Let us make our department the very best, and through Mission Study we will think and pray more on the deep things of the Kingdom of God.

Mrs. W. T. CUNNINGHAM,
Conference Supt. of Mission Study.

We Are Glad to Meet You, Ladies.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Merryville, La., Alexandria District, would like to be introduced to the other Missionary Societies of Louisiana. On account of railroad facilities and poor public roads, we are almost unknown. The annual meetings are usually held so far away that we do not get to attend. The only time it was near by this year, at Lake Charles, and our Conference or district officers failed to let us know in time.

In membership we have 27, and a more intelligent, interested company of women can seldom be found—nearly all young women. Our president, Mrs. D. W. Smith, puts her time, thought and talent into making us reach the standard of excellence. Our Mission Study class has splendid attendance and interest. We have just finished the book, "Making America Safe," by Goddard and McDonell; it is a fine book, and now we will begin a Bible study course.

We are experiencing "blessings in disguise." The recent storm blew down our little one-room church, and we have rebuilt a splendid modern church, with six Sunday school rooms, and one of the most excellent Sunday schools in this part of the State; membership 120, with average attendance 100. Mr. Flem Clark is our able Sunday school superintendent, supported by a corps of very loyal teachers.

Now if I haven't properly introduced the Merryville Methodist Church, just let me know and I'll say more.

Sincerely,
MRS. W. A. MARTIN,
Supt. Study and Publicity.

A CENTURY OF SERVICE.

In 1820 a good old-fashioned doctor in North Carolina prepared an ointment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good old-fashioned service and value. It is very effective for sores, boils, cuts, bruises, burns, stings, eczema and the many similar forms of skin eruption. It soothes the pain, cleanses the wound, kills the germs and begins healing. If your druggist can not supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you.—Adv.

A LETTER FOR WOMEN

from a Woman Whose Serious Illness Was Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Garnett, Kas.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a complete nervous breakdown following the birth of my oldest child. I got up too soon which caused serious female trouble. I was so weak that I was not able to be on my feet but very little and could not do my housework at all. I had a bad pain in my left side and it would pain terribly if I stepped off a curb-stone. One day one of your booklets was thrown in the yard and I read every word in it. There were so many who had been helped by your medicine that I wanted to try it and my husband went to town and got me a bottle. It seemed as though I felt relief after the second dose, so I kept on until I had taken five bottles and by that time I was as well as I could wish. About a year later I gave birth to a ten pound boy, and have had two more children since and my health has been fine. If I ever have trouble of any kind I am going to take your medicine for I give it all the praise for my good health. I always recommend your medicine whenever I can."—Mrs. EVA E. SIDNEY E. HODGES.

To choose God as the supreme good is the highest expression of the unearthliness of our nature, the holiest function, as well as the most rational, of Intellect, choice and power. To find the complement of our needs, our hunger, our soul yearnings, in full, to find satisfaction is the end of knowledge, light, truth, reason, God. This is the true riches and the full answer to all man's desires for happiness, power and immortality. The body grows by its relation to its material needs and its possessions are only in figures of speech, never a reality. The only real possession that is or can be is an invisible ministry of the whole range of nature and grace to our thought, love, emotion, our moral and social, our intellectual and spiritual depletions and hunger. This is the genuine riches, the true wealth, the only possessions we can obtain and certainly carry with us through all worlds and all phases of circumstance and fortune.

Then Brother Sidney Hodges was by all measurements a rich and truly great man. He was born in Prentiss County, Mississippi, in 1868. Here he grew to fine manhood and was radically converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life. His whole career on earth was spent here amid the scenes and friends of his early life. He was known, he was admired, he was truly loved by all who knew his sincere, transparent, warm and simple heart. His life was an open book in which all who knew him read the name of every noble, worthy, sacred thing that belonged to his God and in any way concerned his fellowman. His life was white and straight. He was a rare soul for his purity, geniality, simplicity of manner and ready hospitality to every good man and thing.

To know him was to love him, and to mention his name, which was a synonym for kindness and honor and virtue, was to make one who knew him feel all the pride and glow and fine emotion possible to friendship and love. To know one such man would hearten and soften and silence the cynic's tongue and hush the vile slander that "all men have their price." Those who loved him best were those who had known him longest and fullest. His life was like the needle to the pole, always invariable and trustworthy in private, in public, in his home, in his church. His business was a stewardship of God, his social life was a ministry of good deeds and kindness, his home life the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High.

Brother Hodges was a saintly man, though unconscious of it himself. He made no loud assumptions, proclaimed no virtues on his part, worried nobody with holy testimonies, tired nobody with vain repetitions, fretted nobody with Pharisaical assumptions, frayed no one's patience with iterations of monotonous piety; but as to the matter of living a full, four-square, white and useful and winsome life, I have known but few, if any, who ever came in sight of him. He was so pure, so honest, so generous, so warm-hearted to all the sanctities and claims of life, and a friend to every noble cause of God or man.

He was a rare and unusual man in his whole make-up of social and religious and business nature and behavior. I shall ever love his name and cherish his beautiful character, and the memory of him will ever be a treasure and a power in my own life. Brother Hardy W. Reese, an old and long-time friend, said of him, "Brother Hodges was one of the truest and best men I ever knew." Again he says, "He had the confidence, friendship and love of all who knew him." Brother Hodges was a devoted and spiritual leader in his church for long years.

He was a steward and church lay leader when he passed away on March 2, 1920. He was ill only a few days of pneumonia. Surrounded by friends and his own fine and heart-broken family, he closed his eyes on earthly scenes to open them on realms beyond, realms of light and glory. He had no special preparation or delay to make, but the summons found him ready and waiting. His sainted mother, one of the noblest that ever trained a son or daughter had preceded him by only a few years. Oh, what a meeting that was! Mother and son in glory! So they are home again, over on the other side of the river and just waiting for the rest of the family to come on home. Heaven becomes nearer and dearer each day. Every one of family and friends who precedes us carries along with him a portion of our hearts, until, in due time, we'll have nothing here, but all over there, and our removal will be by the happy exchange of the temporal for the eternal.

Life is sweeter and more genuine because I knew, a while, my friend and brother, and now I feel, with his own sad, loved ones, the holy power and sweet fellowship and immortal uplift to all heavenly things because he has been with us here and walked with us and gladdened our hearts and sweetened our lives and now has been made eternal to all our loves, hopes and expectations. God bless and comfort his loved ones.

A NOTE FROM OXFORD, MISS.

Dear Advocate: Church affairs with the Oxford folk, I believe, are normal. The University closed last week, and with the leave of students both church and Sunday school attendance naturally decreases. However, our local attendance has increased wonderfully during the past two months. Our men's and women's organized Bible classes are especially very gratifying.

Our presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Holder, of Holly Springs, was with us last Sunday and gave us a great sermon on "The Christian's Peace." The Lord's Supper was observed at the close, making the service very sweet and impressive.

Our pastor, Brother Lipscomb, whom the entire congregation loves and appreciates, has been absent several days attending a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.

Wishing you continued success with our good paper, I am sincerely,

Mrs. A. FOUNT CALLOWAY.
June 6, 1920.

FROM FOXWORTH, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On last Sabbath evening, June 6, we closed a glorious revival at the church in our town. Brother Charley Schultz did the preaching. The presence and power of the Holy Spirit were in every service from the very first, and increased to a high degree of fervency in the last service when a class of thirteen, consisting of members of all ages—an eight-year-old boy to an aged mother and grandmother—were received into full connection.

Yes, indeed, this has been a truly great revival for not only ours but also for our sister church. Our Baptist brethren manifested a true Christian spirit and entered heart and soul into the work of the evangelization of our little town. As a result, the forces of evil were more completely routed, before the meeting closed, than ever before in our town's history, and a more nearly solid unit of forces for righteousness exists among the Christians in our town than has ever been before. And we do most earnestly pray that the good thus set agoing in our midst may move on, gathering force and power, Alpine-glacier-like, till sin in its multitudinous forms shall be overwhelmed or made to flee to his Satanic Majesty's realm, leaving our fair Canaan to God's people.

We all love Brother Schultz dearly for the great work wrought among us, and pray devoutly for him in his soul-saving, God-serving, humanity-uplifting work

An event, not directly, but certainly indirectly, a result of his service here, was the liberal "pounding" of our beloved pastor, Brother Barr, on Thursday evening by our townspeople. It was a complete surprise to Brother Barr, but to say he was simply overjoyed at this token of appreciation from the people of the town of all denominations, is but expressing it mildly.

May God continue his richest blessings on our people!

Yours for service,
J. R. ROBERTSON.

A REVIVAL AT DEEMER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On Wednesday, June 3, we closed a very successful ten-day meeting (a revival) at Deemer. Rev. John W. Ramsey, of Bucatunna, Miss., assisted me.

The preaching of Brother Ramsey was of the highest order and just to the point. We had fifteen accessions to the church, and the entire church was quickened to new life and new activities. The night the meeting closed, namely, Wednesday night, June 3, the good people of Deemer gave us by far the greatest pounding we ever enjoyed. We thought at one time that they were going to shower us with good things, but fortunately the good people decided that we could easily stand a good "pounding," and so they gave us a strong one. They gave us about $70 worth of such things as meat, flour, canned goods in abundance and dried fruit, sugar, and many other things. The table, or rather tables, just groaned under the burden. Allow me to say, Brother Carley, we took the "pounding" good naturedly, one "pounding" we enjoyed and deeply appreciated.

So you see the Deemer charge is looking up; yes, prospering some.

Yours for the kingdom,
J. W. PRICE, P. C.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE DISCIPLINARY VALUE OF DIFFICULTIES.

We came across this reflection not long since: "No pilot, however skillful, can calm the tempest or bid the waves subside. He must learn to navigate in spite of wind or waves. Once he learns that, the plain sailing will take care of itself." The courageous facing of difficulties and the grappling with them determinedly prepare us to meet successfully all the situations that may arise in life. Difficulties have a disciplinary value that makes them often a blessing in disguise. While they are not to be sought, perhaps, certainly they should not be shunned. Strength of character is worth infinitely more than comfort of body—and strength comes largely through struggle. If we had no difficulties to face, life would sink to a dead level of uniformity, and the epicurean philosophy of "eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die," would make its appeal even more insistently than it does to-day. "By this sign, conquer"—and that sign was the Cross.

WHO RULES?

It has long been the boast of the American people that they themselves control their politics and elect their officials. There can be no doubt but that the theory of our Government provides that such shall be the case. But indications are not lacking that the management of affairs is in the hands of a comparatively few men who form their plans in secret and manipulate nominations and elections according to rules well understood by themselves. It may be impossible to prevent the development of a "machine" that controls party politics, but it is well for patriotic citizens to insist that their own rights shall not be altogether disregarded. Government of the many by the few is as dangerous as government for the few by the many.

THE INEXORABLE DEMANDS OF THE LAW.

The arrest recently of a man and his wife on the charge of murder committed eight years ago, is simply one of many reminders that the law is inexorable in its demands upon those who have violated its precepts. Justice never sleeps, and the flight of time affects not in the slightest degree its vigilance in finding out the guilty and imposing a due penalty. It is true that human laws sometimes are evaded, but divine laws—never. The impenitent sinner may know with absolute certainty that he will have to face his sins in the day of judgment.

LOOKING ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

A passenger on a delayed train was anxious to make an important connection at New Orleans. His margin was small, and he kept looking at his watch anxiously. The brakeman, of whom inquiry was made, did not hold out much hope of reaching the city in time to catch the other train. The passenger was plainly nervous and uneasy. When the conductor was appealed to as to the prospect of making up time, he optimistically replied that there was a pretty good chance of going into the city according to schedule. The passenger's face brightened perceptibly and he settled back contentedly to read a book that he had only been glancing at. The cheering word of the conductor had lessened his anxiety and given him a new hope. After the conductor had passed on, the passenger remarked, "We may not make it, but his optimism is encouraging." He who always looks on the bright side not only keeps his own soul cheerful—he also brightens and blesses the lives of those about him. A woe-begone expression and a doleful voice on the part of one man can take a good deal of the joy of life out of a whole crowd; a smile and a pleasant word can start a song in the heart.

P. S.—The passenger made his connection. A good many of our worries are caused by things that never happen.

A BY-PRODUCT OF EDUCATION.

A recent press dispatch announces that the alumni of the Catholic University of America have launched a movement looking toward the construction of a million-dollar stadium at the University in Washington, D. C. To some of us who still find it hard to think in terms even of hundreds of thousands of dollars in connection with our educational institutions, the investment of a million dollars in an athletic plant may seem to be a piece of inexcusable extravagance. We shall not undertake to deny that it is; but we call attention to the fact that it indicates a conception of the value of adequate provision for all the needs of young men during their school life that is altogether admirable. Athletic activities are, in a sense, a by-product of our educational system, but they have reached the point where they demand and are entitled to liberal support. All the more, therefore, should our colleges and universities receive the endorsement and equipment that will enable them to perform their primary function of training the mind and heart.

FOR DECENCY'S SAKE.

We could wish that the men who so outrage the feelings of those who are not so morally calloused as themselves by their flow of profanity in public places, could be made to realize that they are violating one of the fundamental laws of the gentleman—not to give offense needlessly. While they seem to regard neither God or man, they might mend their ways if they knew that their words put them into the class of the ignorant and ill-bred. Profanity indicates neither brilliancy nor culture.

QUEER AMERICANISM.

It seems to us to be a queer kind of Americanism that gives covert approval to an evasion or violation of the law of the land simply because the law does not meet with the approval of the person who is so ready to disregard it. Of such kind is the following, clipped from a prominent secular newspaper: "One of the results of prohibition already much in evidence is that thousands of men who have always been regarded as law-abiding and conservative citizens are violating the Volstead Act at every opportunity and finding a good deal of grim satisfaction in the violation." We can find no fault with those who are conscientiously opposed to a given law and do what they can in a legitimate way to bring about its repeal, but we cannot understand how a "law-abiding and conservative" citizen can himself deliberately violate, or encourage others to violate a law that has been duly passed and that has stood the test of the highest court in the land. This country needs to be taught anew that the enactment of a law imposes sacred obligations that are not to be lightly dealt with. The suggestion that a great political party should insert in its platform a plank that frankly favors the annulment of an amendment to the Constitution is, of itself, an indication of a dangerous attitude toward law as a whole.

GOOD BUSINESS, AT THAT.

We read the other day that a man charged with profiteering confessed that he had made $3000 illegally, whereupon he was found guilty and fined $1000. A sequence of reflections: the Government proved its case; the majesty of the law was upheld; the criminal was duly punished. (But somehow or other we do not know how to dispose of that $2000 that remained as clear profit after all demands were met.)

CAPE JASSAMINES.

(To my Mother)

By J. F. Dorroh.

Star shape, star white, soft petaled as the rose,
That flowers in light inside the Gates of Death,
Thro' twilight's dusk how fair each blossom glows,
Clasped in its clear green sheath!

It seems but yesterday its fragile stalk,
That Mareh, the Bolshevik, torments and grieves,
Stood trembling by the vlolet bordered walk,
Bereft of all its leaves;

But, lo, some sweet impulse has stirred the sod,
And Rain and Sun and Dew on Nature's loom
Wove the white pattern of a thought of God
In stem and leaf and bloom;

And o'er it leaned the Angel of the Night,
High Prlestess of the Rose, whose witching graee
Transformed eaeh frail bud to the tender white
Of my sweet Mother's faee.

Star white, star pure, it lifts its faee to greet
Ethereal lips, whose touch is perfect bliss,
And left within its odorous chaliee sweet
The ineense of her kiss.

Star shape, star white, star pure, if seems a part
Of some fair seheme the hands of angels wove,
Type of a Mother's selfless, generous heart,
And lavish as her love.

AN EXEGESIS OF LUKE 15.

By Rev. R. S. Lawson.

This ehapter sets forth the interest which heaven takes In the fortunes of a single repenting sinner. It is a call to repentanee from the heaven-ward side of eternity. The chapter following is a call from the deathward side.

It is Introdueed by two parables, as two porches to the main strueture; the first, that of the lost sheep, shows the joy of heaven over a repenting sinner as eompared with those who need no repentance—the ehureh of God; the seeond, the interest of heaven over a repenting sinner, by the presenee of angelie hosts, who refleet the Savior's joy.

This passage of Seripture is an epitome of the gospel. Its eloquenee as a mere composition has never been equaled in human literature. It reaches every family and even the poor youth who has gone away, a profligate from his home.

Angels view a soul out of place, with the true place in sight—a soul going to pieees. They see immortal spirits, one by one, as wrecked mariners drop into a fathomless abyss. Whether the disaster has been eaused by false lights from wreekers, or by the ignorance of the pilot, or by storms which sweep the main, and to which all who navigate the sea are liable, it matters not; Christ's impulse is to save the lost; he eame to save, to awaken in man a sense of danger, to throw far over him a line by which he may eseape to land; and in the interest of a great rescue he deserlbes heaven's coneentrated sympathy. For the while, all else is held In abeyanee, until the one heart-broken, humbled wanderer finds his way back to a father's house.

While the depth of man's ruin by sin eannot be fathomed, the height of man's reeovery by grace reaches far beyond the altitudes of faith: "I said ye are gods, and all of you are ehildren of the Most High."

In this magnificent Scripture, God reveals not only his personal, but his paternal nature. He is among us as a father, full of indulgent tenderness and exhaustless love. He comes to the homes and hearts of his people as the Father of Mercies. The parable is offered by the Savior as an apology for receiving sinners. He describes his own intense anguish in search of the lost; beginning far back amid the seats of adoring hosts. "He made himself of no reputation; took the form of a servant; and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross." As a shepherd might pursue over hill and dale a lost sheep, so he eame to earth searching, searching for lost sinners, that he might return and awaken the anthems of heaven with his joy at their recovery.

Even in heaven there are degrees in joy. When God laid the foundations of the earth, stretched his line upon it, and therefore the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy—the sublime thrill vibrated throughout the universe. Yet, by and by, when the angel of the Lord deseended upon the plains of Bethlehem, amid the shepherds, bringing the news, "the good tidings of great joy," that "unto you this day is born in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord," a babe in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger; when in the eircle of light there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host taking up the mighty refrain, "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peaee, good will toward men," this included and tranthough all other degrees of joy—the infinite expression of Infinite Love.

I.

"And he said, a certain man had two sons: and the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living."

Here is an overfond father, and this is our God. Not long after, the younger son "gathered all together," In portable form, and took his journey into a far eountry. What country so far as the one the sinner seeks, away from all ehecks, family or other, to be unrestrained by either love or law, as the height of freedom! To give a loose rein to every lust—to "drink in sin as an ox drinks in water," a heart enslaved to sensuallty! What a strange mania—the possession of one who puts far away the restraints of home life!

The end soon eomes. The heat of passion intensifies folly. The profligate presently finds himself without food or friends, and on the very edges of death; "there arose a mighty famine In that land," for God was after him. The concurrence of Providence with grace is a blessed mystery. Had the famine oeeurred before he had spent his substance, there would have been no repentance. Yet all the wheels of nature would be reversed, if neeessary, to seeure the salvation of ono soul. It is out of the floods of our own folly, which threaten to destroy us, that we ery unto God, "The snares of death prevented me; the sorrows of hell compassed me about; in my distress I ealled upon the Lord, and cried to my God: and he heard my voiee out of his temple; and he was seen upon the wings of the wind." The mighty God of David is not far from every sinner.

The pursult of sin ylelds mean work and poor pay. The service of a swineherd and Intense hunger brought the prodigal to his senses. He had reached the lowest deep! "How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!" His repentanee began with the memory of a father's house—of home—of morning and evening prayer—of hospitality—of every blessed thing that goes to make up a godly house, the magnetic power of its love to all the ehildren. He determined to return—what he would say—he would ask for bread only, and a ehanee to work. How little a ehild knows a father's love!

II.

The Return.

The father saw where the boy had disappeared, adown the distant avenue, and to that point his eye turned hourly every day. Often he thought his boy might be dead—no word had came from him. Then again, his heart and his faith pictured the poor fellow eoming home. "O, my God, why didst thou give me such a boy?" The house was somber and silent with the passage of time; despair filled all its ehambers, where once was joy from morn till night.

O, the vlgilanee of love! One day the father saw him, and ran and fell on his neck, and kissed him: "And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel, his father; and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neek a good while. And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die, sinee I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive." A thousand ages eannot ehange love.

The prodigal made his speech, but the father heard it not. He eried to his servants: "Bring forth the best robe and put it on him; and shoes on his feet; and put a ring on his hand; and bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat and be merry; for this my son was dead and is alive again." The unutterable speeeh of music, the lighted house, the festive board, the rhythmic rapture, the vibrating atmosphere of the scene, express the sympathy of all heaven In the return of a son; a son of God, in the presence of God.

III.

The Elder Son.

As they began to be merry, the elder brother came In from the field; from the honest plow and the stubborn soil; tired with the day's work; and heard the musie and daneing, and saw the blazing lights. He called a servant and asked what it all meant. The servant told him of the feast, that his brother had eome back safe and sound.

He would not go in; he was angry. Therefore his father came out and entreated him. In the Scriptures all passages of great moment are repeated, and thus are intensified. The law was given twice; the sermon on the mount twice; the feeding the multitude twice; the stilling the storm on the lake twice. And here the interruption gathers a stronger volume and swifter current. The elder son replies to his father: "These many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment; and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends; but as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf." The father saw the trouble, and the true point of the complaint, and graeiously replied: "My son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine. Your brother was dead, and is alive; was lost, and is found. What eare I for substance? You shall have it all; I have my dear boy. I want no more." O the abandon of a father's love!

And does this tell the joy of heaven, that it cares for naught, as compared with the redemption of one soul? Yes, all the wealth of a universe has been exhausted in its efforts to save. The Son of God gave himself to this end. He died for us on the Cross. "What more could I do," he exclaims, "that I have not done?" O sinner, far away from God, he is still on your side; you have been bought in the market-place of death. "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?"

That God, in the face of justice, can display so much favor to the sinner, is the essence of the gospel—the glory of it. For this, Christ died, that God might be just, and yet the justifier of him that believes in Jesus. In this parable the love of a father for his ehild is the explanation of the problem. This introduees us to God, as "our Father which art in heaven," and brings us into the inner eirele of the divine subsistence, to the Father of Christ, "the Father of men and angels," "the Father of lights," "the Father of glory," "after whom all is named."

These are features of a great existence which angels "desire to look into," which reveal a reserve of mercy, wholly outside of human merit, out of which the sinner is blessed, and which ennobles him at his worst estate.

"Christ has not subverted the relationship between man and man, as the foundation of morals; but he has erected an additional buttress, by discovering the relationship between man and God. The great motive of love forms a spiritual power, a gospel which announces to every race, and to every state of the human heart, that amelioration is possible for man, that all that he needs who is struggling with evil is a willingness to have the Divine Man to reign over him."

The principle of habituation has, within certain limits, made man what he is. This principle Christ rarely alluded to and never used. The moralist begins with the act, through the act reaches the principle, through the principle the intellect. Our Lord begins with the intellect, then the affections, then the action. Our Lord came to be a revolutionist in the spiritual and moral worlds. He came to those in whom the principles of evil were already deeply sunk. The great truths which he established were powerful in support of the righteous, but it was in reference to sinners that he framed his plan.

The heavenly aspect of the case—that of a repenting sinner—is strongly pressed in the parable. Love overlooks the severer features, rejoicing against justice, in which all heaven is with the Father. Its wild accents of joy, leaping madly as a spring river, when the cold winter relaxes its grasp and the sun melts the ice, and the waters rush and dance seaward—then all heaven vibrates to greater symphonies than when worlds were made.

The opposing spirit of earth only intensifies the statement of heaven's interest. Earth's standpoint was that of cold justice; the marked divergence between the system of recovering mercy and human deserts. It was a momentary check; it increased the volume of the great stream of love: "All that I have is thine."

The true ground of this heavenly rapture is that the sinner has been bought by Christ's blood. Humanity must have been raised to its highest dignity, if heaven can rejoice in my history. The stars seem to be looking at you, but angels are. The swiftness and thoroughness of heaven's relief contrast strongly with the sinner's long night of sin. O sinner, every man is entitled to his birthright in the atonement; are you satisfied to stay with proud, fallen spirits? O, come to your Friend; come back—there is bread enough, and to spare; there is yet honor, and love, and sonship awaiting you!

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE SACRAMENTS.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D.

I.

Introductory Statement.

I almost feel as if I should begin the series of articles which is to follow with an apology. I do not wonder that, at a time when the church is facing such vast and vital issues and such tremendous responsibilities as those by which she is confronted to-day, many earnest Christians find it difficult to be patient with those who persist in turning aside from the proclamation of the great spiritual messages of the Bible and from the urgent calls to practical service which are coming to the followers of the Christ from every direction, to engage in controversy about such minor matters as the external forms of religion and the modes of administering ordinances. They are impatient because they believe that such controversy not only involves a wicked waste of time and energy, but also works actual harm to the church and to society by diverting the attention of men from things that are fundamental and fixing it upon things that are of subordinate importance and by creating needless and unseemly strife and division among brethren.

I am ready to confess myself in thorough sympathy with this view. I believe that the life of the church has been immeasurably injured and its influence as a saving agency seriously diminished by the bitter controversies that have been carried on by contending sects about matters that do not touch the essentials of our religion. That these unhappy controversies still continue in spite of the fact that Protestant Christianity at most points is manifesting an increasing readiness to rid itself of the remnants of the inheritance bequeathed to it by Mediaeval Catholicism and to face with a clearer vision than ever before the great spiritual task committed to the church, seems to me one of the discouraging facts connected with the present religious situation in our country.

And yet I am writing a series of articles about ordinances! "Amazing," you say, "utterly inconsistent." So it may seem at first glance; but the sequel will show that the fact that I do hold this view is my reason for writing.

My message is designed primarily for the members of my own denomination, not because I am not interested in others, but partly because I am sure of having a basis for effective appeal to Methodists such as does not exist in relation to any other Christian body, and partly because I do not think it would be worth while, even if it were possible, to disturb the members of other Christian bodies because of erroneous views in regard to matters which I regard as nonessential.

Two reasons impel me to undertake this self-imposed task at this particular time:

1. Some of our ritualistic fellow-Christians, especially those who for one reason or another put great emphasis upon baptism by immersion, are not willing to observe the rule of Christian comity just enunciated, but seem aggressively determined to create all the confusion and unrest they can among the poorly informed members of other denominations by trying to persuade them that they are guilty of a great sin in declining to be rebaptized. Not in the interest of denominationalism, but in the interest of that vital, non-ritualistic type of spiritual religion for which Methodism stands, I believe this effort should be resisted and that our people should not, for lack of knowledge, be robbed of any part of their precious spiritual inheritance. For if there ever was a time when this inheritance needed to be diligently guarded and offered to the world in its purity, it is to-day. Thoughtful men everywhere are growing tired of the mere hulls of religion. They no longer believe in magic even though it be invoked in the name of the Christian sacraments. The only religion that will satisfy them is that which assures them of the possibility of a direct personal relation between the individual and the Heavenly Father and of power through this fellowship to live Christ-like lives; and they grow increasingly impatient of any effort to exalt what they regard as at best but symbols into the place of essentials, and to make them substitutes for spiritual power and practical piety. It is especially important, therefore, that at such a time Methodists shall so thoroughly understand the nature of the spiritual platform upon which they stand that they will steadfastly decline to permit themselves to be disturbed by those who would involve them in controversies that ought to have been forever abandoned when the emancipated church of the Reformation repudiated the pagan inheritance which had been foisted upon it by the hierarchy of Rome.

2. I am impelled the more to undertake this task because some recent experiences have forced me to the conclusion that there are many of our people who do not understand the attitude of our church in regard to these things, and, therefore, are inclined to turn back again to "the weak and beggarly rudiments" from the bondage of which they have been set free. They realize but vaguely what is involved in that noble charter of Christian freedom declared by St. Paul: "When the fullness of time came, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the law, that he might redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of His Son into our hearts, crying, Abba! Father!"

There are Methodists, for instance, who think that our position is precisely the same as that of those who stand for immersion as the one door of entrance into the church and an essential condition of Christian fellowship, the only difference being that, instead of baptism by immersion, we substitute baptism by sprinkling or pouring. So far as fundamental significance is concerned, there is not a particle of difference between these two contentions. One makes one mode of administering an ordinance a matter of primary importance and the other sets up the same claim for another mode. What I desire, is to show Methodists that to give such emphasis and significance to any mode of administering any rites is both unscriptural and unmethodistic. The sacramental rites of the church still have their place and their value if used in the right way. But if given an emphasis which the teachings of Jesus do not warrant, they become a hindrance rather than a help to spiritual growth.

The plan which I propose is, first, to consider the teachings of the New Testament in regard to external rites and the modes of administering them and, then, to show that the historic position of Methodism is in accord with these teachings.

The Teaching Method of Jesus.

The most common designation of our Lord in the Gospels is Teacher. It is applied to him three times as frequently as the designation, Preacher. He is pre-eminent among the world's teachers both as to the content of his message and the manner of its presentation. His method is the norm to which the trained teachers of our day are seeking more and more to conform.

For instance, we hear a great deal at present about "the point of contact in teaching." This means that in order to teach successfully we must begin where we find the pupil, and "the only place where we can be sure to find him is on the plane of his natural experience or contact with life." The teaching process is largely a matter of broadening the scope of a pupil's interests by associating new objects and ideas with those in which he is already interested.

This was strictly observed in the teaching of Jesus. He did not attempt to lift the people out of their old environment, to ignore their intellectual inheritance and their existing interests and by some kind of miraculous process to transport them into a new world and a new realm of ideas and interests. On the contrary, beginning with things with which they were already familiar and in which they were already interested, he proceeded, by the simple method of associating the new with the old, to widen the scope and enrich the substance of their thinking. In other words, he recognized in the previous providential training of Israel a divine preparation for his message and mission.

This is in accord with St. Paul's interpretation of Hebrew history and religion. "The law," he tells us, "became our tutor to bring us to Christ."

The Method Illustrated.

The method is illustrated both in the terminology which Jesus used and in his adoption of the permanent symbols of the church.

His first point of contact with her hearers was through the eager expectation on which John's preaching had awakened among the people of the near approach of the Kingdom of God and their belief in the need for repentance and moral purification as a necessary part of the process of preparation for it. Seizing upon this existing interest, he sought to lead them step by step to a conception of the Kingdom vastly richer and more comprehensive than that which was embraced in their expectation of a Jewish state under Messianic rule and to a more adequate and vital comprehension of the process by which they were to enter the Kingdom. In other words, he began by employing terms with which they were already familiar and which stood for things in which they were already interested and proceeded to broaden and ennoble and spiritualize their ideas by putting into these terms a larger and richer content.

The use of symbols has been universal in all ages of human history. Laughter, tears, the kiss, caresses and embraces, such as a mother bestows on her child, tribal and national banners and religious rites and ceremonies of various kinds are familiar illustrations.

A symbol is a visible sign of an invisible reality, and its value grows out of the fact that it manifests this reality more vividly than it can be represented by words. It is the language of action and attempts to reach the soul through the eye as well as through the ear.

Jesus recognized the value of this method of impressing truth. He did not, however, load religion down with rites and ceremonialism after the manner of paganism, but selected two simple and familiar rites as sufficiently portraying the fundamental facts of the faith which he was to establish. The use of baptism in the formal initiation of heathen converts into the monotheistic faith of Israel and also in the case of Hebrews who expressed a desire to forsake their sins and dedicate themselves to a higher ideal of holiness by way of preparation for the advent of the Messianic Kingdom, had been common among the Jews for generations when Jesus began his ministry of teaching and healing in Judea and Galilee. I reserve for a subsequent article an explanation of the origin and meaning of these rites. The point I wish to make here is, that in both cases Jesus took over into Christianity symbols with which the people to whom he made his first appeal were already familiar and proceeded to invest them with new and richer spiritual meanings.

(In the next article I will explain the two general types of religion and seek to show to which type Christianity belongs.)

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Ten days in the Delta put me in touch with some excellent people and made me proud that I am a Mississippian. And that reminds me. I once received a letter from Bishop John H. Vincent, recently deceased, inviting me to come to Chautauqua and be his guest—he wanted to talk and have a good time! I accepted it, and we did have a good time. One morning he said: "I want to introduce you to the audience this morning. There will not be time for a speech, but make them a little talk." He usually conducted the 9 a.m. devotional service, and the auditorium was nearly always filled to hear him, for, as the founder of Chautauqua, he was held in very high esteem. There were several thousand people present when we went to the platform. Just before he presented me to the audience, he asked me where I was born. I replied that I was a native of Mississippi. He introduced me, saying some very pleasant things about me, and said: "He is a native of Mississippi." Then, in an aside, which no one heard but myself, he added, "That was not his fault!" I told the people I was glad to be there, and to be presented to them by Bishop Vincent in such a flattering manner. Then I said: "He told you that I am a native of Mississippi, adding what you did not hear, but which I will tell you, that it 'was not my fault.' I know that it is not in proper form to take issue with Bishop Vincent here on any subject, and I do not intend to violate the proprieties of Chautauqua; but I will say that when he says it was not my fault that I was born in Mississippi, he ought to know what he is talking about, for he was born at Tuscaloosa, Alabama, himself, just across the Mississippi line!" If a bomb had exploded above the Tabernacle it would hardly have produced a greater sensation. I saw hundreds of heads go together, and I knew they were saying to each other: "What! our beloved Bishop Vincent a Southerner?" That evening at dinner, with many guests at the table, he said: "I don't intend to introduce you any more up here." "Why?" I asked. "Because I can hardly get across the grounds for the people stopping me to ask if what you said about my being born in the South is true."

"Well," I replied, "you ought to have known better than to make a fling at Mississippi where I am. If you don't behave while I'm up here, I will tell something else on you." "What else?" he asked. "I will tell them that when you left down there, your father sold Bishop Hargrove's father a big lot of slaves." He threw up his hands and said: "O, Steel, have some mercy!" I noticed one of the high-brows at the table, some English dignitary, looked askance at him, as much as to say, "And you have been connected with slavery?" Just so.

Old Mississippi rings true yet. However, even the young Mississippians have adopted the Yankee abomination of "Daddie." Such a vulgarism, the lingo of dirty little darkies on the old pre-war plantation, robs the sacred relation of "father" of all its dignity and sweetness, and makes a mess of what should be a refined and educative epithet. And yet Dr. Weeks, the brainy editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, had the audacity to express a desire to modernize me! Never! When I told Ingram that I had seen one of the Commissioners who had been in favor of Unification, and that he told me it was farther off than ever, you should have seen the change it made in the man. I thought he had a sulky liver that made him blue; but after I told him that, he got as spry as a sparrow at the barn! Well, I confess it made me feel immensely better, too. And I will feel better still if we will recover our grip on our ideals, and stand fast for the unchanging verities of our faith. But we will have to set down squarely on a lot of things, and among them that absurd propaganda about the Negro sent out from Nashville by the frisky reformers, led by Weatherford, Trawick, et al. Of all the rantankerous nonsense sent forth under the sanction of the Methodist Church, some of the recent utterances of that bunch of remodellers of the universe beat the record! I sometimes wonder if these folks sitting in their offices and making improvements on God's ideals know what the people think about them. Well, they will find out.

I met some delightful folks at Evansville; was a guest in the home of Mr. F. A. Owen, got a glimpse into several other beautiful homes, and received many pleasant courtesies. They have a pretty little church and keep it as neat as a parlor, with a beautiful yard with flowers and shrubbery, making the church what every church should be, a model of beauty and refinement for the community. When I left I wired my wife to cheer up, for Mr. Allen, at Clayton, had rigged me up in a new straw hat, new shoes, new shirts, etc., and sent me on to old Virginia fixed up like a gentleman. Hurrah for the Delta Methodists! They are big-hearted folks. Do you know old Ed Ramsey, now of the Memphis Conference? I say "old Ed" not because he is "old," for he isn't, but because some impudent people call me old, and I know better if I'll be selfish, and monopolize the honor: well, Ramsey once said, "I like folks who brag on my preaching and give me things!" Then he would like those Delta folks. And when a man finds a check for $100 in the honorarium handed him as a "slight token of appreciation" for his service, he feels like singing the doxology and dancing like David before the Ark! I hurried it on to Sister Steel. She don't cut up didos as I do over anything, but I could imagine her smile. Amen. Be good, Carley, for this is a mighty good old world we're living in.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 1920 session of the Corinth District Conference was convened in the town of Myrtle, June 1. The business of the conference was dispatched with alacrity yet without haste, due in a large measure to the executive ability of the presiding officer, Rev. W. W. Mitchell.

Reports from the several pastoral charges gave evidence of a forward move along all lines of the work throughout the district. There was a spirit of optimism in the utterances of all the pastors. An outstanding feature of the conference was the report of Mrs. Emma Haymer on the Woman's Work in the district. This report set forth the growth of this work during the year and the plans for furthering the work.

Rev. George Byron Love and Rev. Thomas Manly Plunkett were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial, and Rev. William Axel Wilson was recommended to the Annual Conference for Deacon's Orders.

The following were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference: F. E. Ray, Miss Corinne Rogers, W. T. Rogers, D. H. Hall, W. R. Akin, J. S. Stephens, J. A. Morgan, G. L. Jones. S. S. Finger and W. T. Ross were elected alternates.

A notable feature of the conference was the preaching, which was done by the Revs. H. E. Carter, J. W. Ward, and J. D. Wroten, each giving a soul-inspiring message to the assembled congregations.

The connectional work was well represented by Rev. Robert Selby commissioner of Emory University; Rev. M. M. Black, commissioner of Millsaps College; Rev. Ben P. Jaco, for the Centenary; Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday School Field Secretary. Mrs. Riley presented the cause of the Orphans' Home, while Rev. O. P. Armour represented the Epworth League work.

A vote of thanks was extended to the good people of Myrtle and to Rev. W. A. Wilson, the conference host, for their unstinted and open-hearted hospitality. These people spared no pains to make the occasion one of pleasure to all who attended the conference.

Baldwin was selected as the place for the next meeting of the conference.

NOW FOR THE MAIN BUSINESS.

By Rev. H. M. Ellis.

Well, the funeral is over. Our Methodist Episcopal brethren, assembled in the General Conference in Des Moines, made a very prompt and decent interment.

For years I hoped that these two great Methodisms might find some basis of union on which each could effectively prosecute its divine mission and appointment. This was not because I feared the physically divided Methodism could not properly get forward with the work of the kingdom, for I entertain a strong suspicion that I get forward better on two legs than I might on one. But when the fifty representative leaders of our two churches, after these years of study and counsel and aided by the earnest prayers of the church, presented an impossible plan of union as the best they could devise under the circumstances, I saw at once that, for the present at least, my long-cherished hope was vain.

Now that the funeral is over, let's get back to the main business. We have "put over" some material things in the disturbed years, but what of our spiritual development? What of our old-time enthusiasm for souls? What of our fathers' loved high standard of holy life? The very fact that, when on the verge of passing into the hands of receivers, and of undergoing complete reorganization, our church could put on a campaign for half a million new members evidenced a lack of conscience that is not reassuring.

And, that we may get back to the main business, let the leaders of our great departments find some other way of prosecuting their work than that of habituating the church, as of late years, to think only in the material, mechanical and superficial. The life of the patient is in danger when the trained nurse is assigned to the housekeeping, cooking and laundering as well. The church has been put too exclusively to dealing with mere mechanism, instrumentalities, vehicles and agencies. The great verities and potencies have been too much shelved, or made to play errand boy for the tinkerers. Our congregations, Sunday schools, and Epworth Leagues have been forced to operate machinery till its rattle and clatter have drowned out "the still small voice." Brother This and Mr. That have come out one by one on the heels of the other, to "set up" their wonderful mechanical inventions for ecclesiastical "efficiency," that not infrequently one has had to sit around and watch the other hammer and pound before he could get a chance to make a "demonstration" with his own tinker machine. The loathsome sin of plagiarism has been canonized and sanctified, and the can-neries have been working overtime to get out "sermons" and "speeches" in carload lots. There must be some way of doing God's work without smashing sacred principles. And there must be some way of setting up and operating necessary ecclesiastical machinery without taking the whole church off of its job.

GOOD-BY.

My daughter, Mildred, and I will leave New York City, June 29, on the steamship Canada. We will be abroad about four months. The trip will include Italy, Holland, Belgium, France, England and Scotland.

The young ministers who need assistance at college will write to Rev. W. H. Lewis, Brookhaven, Miss.

I leave Whitworth College in the best of hands. The day I leave, Miss Janie H. Drake will take charge of my office and have full charge of the College until I return. Miss Drake came to Whitworth eighteen years ago; she understands every detail of school life and school work, enjoying the absolute confidence and respect of all who know her. I bespeak for her every consideration of kindness. The faculty has been engaged, and everything points toward a most prosperous session. Those who desire to attend next session should engage rooms at once.

I am going in search of poise of heart and mind. I am leaving my heart with my friends and loved ones. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may have journeying mercies, and that I may return to those whom I love. I. W. COOPER.

AN INDUSTRIAL GENERAL EVANGELIST.

In an attempt to relate more closely the laboring men to the church, the Commission on Evangelism has entered upon a new departure in the matter of revivals in industrial sections of the country. The Rev. George Tucker, of Jackson, Tenn., has been accepted as a general evangelist and will be used under the direction of the Commission for work exclusively among laboring people. All of the engagements for the Tucker evangelistic party will be made through the general secretary of the Evangelistic Commission, Dr. O. E. Goddard, and not by direct communication with the evangelist himself.

The Rev. George Tucker was formerly a railroad engineer in the employ of the Illinois Central Railroad. He is now, and has been for many years, a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Engineers, and this connection with union labor enables him to gain the sympathy of union men. Until 1915 Brother Tucker had led a more or less careless life and had no connection with any church or any form of religion. After he was converted in a revival held by Burke Culpepper, he resigned his position as railway engineer to enter upon evangelistic work.

Since that time he has been unusually successful; his first meetings were held in the freight depots, jails, railway shops, and different factories, and last year he conducted twenty-one meetings and was forced to decline twenty-five more invitations. He recently conducted a meeting in the big grandstand at the Alabama State Fair Grounds in Birmingham. It is estimated that more than 5000 persons each day attended these meetings, and 650 conversions were reported. Brother Tucker does not possess unusual educational qualifications, and has received little technical training in the work in which he is now engaged. His credentials are rather an intimate knowledge of the laboring man, a great earnestness and spiritual power, and a tremendous message of personal experience. He does not in any way deal with the so-called "Social Question," and does not discuss the problems that are involved in the relations of employer and laborer. He is simply a passionate and flaming evangelist whose experiences and methods put him into direct relations with the average working man.

Brother Tucker will not be booked for meetings in any sections of the country except those in which the industrial situation is prominent. The Commission on Evangelism, after a thorough discussion of the matter, believes that he has a mighty work to do among this class. Dr. Goddard, who has made close investigations of his methods and message, reports that he has not in many years heard a man who possessed a greater control over his audience, a more dynamic message of true spirituality, or such a contact with men of his own class as Brother Tucker. It is hoped that his appointment as a general evangelist will pave the way for a large evangelistic activity among a section of our population which has presented to the church a very perplexing problem.

Brother Tucker will sustain to the church and to the Commission on Evangelism the same relation which is sustained by other general evangelists. The terms on which he will conduct meetings everywhere will be the same. The only difference between his work and that of the other evangelists is that all of his engagements are made by Dr. Goddard and he will be sent only among the industrial people. Pastors desiring his services should write direct to Dr. O. E. Goddard at Nashville, Tenn.

WHAT A CHURCH MIGHT HAVE DONE.

By Chaplain Johns,
of the Louisiana State Penitentiary.

Several years ago, two white men were received here on a charge of manslaughter. Their coming to the penitentiary revealed a sad state of affairs in the place where they had been born and reared. Their parents had settled in a fertile section of the State of Louisiana; keen foresight had prompted them to acquire all the land possible, which was very valuable for its agricultural worth, as well as the timber standing upon it. In time, a railroad was built through their property, and a depot established. Several children had come to them in this time, and quite a settlement developed around the depot and in the vicinity.

The head of the family referred to, started a store, with a saloon attachment. Necessarily, gambling was carried on and altogether a great deal of business was transacted. According to my information, the gentleman in question retained the ownership of everything except the railroad right-of-way, and all the business of the place accrued to his benefit, and his wealth grew by leaps and bounds. Vice and immorality flourished with no check whatever. No church was built. No Sunday school was instituted. The boys of the family grew up with no religious restraint whatever, familiar with the vilest company and all the language of the lowest orders of society.

After several years, the usual crop of brawls, murders, robberies, etc., occurred in the place and it began to attract the attention of observers as one of the vilest holes in the State.

Then came an awful murder, committed by the two men who came to prison, sons of the owner of the place. They had killed the station master, commonly referred to as the "depot agent." Then the citizens of the parish rose up. They demanded satisfaction. A prosecution was begun which, it is said, bankrupted the parish. The father of the boys also was ruined by the expenditure of everything he had to save the necks of his boys. Finally they came to prison. Their father, having spent everything he had, moved to another State. The property was bought by other parties, and two things were done at once: the name of the place was changed, and saloons were expelled! Thus, to sum up: For the lack of a church, and for the presence of the saloon with its gambling accompaniment, a life was ruthlessly taken, a parish bankrupted, a family ruined, and two otherwise nice boys sent to the penitentiary!

All this has passed into history now. The boys are out, having served their sentence. The lessons to be learned, however, may abide with us. Many jails of the State are now practically empty, murders are fewer now than at any time within my recollection, and most of those now occurring are brought about by a bottle of whisky from the "left-over-stock." We trust this condition may soon pass.

But the fact remains that we need churches, and the people must fill them, rearing their children in the principles of Christianity, or as sure as fate they will grow up, in some instances at least, to bring disgrace upon their parents.

O God, give us more evangelical preachers!

TO MY MOTHER.

For the body you gave me—the bone and the sinew,
The heart and the brain—that are yours—my Mother, I thank you.
I thank you for the light in my eyes—the blood in my veins,
For my speech, for my life, for my being; all that I have is from you who bore me.
For all the love you gave me, unmeasured from the beginning,
Mother—I thank you.
I thank you for the hand that led me,
The voice that directed me the lap that rested me,
All that I am, is by you, who nursed me.
For your kiss in the morning, and your kiss at night,
My Mother, I thank you.
I thank you for the tears you shed over me the songs you sung to me,
The prayers you said for me—your vigils and ministerings,
All that I am, is by you who reared me.
For the faith you had in me—the hope you had for me.
For your trust, your praise, and your chiding,
For the justice you bred into my bone,
And the honour you made mine; all that I am—you taught me.
For the sore travail that I caused you,
For the visions and despair—My Mother—forgive me
Forgive me the peril I brought you to,
The sobs and the groans I wrung from you,
And for the strength I took from you—Mother, forgive me.
For the fears I gave you—for the dreads—my Mother, forgive me.
Forgive me the joys I deprive you, the toils I made for you,
The hours, the days, the years I claimed from you—Mother, forgive me.
For the times I hurt you—the times I had no smile for you,
The caresses I did not give you—my Mother, forgive me.
Forgive me my angers, my revolts, my deceits and evasions,
For all the pangs and sorrow I brought to you—my Mother, forgive me.
For your lessons I did not learn—your wishes I did not heed,
The counsels I did not obey—my Mother forgive me.
Forgive me my pride in my youth, my glory in my strength,
When I forgot the holiness of your years,
And the veneration of your weakness—my neglect—my selfishness,
And for all the great debts of your love that I have not paid,
Mother—Sweet Mother—forgive me
And may the peace, the joy that passeth all understanding, be yours—my Mother—for ever—and ever. Amen.

The above was the prayer of Tom Dillon, one of the best writers on the Pacific Coast, as printed in the Seattle Intelligencer. It was read into the Congressional Record by Congressman William E. Humphrey, of Washington. F. B. HILL.

FIVE LITTLE BROTHERS.

Five little brothers set out together
To journey the livelong day;
In a curious carriage all made of leather
They hurried away, away.
One big brother and three quite small
And one wee fellow, no size at all.

The carriage was dark and none too roomy,
And they could not move about;
The five little brothers grew very gloomy,
And the wee one began to pout,
Till the biggest one whispered:
"What do you say?
Let's leave the carriage and run away."

So out they scampered, the five together
And off and away they sped.
When somebody found the carriage of leather,
O my, how she shook her head!
'Twas her little boy's shoe, as every one knows,
And the five little brothers were five little toes.

A GIRL WHOM EVERYBODY LOVES.

"Mother," asked Lutie, "may I have two little appies instead of one big one in my luncheon to-day?"

"I'm sorry, dear, but there is only one big apple. I used the rest for pies yesterday and kept this one out for you."

Lutie went into the pantry and inspected the apple thoughtfully. Her face cleared. "It is such a big one! Are apples very dear, mother?"

"Why, rather, at this season; but there will always be as many as my little girl wants to eat."

"Oh, yes, I know that; but there is a girl in our class who never has an apple in her luncheon. There are four girls in their house and three boys, so it takes a lot of bread. She says her mother has to bake every other day. So if appies are dear, I suppose that is why she never has one. This is so big I can give her half. You see if it was a small one she wouldn't want to take half of it, for fear I might not have enough."

"I shall order more to-day, so there will be plenty in the morning," said mother.

Lutie laughed. "I want to tell you such a funny thing, mother. You know I have four gingham school dresses, but where there are four girls that makes one apiece; so Mary's mother washes theirs out Saturday morning and irons them Saturday afternoon. They have some old dresses they wear at home. She must be a very smart woman," said Lutie.

Mother laughed, too. "Very clever indeed. Did Mary tell you that?"

"Yes. She said she knew we'd notice she wore the same dress, and that she was afraid that we would think that it was never washed."

"You might put in another piece of pie or cake for her, too," said mother, but Lutie shook her head.

"I think I better not do that; she mightn't like it. At school we don't give each other pie or cake or bread, as if we were poor folks, but candy and apples—we all give each other those," she explained.

"So Mary isn't poor folks?" asked mother.

"Why Mother Ralston!" exclaimed Lutie, with a shocked look. "Mary Dalton poor folks? I should say not. She is the head girl in our room. She sits in the back seat in the first row and takes care of the copybooks and notebooks. She is head of her class, and last month she had the highest grade in school—the whole school—the whole school—the whole school, mother! She never whispers nor plays in school; and we hardly ever do, either, because we are afraid Mary might see us. I'd almost rather teacher see us whisper than Mary. You see, mother, we have a new teacher every year, but we always have Mary. She is so good and sweet that everybody loves her."

"I see," said mother. "I think she is a very rich girl."

"Yes, indeed!" cried Lutie.—Exchange.

UNCLE PHIL'S STORY.

"Tell us a story, Uncle Phil," said Rob and Archie, running to him.

"O, about something that happened to you," said Rob. "Something when you were a little boy," added Archie.

"Once when I was a little boy," said Uncle Phil, "I asked my mother to let Roy and me go and play by the river. My mother said yes, so we went and had a good deal of sport. After a while I took a shingle for a boat and sailed it along the bank. At last it began to get into deep water where I couldn't reach it with a stick. Then I told Roy to go and bring it to me. He almost always did as I told him, but this time he did not. I began scolding him, and he ran toward home. Then I was very angry. I picked up a stone and threw it at him as hard as I could."

"O, Uncle Phil!" said Archie.

"Just then Roy turned his head, and it hit him over his eyes."

"O, Uncle Phil!" cried Rob.

"Yes, it made him stagger. He gave a little cry and lay on the ground. I did not go to him, but waded into the water for my boat. But it was deeper than I thought. Before I knew it I was in a strong current. I screamed as it carried me down stream, but no man was near to help me. But as I went down under the deep water something took hold of me and dragged me toward the shore. And when I was safe on the bank, I saw it was Roy that had saved my life."

"Good fellow! Was he your cousin?"

"No," replied Uncle Phil.

"What did you say to him?" asked Archie.

"I put my arms around the dear fellow's neck and begged him to forgive me."

"What did he say?"

"He said: 'Bow, wow, wow!'"

"Why, who was Roy, anyway?" asked Archie in great astonishment.

"He was my dog," said Uncle Phil, "the best dog I ever saw. I have never been unkind to a dog or any other animal since, and I hope you will never be."—Selected.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4 Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

ENJOYING RELIGION.

Religion best expresses itself, perhaps, in the activities of life. It is so much more than mere emotionalism that we may sometimes be inclined to forget that it is a possession as well as a power. But we do well to remember that the thing that helps us to make others happy ought to make us happy also.

We are not so sure but that the sense of enjoyment of religion is falling too much into the background of our religious experience. It ought not so to be. When a man realizes fully that he is God's—that God, for Christ's sake, has pardoned his sins and received him into favor with himself—he has reason to be so ecstatically happy as to burst into shouts of praise. It is no small thing to be redeemed from the snares of death and the jaws of hell; such a mighty deliverance stirs the soul to its depths when its meaning is fully realized.

But it is not merely what we have been saved from that should give us joy—it is what we have been saved to. The privilege of communion with the Infinite One, the assurance of fellowship with the Holy One, the realization of the abiding presence of the Compassionate One—these are causes of joy unspeakable and full of glory.

Heaven is our home if we really have religion—and that is something to be very happy about. We do not advocate a view of Heaven that will make us forget our relationships to the present world; but in our quiet moments, when we are engaged in religious meditation, the thought that after awhile we shall be removed from the sorrows and disappointments and sufferings to a place where no such things ever come, ought to stir our hearts with the surgings of mighty billows of faith and hope and love.

How can we have religion without enjoying it?

FOLLOWING THE PROGRAM.

A great organization without a great program in times like these is a pitiful spectacle. For this reason, we are glad that our own great church has clearly and definitely entered upon a line of action that shows that it is thoroughly alive to its opportunities and responsibilities. A new era dawned when the Centenary Campaign was launched, and that era will be made even more glorious by the accomplishment of other tasks to which we are getting ready to turn our hands.

As our readers well know, we have favored the adoption of some plan by which all the interests of the church which must be adequately provided for might be presented to our people at one time and under a unified effort; but since those who are in charge of such interests have found it impracticable to alter materially plans previously made, we are ready to enter whole-heartedly into the work of bringing to pass the results that are so ardently desired by all. There may be differences of opinion concerning times and methods, but there surely can be none as to the urgency of the need, and as time and methods are, after all, only incidentals, we can afford to drop our own preferences and unite with all our strength in the work of realizing the essential.

We should hate to think that our great church is not able to carry out the great plans it has made for the extension of its work and the increase of its usefulness as a protagonist in the Kingdom of God. There are always difficulties in the way of the accomplishment of any great purpose, and it is no part of wisdom to ignore those difficulties; they must be faced fairly and squarely, but with the determination to overcome them. The glory of a triumph against odds is greater than the glory of an easily won victory.

We have no idea that there will be any disposition on the part of Southern Methodists generally to hold back in carrying out the great program to which we have committed ourselves as a church. We cannot think there will be a disposition on the part of any considerable number of our people, preachers or laymen, to "hands off" in the great undertakings that lie ahead of us. We are not concerned especially about the prestige or welfare of a few individuals, as such, but we are tremendously concerned about the success of a great cause—and it is a cause that is set before us. No matter how weary and worn the faithful soldiers may be, when the trumpet sounds the call for another charge, the fightings of the past and the weariness of the present are forgotten—and another victory is won.

As a great church, we have laid out a great program; let every man do his duty and a great consummation will be accomplished.

ARTICLES BY DR. CHAPPELL.

We are beginning the publication this week of a series of articles by Dr. E. B. Chappell, Secretary of the General Sunday School Board, under the title, "Origin and Meaning of the Sacraments." We commend the series to our readers as well worthy of their careful perusal. Dr. Chappell's great learning and his happy literary style admirably equip him for the serious task he has undertaken. We count ourselves fortunate to be able to give to the readers of the Advocate this scholarly presentation of an important matter.

TWO NEW BUILDINGS AT CENTENARY COLLEGE.

A hurried visit to Shreveport, La., last week, to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Education, gave us the opportunity of catching a glimpse of the two new buildings that are being erected on the campus of Centenary College. While they are of frame construction, they are so designed as to convey the impression of stateliness and permanency. One of the buildings is intended especially to provide adequate facilities for the college work proper, apart from the Preparatory Department, and, so far as we could judge, it will meet that purpose admirably; the other building will serve as an auditorium and gymnasium—and we do not know of an institution in the South that will be better provided for in these particulars.

We are prone to believe that Louisiana Methodism is beginning to realize the vital necessity of maintaining a first-class college for the education of its young men, and that the money will be forthcoming to put Centenary in the forefront of the educational institutions of the church. We can think of no greater incentive to the Methodism of Louisiana to enter heartily into the approaching educational campaign than the opportunity it will offer of making its two schools—Centenary and Mansfield Female College—what they can easily become with the hearty and generous co-operation of all our people.

It was gratifying to learn that the enrollment at Centenary in all departments lacked only a few of reaching the two-hundred mark during the session just closed.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Fall Meeting of the College of Bishops will be held at Birmingham, Ala., December 16-20.

The Richmond Christian Advocate has increased its subscription price from $2 to $2.50, effective July 1.

We are glad to learn that our work at Canton, Miss., continues to prosper under the leadership of Rev. C. C. Evans.

The recent General Conference of the M. E. Church removed the time-limit from the district superintendency—presiding eldership, as we call it.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference, recently assisted Rev. A. J. Coburn in a good meeting at Ponchatoula, La.

Randolph-Macon College conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. J. W. Shackford at its recent Commencement.

Bishop W. J. McMurry has recently suffered severely from carbuncles, which made it necessary for him to cancel a number of engagements.

We have seen the statement that the cost of holding the recent General Conference of the M. E. Church at Des Moines, Iowa, was $260,906.01.

At the recent alumni dinner at Trinity College, Durham, N. C., President Few announced that the college had received contributions amounting to more than $600,000 during the year.

Bad weather and sickness among his people have hindered Rev. H. J. Boltz, of Clay, La., in the work of the church thus far, but conditions are improving and the outlook is encouraging.

Brother J. G. Rouse, who has recently removed from Vancleave, Miss., to Ocean Springs, Miss., has been a reader of the Advocate for fifty years—so writes his pastor, Rev. J. H. Grice, in renewing his subscription.

The salary of the pastor of First Church, Baton Rouge, La., has recently been increased $600, making it now $3600. Rev. N. E. Joyner is doing a great work at this important church in the Capital City of Louisiana.

Brother Jas. Hand, of Purvis, Miss., in renewing his own subscription enclosed an additional amount, according to his usual custom, to send the Advocate to some one who might be unable to subscribe for it. We thank him sincerely.

Dr. R. S. Stewart, of Georgia, a returned missionary from Japan, will assist Rev. R. P. Neblett in a meeting at Como, Miss., beginning next Sunday. Dr. Stewart made a great impression upon the church during his labors in behalf of the Centenary Campaign.

His pastor, Rev. W. W. Nelson, in renewing the subscription of Brother B. D. Godbold, Wesson, Miss., states that he has been a reader of the Advocate since its first issue, and that he has been a steward for seventy years without a break. A noble record!

We learn from our exchanges that Rev. C. C. Selecman, D.D., for the past seven years pastor of Trinity Church, Los Angeles, Calif., has been appointed pastor of First Church, Dallas, Texas, to succeed Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, who has become Secretary of the Board of Church Extension.

Dr. Frank M. Thomas, the brilliant and scholarly editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review, has recently been suffering from a severe illness that has temporarily incapacitated him for work. The church at large will remember him in its prayers that he may be speedily restored to health.

Rev. R. P. Fikes, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, but now a member of one of the North Carolina Conferences, is attending the Preachers' Summer School now in session at Trinity College, Durham, N. C. In a personal note to the editor, he speaks very highly of this great educational institution of our church.

Sunday School Day was observed at the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss., on June 13. The service was inspiring, and eleven children were baptized.

When Rev. H. B. Vandenburg went to Standard, La., as pastor, not a copy of the Advocate was going to that place, according to our information; now it goes to the home of every steward.

Rev. J. M. Boykin, our efficient pastor at Bossier City, La., honored the Advocate office on Monday of this week while passing through the city en route to the Seashore Divinity School. He gave a good report of the work in his charge.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, at its recent session, authorized the licensing of women as local preachers, and appointed a commission to consider and report on the advisability of ordaining them for the work of the pastorate.

Rev. Geo. G. Yeager, of Vaughan, Miss., accompanied by Mr. T. J. Presley, spent a few days in New Orleans last week. We greatly enjoyed the call they made at the Advocate office. Brother Yeager reported progress in his work at Vaughan.

At its recent Commencement, Southwestern University honored itself in conferring the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. A. J. Weeks, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, and Rev. T. C. Ragsdale, pastor of Tulip Street church, Nashville, Tenn.

Rev. I. C. Sells, pastor of the Harrisville charge, Mississippi Conference, who has been attending Millsaps College, has moved to Harrisville, where he received a royal welcome at the hands of his people. The work of the charge is moving along satisfactorily.

Mrs. A. P. Carmouche, of Jennings, La., a regular reader of the Advocate, recently underwent a serious operation at the Touro Infirmary, this city. We are glad to be able to report that she stood the ordeal well, and is now recuperating at the home of her cousin, Mrs. R. S. Crichlow.

For the past two years or more, no Sunday School Day service has been held at Jackson, La., or Ethel, La., but this year the Day was observed at both places with a splendid program. An offering of $30 was sent to the Conference Sunday School Board. Rev. F. B. Hill is the pastor.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of First Church, New Orleans, was a delegate from the Kinwanis Club of New Orleans to the National Convention, which met in Portland, Oregon, last week. The editor of the Advocate had the privilege of preaching to attentive congregations during the pastor's absence.

The Methodist Church at Covington, La., was completely destroyed by fire about ten days ago. The origin of the fire is unknown, though it is supposed to have been cause by a spark from a passing train. Steps are being taken to rebuild as soon as possible, in a more suitable location which has already been purchased.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, the pastor, informs us that the Cascyville camp meeting will begin on July 23 and close on August 1. Rev. Andrew Johnson, D.D., of Wilmore, Ky., one of our general evangelists, will do the preaching, and Professor C. C. Conley, of Wilmore, will have charge of the music. Miss Minnie Davis will serve as pianist. Ministers attending the meeting will be entertained free.

We learn from the Uvalde (Texas) Leader-News that Raymond C. Spratt and Miss Dorthy Harris were married at the residence of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Harris, on Wednesday, June 9, the father of the bride officiating. We extend best wishes to the happy couple. Brother Harris is a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference.

We have just received a copy of the Millsaps College Bulletin, being the Register for 1919-1920, with the Announcements for 1920-1921. It sets forth the work of this great institution in a most attractive way, and we earnestly urge Mississippi Methodists who have sons to educate to secure a copy in order that they may know what their own church has to offer them in the way of first-class educational advantages.

Rev. John F. Foster, of Franklin, La., Rev. William Schuhle, of Logansport, La., Rev. C. D. Atkinson, of Monroe, La., Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Fernwood, Miss., Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Summit, Miss., Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Natchez, Miss., Rev. C. A. Battle, of Mansfield, La., and Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., honored the Advocate office with calls while passing through the city on their way to the Seashore Divinity School in the early part of the week.

We regret to learn of the death, at Centerville, Miss., on Friday, June 11, of Brother Francis E. Bowman, at the ripe age of 73 years. He was a citizen of Tensas Parish, La., but was visiting relatives in Centerville at the time of his death. The funeral services were held at Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., on Saturday, June 12. He was the father of W. C. Bowman, of Natchez. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

According to press reports, Dr. John A. Rice, our pastor at Sumter, S. C., has been elected to the chair of Old Testament Literature in Southern Methodist University. Dr. Rice is recognized as one of the foremost Old Testament scholars in Southern Methodism. He served as pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, for four years. It is also reported that Dr. H. M. Dobbs, Dean of the Theological Department of the University, will return to the pastorate, and that Dr. Paul B. Kern has been elected to succeed him as dean.

THE REVIVAL.

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D.

Has the evangelistic campaign recently launched by our church produced satisfying results? A few weeks ago the church press carried many articles from learned men suggesting plans of procedure, methods to be pursued and conditions of success. Judging from the reports available, there has been nothing like a sweeping, church-wide revival of the old-time religion. Until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, we shall not reap an abundant harvest from our evangelistic labors.

In every new awakening, there are fresh manifestations of God, new unfoldings of truth which meet the requirements of the age. But amid the social and ethical conditions that require adjustment at this time, the gospel, which alone can save the world, must not omit the notes of blood redemption and spiritual regeneration. The Pentecostal revival was the type and pattern for the church for all time. Obeying the divine injunction, they tarried at Jerusalem till they were endued with the power of the Holy Spirit, then went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Our fathers used to sing: "All is vain unless the spirit of the Holy One come down." The gospel preached without unction is a savor of death unto death, for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.

In every genuine revival the pastor holds the key to the situation. If he possesses the evangelistic gift, he may conduct his own meeting: otherwise, he must prepare the way for the evangelist. Aggressive spiritual work cannot be successfully accomplished by setting aside a few weeks for special services without the most careful preparation. The church and not the evangelist, is the most important factor in revival work. Peter's preaching on the Day of Pentecost would have produced little effect on the multitude but for the fact that the whole company had been for ten days waiting on the Lord and were all filled with the Holy Spirit.

Unless there is spiritual power in the church, neither pastor nor evangelist may work successfully to reach the unconverted. I never knew an anxious church that didn't find anxious inquirers. While Philip is instructed to join the chariot, the eunuch is being prepared for the words of the evangelist. Peter is directed to Cornelius by the same Spirit who is telling the devout Roman how to find Peter.

The evangelist is a man who has a clear understanding of the gospel, a great passion in his heart resulting from the clear vision, a great optimism in his soul, born of his confidence in the power of Christ to save every man; and out of that passion and that confidence a great constraint seizes him to tell everybody the glad news of salvation by Jesus Christ.

He goes out in hope. He faces the world with its sorrow, its sighing, its sin, publishing the good news, that what man cannot do for himself God has done in Christ. On the Day of Pentecost, Peter was preaching the Lordship of Jesus Christ, confronting the blind belief and flippant skepticism and idle curiosity and surging sorrow and blinding sin, and everything else, and he boldly said: "Jesus Christ is Lord." He faithfully proclaimed the atonement of Christ and his vicarious death as the center of the gospel.

Hard by the praying church is a waiting world. The forewandering souls of men turn instinctively to the stronghold of the Christian church for refuge from the storm and tempest. It is the sojourners of the world, the manifest travelers to a better country, who are made the confessors of troubled hearts. It is the pilgrims of the faith who have the only availing mission to the world's deepest bitterness and unbelief. To-day the fields about us are white unto the harvest, and it is our business to proclaim to a sinning, suffering world, that through all depths of sin and loss, drops the plummet of the Cross. With the zeal and passion of the ancient prophet, let us cry aloud, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters!"

MRS. MARY JANE HENDRIX LEWIS was born at Oxford, Miss., April 10, 1842, and gently fell on sleep in the Methodist parsonage at Winona, Miss., June 13, 1920, at 9:20 a.m. She was married to Mr. Wm. B. Lewis, November 30, 1859, and spent most of her life in Tate County, Miss., and many of those years near old Greenleaf Church, east of Coldwater. In weakness and great suffering she spent the last year with her daughter, Mrs. J. B. Randolph, who, with her husband and nieces, gave most tenderly and constantly those attentions of love which full hearts are able to render. This made her burdens lighter, but could not stay the power of death. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and when she could no longer attend its services here, its beautiful funeral service was conducted in her honor in the presence of a large assemblage, by her friend, Rev. Ben P. Jaco, assisted by Rev. H. G. Roberts, after which the body was carried to Coldwater, Miss., and thence to its last resting place at old Greenleaf church. She was the mother of nine children, four of whom survive her and whose hearts bear that loneliness which is only known by those whose mother is not. But Christ said: "I will not leave you comfortless (orphans)." Trust Him, dear ones who mourn.

BEN P. JACO.

JOHN L. HUNNICUTT has fought the good fight, he has finished his course, he kept the faith, and has entered upon the reward of the righteous. His death took from us one of the most substantial citizens of Kemper County, Miss., and from the Methodist Church one of its truest members and most faithful officers, and from his community one of its truest friends and largest benefactors. He will be sadly missed, and the vacancy his going made will be hard to fill.

His blood inheritance was English, Scotch, and Irish; and his ancestors were among the sturdy people who set up civilization in the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi. Among these ancestors were the Thompsons, the Jollys, the Orrs, and the Hunnicutts—people who have been at the front in all enterprises that stood for character and good citizenship. He was a grandson of John Hunnicutt and Rebecca Thompson, and a son of Joseph Hunnicutt and Caroline Orr. His natal day was September 12, 1843.

He came to Kemper County, Miss., when a young man, made his home soon after marriage at Oak Grove, engaged in farming and merchandising, which he followed successfully to the close of his life, May 5, 1920. He was thrice married: first to Miss Mary A. McDade, in 1865; then to Miss Eliza Ann Smith, 1872; and to Miss Mary Levin Wright, 1912, who has devotedly and affectionately cared for him during more than two years of failing health, and who now cherishes the memory of her noble and good husband whose going has left her in great sorrow. Brother Hunnicutt reared to manhood and womanhood two sons and three daughters. These are: Dr. W. J. Hunnicutt, Asheville, N. C.; J. I. Hunnicutt, Meridian, Miss.; Mrs. Dr. J. C. Rush (deceased), Waynesboro, Miss.; Mrs. Dr. J. H. Rush, Meridian, Miss.; and Miss Lula Hunnicutt, Oak Grove, Miss. All of these add honor to a good family.

Early in life Brother Hunnicutt became a member of the Methodist Church, and lived through life in its communion. The history of Union Church could not be written without giving to him a very conspicuous place. For nearly fifty years he held the office of steward, and few men have been more faithful and efficient than he was in the office. During the year 1919 he was practically an invalid, but through his efforts Union Church was the first in the Meridian District to pay its assessment for ministerial support in full.

The stalwart, great-hearted, open-handed citizen; the generous and devoted friend of the church; and the friend of every one, has left us, but we will know where to find him.

GEO. H. THOMPSON,
Meridian, Miss., May 26, 1920.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of sympathy and respect to the memory of Rev. L. T. Sargent, L. E., passed by the Aberdeen District Conference in session at Shannon, Miss., June 10, 1920.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, to take from our midst Rev. L. T. Sargent, a local elder, who served as a supply in the North Mississippi Conference for about 25 years; therefore be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Brother Sargent, the church has lost one of its faithful workers and devout Christians.

2. That this District Conference offer to the bereaved wife and family its heartfelt sympathy in their great loss, and express our gratitude for the faithful work which he performed.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the faithful wife, and one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication. Signed:

E. C. DRISKELL.

"WHAT THE WORLD NEEDS."

By H. Croom Armour.

A man—an intelligent man, non-Christian—stops and thinks. This is what he thinks: Do I have to be a member of the church to be saved eternally, or can I live right outside the church, obey God's laws and be just as good as a Christian? In other words he considers this question from every logical viewpoint. He does not have any bad habits at all, doesn't drink, curse, or do anything that is wrong. In fact, he is living an honest, consistent life, free from all that is evil or degrading. And he thinks to himself seriously if he is not just as good as a member of the church of Jesus Christ. There are thousands of men and women just like this man in the world to-day, thinking this same question; and they have a right to ask that question. It is up to church members to answer correctly this all-important question for them. Will they do it? The ministers are doing it. They are answering this question with all the power that God has given them.

The writer will just say this: if it were not for the church and church people, the world couldn't exist. The foundation of all our civilization is the church. If there were not a church in this country of ours, we would be living in a country as uncivilized as darkest Africa. If the Bible is true, you do have to repent of your sins and accept Jesus Christ as your Savior, before you can enter the kingdom of heaven. It is very plainly written in the Book. If every man, woman and child to-day were a member of the church, this old world of ours would progress in every way, spiritually, mentally and morally, a thousand times as fast as it is at present, I sincerely believe, for don't you see we would have something to grow from?

You might as well say, "Can I stay outside the service of my country while war is in progress and help defeat the enemy?" as to say, "Can I stay outside the church and help defeat our greatest enemy, sin?" You must be a member of God's church to be of true service to Him who laid down his life for us.

That is what the world mostly needs to-day—true, consecrated church members, who are willing to put forth their very best efforts to promote God's interest, to help wipe out sin in the world.

"REVIVALS FOR RURAL DISTRICTS THIS SUMMER."

Hurrah for Dr. Goddard and our Commission on Evangelism! Never before has there been planned a more important campaign than this ninety-days' revival campaign for circuits. Brethren of towns and cities, leave your pulpits for awhile to the laymen of your church and go to the country and help put on the greatest revival that we have ever heard of. We cannot let this opportunity pass. Let the Conference Commission on Evangelism call on the laymen of towns and cities to release their pastors, and they will gladly do so. Send these preachers out with a great Gospel message that will kindle the hearts of these country people, who are the very "salt of the earth." If we are to have any Gospel preachers to-morrow, we must not neglect the rural sections, for there is where we have found them in the past. I am not hinting that the circuit preacher cannot give the Gospel, for he can as far as he can reach his folks, but he cannot do all the work that is needed, and must have help. He cannot secure all the help that he needs. Then we have a number of places that are not even on any circuit, that we should look after. If we go out into the rural places this summer at the direction of the presiding elders and Evangelistic Committee and do our best, we will all be surprised at the results. Brethren, let's do it!

Yours for a great revival,

D. B. BODDIE.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism.

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Mrs. J. Christman Proved That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a Remedy for this Trouble.

Binghamton, N. Y.—"I was in a very nervous condition for over a year, my mind was gloomy, could see no light on anything, could not work and could not have anyone to see me. Doctor's medicine did not help me and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended. I took it and am now well. I recommend it to all afflicted with nervous prostration."—Mrs. J CHRISTMAN, 193 Oak Street, Binghamton, New York.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from nervous prostration, displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion and dizziness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

If there are any complications about which you need advice write in confidence to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

MEETING AT PRENTISS, MISS.

Beginning on Sunday, May 23, and running through June 2, I was assisted by Rev. J. S. Purcell, of Crystal Springs. He is a strong preacher. He fights sin with an unsheathed sword. I have never heard any man who arraigns sin more pronouncedly than does Brother Purcell. He does not mince things, a spade is a spade with him. My people were delighted with his deliverances. We had two accessions, both on profession of faith; but there was lasting good accomplished. Should any brother need a man who knows how to fight sin, Purcell is the man. My next meeting will be at Carson, beginning July 16. We expect a great meeting. The work on the Prentiss charge is progressing very well. Please pray for our success.

Your brother,

YOU WOULDN'T TRY TO TAME A WILD-CAT

Mr. Dodson Warns Against Use of Treacherous, Dangerous Calomel.

Calomel Salivates. It's mercury. Calomel acts like quicksilver on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

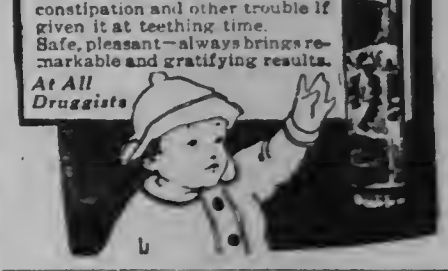
Harmless, purely vegetable, Infants' and Children's Regulator, formula on every label. Guaranteed non-narcotic, non-alcoholic.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SYRUP

The Infants' and Children's Regulator

Children grow healthy and free from colic, diarrhoea, flatulency, constipation and other trouble if given it at teething time. Safe, pleasant—always brings remarkable and gratifying results.

At All Druggists



Dye It Right! "Diamond Dyes"

Don't Risk Material in Poor Dyes that Fade or Run

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can diamond-dye a new, rich, fadeless color into worn, shabby garments, draperies, coverings, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods.

Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect results are guaranteed even if you have never dyed before. Druggist has color card.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Eigteen preachers enrolled as individual students. The book all of them selected is "The Teacher's Life of Christ" by Barclay. These men can get as many more to enlist. This work was done by Brother Stephens and myself while we were attending the Efficiency Conference at Grenada.

There is one big thing for us to do and that is to get some of our teachers to attend the Training School to be held at Grenada, August 4-11. The matter of expense is small—only ten dollars for the week. The faculty is nearly complete. Enrollment cards will be sent out soon. Get ready to sign them. A great many important things hinge upon this item of letting some one know that you are going to attend. You will be the one inconvenienced if you fail to let me know. If you fail to enroll, don't fuss at anything that comes up.

The Efficiency Conference at Grenada this week was an epoch in the lives of many of us. Dr. Goodcell is a consecrated scholar. He encouraged all of us and made most of us feel very humble. Dr. Todd gave more than appeared while he was speaking. What he is as a beautiful character will linger with us always. George Stuart does not have to be called "Dr." He is too great for any other title except "George Stuart." Just plain George fits him. Say what you please, he succeeds in winning men to Christ and that is enough for any man or a host of angels.

ASPIRIN

Name "Bayer" on Genuine

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" is genuine Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians for over twenty years. Accept only an unbroken "Bayer package" which contains proper directions to relieve Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Colds and Pain. Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer packages." Aspirin is trade mark Bayer Manufacture Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

LEMON JUICE FOR FRECKLES

Girls! Make beauty lotion for a few cents—Try It!

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless and never irritates.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Sunday I had the pleasure of visiting the Shubuta Sunday school. It is in good condition and seemed to be doing good work, in spite of the hot weather and other things that detract.

Tuesday, the District Institute for the Newton District was held at Walnut Grove, Miss. Fifteen out of the twenty-two charges were represented. A large attendance was given us from the town. It was a very delightful and happy occasion. The officers for the coming year are as follows: W. D. Cook, Forest, Sec'y.; Mrs. J. E. Oakey, Forest, Elem. Supt.; Mrs. A. W. Brunson, Laurel, Int. Sen. W. B. C.; H. O. Thrash, Newton, Y. P. A. W. B. C.; Mrs. H. R. McKee, Homewood, Missions; R. C. Pugh, Decatur, T. T.

I trust that each one of the Sunday schools will get in touch with their officers and make them feel that you are interested and desire to help in the work.

Rev. T. W. Adams, the Junior Presiding Elder of the Jackson District, was with us and gave us a fine talk on Tithing, with the result that two pledged to tithe. Very interesting reports were given by the various schools. It was a helpful Institute.

The Standing of the districts on Point 2 for standard districts is as follows:

	Per cent
Port Gibson District	91
Hattiesburg District	86
Jackson District	76
Newton District	70
Brookhaven District	52
Meridian District	40
Seashore District	23

The Port Gibson District had 21 out of 23 charges represented, 48 delegates present, and 75 people present in audience.

The Hattiesburg District had 20 out of 23 charges represented, 64 delegates, and 350 people present in audience.

The Jackson District had 19 out of 25 charges represented, 55 delegates and 150 people present in audience.

The Newton District had 15 out of 22 charges represented, 67 delegates, and 300 people present in audience.

The Brookhaven District had 12 out of 23 charges represented, 40 delegates, and 100 people present in audience.

The Meridian District had 9 out of 22 charges represented, 20 delegates, and 200 people present in audience.

The Seashore District had 5 out of 22 charges represented, 15 delegates, and 50 people present in audience.

While these figures show that the Seashore District is last and the Port Gibson District is first, it does not mean that the Seashore District Institute was a failure, because the results from the Institute have been gratifying; and from each Institute there were some features that were gratifying in the extreme. These figures are shown for the sole purpose of encouraging a 100 per cent representation in the Institutes next year.

If you have not observed Sunday School Day, please do so. And if you have not read the little leaflet, "Four-Times-A-Year-Institute," please let us know and we will send it to you.

As soon as we can, we are going to send a Report Blank to each Sunday school. We request that you fill it out and return to us as soon as possible.

I trust that God will continue to bless us all. Pray for us.

Yours in Him,
J. C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES OF THE LEAGUE ASSEMBLY, MANSFIELD, LA.

The faculty consisted of the following: Rev. Alonzo Early, S. S. Thomas, E. O. Harbin (Central office), Rev. W. W. Holmes, the Stockwells, Dr. W. R. Bourne (of Centenary College), Rev. Leland Clegg, Rev. W. W. Drake, Rev. J. B. Grambling, Miss Juanita Goldsby, Miss Willie Zuber, Mrs. R. H. Wynn.

Strict discipline was maintained by the officers.

A wonderful spirit was shown by students. There were five volunteers for the foreign field, five for home service, and nine not decided—a total of nineteen for Life Service!

All officers were re-elected for the coming year.

It was rumored that a Sunday School Institute may be organized to follow or precede the Assembly next year.

One of the notable features of the meeting was the fact that in public meetings nearly every one of the young folks offered prayer repeatedly when short sentence prayers were called for. All showed willingness and ability to take part in the service.

The Louisiana State Epworthian Loyalty Legion was organized to help raise the budget, with the following officers: State Commander, Rev. Leland Clegg, First Church, Shreveport; State Adjutant, Calvin N. Joyner, 531 Florida Street, Baton Rouge.

All membership fees should be sent to the above address.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

We are proud of the confidence doctors, druggists and the public have in 666 Chill and Fever Tonic.—Adv.

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN FOR RURAL DISTRICTS THIS SUMMER.

By Dr. O. E. Goddard.

The campaigns for circuits, beginning July 1 and ending September 26, bids fair to be one of great power. Many of our circuit preachers tried out the Standard Plan at one point on their circuits in the pre-Easter campaign and found it so effective that they are now planning to put it on at all the other points. One circuit preacher received nearly two hundred at one point on Easter. They found the survey of immense value in getting before themselves and their congregations the needs of the community. All who tried out the plan give it their hearty endorsement.

There are at least ten thousand country churches that should have a revival this summer, and city pastors, having had their meetings and being familiar with the Standard Plan, can be of service to the circuit preacher. I am suggesting that the town and city pastors, instead of going to resorts, take their lightest clothes and heaviest sermons and go to the country to help in great revival campaigns for the rural districts.

We are in the midst of strange and wonderful times. We are in the midst of great and fleeting opportunities. In such times as these it would be unpardonable to be idle—to be indifferent would be a sin. It seems a pity that one must take time to sleep when every minute can be made to count so much for the Kingdom. Let much prayer be made for the country work. Let all help by prayer, faith, and service.

We ought to reach as many people in the summer campaign as we reached in the pre-Easter campaign. The major part of our people live in the country. The major part of our pastors are country preachers. The rural districts were once our best fields for great revivals. Let us, by God's help, rekindle the revival fires in all our country churches.

Fifty Against Two. It is not reasonable to expect two weeks of outing to overcome the effects of fifty weeks of confinement. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla along with you. It refreshes the blood, improves the appetite, makes sleep easy and restful.—Adv.

GOOD GROCER GOOD MEDICINE

An East Nashville Grocer Says He Has Used Black-Draught for Years, Whenever Troubled with Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.—"You ask me about Black-Draught. It is without doubt the best liver medicine made, and I don't believe I could get along without it," declared Mr. W. N. Parsons, recently.

Mr. Parsons, who is a prominent grocer at 243 North First Street, says further: "I take it (Black-Draught) for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver. I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Thedford's Black-Draught, which has been in successful use for more than 70 years, is a medicine especially adapted to the treatment of many liver troubles. It has proved helpful to thousands and thousands of persons suffering from stomach and liver complaints, and should be helpful to you.

Black-Draught is easy to take and has not the bad after-effects, so common with many mineral drugs.

Most good druggists sell it.—Adv.

REMINISCENCES.

By Rev. Isaac D. Borders.

The first Methodist preacher I can remember was Hudson D. Howell, a veritable Son of Thunder, one of the stalwart men who fought the battles of the Cross in those pioneer days when there was much of toil and of sacrifice and little of earthly compensation or honor. After him the man who stands out most clearly in my memory was Jesse W. Luter. When I was a little boy, Brother Luter came to the Brooksville circuit, bringing with him a rather bright but slightly mischievous boy named Pat.

We have had few men more solid, more genuinely pious, more unremitting in zealous labors than this noble servant of God, Jesse W. Luter. He was not a showy man, of captivating address or with enticing eloquence, but he had not lived long in our town until he possessed the respect and esteem of all who knew him. People believed in him thoroughly, and his words leaped from a springboard of a worthy life with a momentum which made them burrow down into human hearts.

He was absolutely sincere and unaffected. There was, to be sure, a deep vein of quiet humor which sometimes led him to do and to say quaint things, but even in these he was as artless as a sunbeam. The old-time members at Brooksville are not yet done laughing at the time he went to see a rather proud and somewhat pretentious family out in the prairie country, and horrified his hostess upon her return from a brief absence from the room by being found taking up the ashes. "Well," said he, "you told me to make myself perfectly at home, and if I had been at my own house and the ashes had needed taking up, I would have taken them up."

I have heard two stories of him, for the accuracy of which I do not vouch. I pass them on for the benefit of brethren who find themselves even at this day sometimes beset with the same kind of situation. At one of his appointments, the honest country folks insisted on bringing their dogs to meeting. The church would be full of mongrels and curs and hounds, who would snap flies and walk around and yawn and occasionally whine during the service. One day as the sermon was half over, two of the beasts began to fight, and such another rumpus as they did make! Confusion reigned for a few moments until some of the men got up, kicked the combatants out and restored order enough to permit the sermon to continue.

But it did not continue. Instead Brother Luter took another text, "For without are dogs," and began a wholly new discourse. He told his hearers of how there were many things to commend about these brutes; some good watch-dogs, some of much service with the cattle, some good companions for the children. Men might learn lessons in faithfulness from dogs, he said, and some might even learn deportment. "Now I have preached enough to these dogs," he finally declared, "to save them if they have any souls, so after this leave them at home!"

One more dog story, itself apocryphal but good enough to be true. Once at a camp meeting Brother Luter was praying fervently when he became conscious that a miserable little runt of a dog was on the platform by him barking at him, much to the amusement of some youngsters. Keeping his vision on the Throne of Grace, with at least one eye partly opened, he surveyed the little beast, suddenly grasped him firmly by the throat, and held him as in a vise, all without missing a syllable from his petition. When after a few minutes, however, he left off communing with the skies and again minded earthly things, he saw that he held in his fist a lifeless lump of clay; the dog was dead. Far from disconcerted, he flung the carcass out behind the stand and went on with the service without hesitation.

A pretty long preface this. It but prepares the way for me to say that I am just back home, from having helped his son Pat in a meeting at Tchula. With what joy we friends of a lifetime were reunited, I shall not attempt to say. My own pleasure was immensely heightened by discovering that the boy had shown marvellous marrying sense, and that the parsonage was graced by a young woman who seemed to me to embody every quality a preacher's wife should have. Together they are doing a splendid work in this delightful little Delta town, and upon them and their noble people I crave to be permitted to breathe this benediction.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Latin-Ameria.

By Mrs. J. W. Conger.

It has been a matter of comment by those returning to the United States after a long period in Latin-America that there is such ignorance regarding South America, the continent lying nearest to us. Many influences have contributed to this lack of knowledge; but the last few years have caused our attention to be turned to these countries. The opening of the Panama Caual had much to do with developing the interest of the United States in her neighbor republics, an interest which took form in the visit of the fleet of the United States to the principal ports of South America and towns of the contiuent and by several statesmen.

Investments of capital in mines and other industries, skilled American engineers directing the laying of railroads, a closer alignment of commercial enterprises—all have contributed to a better understanding. But, however much stimulated interest is, it takes information to clear away ignorance. It is with some of the conditions with which we should be familiar that this article deals.

From the time of our earliest school days the maps of the South American countries have been drawn upon such a scale that they failed to give the proper conception of the vast extent of the different countries and of their comparative size as gauged by European and American countries. So when a returned traveler speaks of having traveled by rail from Rio for eighty-eight hours and of having still been in Brazil, it causes astonishment. Then again there is a hazy idea of the differentiation of the countries. In South America alone there are ten separate and distinct nations in no way united; in addition to these Mexico, Cuba, and the countries of Central America are included in the term Latin-America. Not even the same language is spoken in all.

A fact to which the world is awaking and of which we have had no adequate idea, is the vastness of the resources of the continent. South America is now called "The Continent of Opportunity" and the prediction is that its development during the twentieth century will parallel that of the United States in the nineteenth. Although some of the mines have been in use since before the discovery of America, the majority have remained undeveloped, while the nation got its supplies from outside sources. Every useful mineral in the world is found in South America. Nowhere else in the world is there such fertile prairie country with such favorable climatic conditions for agricultural development; the progress of Argentina and Uruguay in agriculture in the past few years is the most amazing in the history of the nations. Cattle industry is thriving since the introduction of refrigerator ships. Large packing houses and huge grain elevators are in evidence. Sugar, coffee, rubber, rice, wheat, corn, tobacco, alfalfa are among the agricultural products grown in abundance. With such conditions as these for supplying the markets of the world, there yet remains vast stretches of unoccupied land for colonization, in fact the greatest expanse that is offered anywhere in the world. In Brazil alone there is a greater amount of unexplored territory than in Africa.

There are many large cities, but the rural sections are sparsely populated. The system of laud ownership and the treatment of the laboring class have contributed to this. The large tracts of land have to some degree been broken up and have passed into the hands of a greater number of people; in some cases the death of the father subdivided it among the children; in other cases national legislative action was taken.

The Latin-American countries were not settled with the same ideals as those of North America. History recounts for us the conquests of Mexico by cortez and Peru by Pizarro, the purpose of which was to gain wealth; the people whom they conquered were civilized. It is hard for us, having back of us freedom-loving ancestors, who struggled for liberty and for freedom of worship, to get the viewpoint of these early settlers who came to seek and to get the treasures of the natives. They conquered, not colonized; they practiced such intolerable cruelties against the Indians that the result is the native of to-day is cringing, and distrustful, in some places as savage as when Columbus landed. Most of the settlers came from Spain and Portugal.

In their treatment of women the influence of the Moors is seen. They are kept secluded and hold a subordinate place in the social systeu. Closely allied to this is the low estimate of the marriage relation; one-fifth of the population is illegitimate. Moral laxity is one of the greatest problems to be faced.

Education is neglected; illiteracy ranges from 40 to 85 per cent. The following description was giveu of a school in Peru: "In a government school I found one little mud room with neither window nor furniture, while one little door admitted all the light and ventilation to be had. Here on this damp piece of earth sat sixty boys in cramped position, trying to do their arithmetic on small slates. The teacher could not speak her own language well nor teach arithmetic beyond the four fundamental operations." The educational policies of the countries are hampered by the lack of adequate equipment and trained teachers. In their educational institutions lies the greatest opportunity of the missionary.

"These social conditions are due to religion, which has given them superstition, immorallty, ignorance, processions, feasts, and image worship, but which has withheld God, His Son, and the Holy Spirit." The Catholic Church has denied them the Word of God; methods of the Spanish Inquisition have been employed against those found reading the Bible or against those accepting the Protestant belief. Intolerance has been practiced in every couutry. About six years ago Peru, in which was located the Spanish capital of the New World, after a hard fight passed the bill for freedom of worship, being the last country in America to grant it. Among the educated classes rationalism, materialism, naturalism and positivism are found. The missionary force is inadequate to meet the need; only one minister to every 273,271 in Brazil, our chief mission field in Latin-America. Even after conversion there is a dearth of Christian literature by which to give them training. The social and moral conditions are dark."

Necessarily only a few facts could be mentioned and these could not be dwelt upon. The Panama Congress made an exhaustive survey of the field; and the result was that the Protestant Churches planned an extensive program whereby their responsibility might be met at the critical time. Dr. Inman, Secretary of Committee on Cooperation in Latin-America, said that the missionary work of the M. E. Church, South, is located in three outstanding countries of Latin-America; and he complimented highly the character of the work done. Yet today the appeal of our leaders is for more workmen, as the present supply is insufficient to carry on the work already established without beginning any other. It seems that we must be more diligent to make known the facts, if America shall ever unitedly present

"THE CITY IN THE WOODS"—HISTORICAL.

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D.

The recent letter by our kind friend, Rev. J. C. Price, concerning the City in the Woods and Port Gibson Female College, reminds us of several matters that should be of interest to those who care for history.

It was in this section of the State that Aaron Burr was captured. Within a few miles of town stands the old home of Blennerhassett, whose name is so intimately linked with that of Burr. General Zachary Taylor once owned a plantation a few miles from here. Near the town lived the famous and eccentric Lorenzo Dow, with his wife Peggie. Over these hills he rode his mule, blew his horn and preached the Gospel. In the neatly kept cemetery is the grave of Samuel Gibson, from whom the town takes its name. On one side lies the wife and on the other the son. In the Catholic Cemetery, which is neglected now, is the grave of Rezin Bowie, who invented the Bowie knife. General Grant's army passed this way in 1863, and on May 1 of that year the battle of Port Gibson was fought. Here is buried General Earl Van Dorn, a native of this section. Here lived Gov. John M. Parker, now the chief executive of Louisiana. Here lived Gov. Humphries, whose influence was great in Mississippi. From here have gone men and women to various parts of the world to exhibit the graces of noble manhood and womanhood.

It is in this historic section that Port Gibson Female College has been the most useful institution. It is now the oldest college in the State. Founded in 1843, it was chartered in 1854. In 1859 it became the property of the Mississippi Annual Conference. The buildings were used to care for the wounded and dying after the battle of 1863, and were literally baptized in patriot blood.

Two missionaries have gone from this institution to China—Misses Addie Gordon and Nell Drake. Miss Gordon was among the pioneer's in that field and has gone to her reward. Miss Drake is still toiling and praying in her responsible field.

Two young ladies who are now connected with the College have volunteered for missionary work and are preparing.

A number of women have gone from here to become useful teachers and wives. Some have made the itinerant preacher's path easier. Among these are Mrs. T. B. Holloman and Mrs. C. B. Galloway, the latter now the widow of one of our most gifted bishops. Here was educated Miss May Russell, who has made a national reputation as a W. C. T. U. lecturer and worker. She recently delivered our Alumnae address.

Within a block of the College buildings is part of the house in which was born Irwin Russell, the brilliant poet who is recognized by men like Joel Chandler Harris and Thomas Nelson Page as the pioneer in negro dialect literature. In the College, Irwin's mother, as Miss Elizabeth Allen, from New York, taught; and in the College parlor that mother was married to Dr. Russell.

Just out of town the Presbyterians operate a preparatory school for boys. They own 180 acres of land; they have twenty endowed scholarships and have an endowment of $100,000.

The General Commission of the Methodist Church has allotted Port Gibson Female College $150,000 in the campaign to be put on next year. We appreciate that; yet will friends stop at $150,000? How could they? While accepting the allotment, may we not go beyond it?

FROM UNION, MISS.

Dear Brother Carby: I thought you might be interested to know about the revival meeting we are having here. Brother J. V. Bennett is doing the preaching, and he is giving us straight gospel sermons, the kind that the people are yearning for, and they are delivered with the power of the Holy Spirit.

Souls are being born into the kingdom and Christian people brought nearer and closer to God. We are having a union meeting with the Presbyterian people here, and we are all being lifted up to loftier heights. The meeting will close June 18. Pray for us in this great work. I am writing this to you, as the preachers are all busy here and there, lending a helping hand. We are having three services a day and old feuds of ten and fifteen years' standing have been swept away by the power of God and we are being blessed over and over.

With best wishes and prayers for you in your work. Sincerely,

MRS. I. M. SMITH.

What Is Nuxated Iron?

Physician Explains—Says Public Ought To Know What They Are Taking—Practical Advice On What To Do To Build Up Your Strength, Power and Endurance And Increase Red Blood Corpuscles.

The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually and that so many physicians are prescribing it as a tonic, strength and blood builder in weak, nervous, run-down conditions has led to an investigation of its merits by designated physicians and others whose reports should be of great importance to the public generally. Among these is the statement made by Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York and Westchester County Hospital, who says: "When one patient after another began asking my opinion of Nuxated Iron, I resolved to go thoroughly into the subject and find out for myself whether or not it possessed the value claimed by its manufacturers and attested to by so many prominent people. This is exactly what I believe every honest, conscientious physician should do before prescribing or lending his endorsement to any product whatsoever. If an article is worthless we practitioners ought to be the first to know of it and if it is efficacious we are in duty bound to recommend it for the welfare of our patients. A study of the composition of the Nuxated Iron formula so impressed me with the therapeutic efficacy of the product that I immediately tested it in a number of obstinate cases. So quickly did it increase the strength, energy and endurance of the patients to whom it was administered that I became firmly convinced of its remarkable value as a tonic and blood builder. I have since taken it myself with excellent results. There are thousands of delicate, nervous, run-down folks who need just such a preparation as this but do not know what to take. Therefore I have urgently suggested the widespread publication of the sworn statement of the composition of its formula so that the public may know what they are taking. This complete formula is now to be found in newspapers throughout the country. It is composed principally of organic iron in the form of iron peptonate of a special specific standard and glycerophosphates which is one of the most costly tonic ingredients known. To the credit of the manufacturers it may be said that they use the most expensive form of iron peptonate, whereas by employing other salts they could have put the same quantity of actual iron in the tablets at less than one-fourth the cost; and by using metallic iron they could have reduced the cost to less than one-twelfth, but by thus cheapening the product they would undoubtedly have impaired its therapeutic efficacy. In my opinion a careful examination of this formula by any physician or pharmacist should convince him that Nuxated Iron is to be placed among the very highest class and most strictly ethical preparations known to medical science. It excels anything I have ever used for building up the system and increasing the red blood corpuscles thereby enriching and fortifying the blood against the ravages of disease.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Meeting.

My, such a fine crowd as there was, gathered from all over the district, for the men and women met at the same time. The energetic presiding elder, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, had been busy, and doubtless the women had done their part, for the crowd was there.

The women were interested and brought in good reports at their session held on Wednesday, June 2. Reports showed an increase in membership and work, also in pledges. There were addresses made by prominent members of the organization and others. Mrs. J. M. Munholland told of her visit to St. Mark's Hall. Mrs. B. F. Key, conference superintendent of young people, made an appeal for more leaders for the young people. Mrs. Wynn opened the afternoon session with a short devotional service, and then followed an interesting and instructive talk by the Conference President, Mrs. Niedergall, on 1920 Council Plans and Institutions. Other themes of importance presented to the Conference were: "Making Good Our Centenary Pledge," by Mr. Steven Thomas, Louisiana Conference Centenary Secretary; "Social Service and Tithing," by Mrs. Robert Wynn.

The organization went on record regarding the following plans: To increase the membership of the organization by a spirited campaign to work toward the pledges for the Centenary, and to co-operate with other denominations in the censoring of moving pictures.

Thus terminated a most successful year in missionary work, but a bigger and even more successful year is being planned for 1920. A number of out-of-town delegates were present and were delighted with the courtesies extended them by the Monroe and West Monroe ladies.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rural Section Sets a Fine Pace.

The Topisaw charge, Brookhaven District, the Rev. Hugh C. Castles, pastor, is made up of three churches, all in a rural section about ten miles from any railroad. But the women are proud of their work, and justly so, for there are two wide-awake auxiliaries, one at Topisaw and one at Holmesville. We throw a challenge to any rural society, after the hindrances are considered, such as distance, for we live from five to seven miles apart and our way of traveling is to walk or to drive the plow animals. We have in the Topisaw auxiliary 21 members. Every department is being looked after; every member has joined the study circle. Excellent programs are given, all members taking part when called on to do so. The social phase is great and the women look forward to these meetings. The "Pledge" is made and is being paid. On last Sunday our auxiliary gave a public program: there were delegates from the Holmesville auxiliary. Miss Bessie Kearney, our accomplished and enthusiastic District Secretary, was present and the model little church was filled to overflowing. Much of our success we attribute to our president, Mrs. George Williams.

MRS. H. C. CASTLES,
Corresponding Secretary.

WHO KILLED JOHN BARLEYCORN?

By Charles D. Bulla.

John Barleycorn has gone to his own place. Buttressed by appetite and avarice, he fought to the last ditch for his infamous life and died with his boots on.

There are many battleground markers in the campaign against this arch enemy of mankind.

In 1642 the colony of Maryland passed a law "punishing drunkenness by a fine of one hundred pounds of tobacco."

In 1650 Connecticut passed a law forbidding "tippling for more than half an hour at a time." The people did not recover from this nutmeg joke for a century.

In 1757 the colony of Georgia forbade the granting of a license to sell liquor to any person "capable of gaining a livelihood by honest labor." It was found that very many persons were spavined, and they put on white aprons and engaged in the booze business.

The First Continental Congress in 1774 passed the following resolution: "Resolved, That it be recommended to the several legislatures of the United Colonies immediately to pass laws the more effectually to put a stop to the pernicious practice of distilling, by which the most extensive evils are likely to be devised if not quickly prevented." The row with George the Third diverted the attention of the people, and John Barleycorn continued to do business at the old stand.

A temperance society was organized in 1808. The "Washingtonians" (for the most part reformed drunkards) began a good work in 1841. This organization was succeeded by the "Sons of Temperance," "Rechabites," and "Good Templars."

The National Prohibition party was organized in 1869, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in 1874, and the Anti-Saloon League in 1893.

In spite of these temperance organizations, the beverage liquor traffic increased until it cost the people of this country two and one-half billion dollars annually.

A long procession of men, women, and children marched through grogshops to poorhouses, insane asylums, prisons, and graves.

All too late the people began to see clearly, think accurately, and vote wisely. They came to recognize their solemn duty to protect themselves and to safeguard succeeding generations against the serpent of the still. Preachers, physicians, fraternal bodies, railroads, insurance companies, army, navy, and temperance organizations blacklisted the liquor evil.

The above vigilantes indicated in various and sundry ways that John Barleycorn must leave town and move on off the face of the earth.

Our people registered the decree that government as the agent of society has no right to legalize an immoral business. Forty-five States said: "So mote it be!" So there was nothing left for John Barleycorn but to turn his face to the wall and his toes up.

This is the smooth pebble from the dry torrent bed of relentless warfare against alcoholism with which our Uncle Samuel of fair countenance smote between his blurred and bloodshotten eyes the blasphemous Philistine of still and brew and bar:

"Constitution of the United States.

"Amendment—Article XVIII.

"Section 1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

"Section 2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

"Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress."

Ratification proclaimed by the State Department, January 16, 1919.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON MEMOIRS, SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

(Published by request of the Conference).

Dear Brethren: Your Committee on Memoirs regret to report that since our last conference our brother, Rev. L. R. Roberts, departed this life in April, 1920. Brother Roberts was about seventy years of age at the time of his death. He was licensed to preach at the quarterly conference of the M. E. Church, South, at White Plains, Harrison County, Miss., in the spring of 1875. He spent forty-five years of his life in the ministry of the gospel up to the time of his death.

Brother Roberts was a man of deep religious convictions, and spent a useful life in the ministry. About twelve years of his ministerial life were as a supply on different works in the Seashore District. Brother Roberts was far above the average in natural intellect. If he had had educational and literary advantages, he would have been one of the leading men throughout Southern Methodism. He was an able preacher and eloquent in prayer. He had many Christian graces that but few men enjoy. He was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him, and his influence was great among all his acquaintances and associates.

We are glad to report that he left many evidences to assure us that though he be dead, yet he speaketh, and that his works will live after him for many generations.

Respectfully submitted,
T. M. EVANS,
For Committee.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHAT ARE YOU DRIVING AT?

Every great life has a great central passion. It has, of course, related interests, but its supreme energies are devoted to the accomplishment of a work that is deemed important above all else. The tragedy of too many lives is that they have no definite goal in view. They are satisfied with a kind of "hand-to-mouth" existence. The morning brings no mighty determination to achieve that day, and the evening looks back upon no royal deed accomplished. The dead level of mediocrity has been maintained from beginning to end, and the drab day fades away into a dreary night. What are you driving at, anyway?

THE DEFEAT OF CONGRESSMAN VOLSTEAD.

The liquor forces will make all the capital possible out of the defeat of Congressman Volstead for re-election, the argument, of course, being that his own congressional district has repudiated his prohibition views. The sufficient answer is that his successful opponent is a Baptist preacher who, himself, has a notable prohibition record. A great cause is not dependent for its success upon the fortunes of any individual.

THE EDUCATIONAL CRISIS.

A vigorous campaign is now being waged in New Orleans to raise $2,600,000 for Tulane University, one of the nation's greatest institutions of learning. A frank statement of the affairs of the University revealed the fact that unless immediate aid is given, there is the possibility of the institution's having to close its doors in the faces of thousands of students who apply to it for admission annually. We are glad to say that the people of the city seem to be thoroughly aroused to the importance of adequately supporting this great institution, and the indications are that the full amount asked for will be subscribed. It is hardly too much to say that practically every college and university in the land is facing a situation similar to that which confronts Tulane. It costs money nowadays, and a great deal of it, to provide adequate educational facilities for our young men and young women. It is a heart-breaking tragedy that our faithful educators have been forced to carry on their work under the most discouraging circumstances. But we believe a better day is coming. People are beginning to realize that an uneducated citizenship means a decadent civilization. We have high hopes of the outcome of our own educational campaign.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

The birthday of an individual sometimes becomes historic; the birthday of a great nation has a significance that increases as the centuries roll by. America is the child of Faith and Hope. It was baptized in blood and nurtured on the strong food of invincible courage and steadfast determination. Grown into vigorous young manhood, it has become the guardian of liberty and the teacher of righteousness. Many temptations have assailed it, and many siren voices have lured it to ruin on the rocks of arrogance and selfishness. But it has maintained thus far its high ideals and noble purposes, and it stands to-day as the fairest example of national virtue the world has ever seen. What it has been, we know; God grant that it may never depart from the way that has made it glorious in the eyes of all men. On this Fourth of July, its natal day, which so happily falls on Sunday, let us reconsecrate ourselves, as partakers of a rich heritage, to the whole-hearted service of God and our fellow-man.

NOT BY A LONG SHOT.

An official estimate, based upon statistics already announced, places the population of the United States at 105,000,000. It was Carlyle, we believe, who said that the population of England was 10,000,000 people—mostly fools. We have understood that there was never any general agreement with this opinion of the crabbed philosopher, especially in the "tight little isle" itself. We have heard a few characterizations of the American people that might suggest the idea that our own citizenship is mentally deficient in about the same proportion and the same degree as our English cousins, according to Carlyle. In all candor, we are compelled to say that, in our judgment, the facts do not justify the suspicion. The American people may be a good many other things, but they are not fools—not by a long shot. If they were, the profiteers would have stripped them so completely that they would have to wait for the wash to come in to go about their usual vocations. As it is, most of them are still able to appear in public.

FOR THE HEAD.

It is estimated that American women spend about $500,000,000 a year on hats. We are inclined to think that the estimate is not too high. By the side of it, what some of them spend for clothing their bodies must be comparatively insignificant.

WHOLLY IMAGINARY.

A man needed water to refresh his flowers in his garden. He decided that a pump would supply his need, and he bought the finest he could find in the market. He saw that every part was perfectly made and in its proper place. Then he placed the pump on a substantial platform in the midst of his garden, and hired an expert pumper to work the handle. The pumper worked faithfully in the cool of the morning and in the heat of the day—but never a drop of water came from the spout to refresh the fading flowers. Then it was discovered that the pipe had never been driven into the ground, where the supply of water was. How foolish this man was, to suppose that he could pump water out of the dry air!

—AND LONGER.

According to a press dispatch, the physicians of Chicago are appearing before the proper Government officials at the rate of 200 a day, beseeching them for an additional supply of permits to supply whiskey to their patients. Books containing 100 permits for three months were issued to them on May 15, but the explanation is offered that these were all used during the recent national political convention for visitors who were under such a high tension that they needed a stimulant to carry them through. The Government officials, however, argue that 100 permits should last a reputable physician an entire year, and they are declining to grant the requests of those physicians who have found these permits a valuable source of income. Without professing to have more than a layman's knowledge of the subject, we are of the opinion that 100 such permits ought to last the average reputable physician a good deal more than a year. We know of some who do not need them at all.

A SURE METHOD.

Some of our readers may be interested in knowing the latest method of getting rid of the fly—that repulsive pest that spreads disease and death. According to a news item from Paris, the French Government has just issued the following explicit instructions: "Smother the fly by placing a glass tube over it. The glass tube is stuffed at one end with a wad of cotton dipped in chloroform or ether. The fly dies instantly." The instant death of the fly is proof positive that the method is a good one, and we commend it to those who have time and patience to deal with the pests one at a time. Its chief defect is that it is so thoroughly impracticable as to make it utterly useless—as is the case with many of the measures proposed to remedy the evils of the present time.

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE SACRAMENTS.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D.

II.

In the first article of this series I explained the wonderful teaching method of Jesus and showed how it is illustrated both in the terminology he employed and the adoption of the two permanent symbols of the Christian faith.

Two General Types of Religion.

In order that we may open the way for a clear understanding of these symbols in Christianity, let us pause for a moment to consider two types of religion which have existed side by side at least since the time of the earliest Hebrew prophets. These types are usually designated as the priestly and the prophetic.

1. Priestly religion is based upon the idea that there is a chasm between God and the ordinary individual which must be bridged by divinely appointed and specially empowered intermediaries to whom are committed certain magical rites and ceremonies which are supposed to be efficacious with the Deity. All approach to the throne of grace must be through this favored class and this sacred ceremonial.

As might naturally be expected, the tendency of priestly religion everywhere is to put the emphasis upon the proper use of these ritualistic observances rather than upon right moral and spiritual attitudes. In its most extreme manifestation this tendency leads to a complete divorce between religion and moral and spiritual life. Such a situation was the immediate occasion of the revolt under Martin Luther which led to the Protestant Reformation. Luther's protest was primarily against a religion which had no relation whatever to life, a religion which offered eternal salvation to the most outrageous scoundrel on condition of a proper observance of certain ritualistic requirements. And there are still sections of the so-called Christian world in which this situation continues to exist. Missionaries in Mexico, for instance, tell us that it is quite common for murderous outlaws in that country to ride into the cities, go through certain forms of worship in the churches and then return to their haunts with complete religious satisfaction, but without any thought of changing their manner of life.

This type of religion is often greatly modified through contact with the more spiritual type to be described in the next paragraph. In this modified form it may not maintain that ritualistic observances will secure salvation without regard to the moral attitude of the seeker, but it does maintain that these observances are necessary to salvation and consequently attributes to them an importance which is almost sure to lead to all sorts of evil consequences. For history shows that where rites of any kind whatsoever are regarded as essential to salvation the tendency is to put the emphasis upon these rather than upon the inward attitude of the individual. In other words, any religion which exalts external observances into the place of essentials is almost sure in the end to degenerate into mere lifeless formality.

2. The prophetic type of religion abolishes the chasm separating God and man and offers to each individual direct access to his Maker. It recognizes the value of forms and ceremonies, but uses them only as symbols, and for their cultural value.

In case does it regard the bestowment of the divine favor as conditioned upon them or give them a place among the essentials to spiritual life, which depends entirely upon the moral attitude of the seeker. This was the religion of the great prophets of Israel. The burden of their massage is that what God requires of those who approach him for mercy is not the sacrifice of burnt offerings, but the sacrifice of a broken and contrite heart. (Psalm 51:16, 17). "What to me is the multitude of your sacrifices?" cries Isaiah speaking in the name of Jehovah. "I have had enough of the burnt offerings of rams and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks or of lambs or of he-goats. * * * Bring no more vain obligations; incense is an abomination to me. * * * Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth. * * * Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doing from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek justice, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow."

Such is prophetic religion as interpreted by the great spiritual leaders of Israel, a religion which means the direct approach of the soul to God, a religion that is at once vitally spiritual and profoundly ethical.

To Which of These Types Does Christianity Belong?

The question must be faced squarely and answered honestly. Christianity cannot belong to both of these types, and there is no midway ground between them. The soul either has direct access to God, or it has not. Man is either justified by faith only, direct personal faith in a living Savior, or he is not. God either operates magically through ceremonial rites, or he does not. Salvation either hangs on the proper observance of rites, or it does not.

The fact that I am a Methodist by conviction as well as by ecclesiastical connection at once defines my view as to the proper answer to the question. I believe that Christianity is a religion of the spirit and that, while it makes use of outward rites and forms, it is in no wise dependent upon them. The Son of God was no thaumaturgist, no dealer in magical rites or in any of the outworn wares of pagan priest-craft. He taught that God is the Father of all men and that every man has direct access to him.

"When thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret and thy Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee." "The Kingdom of God is within you."

"The hour cometh and now is when neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem shall ye worship the Father (worship is not dependent upon sacred places and priestly functionaries)—God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship in spirit and in truth."

"It is the Spirit that giveth life; the flesh profiteth nothing. The words that I have spoken unto you are spirit and life."

"Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

There can be no mistake as to the meaning of words like these. They leave no room for magical forms or priestly manipulation, but make religion a matter of direct dealing between the soul and God.

Further study shows that the religion of Jesus is fundamentally ethical as well as deeply spiritual, "By their fruits," says Jesus, "ye shall know them. * * * Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven."

It was the hatred of the Jewish priesthood that crucified the Son of God. The members of the priestly cast saw that the doctrines he preached would inevitably discredit their claims and destroy their influence, and, with the futile blindness which is a common characteristic of selfishness, undertook to nullify the effects of his teaching by putting him to death.

Of course, their effort failed, as such efforts always do. They killed the Prophet, but they could not kill his message. The disciples whom he had taught and to whom he had communicated his spirit carried on after his resurrection and ascension the work which he had begun.

If space permitted, I might show that while there are a few passages which suggest difficulties not readily explained, the whole tenor of the New Testament is at one with the teaching of Jesus in presenting a religion of the spirit as opposed to a religion of forms and magical rites. That is the meaning of Paul's doctrine of justification by faith and the witness of the Spirit and of his opposition to all kinds of legalism and ceremonialism.

There is no room in the Gospel for any human priesthood or for any magical rite whatsoever. The only priesthood that is recognized in the New Testament is the priesthood of him who "entered in once for all into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption." The whole argument of the Epistle to the Hebrews is that all subordinate priesthoods are swallowed up in the priesthood of Christ, who has opened up the way whereby every soul may "draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace" without any human intermediary or external ordinance or ceremony whatsoever.

THE CENTENARY CAMPAIGN AND OUR RURAL CHURCHES.

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

It will be exceedingly unfortunate if our Centenary Campaign does not do something substantial for our rural churches. These churches are entitled to more consideration by our city and town peoples than is usually accorded them. They are greater factors in our civilization and church interest than most people think. Especially among our Protestant forces we may name the Methodist and Baptist churches of our cities as debtors to these rural churches. They are the reservoirs from which these churches have drawn, and are drawing, much of their strength. If we were to weed out of our city churches all who came from the country, we should at least miss them. If we might line up an Annual Conference and see how many of our preachers came from the rural churches, we should be surprised. A special survey of the business and professional life of our larger towns and cities would show a goodly credit to the rural schools and churches. As a matter of exchange, these towns and cities have not given back a fair return to the country. The movement of our population has been all one way. The industrial and urban centers have drawn heavily on the rural districts without making due returns, till the country is impoverished and the cities and towns are reaping the results in the present high cost of living.

We cry "back to the farm" and speak of "rural uplift," as if such foolishness would give us the relief we need. Merest nonsense. This is a free, democratic country, and people choose their own place of habitat. Rural uplift is not like a postage stamp, to be stuck on folks. Civilization is a matter of growth. Our modern homes with their conveniences are but the materialized ideals gotten from associations in travel and contact with other folks. Most of the families who move to town, do so for better homes, with better church and school facilities for their children—better social life. And they come to schools and churches which they have helped to build and sustain. The urban centers have taken so much and given back so little that the rural districts have been impoverished in wealth and population.

The distribution of population is a most vital matter in all civilization. No nation, civilization, or church has ever survived, or will ever long survive the neglect of its rural life. The "meat and bread" problem is as vital to the church as it is to the State. Most civilizations have gone down by the decline of their rural life; none have ever survived, or will ever survive the permanent decline of their agriculture or degradation of their labor. Egypt builded cities and neglected her rural life, and her great civilization perished. The Roman Empire went the same route to her destruction. Large cities with cathedral towers do not make nor sustain a civilization when food and raiment may not be had. The American farmer won the world war, and he alone may win our present greater war. The mighty struggle is not over; it has moved from the fields of carnage and blood to that of economic and social unrest, and the ever-increasing struggles for food and raiment are matters real and vital. When a man is hungry, you must stop and deal with him. A starving man is neither pious or patriotic. We must do something to turn the movement of our population for the saving of the city.

Among the factors which build civilization, none are more potent than the church and school. We must look to these to change the distribution of our population. The State is making a mighty move in the matter of public schools—consolidating schools and building modern schoolhouses, adding to the curriculum more of industrial and agricultural training, home economics and many other improvements. Our churches are hardly keeping pace with these schools. We are neither consolidating nor building to meet the needs.

"To build a city, we need first to build the country," is as true in church as it is in business. The right and equitable distribution of our population would settle most of our problems of social unrest and high cost of living. A more frequent and intimate intercourse and intermingling of urban and rural populations would help in the matter. There has been, and is, too much robbing of the rural churches to supply the cities with preachers. Marked ability in the rural ministry has been the sure road to a city pastorate. Circuits have become the "brush colleges" for the tryout of our young divines to the hurt of the cause. The country church has been the sufferer in this unwise method Our country charges need stronger men and more liberal support. The call is long and loud to our domestic mission and church extension boards. Let these not dole out a mere pittance or "sop" to the country church, but something real and substantial. It is the best investment the church can make. Our Baptist brethren have seen this vision and gone to it, and are getting results, both in the country and in the cities. I know a circuit of less than 150 members that has in college and universities more than a score of boys and girls who will soon be in the business and professional life of our towns and cities; and from year to year these go away from the country church. No one comes from the city to take their place. Are we giving the country church a square deal?

If ever our rural districts are rebuilt and our civilization saved, it must be done by those who live there, and the urgent duty of church and State is to help these people to help themselves by giving back some return for the services rendered by them to the cities. Our system in church and State has been to educate these people away from the love of the farm and rural life, and then offer them a reward for leaving these and coming to the city. The more education we give them, the more certain they are to leave the farms. When we take their strongest men and women away, they seek to follow them to the city. Universal agricultural education in our public schools, and the building up of better rural churches will do more than all things else to turn the tide of our shifting population. If the schools and churches fail, we are gone.

REFLECTIONS ON THE NORTHERN METHODIST GENERAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. Carroll Varner.

Now that the much-looked-forward-to General Conference of our sister Methodism has passed into history and we are far enough away from it to view it as a whole, it may be worth while to consider some of the things which it did.

By far the chiefest matter, so far as we were concerned, upon which it took action was that of unification. Not to go into detail, it is sufficient to say that it rejected in short order the proposed plan of unification with our church. But that wasn't all; it went farther. It settled, by indirect action, the question of unification for a long time to come so far as Southern Methodism is concerned. The storm center of this question has been the negro; he has been from the beginning the chief barrier. Well, without doubt this Conference saw the negro supreme. It not only elected for the first time in its history two negro general superintendents—putting them on a par with the white bishops—but it more than once gave the negro a regular ovation and several times during the sessions did the General Conference burst out spontaneously singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." Really, it seemed that our Northern brethren this time tried to dispel all doubt that we or the world might have regarding their attitude toward the negro and his place in our social economy. And for fear lest we might still misinterpret its action, the New York Advocate, their chief spokesman, says, "In its response to the appeal of the Negro for racial equality it was equally prompt, and was obedient to its sense of equity and right." There is left only one of two courses for Southern Methodism to follow regarding unification—drop it, or else prepare to yield every contention on the negro question.

The action of the General Conference on the amusement question and the Course of Study shows that the conservative element is still strong and virile in Northern Methodism. These two matters had come in for no little amount of agitation throughout the church previous to the Conference. Strong effort was made to have the paragraph on amusements repealed. It was thought by many that the church should bring itself abreast of the times by ceasing to condemn by name such amusements as card-playing, dancing, and theatre-going. And there was no little apprehension concerning the matter throughout the church, but when it was finally put to a vote the paragraph was retained by a vote of two to one, the petition of the dancing masters and theatre managers to the contrary notwithstanding. The Course of Study had come in for much criticism because of its radical tendencies, and there was a demand that the selection of the Course be put back into the hands of the bishops. This provoked strong arguments on both sides when brought up in the Conference, but the conservative side, while not winning every contention, really came out the winner; and hereafter the bishops will have the power to amend the list, and the course must conform to the standards of Methodist doctrine.

One other matter of much consequence must be mentioned. The pastorate came in for more, much more, consideration than usual at a General Conference. This is shown strikingly by two entirely different actions of the Conference. First, out of fourteen new bishops elected, five were men holding pastorates at the time of their election. As a rule the percentage of men elected to the bishopric while in the pastorate is very small; sometimes it is hard to get even one in. In the second place, the pastorate won out in the fight to elect more secretaries to be put into the field. According to the spirit of the times, there was a strong effort made to put still more men in secretaryships to ride up and down the land to "harass the brethren," thinking to make the church move forward more rapidly, but men from the pastorate protested with vim against the annoyance of more secretaries and the further deflection of their number, and won out on the floor of the Conference by a strong vote. This last was a significant action, and our own General Conference would do well to heed it.

The above are some of the more important things done by this General Conference of our brethren across the line that are of special interest to us; while at the same time a few things which came up, but were defeated, point to the handwriting on the wall, a warning of things to come.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Twenty-eighth Session And The Commencement.

Those who have watched the progress of Millsaps College since it was founded, find an increasing interest in the affairs of each succeeding session. The twenty-eighth has not fallen behind the others in this respect.

Many things have occurred during the past session to make it a very important period in the history of the college.

During the commencement exercises of 1919, the first shovel of dirt in the excavation for the foundation of the new dormitory was thrown by Bishop W. B. Murrah, President of the Board of Trustees, and for eighteen years the beloved President of the college. At the commencement of 1920, after many and troublesome delays due to lack of material and scarcity of labor, two units of the building were completed at a cost of $92,000, and occupied. All seem well pleased with their new quarters.

One of the closing features of the session was a reception given by the wives of the members of the faculty to the entire student body. This event was held in the large recreation room of Galloway Hall. At the opening of next session, on September 15, everything will be in readiness, with the boarding department running at full blast. There should be a great house-warming, with many alumni present to see the formal opening of the building which they, as students, longed so earnestly to see. Every room should be engaged long before the session begins. This new building will offer abundant opportunity for the alumni and others to assist in marshaling the hosts of High School graduates over the State and directing them to their Alma Mater.

There have been other things, both local and intercollegiate, that make the session one of great interest. There has been a more active interest taken in the matter of applying for Rhodes Scholarships. The names of two of the former students were before the Rhodes Scholarship Committee for Mississippi at its sitting last fall, and at the next sitting there will be at least one before them. It is hoped that there will be still greater interest taken in this matter now that we have a Rhodes scholar on the faculty—Professor A. G. Sanders, of the Department of Romance Languages.

The privilege of engaging in all forms of intercollegiate athletics was granted during the session. This, in itself, marks the session as one of great interest to the students and prospective students, they being more interested in that particular phase of college life than any other.

It seems that everything that has been suggested as a stimulus to a larger enrollment has been met during the session just closed and we can now look forward to a greatly increased attendance during the next session. Just before the close of the session a "100 Club" was organized. A more extended canvass will be made during the summer. There will be four in the field during the early part and two or three the latter part of the season.

We trust that all these things will make for a larger and a better Millsaps.

The commencement of 1920 was of unusual interest in that Bishop Murrah, who, just ten years previously, had resigned as President, was the commencement preacher. This was the first time that he had performed this function, though his duties have made him a regular attendant upon the commencement occasion since the founding of the college.

Now that the ice has been broken with "Ole Doc," it will be in order to use, occasionally, some of the splendid preachers and others who have gone out from the college as its graduates during the last quarter-century.

The sermon by Dr. Foote on Sunday evening before the Christian Associations in Galloway Memorial Church and the address by Dr. R. H. Bennett on Tuesday morning were both up to the standard set by the many distinguished men who have graced those occasions in the past.

The class this year was made up of nineteen young men and one young lady. The proportion of young ladies in the graduating class was greatly diminished by the S. A. T. C. of the session of 1918-19.

The present class had in its membership three young men who had completed all their unfinished work in the Summer School of last year and had come back for their diplomas. This idea is a laudable one. Occasionally a man may lack a few hours of finishing his work and never return to college. By taking some work in one or two or even three summers, he may satisfy the conditions and get his diploma.

Another feature of the commencement season was of interest particularly to the alumni, that being the idea of having reunions of classes by the decade. The idea was just put into effect during the past session and as a consequence not many of the two classes represented were present. In the future there should be a large attendance from the two, three, or more classes as the case may be, as well as a general attendance of all who will come. It has been the writer's experience in the years past that it almost came to the point of going out into the "byways and hedges" to bring them in. Even at the recent banquet the telephone had to be used liberally to guarantee enough plates for the spread. At the afternoon meeting the Association pledged enough plates to assure the banquet.

The writer, several years ago, secured Monday night of the commencement occasion for the permanent alumni night and has even sweat blood (?) on occasions in the effort to make it a success. He believes that such will not be the case hereafter, but that the attendance upon the alumni meetings will be greatly increased. Let us all throw our shoulders to the wheel and make that feature of the commencement season, set apart for our special pleasure, and the college as well, the greatest of all. A college needs her alumni as they needed her in their student days. The material prosperity of any college rests largely upon the shoulders of the alumni. It is to them that she must look for sustenance.

Taking it all in all, the present session has been a most remarkable one. There is no reason why the next should not be even better.

"GO UP, THOU BALD HEAD; GO UP, THOU BALD HEAD."

By Rev. T. B. Holloman.

Few incidents in all history have elicited more sympathy and more harsh criticism as to the punishment compared with the offense than the one referred to in the caption of this article. With those points I leave the critics to deal; I would stress that which seems to lie upon the surface, and emphasize the warning which comes to every young reader—a warning against irreverence.

The greatest man of his day, and one of the strongest characters known to all history, just exalted to the highest position in the gift of Jehovah, becomes the song of the foolish children of the streets because of some physical defect. No sword in his hand for vengeance, the Prophet leaves it to his God to punish for the offense, and God Himself gives us the lesson as to the effects of irreverence—a lesson for every age and station, coming under that warning, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

The bitterest complaint made by Job was not alone that the hand of God had touched him, but that "the young children despised him—and spake against him." Among the exhortations given by St. Peter to the church along with love and compassion, is, "Be courteous." Here I am reminded of one of the most beautiful experiences of my life, which occurred while in attendance upon the great Centenary gathering in Columbus, Ohio. To reach the grounds we had to make a five-mile ride on a street car. One morning as we entered the car a young woman quickly arose and offered me her seat. I refused, saying that with my people men stood, giving preference to the ladies; again she insisted, saying, "I will be more comfortable to have you take my seat." So, to accommodate more than else, I sat while she held to the strap. Upon our leaving the car I asked her name and why the kindness, to get reply, "I live in Columbus; I am a young woman and you are an old man. I could better afford to stand than to see you stand."

My life has been confined entirely to the South and I have imbibed the traditions thereof—that true chivalry has its habitat there almost exclusively; but I recall no act of genuine courtesy surpassing this whenever I have seen it. "You are old and I am young," would be a suggestive motto for the youth of our land. Sad to say, this indifference to the aged is not confined exclusively to the laity; only recently I heard the sad story of unkind criticisms of the younger preacher rather than a kindly, thoughtful reply to the letter of his aged brother in the ministry.

In a recent issue of the Nashville Advocate appears a story of a Japanese ambassador, who came to the United States to study the social, moral and political conditions of America, who was asked on the eve of his departure by an American statesman, "What are the two outstanding faults of American life?" to get instant reply, "Ingratitude and lack of reverence for old age." Upon this criticism the writer in the Advocate makes wise comment: "If this be so, we are a decadent nation." When gray hairs are at a discount with the young, rather than a recognized blessing, truly decadence has set in. May God protect us against irreverence and ingratitude.

"THE STATE OF INFANTS."

By Rev. J. M. Huggin.

As Rev. J. W. Ramsey has been writing on the state of infants, I would like to have a little space in the Advocate in which to show that our standard writers, such as Wesley and Watson, were not mistaken in their teachings as to the state of infants. What did Christ mean when he said to Nicodemus in giving a reason for the necessity of a new birth, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh?" John 3:6. It is no answer to this question to say that Nicodemus was a grown man—the only kind of man capable of understanding such teaching. What does the word "flesh" mean here as used by our Lord? It seems, according to Brother Ramsey, and others, that it does not mean much, if anything. How is the word used in other parts of the Scripture? Paul, the great expositor of the gospel, says, "They that are in the flesh cannot please God." Rom. 8:8. This Scripture is so explicit in its teachings as to inherent depravity, that comment is unnecessary.

Certainly we are born in a natural state, yet Paul says in speaking of his condition prior to conversion as well as that of others, "And were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." Eph. 2:3.

But does not regeneration place us in the condition of little children? "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 18:3. Let us look closely at the teaching of this Scripture. Does it do away with or radically modify the teachings of our Lord to Nicodemus, or the teaching of St. Paul? The word "converted" in the Scripture just quoted does not mean regenerated or born of the Spirit. To illustrate: the Jews who said to the apostles on the day of Pentecost, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (Acts 2:37), had been converted, but were not born of the Spirit, as we learn from Peter's instructions to them. The whole attitude of those Jews had undergone a great change. They were then in such condition as that they could enter into the kingdom of heaven. They were as humble and teachable as little children. The trouble with the Jews, as with a great many people now, was their pride. When Jesus said, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter the kingdom of heaven," he obviously did not mean by the word "converted," born of the Spirit; for one who is born of the Spirit is already in the kingdom. But he was speaking of a condition that was necessary in order to entrance into the kingdom humility, "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 18:4.

But we are told that the doctrine of dying grace, or regeneration in death for infants who die in infancy is "shot through with Calvinism." It is better to give the Scriptures a fair interpretation, even if this should land us into Calvinism. The doctrine of innate depravity does not involve the necessity of explaining how infants who die in infancy are saved. The doctrine of the universality of the atonement involves the doctrine that some people (adults) are saved who never heard of Christ. But can any one explain just how, and upon what condition they are saved? Revelations were not given to gratify our curiosity. It could not benefit us to know just how heathen people or infants are saved. This writer is of the opinion that the interests of the church and the eternal interests of the children are not anything like so much endangered by failure to bring a little slow about repenting children into the church as by rushing them into the church without the new birth and making them believe that the church can save them.

The important thing for children is to bring them to Christ. Children are capable of receiving the gospel at a very early age, but may not receive it if the idea is held out that the main thing for them to do is to join the church. This statement is applicable to adults also. The doctrine of the universal need of the mercy provided in the gospel would tend largely to make evangelistic effort successful. Better, it seems to this writer, to hold on to the Pauline doctrine so strongly expressed as follows: "For the love of Christ constraineth us, because we thus judge that if one died for all, then were all dead." 2 Cor. 5:14.

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST HOSPITAL.

The Methodist Hospital Commission of the Mississippi Conference recently held in Hattiesburg a meeting to hear the report of the Campaign as conducted throughout the Mississippi Conference for the building fund, and to devise ways and means for following up the work in places not yet reached.

The Commission indicated clearly and forcibly its intention to go forward with the movement until the hospital is built. The tight money market and other unforeseen circumstances will delay the beginning of the building; but that is not to hinder the continuation of the movement. Churches that postponed their canvass for pledges are asked to attend to this matter as early as possible. Managers and treasurers are requested to collect the July 1 installments promptly, and forward same to the undersigned, or to F. W. Foote, Treasurer, Hattiesburg, Miss.

The undersigned was appointed Campaign Manager, with direction to carry the campaign in an aggressive way to every preaching place in the Conference not yet reported. Pastors desiring his services for this purpose will please communicate with him in care of Y. M. C. A., Hattiesburg, Miss.

SOUTH AMERICA: THE UNDEVELOPED CONTINENT.

By Rev. A. C. Millar, D.D.

VIII.

Ecuador, the Land of the Vertical Sun.

Ecuador (which is properly named, as it is the Spanish for equator) lies under the equatorial sun. It extends two degrees north of the equator and five south and extends five hundred miles from the upper waters of the Amazon to the Pacific Ocean. Although next to the smallest State in South America, it is almost equal in area to the combined areas of Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi, and its population is about that of Louisiana. It contains the greatest group of volcanoes in the Western Hemisphere, Cotopaxi, with an altitude of 20,000, being the highest active volcano of all.

In climate it has the hot lowlands, the temperate uplands, the cold highland, including the plateau of Quito about 9,000 feet high, and the snow-covered peaks of the Andes. Almost every kind of temperature may be found, except the extremely hot; because even the coastal lowlands are cooled by the Peruvian Current and in the hottest and wettest season the heat is never above 90 degrees.

With such climatic conditions Ecuador has the vegetation of all zones. It is remarkably adapted to the culture of the cacao, the bean from which chocolate and cocoa are obtained, and furnishes one-third of the world's supply of these. It may seem strange, but Panama hats are not made in Panama, but in Ecuador, from the fibre of the screw palm, which here finds its perfect growth. The ivory nut and rubber are valuable forest products, and a vast variety of trees are indigenous. Coffee, sugar, and bananas are successfully grown. The misnamed Irish potato originated in the Ecuadorian highlands and reaches its perfection there. Wheat, barley and corn are cultivated, and alfalfa is raised. Pastures are excellent and extensive, and sheep, cattle, horses, and mules abound. The quality of the beef is unusually fine.

Ecuador is not comparable with Peru and Colombia in mineral wealth, and yet nearly all minerals exist in small quantities, and the development of petroleum promises much.

Quito, the capital city, at an elevation of 9,500 feet, surrounded by immense snow-clad volcanoes, is an interesting and romantic city. It was the center of the ancient Scari empire which fell before the Incas shortly before the coming of the Spaniards, and was joined to Cuzco by a famous military road through the Andes. Its climate is one of the most delightful in the world, the greatest drawback being the danger of earthquakes. Its appearance is picturesque, and its architecture is of the old Spanish-Moorish type. The churches, public buildings, and plazas are all peculiarly attractive, and yet with its population of approximately 100,000 it has few industries.

For us, however, interest centers in Guayaquil. To this commercial city our ship, The Nika, came in the middle of March. It was supposed to be the hottest and wettest part of the year, and yet while the sun was directly overhead, the temperature did not reach 90 degrees, and it failed to rain while we were there. The cool sea-breeze blew and we were comfortable with the exception of a very short interval near noon.

This city is about 50 miles from the open ocean and is approached through the Gulf of Guayaquil and the Guayas River. Our ship anchored in deep water about 400 yards from the dock, and, be it said to the credit of the commercial interests of the city, our cargo was speedily unloaded in first-class lighters, and we suffered no unnecessary delay, except waiting for the tide to rise to give sufficient depth at the bar.

The city, with its 100,000 people, extends for some three miles along the river and presents a pretty and substantial appearance from the water. In the business center the houses are well built, the streets are paved with asphalt, and the plazas are beautifully arranged and well kept. There are electric street cars and cars pulled by diminutive mules, which seldom go faster than one can walk. Some of the cars have no tops, and are peculiarly comfortable at night if it does not rain. Automobiles of different kinds, practically all of American manufacture, are seen everywhere. There are seven large and handsome Roman Catholic churches, a large cool-looking hospital, and beautiful cemeteries. The larger portion of the city is level, but one suburb runs up into the hills, on which the water reservoir is located. As the buildings are practically all of split bamboo covered with plaster, good fire protection is necessary. The drinking water comes from the mountains about fifty miles away and is good.

Guayaquil is the commercial metropolis of Ecuador. To it on gulf and river and railway comes 90 per cent of the imports and exports of the whole country. The harbor is alive with boats, large and small, and the docks are piled high with merchandise. The warehouses are filled with the cacao bean and some of the main streets are surrendered to the drying of the beans as they are spread about in great depth on canvas, scarcely allowing space for traffic. Thousands of muscular laborers, mostly Indians, carry the big sacks, and the scene is one of brisk activity. Many hides, and coffee, sugar, and Panama hats are shipped.

A trip up the Daule River in a splendid gasoline launch gave opportunity to see ranches and dairies along its banks. A little steamboat was seen loaded with milk cans and towing fifteen boats filled with fruits and other products. Big rafts with families in tents floated by. Cattle are brought across the harbor swimming with heads and tails tied to poles stretched across a small boat. Brown-skinned boys bathe along the shore and swim out to the launches and make merry as they leap from boat to boat.

Little hills are near, and forty miles away mountains loom up 5,000 or 6,000 feet high, while on clear days giant Chimborazo, a hundred miles away, shows its lofty peak.

Guayaquil has had a bad health reputation. One experienced traveler, about seven years ago, wrote: "The reputation of the port of Guayaquil as a hotbed of yellow fever, to say nothing of bubonica, leprosy, and small-pox, is such that most persons prefer to give it a wide berth. Formerly there was mutual recrimination between Guayaquil and Panama, each asserting that the yellow fever was due to the other city; but now the case is clear. Panama has long had a clean bill of health, while Guayaquil (1912) was as bad as ever, if not worse."

It is a pleasure to be able to report a radical change. The American Consul General, Dr. Frederic W. Goding, authorized the writer to say that he regards it now as one of the safest cities in the world for health. For many years the Rockefeller General Board resented outside efforts for sanitating Guayaquil, but two years ago Dr. Goding's wife died of yellow fever under circumstances that were inexcusable in the local authorities. She was greatly loved and Dr. Goding was highly respected, hence her death created a profound impression, and the Ecuadorian Government requested Dr. Goding to urge the Rockefeller Foundation to undertake the sanitary work. Dr. M. E. Connor was immediately sent down and appointed Subdirector of Public Sanitation. His efforts were so successful that since March 3, 1919, there has not been a single case of yellow fever, and on account of better drainage and other sanitary regulations, the general health conditions have been greatly improved. While the slums are yet filthy, the heart of the city is remarkably clean, and during the writer's visit he did not see or hear a mosquito and saw very few flies. The city authorities are very appreciative of the aid rendered, and a leading journal has said: "Dr. Goding will figure in the history of this city as an exterminator of yellow fever, because, due to his tireless efforts, that terrible epidemic disease of the tropics has ceased to be."

Dr. Goding, who, before he became Consul General to Ecuador six years ago, had rendered important diplomatic service in Australia and Uruguay, is by his wisdom and tact accomplishing large things to create satisfactory relations with our own country. A few years ago under German propaganda Ecuador looked upon the United States with suspicion. Now the attitude is altogether different. The following from the January number of Comercio Internacional, a leading review of Guayaquil, expresses the present feeling: "Dr. Goding, with great ability and tact, has been very successful in his efforts to intensify commercial interchange between the United States and our country. His office, for several years, has been a real center of propaganda and a commercial school, where our business men receive all kinds of suggestions and facilities for the ordering and the dispatch of their invoices. * * * The demand increases day by day for Yankee goods which are distributed throughout the world, replacing the products of other countries incapable of resisting the energetic push of the leading people of the universe."

In 1910 the United States was second among the nations in the value of imports and exports to Ecuador. Now we furnish 59 per cent of all that goes into Ecuador and take 78 per cent of all that comes out, and much of the credit for this increase is due to the intelligent and diplomatic efforts of Dr. Goding, our efficient Consul General.

El Telegrafe, the greatest newspaper in Ecuador, owned and edited by Senor Jose A. Castillo, son, Senor J. Santiago Castillo, two very able and experienced journalists, whom the writer had the privilege of meeting, stands for progress and closer relations with the United States.

The President-elect, Senor Luis Tamayo, who will be inaugurated August 9, is a liberal and progressive man. He expects to visit our country before his inauguration with a view to studying our institutions and conferring with leading financiers for the purpose of interesting capital in Ecuadorian enterprises.

While Ecuador has been considered unprogressive, there are now many reasons for believing that a better day has dawned, and it should be regarded as a great privilege to cooperate in bringing about the results desired.

The Hodge Ship Company, to which our ship, The Nika, belongs, is endeavoring to promote mutual good will, and in calling their organization "The Ecuador Line," they are contributing much to promote good feeling. Now is our opportunity to cultivate the most cordial relations with this "Land of the Vertical Sun." The people who know refer to us as "the leading people of the world" are worth cultivating, and we shall be very unwise if we fail to utilize our prestige with them.

Hon. Charles Denby, for fourteen years United States Minister to China, wrote to a friend: "It is idle for any man to decry the missionaries or their work. These men and women are honest, pious, sincere, industrious and trained for their work. It is difficult to say too much good of missionary work in China." Missionary Voice.

God influences our will in a thousand ways, but he does not compel it; for to do so would be to destroy the personality which he has created. And all theories of divine grace which would reduce our religion to a system of fatalism have been condemned by the common consciousness of the Christian Church. J. R. Illingworth.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Shannon, Miss., at 3 p.m., June 4. Rev. R. I. Collins, the pastor, and his loyal membership entertained the session in a most royal manner. Rev. T. H. Dorsey, our presiding elder, opened the session with devotional exercises, got the conference properly organized and settled down at once to business. All but one of the pastors reached the conference during the session. Owing to the busy season with the farmers, very few laymen were in attendance.

The reports of the pastors revealed the fact that they are busy in the work, and that the Cause is moving along with real progress in most of the charges. A great union revival was held this spring at Tupelo that brought sixty-three into our church there. Amory, Houlka and Pontotoc churches are planning for revival seasons to begin simultaneously, July 4, with evangelists, J. O. Haynes, W. M. McIntosh, and D. E. Kelly, respectively, assisting. Most of the pastors report that they are planning for the revivals, and the revival spirit was greatly in evidence during the session of the conference.

Revs. B. P. Jaco, Conference Missionary Secretary, R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday School Field Secretary, and Commissioners M. M. Black for Millsaps, and Robt. Selby for Emory University, visited us and addressed the conference on the causes they represented.

Dr. R. S. Stewart, one of the general Centenary workers, was with us and preached three times. We who heard him felt that we were greatly blessed in having the privilege of hearing his heart-searching messages. Dr. Stewart's ministry to our conference will be long remembered, and fruits of his work will be seen in the lives and labors of those who heard him.

Rev. E. R. Smoot brought the closing message to the conference, and he preached with the liberty and inspiration of a true herald of the Gospel.

The fellowship of the conference was indeed inspirational. We realize that we are in a common cause—the greatest cause in the world, and the bonds of love and spiritual fellowship were tightly woven between us by the conference.

Our presiding elder has won his way into the hearts and confidence of all the pastors and laymen who have met him, and each one seems to feel he is the closest in touch with the "Beloved."

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: Mrs. Joe Herndon, W. T. Reeves, W. A. Boone, P. W. Shell, Mrs. T. M. Clark, W. R. Davis, E. C. Driskell, and O. H. Bewsley. Drs. J. W. Jones and T. J. Campbell were chosen alternates.

W. T. Reeves was elected Lay Leader for the district.

Houston was chosen as the next place to hold the conference.

J. A. Hall, E. R. Smoot, R. I. Collins, and W. B. Baker were appointed Licensing Committee.

The woman's missionary work was strikingly represented by Mrs. Joe Herndon, the District Secretary.

One fact to cause concern, and one that should wake up the church, is that our ministerial supply is rapidly falling off. No one was licensed to preach and no one was recommended for admission to the Annual Conference, and two of our local preachers surrendered their license.

Our host, R. I. Collins, stands in high favor with his people, and is leading them to real success along all lines of church work.

H. P. LEWIS, Secretary.

THE SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fiftieth session of the Sardis District Conference was held in Hernando, Miss., June 9, 10, 11. The attendance was above the average, and the sessions were interesting and helpful. Among the visiting brethren were Rev. R. O. Brown, Rev. A. C. McCorkle, who represented the Superannuate Endowment Fund, Rev. B. P. Jaco, Centenary Secretary, Rev. Robt. Selby, representing Emory University, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, and Dr. Sharp, presiding elder of the Memphis District, who represented the Hospital Campaign. Dr. R. S. Stewart, returned missionary, was also present and addressed the conference.

At the morning and evening hours each day, strong evangelistic sermons were delivered by Revs. S. T. McIlwain, J. T. Lewis, R. S. Stewart, and A. C. McCorkle.

Reports from the pastors showed notable progress along all lines of church activity. Few revivals have been held, but those reported added a goodly number to the church. Among the church building enterprises reported, was the plan to build an adequate structure at Senatobia. A church debt of long standing at Batesville has been wiped out during the year. New fields are being entered in some parts of the district.

The characters of the following local preachers were passed and their licenses renewed: J. H. Arnold, A. W. Bailey, J. A. Chambly, Marvin White, C. O. Pate, and J. R. Wilson. Mark H. McCall, of Hernando, was licensed to preach and was recommended for admission on trial to the Annual Conference. The ad interim licensing committee elected by the conference is composed of N. G. Auzustus, Melville Johnson, E. G. Mohler, and R. P. Neblett.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: L. L. Minor, Herbert Holmes, N. E. Wilroy, J. D. Turley, Mrs. R. P. Neblett, P. T. Callicot, M. L. Childers, T. T. O'Bryant. Reserves: M. P. Hardin, J. R. Brinson.

The homes of the people of Hernado were thrown open to the delegates and visitors in the old-fashioned way, and every one enjoyed the entertainment and hospitality which abounded on every hand.

Senatobia was unanimously chosen as the place of meeting for the next Conference.

MELVILLE JOHNSON, Sec'y.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference convened at Walnut Grove church in Leake County, June 16. The business of the conference was expeditiously and efficiently transacted in two days.

The session was opened in regular order Wednesday morning with the presiding elder, Rev. John A. Moore, in the chair; and a spirit of brotherly love and loyalty to the sacred interests of the church prevailed throughout. Despite the fact that most of those in attendance had to travel from ten to twenty-five miles across country, and over roads, which, to speak charitably, had neither been macadamized nor graveled, there were twenty clerical and thirty lay delegates present.

The people of Walnut Grove attended the services in large numbers, and opened their homes and their hearts to members of the conference and visitors in such a manner as to convince all of their boundless hospitality.

Devotional exercises were conducted by J. A. Moore, A. A. Simms, S. N. Young, and H. R. McKee.

An inspirational and helpful sermon was preached by L. E. Roberts; after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by E. L. Alford and T. W. Adams.

The standing and special committees performed their work conscientiously and submitted instructive reports upon the activities of the church which they represented.

Among the distinguished visitors present were Robert Selby, M. M. Black, B. F. Lewis and H. G. Hawkins. These brethren delivered addresses on the connectional interests of the conference, and their messages were cordially received. T. W. Adams, another honored visitor, who is always welcome in any gathering of Mississippi Methodists, circulated among his many friends disseminating good will and cheerfulness. Brother Adams is noted for having pessimisitc views concerning only one thing—and that is fraternal insurance.

The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: Mrs. S. J. Deer, S. D. Miller, Mrs. J. A. Smith, W. A. Davenport, J. R. Hays, Mrs. W. N. Ware, E. F. Lane, and M. M. Mapp. Alternates: Geo. W. Mars, Miss Grace Gaddis, Mrs. John Mustin, and Mrs. G. C. Russell.

W. A. Davenport was elected District Lay Leader.

The Ad Interim Committee is composed of the following: R. E. Rutledge, B. F. Jones, W. L. Blackwell, and J. G. Galloway.

Philadelphia was chosen as the place of meeting for the next session of the conference.

By a standing vote the conference unanimously expressed the highest appreciation of the courtesy and efficiency of John A. Moore, presiding elder, and the fullest confidence in his safe counsel and constructive leadership in all matters pertaining to the work of the district.

JOSEPH A. SMITH, Sec'y.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Alexandria District Conference was held in the Methodist Church at Bunkie, La., June 16-18, with our worthy and efficient presiding elder, Rev. Harry W. May, presiding.

It was a notable session—one to be remembered for the fine Christian spirit that prevailed throughout, and for the ready dispatch of its business.

Prominence was given to preaching, not sermonizing. Rev. J. W. Lee began the preaching services of the session with a great sermon on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Other preachers who "magnified their office" during the conference were H. T. Young, Alonzo Early, and A. M. Shaw. Is there a difference between the power to preach and the "power of preaching?" The brethren above mentioned proved conclusively that the power to preach is still with us.

One deplorable feature of the conference was that there were no applicants for license to preach or for admission on trial. Something must be done. Shall we put on a drive for ministerial recruits? Shall we preach more on the Call to Preach? Had there been more than one remedy, our Lord would without doubt have told us of it. But he has mentioned only one—Pray ye the Lord of the harvest. Has the church ever tried it and found it to fail?

One encouraging fact was the large number of consecrated laymen in attendance and participating in the work.

The address of Mr. T. W. Holloman, who spoke of "The Layman and His Duties," and of Judge H. H. White, who spoke both on the means of collecting the Centenary fund and of his work as a representative of the Southern Methodist Church on the Unification Commission, and of Mr. S. S. Thomas, new Conference Treasurer of the Centenary Fund, were very helpful and inspiring indeed.

The following lay delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: Mrs. R. W. Winstead, Natchitoches; Judge H. H. White, Alexandria; Miss Emma Causey, Bunkie; J. A. Ingram, Boyce; Mrs. T. E. Brown, Oakdale; B. T. Gallaher, Trout; J. A. Wafer, Campti; S. M. Abel, Rochelle. Alternates: Mrs. G. Rosenberg, Melville; Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Natchitoches; J. P. Bond, Oakdale; R. J. O'Neal, DeRidder. W. T. Murray, District Lay Leader, is ex officio a delegate to the Annual Conference.

Mr. George K. Nickerson, leader of the Orphanage "Crusade," made a telling speech upon the work for the Orphanage. Resolutions were adopted by the conference endorsing the work, but declining, in view of the Centenary pledges yet unpaid, to assume responsibility for any given amount.

Rev. I. T. Reames gave a fine exhibit of the Orphanage and its work in a series of stereopticon views on Thursday evening and secured $267 for enlargement of the Orphanage.

Resolutions were passed strongly protesting against the proposed change in the date of holding the Annual Conference, and a copy of the same, accompanied by numerous personal letters, was immediately sent to the bishop.

It was a great pleasure to have with us Rev. J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Rev. Briscoe Carter, of the Shreve-

The Home Circle

A BEDTIME SONG.

Riding the billows o'er Dreamy Sea,
Wrapt in a scarf of moonbeam light,
Chasing a dream that floating free
Hides in the ebony cloak of Night—
While the moon goes up,
And the moon goes down
In the misty depths
Of Sleepy Town.

Safe on the shore of Lullaby Land,
Waving palm leaves flutter and sway,
Where the queer little man with his bag of sand,
Touches the eyes of the children at play.
While the moon goes up,
And the moon goes down
In the drowsy depths
Of Hush-a-by Town.

Into the sea-blue depths of night,
Deep as the changing sea is deep,
Clusters of stars shed flickering light,
Hush-a-by, rock-a-by, softly sleep,
While the moon goes up,
And the moon goes down
In the dreamy depths
Of Lullaby Town.

THE SURPRISE.

Frances was lonely. True, she had her dolls—five of them—and the kitten, and Knips, the puppy, but she was used to having a lot of other little girls and boys to play with, and in the new place where her father and mother had moved she didn't know a single boy or girl, and all the children she saw seemed to be so well provided with friends of their own that they did not notice a lonely little girl in a blue or pink frock who sat on the steps alone.

Then one afternoon, when she was feeling so lonely that she just couldn't sit on the porch and watch the others go by, the most delightful thing happened. Frances went back out on the porch for a book she had left behind her and there on the very top step sat a green and white basket decorated with, oh, such a sprightly bow of pink crepe paper! Upon a card was written in a round hand, "For the little girl with the brown curls," and the basket was filled with rosy-cheeked apples. Frances loved apples.

After that, Frances sat on the porch again with the basket beside her. Surely the one that left the basket would stop and speak to her. She had such fun wondering which one of those that passed was the one that put the apples there. She ate three of the apples and commenced on a fourth.

Suddenly she bent over the apples and picked up still another one. There in its side was something pearly looking and shiny. Frances picked it out and stared at it in surprise.

"Why—it is a tooth!" she cried. "There are the teeth marks—a whole circle of them. What a funny way to have a tooth pulled!"

She was laughing to herself about it when she heard the whistle of the fire siren, and just as she jumped to her feet she saw a boy on crutches making his way across the street.

Down went the apples, wide went the pearly tooth. Frances sprang down the steps and over the walk and through the gate.

"Hurry—oh hurry!" she shouted. "The fire engine is coming."

Big and red, like a great snorting dragon, the thing came, and Frances danced up and down in her terror and excitement. She knew that she could not help the boy—he was too large for her to lift—and she would only get in the way of his crutches if she ran to his aid. She breathed a sigh of relief when he swung up on the sidewalk.

The boy grinned cheerfully. "The engine turned at the corner anyway," he said, "but thank you for thinking about me."

Frances had forgotten about the engine for she was staring at the boy's mouth. "When was your tooth pulled?" she asked.

"My tooth?" The lame boy's mouth flew open again—this time with surprise. "Why I didn't know it was out—it has been loose for several days. Where do you suppose it could have gone?"

Frances laughed. "Come over on our porch and I will show you," she said. "Did you start to take a bite of one of those nice apples you brought me?"

The lame boy stared and stared.

"Why—how did you know I brought them?" he demanded, blushing. "I stole up as quiet as could be and I was quite sure that no one saw me. You see I don't know any girls very well and I can't play much with the boys because I cannot run and jump. You looked so lonely I thought you might like some of the apples. But how did you know I brought them?"

Frances explained.

"I did take a bite of an apple—or started to," the boy said. "But I didn't know that one got in with those I put in the basket.

"I'm glad it did," laughed Frances.—Zion's Herald.

PINK MARSHMALLOWS.

Some of the school children were playing a wishing game in the corner of the yard. "I wish I had an aeroplane of my very own," said Hugh Preston. "And I wish I had a pilot to help me fly in it."

"I wish I had an endless banana," said Peggy Smith.

"I wish I had a peck of marshmallows!" cried golden-haired Vivian Pratt.

"A peck of marshmallows?" echoed Binkie Stewart, the newest boy in school. "Well, you can have your wish. I'll bring you all you want. My father has a whole acre of them."

"Why, Binkie Stewart, how can you say such a thing?" cried Bessie May. "Nobody has that many marshmallows, not even the owner of the biggest candy store in the world."

But Vivian, who was only seven years old, looked eager. It took a good many pennies to buy even a few marshmallows; a whole peck for her very own would be wonderful. "Do they grow on vines or on trees?" she asked.

"They grow on short stalks," Binkie said promptly. He looked at the other children in a puzzled way. "You just wait till to-morrow morning, Vivian, and I'll show you."

The news spread all over school that Binkie Stewart was going to bring Vivian Pratt a peck of marshmallows, and the next morning at a quarter to nine the children were buzzing round Vivian's desk like bees. Presently the door opened and in came the little country boy, half buried beneath a mass of pink and white blossoms.

"There!" he panted, dropping his load on Vivian's desk. "They were the prettiest I could find."

All the children stared. Vivian turned red and then burst into tears.

"Why did you make fun of me?" she sobbed. With one shove of her little hand she swept the flowers to the floor. "Take your old weeds away!" she said.

All the pride and joy faded from Binkie's face. As he bent over to pick up the shattered blossoms, Miss Everett, the teacher, came in.

"Where did you get those beautiful marshmallows, Binkie?" she cried. "I never saw any so lovely!"

Vivian gazed with astonished eyes over the edge of her handkerchief. "Marshmallows?" she echoed. "I thought marshmallows were candy."

"The candy is made from the plant," Miss Everett explained. "How did you happen to drop all the blossoms, Binkie?"

But Binkie was too much disturbed to answer. He understood now—Vivian expected him to bring her candy. He had forgotten there was such a thing as marshmallow candy.

The children were all deeply interested. While Miss Everett put the blossoms into water she told them more about the plant.

"As Binkie knows," she said, "it grows in marshy land, and has soft, downy leaves. Its sticky roots furnish a sort of gum that is used for making candy."

Binkie's heart was heavy when he started home after school. But before he reached the first corner Vivian Pratt overtook him.

"I'm sorry I was cross about your flowers," she said. "Look! I am taking a whole bunch home to put in the sitting room."

"But they aren't your kind of marshmallows," said Binkie mournfully.

"They're lovely, anyway," said Vivian. "May I come to your house and see them growing?"

Binkie said yes; and the very next Saturday all the girls and boys came out to his father's farm and saw the marshmallows growing in the field.—Catha Wells, in The Youth's Companion.

CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM—A THREE-MINUTE TALK.

A patriot is one who loves his country and zealously supports its authority and interests. We are perfectly willing to admit that a man may be a patriot without being a Christian; but we submit that the Christian patriot is in a position to render more acceptable service to his country than is the man who is not bound by the sanctions of religion. On this Fourth of July it is hardly necessary to examine ourselves with reference to our patriotism, but it may be worth while to inquire as to whether or not we are Christian patriots.

The Christian loves his country enough to die for it, not merely because it is "his own, his native land," but also because he is constrained by the highest motives that mortal ever felt to make it representative of the highest type of righteousness the world has ever known. The Christian first makes his own life what the life of every citizen should be. He applies standards of conduct that are far above the temporal and material, and he enriches his conception of earthly citizenship by the ideals of a heavenly kingdom. He is interested not only in what his country has done for him in benefits conferred, but also in the contribution he may make to its welfare by being one of many to uphold and inculcate the principles of truth and righteousness and justice and brotherly love.

The Christian patriot, by reason of his allegiance to Christ, has his passion for national righteousness universalized, so that he becomes in a very real sense a minister of righteousness to the whole world. National boundaries are not obliterated in his thinking, but they no longer remain as barriers to the out-sweep of his sympathy and love. What he desires for himself and his own land, he also desires for others and all lands, and he becomes willing to share all things with those who have less than he has.

We are all willing to suffer and die, if need be, for our country; are we willing to do as much for Christ's sake?

ACTIONS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE AT DES MOINES.

That our readers may have a fairly comprehensive knowledge of what was done by the recent General Conference of our great sister Methodism, we give below a brief statement of some of its actions. We are indebted to our exchanges, especially the Central Christian Advocate, for the form in which this review appears. The action concerning unification has already been given.

Elected fourteen new bishops, two of them negroes.

It took the time limit off the district superintendency.

Made the three missionary bishops general superintendents.

It authorized the granting of local preacher's license to women.

The work of the Centenary Conservation Committee was approved and commended.

The name of the Freedmen's Aid Society was changed to the Board of Education for Negroes.

A Family Worship League was recommended to be formed, to be operated through the Sunday school.

An appeal for sums aggregating $142,640,000 for the educational interests of the church was authorized.

By a vote of 469 to 201 the Conference refused to lift the ban on dancing, theater-going and similar amusements.

The Board of Home Missions was directed to appropriate more money and do more work among the American Indians.

The relation of the church to the Interchurch World Movement was referred to the Board of Bishops, with power to act.

In adopting Report No. 86 of the Committee on Sunday schools, the use of the motion picture in Sunday school work was approved.

The Conference declined to transfer the ownership of the Epworth Herald from The Book Concern to the Board of Control of the Epworth League.

Permission was granted to organize a Board of Hospitals and Homes, to be incorporated by law and be subjected to the control of the General Conference.

The Conference declared strongly against any attempt to commercialize the Sabbath, especially by the motion picture industry or the baseball interests.

The editor of the Discipline was given authority to revise the language of the Book of Discipline, and of the various resolutions, reports and enactments intended for insertion in the Discipline.

The name of Epworth League Board of Control was changed to the Board of Epworth League, and the method of nomination of the members of this Board was changed from the districts to the Board of Bishops.

The ratio of representation of Annual Conferences in the General Conference was asked to be changed so as not to allow more than one ministerial delegate for every forty-five members, nor fewer than one for every ninety.

A communication was ordered sent to the officers of the Temperance Society of England, denying that the agricultural population and what was termed "so-called working classes" of the United States were against prohibition.

The Book Committee was specially commissioned to make an exhaustive "Study of Church Papers," with all of its relations possible, and be prepared to report its findings to the General Conference of 1924 with such recommendations as the findings may justify.

In relation to the appointment of natives of India as missionaries, the Board of Bishops was authorized to appoint a commission to study the question thoroughly, with instructions that the said commission shall present its findings and recommendations to the General Conference of 1924.

A constitutional amendment providing for lay representation in the Annual Conferences, which was defeated by the Annual Conferences during the past quadrennium, was again submitted, with a provision limiting the presence of laymen to two days of the Annual Conference session—Friday and Saturday.

For the support of Conference claimants a resolution adopted provides that "the provisions for the support and maintenance of the Board of Conference Claimants in the Discipline of 1916 shall remain in force until June 30, 1921, or until otherwise provided by the Council of the Boards of Benevolence through the pastoral charges."

Favorable action was taken to make permanent the Life Service Movement. For the purpose of administration, it was recommended that for the coming quadrennium this entire movement should be related to the Board of Education, with power to expand its functions as may be necessary; and the Board of Education shall take all necessary steps to conserve what has already been done in this work.

As to foreign language publications the General Conference voted that no publication in foreign languages shall be authorized without investigation of the actual needs of the field in which it is intended that the publication shall be used; publications in foreign languages shall be authorized only for missionary and evangelistic purposes; and that such publications shall in each case contribute to the development and strengthening of American ideals.

A minister in good standing may retire on reaching the age of 65 years or after he has served forty years in the effective relation. This action applies also to any member of an Annual Conference who has served 40 years in the Christian ministry, or has reached the age of 65 years, even though fifteen or more years have been spent in another church, but the basis of claim on the Retired Ministers' fund can only be made for the number of years of effective service given in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

To protect the pastorate from easy departure into detached service, Section 2, paragraph 208, was amended to read, by adding after the word "annually" the following: "Provided that no member of an Annual Conference shall be appointed to any form of detached service outside the regularly constituted organizations of the Methodist Episcopal Church, except chaplains in the army and navy, unless such appointment is recommended by the district superintendents and confirmed by a two-thirds vote of the Conference to which he belongs."

Concerning the question of the relation of location, the Conference took this action: "An Annual Conference, first having examined a member's character, at the session of the Conference when a request for location is made, and finding him in good standing, may at his request grant him a certificate of location, provided such relation be granted only to persons who avowedly intend to discontinue regular ministerial or evangelistic work, which relation shall be certified by the president of the Conference. Such minister shall thereupon hold his membership, as local elder or deacon, in the quarterly conference where he resides, and may be readmitted by an Annual Conference, at its discretion, upon his certificate of location and recommendation of his quarterly conference, and the Annual Conference from which he located."

By a vote of 481 yeas to 286 nays the Commission on the Conference Course of Study was given authority to "prescribe the Courses of Study upon which those applying for license to preach, for orders as local preachers, and for reception on trial, respectively, shall be examined; also a Course of Study for local preachers extending through four years; and a Conference Course of Study extending through four years to be pursued by those who have been received on trial in the Annual Conference; it being understood that only such books shall be prescribed as are in full and hearty accord with those doctrines and that outline of faith established in the constitution of the church; and that the Discipline, with some special emphasis upon the Articles of Religion, and the standard sermons of John Wesley, fifty-two in number, recognized as standards in American Methodism, shall be included in the Conference Course."

A SMALL THING.

The matter of being in arrears is a small thing to the subscriber, we admit—two dollars can hardly be thought of as a large sum in these days of high wages and high prices for the products of farm and factory. But this small matter of two dollars becomes a very large matter when we multiply it by several hundred—as we are now having to do in the business management of the Advocate.

We ask every reader of the Advocate who is not absolutely sure that his subscription is already paid in advance, to glance at the label on his paper to see how he stands. This label shows exactly how the subscriber stands on our books. For example, "John Smith, June 1920," means that John Smith's subscription expired with the last issue of June, and that he is now due the Advocate $2 for the extension of his subscription another year. If all those subscribers who, after glancing at their labels, find that they are in arrears will sit down at once, or at their very earliest convenience, and send us the amount due, they will be helping us very greatly in meeting the financial obligations that rest so heavily upon us during the dull summer months.

A small thing for you—but a big thing for us! Please help us largely by doing this small thing.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

It was our privilege to spend part of last Saturday and Sunday at the Seashore Divinity School. We found that the attendance of ministers was good, more than one hundred having been present at some or all of the services. The weather was delightful, a refreshing breeze blowing constantly from the Gulf, and the fellowship of the brethren was helpful and inspiring.

We heard only two of the speakers, Bishop Francis J. McConnell and Dr. Edward L. Schaub, but their addresses were enough to convince us that this school has maintained its reputation of securing speakers who can make a real contribution to the intellectual and spiritual life of those who hear them. Bishop McConnell is altogether unconventional in appearance and pulpit manner, but he possesses a high-powered brain which functions as smoothly and quietly as a perfect piece of machinery. Simplicity and directness are the outstanding qualities of his utterances. Dr. Schaub is a very young man in appearance, but the fact that he is head of the Department of Philosophy in Northwestern University is ample proof of his scholastic attainments and intellectual ability. We regretted that it was not possible for us to remain for the entire program.

As we see it, the only thing in the way of making the Seashore Divinity School one of the outstanding institutions of our church, is the lack of adequate facilities for taking care of those who would like to attend its sessions. We realize the difficulties in the way of providing the necessary financial support to do what so evidently needs to be done, but we are hopeful that some plan may be devised that will meet all requirements. The authorities of the School, and others interested in this magnificent property, are giving serious attention to the matter and are doing all in their power to overcome the difficulties by which they are confronted. This is not one of the least enterprises which should receive the financial and moral pport of our people.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We have heard many good reports of the work at the North Mississippi Efficiency Conference this year. Rev. E. M. Shaw, of Houston, Miss., writes that it was a great gathering.

We acknowledge the courtesy of a call from Mr. George LaGrange, a member of our church at Labadieville, La., on Tuesday of last week. He had brought his wife to the city for medical attention.

Rev. W. G. Cram, associate secretary of the Missionary Centenary Movement, after more than two years of faithful work in this great cause, is returning to Korea to continue his work there as a representative of the church.

Miss Mildred Cooper, daughter of Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College, received the Master of Arts degree at the recent Commencement of Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas. She will accompany her father on his trip to Europe.

Rev. J. H. Stafford, a local preacher, occupied the pulpit at Second Methodist Church, New Orleans, last Sunday morning, and assisted in the evening service. He baptized two infants. The pastor, Rev. J. A. Alford, is attending the Seashore Divinity School.

Attention is hereby called to the fact that the address of Mr. D. S. Harmon, Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, is now Meridian, Miss. Pastors and Sunday school officials will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

The pastor, Rev. R. M. Brown, was recently assisted in a fine meeting at Zwolle, La., by Rev. Leon I. McCain, our pastor at Hammond, La. As a result of the meeting, thirty-five persons were received into the church, and probably fifteen more will be received at a later date.

The mid-year meeting of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions will be held at 327 Carondelet Street, New Orleans, at 10:30 a.m., Friday, July 2. Bishop W. F. McMurry will be present, and probably Drs. Goddard and Russell. Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., is president of the Board.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker, president of Emory University and a member of the Louisiana Conference, attended the Seashore Divinity School this year. He was announced to preach at 4 o'clock last Sunday afternoon. It was not our privilege to hear him but we have not the slightest doubt but that he delivered a great message.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., paid the Advocate office a greatly appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. He was passing through the city en route to the Seashore Divinity School, of which institution he is vice president. It was inspiring to hear his account of the loyalty and aggressiveness of the Ruston Methodists.

Dr. D. C. Hull, formerly superintendent of public schools in Meridian, Miss., has accepted the principalship of the Bolivar County Agricultural High School, located at Cleveland, Miss. Dr. Hull, it will be remembered, rendered notable service in the Mississippi Conference as Centenary Secretary during the "Big Drive." He is recognized as one of the foremost educators of the State.

The pastor, Rev. C. E. Downer, was recently assisted in a revival meeting at Seminary, Miss., by Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Natchez, Miss. There were five accessions to the church by baptism, and the whole community was blessed by the meeting. Brother Downer will be assisted in a meeting at Oak Bowery church, beginning on July 11, by Rev. Jasper Smith, of Mendenhall, Miss.

We have just received information to the effect that Messrs. McCormick and Hutchinson, of Shreveport, La., have paid down the purchase price of the old Centenary College property at Jackson, La., and will await a clear title to the same. We are not informed as to the significance of this transaction, but we infer that it means that the property will, in some way, be preserved to the church.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, spent a few minutes in the Advocate office on Wednesday of last week. He was in the city for the purpose of arranging about passports for his European trip. He reported that the enrollment at Whitworth for next session is growing rapidly, the probability being that all rooms will be engaged by July 15. As previously announced, Miss Drake and Miss Lois Cooper will be in charge of the college during his absence.

Rev. M. R. Jones, the pastor, writes that he is preaching to good congregations at Rose Hill, Miss. It will be remembered that our church at this place was destroyed by a tornado some months ago, and that an appeal for assistance in rebuilding was made through the Advocate by Rev. J. A. Moore, the presiding elder of the Newton District. The pastor makes grateful mention of the fact that Rev. J. L. Neill, of Nashville, Tenn., has helped materially in carrying forward the work of reconstruction by contributing liberally to it.

Pursuant to the action of the recent General Conference, the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church have appointed the following as the new Commission on Unification: Bishops—McDowell, Anderson, Hughes, McConnell, Thirkield; from the church at large—F. M. North, J. H. Race, D. D. Forsyth, Alexander Simpson, Jr., I. Garland Penn; from episcopal districts—(lay) A. W. Harris, W. A. Elliott, E. H. Cherrington, P. W. Kinchen, A. N. Jarvis, L. D. Dickinson, C. E. Allinger, C. H. White; (clerical) D. G. Downey, Archibald Moore, J. M. Melear, J. W. Abel, J. W. Van Cleve, E. D. Kohlstedt, E. P. Dennett.

A beautiful wedding was that of Dr. Earl M. Harris, of Monroe, La., and Miss Nina Estelle Redditt, of Columbia, La., on Thursday June 24, at which the editor of the Advocate had the honor of officiating. It was held in the stately chapel of what was formerly Newcomb College, on Washington Avenue, this city, Miss Redditt being a graduate of that famous institution. The father and mother of the bride, with other near relatives and close friends of the contracting parties, were present. After the wedding, a reception was held in the private parlors of the Grunewald Hotel. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the young couple. They will make their home in Monroe, La.

Sunday, June 20, was a great day with West Monroe, La., Methodism, the occasion being the opening service in the auditorium of the beautiful new church. The congregation of the First Methodist Church of Monroe joined with the West Monroe congregation in celebrating the event, the sermon being preached by Rev. E. K. Means, of First Church. The Monroe daily newspaper gave an interesting account of the occasion, the sermon being published in full. The new church is a substantial brick structure with all modern conveniences for the most effective work. We congratulate the pastor, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, his predecessors who had a share in the enterprise, and the loyal Methodists of this flourishing North Louisiana city upon the successful issue of their great undertaking.

Just before going to press, we received a note from Rev. R. A. Tucker, of Greenwood, Miss., announcing the sad news of the death of Dr. J. W. Price, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, at Somerville, Tenn., on June 22. The funeral services were held at Greenwood on the following day, being conducted by Brother Tucker, assisted by Rev. J. R. Countiss, Rev. S. L. Pope and Rev. J. P. Randolph. Dr. Price leaves two daughters, Mrs. Wright, of Greenwood, Miss., and Mrs. Ilkens, of Somerville, Tenn., and one son, Mr. Will Price, of Corinth, Miss. Dr. Price joined the Conference in 1861, and was given the superannuate relation at New Albany in 1915. Rev. E. A. Tucker is brother of Rev. R. A. Tucker, is our pastor at Somerville, and he was with Dr. Price when the end came—the triumphant end of a noble life. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family. We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

port District. These brethren participated in the activities of the conference in various ways.

Other pleasant and helpful visitors were present and lent interest and zest to the work. Come again, dear brethren!

Last but not least: Resolutions heartily commending our worthy and efficient presiding elder for searching out and supplying churches that had been left without pastors, were passed by the Committee on Missions. We will be able to report a gain, instead of a loss, in churches in the district.

Oakdale was chosen as the place of holding the next District Conference.

MEASURING OUR UNIVERSE

Astronomers are inclined to believe that our universe with its 3,000,000 stars is after all but a part of space and that other universes may lie beyond. Attempts have been made to measure the size of the so-called universe, but opinions differ very widely as to its dimensions. It is difficult to measure it by using so small a unit of measure as a mile. If we take the speed of light, which travels 186,000 miles in a single second, for comparison, we will begin to gain some faint idea of the dimensions. Light speeding along at this rate will travel in an hour 669,660,000 miles. It is estimated that it would take light 30,000 years to travel across this space. Some astronomers even believe that it would take ten times as long or 300,000 light years. The mind can scarcely grasp the idea that beyond this universe lie even greater voids.—Boys' Life for July.

Life is a quarry out of which we are to mold and chisel and complete a character.—Goethe

Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

The Rev. L. T. SARGENT was a life-long Mississippian, born July 3, 1848, and died June 4, 1920, aged 71 years, 11 months, and 28 days. When his health gave way some years ago, he bought a home at Becker, in Monroe County, Mississippi, where he lived until his death. Brother Sargent professed faith in Christ and joined the church early in life. He was married to Miss Isabella F. Goodwin, September 20, 1871. To this union were born nine children, four boys and five girls. The oldest daughter, Mrs. Irene Francis, died eight years ago; all the others and the good wife and mother survive him. Brother Sargent was licensed to preach in 1883. Having a large family, he remained in the local ministry, but he served charges with great acceptability for a long period of years, and did an effective work. He was a revivalist and brought many people into the church. His first charge was Bigby Fork mission, two years; then Fremont circuit, four years; Mantachie circuit, four years; Marietta circuit, four years; Greenwood Springs circuit, three years; Smithville circuit, two years; Okolona circuit, two years.

On all the above charges he did fine work. I was his presiding elder while on the Mantachie circuit. From these four years of association came an imperishable friendship. He was a stickler for the old-time conversion. He had no patience with a church membership without an experience of saving grace. He pressed all the interests of the church upon his people. He richly deserved to be in the itinerant ministry. He and his good companion reared a family of useful Christian children. He lived to great purpose and many will call him blessed in that day when God shall make up his jewels. One of our best men and ministers has been called to his reward. May the peace and blessing of our good Father above comfort and sustain his loved ones in this time of their sorrow. W. M. YOUNG.

On May 24, 1920, Mrs. MARY ANN MIXER peacefully passed from this life to the life beyond. She was a daughter of Hugh Wilson Robinett and Hannah Pierce Bray. She was born near Cheneyville, La., October 8, 1836, and married Charles Mixer, December 29, 1852. In 1858 the young couple moved to Big Cane, La. They were pioneers, settling in virgin soil, clearing the land where they built the home in which the family have resided for over half a century. Twelve children came to gladden their home; of these, three sons and four daughters lived to mature life. Her husband died thirty-two years ago, the last of the sons nearly two years ago, and she, with the daughters, was left to fight the battles of life under many difficulties, but her energy and fortitude were equal to the task. She united with the Methodist Church in her girlhood, and spent seventy years in its communion. Sister Mixer was a good woman, faithful in all the relationships of life. Honored and loved in her home, esteemed and trusted in the community, her deeply religious life was an inspiration to all who knew her. Her faith seemed to grow stronger, and her way brighter to the end; no doubts distressed her. She assured her devoted daughters that it would be well with her, saying her only regret was at leaving them. The writer, who had known Sister Mixer for many years, assisted by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Lahey, officiated at her funeral. We laid her to rest in her own soil, near the old farm-house which had been her home for more than sixty years. "The memory of the just is blessed."

J. D. HARPER

From April 12, 1834, to March 31, 1920, marks the time of the earthly sojourn of Mrs. ELIZABETH COULTER, nee Worthy. She was among the pioneers of Covington County, Mississippi, ranking with the best of its Christian people of those called Methodists. She was first married to Peter Miller, who died in 1864; then to John Coulter, who passed away in 1878. Survived by two brothers, A. K. Worthy and James Worthy; three sons, T. J. Miller, Frank Miller and David Coulter; two daughters, Mrs. Isabel Odom and Mrs. Minnie Williamson. A host of relatives and friends assembled at the home of her son, T. J. Miller, where funeral services were conducted, and near-by she was laid to rest in the family cemetery. A lifelong member of the church, she loved its worship, was faithful in attendance, even in age and feebleness. Many rise up to call her blessed. Her pastor.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

PREACH AND PRACTICE THRIFT.

As one of the general superintendents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, I am writing to call attention to the important work being done by the Treasury Department of the National Government in the interest of Economy and Thrift.

The American people have been the most wasteful people in the world. We would doubtless have continued in this course of extravagance if the World War had not brought us face to face with the manner in which we had been wasting our resources.

During the war the Government leaned heavily on the Christian churches in America for co-operation, and now that the war is over the churches must continue to co-operate with the Government in doing those things that are necessary for the best life of our people and for the welfare of the world.

Thrift is not only a patriotic duty, but a religious duty. You may, therefore, very well afford to comply with the request our Treasury Department has made, and from your pulpit call special attention to the importance of Thrift. The Fourth of July falls on Sunday this year, and it would be very fitting for you to make special reference to this subject at that time.

Fraternally,
EDWIN D. MOUZON.

A VISIT TO ASBURY COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Last year at Caseyville camp meeting, Dr. H. C. Morrison, president of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky, offered to pay the expenses from Memphis and back, if Brother W. W. Nelson and I would come to Asbury's Commencement and the meeting of the Tri-State Holiness Convention that met in conjunction with the Commencement, and sing some of our special songs that we sang at Caseyville. On May 25, we left for Wilmore. After seeing the sights in Memphis and Louisville, we landed at our destination on the morning of the 27th. Wilmore is situated in the heart of the blue grass region of Kentucky, a town of about 2500 people, without an officer of any kind, and where no tobacco is sold, as a result of the influence of Asbury College. The town has grown up around the college in the last thirty years, the age of the college. It is five miles from High Bridge across the Kentucky River. This bridge is 317 feet high and 1223 feet long. I will admit that I felt a sigh of relief when we ran off it on solid ground. The scenery along the Kentucky River is among the most picturesque and beautiful one will find in the nation.

To the Commencement-Convention: There were people there from every State in the United States, and from the following other countries: Canada, England, Korea, Africa, Greece, Japan, Roumania, Russia, Armenia, Germany, and Palistine. These countries' representatives were students in Asbury College. Every denomination, including the Catholic, was represented. The college roomed and fed all visitors during the Commencement-Convention. At the table where Nelson and I ate the following States and denominations were represented: Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, Tennessee, and Mississippi; Baptist, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, and Northern and Southern Methodist. We just happened to take a census one day while eatin We had three bishops in attendan viz., Darlington, of our church, and Oldham and Fisher, of the Northern church. Bishop Fisher is a graduate of Asbury and was selected at the late General Conference. All three of them preached great sermons. Perhaps the greatest sermon of the occasion was the Annual Commencement sermon on Sunday evening by Dr. Morrison. The consensus of opinion of the preachers I met from all over the nation was that Dr. Morrison was the John Wesley of American Methodism. It was readily conceded by the Northern brethren there that it was through the Pentecostal Herald that the dancing masters were defeated at Des Moines. Dr. C. F. Wimberly, of the Kentucky Conference, preached the greatest sermon on the second coming of Jesus I ever heard. When he was telling what Jesus would do when He came—was quoting the 35th chapter of Isaiah—the old-time Pentecostal power fell and he had to stop. The vast audience arose en masse as ready for His coming at that moment. It was one of the most sacred and awe-inspiring moments I ever experienced. At the annual love feast Sunday morning God wonderfully blessed again. Dr. Morrison asked all who spoke to mention where they were from before giving in their testimony. One arose and said, "Florida." Another arose, by his side, and said "Michigan." Another arose and said "Korea." Another said "Japan." Another would say "California," and immediately be followed by "New York." Nelson and I had intended to be quiet in this world-testimony meeting and just "soak in," but after it had gone some time Dr. Morrison said, "Let us hear from "Mississippi." It was the greatest testimony meeting these little preachers ever witnessed.

It was wonderful how the Commencement and Convention dovetailed into each other. The college chapel and Methodist church were used alternately. Dr. G. F. Oliver, of the Northern Methodist Church, said concerning the oratorical contest, that he had been to such occasions at Harvard, Yale, and others of the nation's and church's greatest colleges and universities, but the contest at Asbury was just a little above anything he ever heard, intellectually, and every contestant professed the experience of entire sanctification. The prize winner was soon to go to the foreign field as a missionary. While the judges were out deciding on the winner, an old-fashion experience meeting was in progress. The presiding elder of the Danville (Ky.) District presented the medal.

I feel very sure I never saw as many preachers together before in life. There was no way by which I could tell just how many were there. There were 70 student-preachers in the college, and ninety volunteers, of both sexes, ready to go anywhere on the globe to tell the good news of full salvation. After saying all this and much more, it still remains to be said, "the half has never been told." I am confident I can truthfully say, that Asbury College, coupled with the Bible conference and the tri-State convention, is the greatest intellectual and spiritual center in our land. If you doubt this statement, go (D. V.) to the Commencement-Convention next year, and go next month to the Bible Conference to be held at the great tabernacle there. I thank God it was ever my privilege to attend Asbury College and to be at this great intellectual-spiritual world-gathering. I can never be the same any more!

Don't forget to mention me and the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath appointed me overseer, when you speak to the King.

THE CRACK O' DOOM FOR NASTY CALOMEL

Folks Abandoning Old Drug for "Dodson's Liver Tone," Here in South.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you lose a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, breaking it up. Then is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish, if liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it can not salivate or make you sick.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES

The Sunday school workers will keep the Advocate that obtained a list of the district Sunday school officers. We want you to make use of the officers in your district. Let us make every Sunday school good, and the better, best.

The Conference Board members can serve the schools in their district and we urge you to make use of them.

In our district-wide meetings, we talked much about training the leadership of the church, and we want you to continue to talk it. Practically all the leaders in any vocation are made after hard work; they were not an accident. Go to spending money on training your leaders. You do that for teachers in your public schools, and you must do it before you will get qualified teachers and leaders in your church schools. Do not neglect this important part any longer. Do something in the way of a school if nothing more than a training school in the local school.

Your Field Secretary will go to Lake Junaluska, July 1, and will be gone for three weeks. And on his return to the home work he will take up with you the Men's Bible Class organization. Be on the lookout for it.

Pay your pledges made at Shreveport Wesley Bible Class Federation as soon as possible, and do not neglect Sunday School Day.

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Bishop McMurry is to be with us one or two days at the Training School.

Rev. H. T. Carley is to preach the sermon at 11 o'clock.

We have our faculty nearly complete. Two who expected to teach have been called to other duties.

Think of it, only ten dollars for the week, at the S. T. S. This is less than any school of the kind costs. Thanks are due Rev. J. R. Countiss.

The schools in the Conference that are teaching religion in an effective way sent one or more teachers to Junaluska for training. These schools will continue to improve; the schools without trained teachers cannot improve.

Wanted, One Hundred Volunteers to secure two hundred teachers for the Training School to be held at Grenada College, August 4-11. Nothing less than persistent personal work can secure that number. A number of this noble "One Hundred" are sending in names most every day.

The Sardis District Institute was held at Oakland last week. Rev. R. P. Neblett presided, Rev. E. G. Mohler and Mrs. Gladney gave some practical and helpful applications of the principles of teaching religion. Mrs. Mohler and two of the Gladney girls, cornetists, furnished music.

One of the organized classes of Pickens took a share in the Girls' Dormitory at Havana and paid the fifty dollars cash. It is not too late for one of your classes or your school to take one or more shares in this enterprise.

Rev. W. C. Beasley, pastor of the New Albany circuit, took me to Union Hill and Mount Olivet, Sunday. Three young women from the Mt. Olivet school expressed a desire to attend the S. T. S. Brother Beasley offered to pay ten dollars toward the expenses of any one that would attend. When he made the offer, one of his stewards said he meant to give five dollars, but he would not let his preacher outdo him. Just make the application.

We are going to put emphasis on the prayer life at our Training School. "The Meaning of Prayer," by Fosdick, is the text we expect to use in our devotional study of the Bible. If we fail to deepen and enrich the prayer life, we will fall in everything worth while. Write me and tell me you want to be one to enter the School of Prayer and that you will pray daily for the manifestation of the Holy Spirit upon our teachers. This is the greatest service you can render to your church just now.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Sunday, the 20th, was spent with Rev. M. L. White on the DeKalb charge. We had a very profitable visit and I feel that much good will come of it. Brother White is starting the year well and the people are really living. I think it a fine charge, well located, with a fine class of people. We were enabled to get out to New Hope, where we had a very fine service. The prospect is that these people will have a fine year.

I would like to make a suggestion. As you hold your two-days it is under her I trust that a plan of work may be found for each person entering into the church. Nothing will help the church or the young convert so much as a definite place with a definite work to do.

I do not know of any institution of the church that needs more general better workers any more than the Sunday school, nor do I know of any place where so many workers can be put to work. Whether the place be in the Sunday school or not, I trust that each newcomer will understand as he comes into the church that he will be expected to work.

Write to the office and write to the district officers. Let us know where we can help you. We will be glad to do so.

We are getting encouraging letters from those who are observing Sunday School Day. If you have not observed the Day, we would be glad for you to do so. If you can not get up the programme, ask your pastor to preach a sermon on "The Little" and take the offering.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
J. C. CHAMBERS.

FROM AMITE, LA.

We feel sure the readers of the Advocate will rejoice with us when they read of the gracious revival that we have just had in this place. The messages came through Brother Dan Kelly, who is an evangelist on fire for our God, and is being wonderfully used of the Lord, proving that the gospel is still the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

A general feeling of Christian union and the longing for a cleaner and better life on the part of the individual have swept the town and country like a great tidal wave, and the effects of these services and the plain gospel preaching will live long after the evangelist and singer (Brother D. W. Milam, of Atlanta, Ga.), have gone on to other fields to work for the Master.

Large congregations filled the church at each service, using every available seat in the spacious auditorium and the Sunday school rooms, proving the fact that if Jesus be lifted up, "He will draw all men unto him." I am glad to state that Brother Kelly did that from the very start. The Word was presented in such a forceful manner [illegible] on the part of the hearers, causing a great [illegible] to turn unto the Lord. The [illegible] on a higher plane of real Christianity. Fifty-eight men and women have fallen down at the altar and pledged themselves to be [illegible] or anything they were called on to do for the Lord. [illegible] were, two joined the Methodist, one the Baptist, one the Congregational, and one the Presbyterian Church.

We are delighted with our church and the way the Lord is blessing us. The people are meeting all their obligations to their pastor and even doing more. Yours fraternally,

LIFE SERVICE.

(A Paper Read Before the Alexandria District Conference).

By Mrs. A. E. Early.

"Whosoever findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life shall find it." (Matt. 10:39).

This is part of the message Jesus gave to His disciples as He sent them forth to service in His name. We know these words are true. They must be true because they were spoken by our Lord, yet how slow we are really to believe them and to live them. We choose to follow along the lines of least resistance and to live lives of ease and self-indulgence as much as possible. The idea of self-sacrifice is naturally repellent to the selfish heart. To the Jews of Jesus' day the cross was a stumbling block. Peter was a representative Jew when he cried out on Jesus' announcement that He was going to be crucified, "This shall never happen to Thee, Lord." But Jesus was willing to sacrifice His life in order that there might be a happier and better world. The idea of servantship is written in vivid characters across the pages of the New Testament. The way out of our conflicts and distresses, He said, lies through the principle of service. One of His sayings which sank deepest into the hearts of His Disciples was, "Whosoever would become great among you shall be your servant." And He proclaimed himself a servant when He said, "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many." Also, "I am among you as one that serveth." On the last night of His earthly life He summed up what He had taught His followers concerning His mission by taking a towel and washing the disciples' feet. After He had done it, He said to them, "Ye call me Master and Lord and ye say well, for so I am. I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done unto you." The servantship of Jesus thrilled the heart of Paul, for, when urging men to become Godlike, he said, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." Life's greatest joys are found in obedience to this command. A selfish life is always an unhappy life. God reserves the sweetest raptures of the heart for those who live for others. It is only when the soul is consecrated to a noble cause that its faculties develop and life mounts to richness and power. It is a principle of divine government that men shall be lifted to higher planes of thought and conduct by suffering and this suffering takes place not only in the lives of men but also in the heart of God.

The recent war has taught us many things; and one is that the principle of self-sacrifice is the central principle of life. When we entered the war our best citizens were foremost in their willingness to make sacrifices. Personal convenience and comfort counted for nothing. There was only one thing worth living for, and that was to win the war. Every man, woman and child was called upon to suffer and sacrifice to a certain extent; some more than others. How infinitely more! Think of the life of a soldier. He surrenders all the things he holds dearest, he gives up his home with all of its comforts, he must say goodbye to father and mother, brother and sister and it may be to wife and children. He must give up his liberty and obey orders, he must lay down rights that are as precious as life, he must face the guns day after day, he must be willing to lay down his life. Every soldier who marches to the front goes knowing that he may never come back, yet he goes. Every nation that went into the war went knowing the fearful price they would be asked to pay, yet they went in. Little Belgium knew what resistance to Germany would cost and yet she resisted. She was willing to pay the price. America walked in with open eyes, willing to pay the price. Why? Because it became evident that the world could not be saved without the shedding of her blood. There was no escape. To save the world it was necessary for millions of women to suffer and for millions of men to die. They did not die for themselves, they died for others. By the Cross we conquer. That is true on the battlefield; it is no less true in the church and in the State. If it was true in the time of war, it is no less true in the time of peace.

"Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?" What do we mean by service to the Lord? Attendance upon church and prayer meeting? The reading of the Bible and prayer is sometimes called "service." These things are all good and necessary, just as it is good and necessary for our bodily needs for us to come to the table and partake of food to sustain our bodies, but if we eat and do not work or exercise, we render ourselves incapable of much activity. Why is it that our Sunday school superintendents have such a hard time to find Sunday school teachers? Why is it that on a Sunday morning when a teacher and the substitute both fail to put in an appearance, the superintendent dislikes so much to go to one of the Bible classes to ask for aid? Because he knows what kind of an answer he will get. Its, "Oh I hate to give up my class, I enjoy it so much." Why don't they all rise and say, "Here am I, take me?" Why is it that our Missionary Boards are calling and pleading for workers and for money to carry the gospel to heathen lands? Uncle Sam had a noble response when he called for soldiers to fight for democracy. Why do we not respond to the call of God? Because we are all too busy, we are eating at the table, we are drinking at the fountain, and we have been at it so long that we are incapable of much spiritual exertion. We have cause for great joy and thankfulness as we see the Spirit of God working upon the hearts of the young people; many have recently laid their young lives upon the altar for God and have done it with gladness.

But service does not always mean leaving our homes and doing some great and spectacular thing. It does not always mean to teach in the Sunday school if the Lord has not asked this of us. Many times the mother or the father in the home who has done none of these things has done great service to the world. One of these may have written these lines:

A hundred little trifling cares
Take up my time some way;
Yet when night comes I often think,
"What have I done to-day?"
I've risen early and toiled late,
Been busy as could be,
And yet at night there's little done
That any one can see.
If I could only point with pride
To some great work begun,
I think I would not be so tired
At setting of the sun.

But He who marked the sparrow's fall
And watched the lilies grow,
And fashions e'en the snowflake's star,
Will understand, I know.
And so through all the busy day
This comfort I hold fast,
That she who does the best she can
Shall hear "Well done" at last.
And if love's steady way I keep
Through all life's fret and jar,
My life may mean as much to God
As yon clear, shining star.

We call these lives obscure, yet these have the wonderful opportunity of training those in their care for large service. How many noble women, like Hannah of old, have consecrated their boys and their girls, even before their

You Will Write a Letter Like This

I wish I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

Barnard St., Savannah, Ga.
Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft-boiled eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used contineously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M.D.

These are not selected cases, nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, or any curable ailment that has not responded to drugs. I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns, and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17 C, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood, and in order to effect a complete cure it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to cure or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Bechtel says: "One bottle has done me more good than any treatment, and what it should it not do the same for others. Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." birth, to the service of God and have prayed them into lives of usefulness at home and in foreign lands! Each one knows best how he or she can be of service. Each one of us knows that God is counting on us, so let us not fail. The following little imaginary story has often been referred to, but it is so good that it will bear repeating.

Somebody has supposed the scene that he thinks may have taken place after Jesus went back. The last the earth sees of him is the cloud—not a rain cloud, a glory cloud—that sweeps down and conceals Him from view. And the earth has not seen Him since, though the old Book does say that some day He's coming back in just the same way as He went away and some of us are strongly inclined to think that it will be as the Book says in that regard.

But—have you ever tried to think of what took place on the other side of that cloud? He has been away down there on the earth over thirty years. It's a long time. And they're fairly hungry in their eyes for a look again at the blessed face. And I have imagined them crowding down to where they may get the first glimpse of His face again.

But this friend I speak of has supposed that after the first flash of feeling has spent itself—the way we speak of things down here—the Master is walking down the golden street one day, arm in arm with Gabriel, talking intently, earnestly. Gabriel is saying: "Master, you died for the whole world down there, did you not?" "Yes." "You must have suffered much?" with an earnest look into that great face with its unmovable marks. "Yes," again comes the answer in a wondrous voice, very quiet but strangely full of deepest feeling. "And do they all know about it?" "Oh, no, only a few in Palestine know about it so far." "Well, Master, what's your plan? What have you done about telling the world you died for, that you have died for them? What's your plan?" "Well," the Master is supposed to answer, "I asked Peter and James and John and little Scotch Andrew and some more of them down there, just to make it the business of their lives to tell others, and the others are to tell others, and the others others, and yet others, and still others, until the last man in the farthest circle has heard the story and has felt the thrilling and the thralling power of it."

And Gabriel knows us folk down here pretty well. He has had more than one contact with the earth. He knows the kind of stuff in us. And he is supposed to answer, with a sort of hesitating reluctance, as though he could see difficulties in the working of the plan. "Yes—but—suppose Peter fails? Suppose after a while John simply does not tell others? Suppose descendants, their successors away off in the first edge of the twentieth century, get so busy about things—some of them proper enough, some maybe not quite so proper—that they do not tell others—what then?" And his eyes are big with the intenseness of his thought, for he is thinking of the suffering and he is thinking, too, of the difference to the man who hasn't been told. "What then?"

And back comes that quiet, wondrous voice of Jesus, "Gabriel, I haven't made any other plans—I'm counting on them."

"Therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League was very successfully held at the Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, Miss., June 15-18.

About three hundred delegates were registered and royally entertained by the people of the town, although the arrival of three special cars at one time threatened to deluge the committee.

The social features of the conference were of the very best. A "get-together" lawn social was a feature of the first night, and a spirit of friendliness reigned throughout the entire time. A most delightful auto ride through National Park and a boat ride up the river were provided and thoroughly enjoyed by the visitors.

Nearly all of the scheduled speakers were on hand at the proper time and each session proceeded as if by clock work. We were especially delighted to have with us for the entire time Dr. T. E. Reeves and Dr. T. A. Matthews, who are representatives of the Mission Board. Miss Helen K. Boulware, of the Central Epworth League office, was with us for one day and in that short time won the hearts of every one.

As is usual at the Mississippi League Conference, many of the young people consecrated their lives to God's service. One hundred and forty-two signified their willingness to do anything and to go anywhere that the Lord might lead them. About fifteen made declaration of a definite intention to prepare for mission work. This alone would be a sufficient reason for calling the conference a success, but there were the added pleasures of social intercourse and of giving and receiving instruction along lines helpful in our Master's Kingdom.

Hattiesburg's most cordial invitation was accepted for next year's meeting, and we are looking forward to an even greater conference at that time.

The standard of League work seems to be improving. Several Leagues this year received certificates and four received gold seals for having measured up perfectly to the Standard of Efficiency. These four Leagues were: Broad St., Hattiesburg; Brookhaven League; First Church League, Laurel, and West End Church League, Laurel. The banner awarded to the best represented district was awarded to the Jackson District and Capitol Street League. Jackson is the custodian for the year, since it was the best represented League in the district.

The officers elected and appointed for the ensuing year are as follows: President, W. D. Hawkins; Vice President, H. B. Lallatte; Secretary, Miss Erma Kile; Treasurer, Rev. L. F. Alford; Era Agent, Miss Clara Belle Kaiser; Superintendent Devotional Department, J. H. Weems; Superintendent Social Service Department, Mrs. H. R. McKee; Superintendent Recreation and Culture Department, Miss Annie Ruth Junkins; Superintendent Missionary Department, Miss Laura Rankin; Superintendent Junior League Department, Mrs. T. D. Hendrix; Superintendent Life Service Department, Miss Louise Preston.

District Secretaries: Meridian District, Ralph Hayes; Jackson District, Vera Britt; Brookhaven District, Lee Craft; Port Gibson District, Wray Bowie; Newton District, Mrs. J. E. Holt; Seashore District, O. J. Power; Hattiesburg District, Truman Lewis

ERMA M. KILE, Secretary.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

CHRISITIANITY WORKS.

Every now and then some pessimistically inclined critic of things as they are, dolefully wonders if Christianity is a working force in the present-day world. He points to the evils that everybody recognizes as existing, and laments the fact that righteousness has perished from the face of the earth. But Christianity does work, and it works to-day. In every community there are men, and women too, whose lives have been redeemed from sin and shame by the power of the gospel of salvation. They have surmounted difficulties, they have overcome temptations, they have endured ignominy; quietly, persistently, beautifully they have gone forward in the discharge of duty, rendering helpful service to their fellow-men, and worshiping God with a conscience void of offense. They have claimed no credit for themselves, but humbly and reverently have professed that they are what they are by the grace of God. We need not fear that Christianity is a failure when we can see every day evidences of its power to transform and save.

BEING ON GUARD.

A bitter cynic once said, "Every man has his price," the suggestion being that all men would be willing to forsake the right for the wrong for a sufficient consideration. The cynic's sneer was a slander on multitudes of good men who have counted not even life itself dear in the performance of duty. But all of us do well to be on guard against the insidious temptations that would cause us to swerve even a hair's breadth from the path of right. The temptation does not, of course, come to us as a bribe in the form of money, or of some material possession, but as a plausible suggestion of a way to obtain what is, in itself, a desirable end--a suggestion that always carries with it, however, an appeal to some unworthy motive. It is a small thing to be disappointed, to be neglected, to be sneered at, to suffer—but it is a tragedy to lose one's integrity. Self-consciousness of rectitude is one of the most precious jewels in the treasure-house of the soul

MORE NOISE.

The recent national political convention at San Francisco has demonstrated again that noise is still looked upon as a potent force in the accomplishment of any desired end. If the newspaper accounts are to be trusted, dignified statesmen sought to win favor for the candidates they were supporting, by the tin-horn and cow-bell method. If "men are just boys grown up," some men are slow of development.

GREEN PERSIMMONS.

So far as our knowledge extends, green persimmons give as little promise of ultimate usefulness as anything on the face of the earth. They are hard, unattractive in appearance, and their taste! - no wonder the little boy thought he was "pizened" when he unsuspectingly took a taste of one. But in the course of time a great change takes place in the forbidding fruit. The warm sun colors it, and the cool nights mellow it, and the mysterious forces of nature break down its fiber and distil from its astringent juices a nectar "sweeter than the creamy curd." One of the delightful memories of boyhood goes back to the visit to the persimmon tree on a sparkling autumn day to gather the luscious fruit that had fallen to the ground through sheer inability longer to contain its sweetness within itself. So we find it oftentimes in human life. The unruly boy, the wayward girl, have so little of apparent good in them that, almost in despair, we are tempted to call them "hopeless cases" and leave them to the fate that we cannot but feel they richly deserve. But the grace of God becomes operative in their lives, the love of God is shed abroad in their hearts, the glow of Christian fellowship radiates from their souls—and the "hopeless case" becomes a beautiful character in the Kingdom of God. After all, there are no "hopeless cases."

JUST FOLKS.

Perhaps a good many of our readers have seen a recent article in a popular magazine under the caption, "Tell Would I Live In," written by the wife of one of the well known millionaires of this country, herself prominent in the most exclusive social circles of New York. The article is both interesting and suggestive. Many of us have come to apply the term, "the idle rich," to most of those who have acquired or inherited great wealth, our feeling being that they dissipate their energies largely in social diversions which, to say the least, are not conducive to moral character; or, perhaps, we hold them in awe as a kind of superior beings who are set apart from the interests of ordinary humanity. In either case, we are likely to feel that there is "a great gulf fixed" between us and them—so far as a community of interests is concerned. The article in question is such as might have been written by any sensible serious-minded woman interested in the affairs of the country as well as in the activities of her immediate circle. We assume that her description of the world in which she lives is accurate enough to give us a fair knowledge of all its inhabitants. If it is, they are "just folks" like the rest of us.

NOT ALWAYS WHAT THEY SEEM.

We learn from the daily re[illegible] a boy in New York was recently a[illegible] ages in a court trial because his p[illegible] been published in a book giving the [illegible] a social survey, over the caption, "The Types of Boys On The Street." The evidence in the case showed that the boy bore a good repu[illegible] the time the picture was taken, and that he was serving as an altar boy in one of the city chu[illegible] We mention this incident simply to call attention to the fact that when we undertake to judge by appearances alone, we frequently fall into serious error. A saintly smile is not always the sign of a simple soul, nor does a hard face always [illegible] a hard heart. "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the principle laid down by the Master.

HUNTING A CURE FOR CANCER.

For a long time the medical world has been diligently searching for a cure for cancer, a malignant tumor which has caused the death of thousands of people, and which has defied, thus far, every effort at eradication. Just at present, some hope is held out that the investigations of Dr. T. J. Glover, a young physician of Toronto, Canada, will result in the production of a serum that will accomplish the long sought end. If the treatment proves to be a success, his name will go down to posterity along with those who are recognized as benefactors to the race. As we reflect upon all that is involved in the discovery of a cure for this physical ailment, we cannot but [illegible] of the absolutely dependable cure that is awaited for an infinitely more serious disease of the soul—sin. Though men continue to go to destruction through the ravages of this merciless destroyer of all that is good in life, they do so by their own choice, a remedy is at hand and available to even the most sorely afflicted. The Great Physician [illegible], at the cost of his life, furnished the remedy by the pouring out of his own blood. And thanks to infinite love, the remedy is free.

TO RISE AGAIN

If one fall apart from [illegible] would be hopelessly damned. [illegible] is not in an act, but in a frame of mind. An act may be repented of and atoned for, but a frame of mind colors the whole life. It can fall to stay down, all achievement is at an end; but if they fail to rise again, there is no limit to what they can accomplish. It is a principle of infinite mercy that the [illegible] ner, if he will, may find his way back to the Father's house.

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE SACRAMENTS.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D.

III.

Meaning of the Sacraments.

In attempting to determine the place and significance of the sacraments in Christianity, we must keep in mind what was said in Article II in regard to the nature of the religion of Jesus, and seek to rid ourselves of certain prepossessions inherited from Medieval Catholicism. The suggestion that we are still in some measure under the influence of such prepossessions may strike some of our readers as a bit surprising, but it is nevertheless true. Nor will it seem strange that this should be the case when we come to consider how the priestly conception of religion absolutely dominated the Christian world for many centuries and still dominates at least three-fourths of it. Clearly as Luther apprehended the doctrine of justification by faith and the fact of Christian liberty, he did not succeed in wholly freeing himself from the influence of the teaching in which he had been brought up. Witness, for instance, his defense of the dogma of consubstantiation, that is, the dogma which declares that while the bread and wine of the Eucharist still remain bread and wine, the real flesh and blood of Christ co-exist in and with the natural elements; and what is true of Luther in this regard is true also of most of the other earlier leaders whose teachings entered largely into the making of Protestanism. One who doubts this only needs, in order to be convinced, to consider the large place which ceremonial rites have had in the preaching and polemical writings of Protestant denominations and how often their contentions are based upon the assumption that some kind of magical efficacy inheres in the sacraments.

As has already been suggested, however, there is nothing in the New Testament to support such a view. On the contrary, a fundamental assumption of all its teaching is that through Christ every soul has direct access to God without the intervention of any human intermediary or sacerdotal rite.

What then is the meaning and value of the sacraments?

In general terms they are symbols designed to help to make more vivid and real to us certain fundamental Christian verities. And this they do by means of the appeal which they make to our minds through the power of suggestion. They are a vivid sign language by which the Spirit speaks to us through the eye. They arrest our wandering thoughts, fix our wavering attention, and thus enable us to apprehend spiritual truths so clearly and vividly that they arouse our dormant emotions and stir the great deeps of our moral natures. They not only keep us from forgetting, from losing our hold on spiritual things, but make them vital, emancipating, transforming forces in our lives. Thus and thus only do they serve as means of grace to us. To interpret them otherwise is to part company with the conception of religion as based upon fundamental moral and spiritual laws, the religion of reasonable and comprehensible personal relations, and revert to the religion of mere magic. For the character of a charm is not changed by the fact that it is used in the name of the Holy Trinity.

Baptism.

In the light of these general principles, let us consider briefly the two Christian sacraments, beginning with baptism, since it is first as to origin and first as to application to the individual.

I have defined a symbol as a visible sign of an invisible reality. It is not a sign, however, that is chosen arbitrarily. A true symbol is one which really suggests the invisible reality for which it stands. And this suggestiveness depends on two things, the inherent character of the sign and the associations connected with it. The rite of baptism fulfills both of these conditions.

In order to make this clear, it will be necessary to consider for a moment what baptism really stands for. The view of Methodists and of a large majority of other Protestant bodies is that it is a symbol of spiritual cleansing by the Holy Spirit and of vital fellowship with that body of true disciples who constitute the real church of Christ throughout the earth. It is thus the sign of the believer's separation from the world and of his dedication to the ideal of holiness and sacrificial service set forth in the character and life of Jesus. It reminds him of the life to which he is called and of the gracious help offered through Jesus Christ for enabling him to walk as a son of God. This view is supported both by the nature and origin of the rite and the teaching of the New Testament.

As was explained in a previous article, the use of water in ceremonial cleansing had been common among the Jews for centuries when Jesus began his ministry in Judea. It was so used in certain parts of the Mosaic ritual (Lev. 14:51, 52; Num. 19:17, 18), and Ezekiel shows how familiar and suggestive this symbolism was when, addressing his exiled fellow-countrymen, he says, "I will take you from among the nations and gather you out of all the countries and will bring you into your own land, and I will sprinkle clean water upon you and ye shall be clean." This is further illustrated by a story found in the apocryphal book of Judith, written about 200 B. C. Judith, the heroine of the story, during a temporary sojourn as a spy in the camp of the Assyrians, is said to have gone forth by night to a fountain within the camp and to have purified herself, the word used for "purified" being the Greek word for "baptized." It was quite natural, therefore, that when the Jews adopted the custom of receiving pagan converts into the monotheistic faith of Israel, they should have adopted water baptism as the external symbol of their purification and of the new life of holiness which the new faith required. Later, its use was extended to devout Hebrews as a visible sign of their belief in the near approach of the Kingdom of God and of their desire to prepare themselves in heart and life for its coming. It was in this latter way that it was used by John the Baptist.

The central announcement in the message of John was, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." This announcement stands as the background of his call to repentance. The people were to repent because the Kingdom of Heaven was at hand and as a preparation for it. It should be observed, however, that the Greek word found in the New Testament is a term of profound moral significance. It means to change one's mind, one's estimate of values, one's whole intellectual and moral attitude. This change, as John thought of it, was to be so thorough and vital as to come to immediate expression in conduct. The people were to show the genuineness of their repentance by bringing forth fruit meet for repentance; and the baptism which he administered was the external sign of this inward change and this dedication to a new ideal of holiness.

This rite, with its familiar associations and its beautiful suggestiveness, was brought over by Jesus into the new dispensation. This fact at once gives us a clew as to the meaning of Christian baptism. Of course, it has a vastly deeper and richer meaning than the baptism that was practiced by the Jews; but, if what I have said in regard to the teaching method of Jesus is correct, it certainly cannot have a meaning wholly different from and disconnected with the familiar historic significance of the rite. For the central point in this method was to catch the attention of those whom he taught by an appeal to existing interests and then to lead them on to larger and nobler conceptions by associating the new with the old. Baptism would have been an irrelevant and misleading, instead of a suggestive and helpful symbol to Jewish converts if Jesus had made it stand for something that was in no way related to the meaning with which they were familiar.

The New Testament record, however, makes it clear that no such violent break with the past was contemplated. Christian baptism was still to stand as a symbol of purification. This was the point of contact between the conception of the rite that was already in the minds of the people, and the larger and richer conception to which they were to be led. Starting with this, Jesus broadened the meaning of the rite so as to make it the sign of the inward cleansing and quickening by the Holy Spirit vouchsafed to us in the covenant of redemption, and of the vital identification of the believer with the body of Christ.

Said John the Baptist to the multitudes that flocked to his ministry: "I indeed baptize you with water; but there cometh he that is mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose. He shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit." That is, John gave them the symbol; Jesus would give them the reality for which the symbol stood.

And it is recorded in the first chapter of the Acts that, being assembled together with the Apostles, Jesus charged them not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for the promise of the Father, adding, "John indeed baptized you with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit not many days hence." If Jesus did not have in mind the familiar use of baptism as a symbol of purification, his words must necessarily have been confusing and misleading to his hearers, for, with their Jewish training and historic background, they could not possibly have interpreted them in any other way. That they did so interpret them, is made evident by the whole trend of New Testament teaching. There is no detailed explanation or formal definition of the meaning of the rite for the simple reason that its general significance was so well understood that any New Testament writer would have regarded such explanation as entirely needless. But when writers use such figurative expressions as "wash away your sins," "cleanse with the washing of water by the word," "the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit," "having your hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience," there can be no doubt as to the symbolism which they have in mind. Whatever deeper spiritual meaning they may have seen in it grew out of and was directly associated with the natural suggestion contained in the fact of the universal use of water for the cleansing of the body and with its common adoption as a sign of ceremonial cleansing and spiritual purification.

There are two passages in the New Testament which some have interpreted as making Christian baptism symbolize the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord (Romans 6:3-11; Col. 2:12). If it could be shown that these passages really mean what these interpreters claim that they mean, this would not in any way change the general historical and Biblical significance of the rite as explained above. It would only mean that St. Paul, having in mind one of the common modes of baptism, suggested a secondary significance that he regarded as sufficiently important to be used as an illustration of certain spiritual truths.

If, however, the passages are susceptible of a fair interpretation that will harmonize them with the general trend of Biblical teaching, that interpretation should be adopted. And able scholars assure us that they may be so interpreted without in any way straining or doing violence to their meaning. The language in both passages is evidently figurative and does not necessarily refer in any way whatever to the mode of baptism. In the passage in Romans, for instance, the apostle is seeking to enforce the idea of the inconsistency of a Christian profession with continued living in sin. The Christian, he says, is utterly dead to sin. The old carnal self has been crucified even as Christ was crucified. This is what his consecration meant in baptism signified. In other words, his argument rests, not on the mode of the outward ordinance, but on the meaning of it as the beginning of a new life in Christ.

It should be added that while baptism is a symbol of the new life to which we are called in Christ Jesus, of regeneration by the Holy Spirit and of vital incorporation into the Christian community, none of the things for which it stands is dependent upon it.

The cleansing of the Holy Spirit takes place when the individual surrenders himself to Christ in faith, and when this spiritual rebirth occurs, he receives the witness of his adoption and takes his place in the family of God. One does not have to wait for baptism to become a member of the body of Christ. A man so situated that it was impossible for him to receive baptism might still be a partaker of this blessed fellowship.

The question is often asked of those holding this view of the meaning of baptism, "Do you teach, then, that one may be saved without being baptized?" Certainly we do. Thousands are saved every year who have not been baptized. To maintain that baptism is in any sense necessary to salvation is simply to return to that bondage to sacerdotal rites and legalistic observances from which St. Paul so earnestly sought to deliver us. As has already been stated, there are a few texts in the New Testament which, taken by themselves, might suggest some kind of connection between baptism and regeneration. Since, however, to read such a meaning into them would be to make them contradict the whole trend of New Testament teaching and the fundamental spirit of Christianity, the rational course is to seek some other interpretation. For it is inconceivable that our Lord meant to embody in his teachings in regard to the nature of religion two utterly contradictory conceptions.

"Well, if this be the case," the objector may reply, "why is it necessary to be baptized at all?" The answer is, because the New Testament commands it and because, as I have sought to show, baptism is still a significant rite which, used in a proper way, may become a real means of grace. It is doubtless true that symbols do not mean so much to us as they did to those to whom Jesus first delivered his message. We are more prosaic. Our imaginations are not nearly so active nor our emotions so easily stirred. But those who believe that symbols mean nothing at all to the people of our modern western world have certainly forgotten the effective use that was made of them during the Great War. How often, for instance, did we see great crowds stirred to tumultuous enthusiasm by the appearance of our national colors! Human nature may have changed in some of its superficial aspects, but fundamentally it remains very much the same from generation to generation. Symbols still have a large and important place in our present-day life, and among those our religious symbols are by all odds the most significant and valuable.

Most of us, however sincere we may be in our religious devotion, are of necessity largely occupied with material concerns. We cannot escape the grim struggle for the means of mere physical existence for ourselves and those who are dependent upon us. And in the midst of this struggle we are constantly prone to lose sight of the things of the spirit, to permit our hands to become subdued to the material in which they work, to forget the vows we have made in our moments of vision.

Baptism is a striking visible reminder—a reminder of the life of holiness to which we are called in Christ Jesus, a reminder of the cleansing by the Holy Spirit that is pledged to those who seek in penitence and faith, a reminder of the fact that we belong to an elect and holy fellowship, that we have been formally set apart for high service and that we are bound by the most sacred obligations to show ourselves true to our dedication and worthy of our sacred relations.

"But suppose," continues the objector, "I decline to be baptized, what then?" It is conceivable that one [illegible] which [illegible] that [illegible] fellowship [illegible] certify, [illegible] is in error. [illegible] Friends [illegible] deeply spiritual [illegible] to the testimony [illegible] them [illegible] and the [illegible] tertain, [illegible] sistent [illegible] which [illegible] merely [illegible] spiritual [illegible] Holy Spirit [illegible] their position [illegible] that accompanies [illegible] lovers of [illegible] they deserve [illegible] ence, but [illegible] conscientious [illegible] loss. Dean [illegible] of William [illegible] made the following record in his own journal: "What an [illegible] His conclusions I believe; but what a spirit was in it! What faith, love, gentleness, long-suffering! Could mistakes send such a man as this to hell? Not so. I am so far from believing this that I scruple not to say, 'Let my soul be with the soul of William Edmundson.'"

In his sermon on the Catholic Spirit, he declares that, clear as his own mind is in regard to the matter, he does not demand as a condition of Christian fellowship that a man shall allow the sacraments at all, the one absolutely essential requirement being met in an affirmative answer to the question: "Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart?"

This position seems to me to be in complete accord with the spirit of the New Testament. It is one thing to seek to convince Christians who, upon what they regard as Biblical grounds, have ceased to make use of the sacraments, that they are in error, to seek to show them that these sacred symbols are still vitally and profoundly significant, and that in rejecting them they are weakening the influence of the Church and depriving themselves of much needed helps to spiritual growth. But it is quite another thing because of their error in judgment, to treat them as heathen and publicans.

Of course, if one believes that the instruction of the New Testament in regard to baptism is still in force and yet declines to receive the rite, he simply shows that he is not a Christian and there the matter ends. But it is inconceivable that one who is sincerely loyal to Christ and believes that he really means to establish baptism as a perpetually significant rite should feel any inclination to disregard so simple a requirement.

(In the next article we will consider the significance of infant baptism.)

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

That [illegible] title of my letters, but I am sending you this one from Virginia. Some of your readers have doubtless read a book called "Christ and Science," the Cole Lectures at Vanderbilt University, by Dr. Francis H. Smith, of the University of Virginia; and, perhaps, here and there a reader may be found who attended the University of Virginia years ago. If so, he will remember Dr. Smith as the professor of Science whose eloquence made his lectures a center of attraction, not only to the students who took his course, but to the whole student body. They will be glad to know that Dr. Smith at ninety-one years of age still retains his mental vigor, and exhibits an interest in the events of the day as if he were fifty years younger. Of course, he is physically feeble; yet he came in the parlor with a lively step, and with cordial manner, and went with us to make several calls. The same courtly manners, the wit and vivacity, the intellectual force [illegible] Chapel [illegible] Use the Chapel [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] thing Mr. McIntyre has done has been done in a sensible way and is inspirational to others.

I had a pleasant visit to Dr. Alderman, who always speaks most affectionately of Louisiana. I told him the last time I saw him he had just raised a million dollars for the University, and said that was the last he intended to do in that line, and asked him if he kept his word. He laughed, and said he was about to start again, for they had to have three million more, and he did not know how to get it except to go after it. Then he told us that the University budget for the current year would exceed $800,000. I lowered a little with him for the scant respect he showed our old friends, the Greeks, in his program for the future education of America; but he treated them, he said, so much better than most of the universities that they ought to be obliged to him. I asked him if he was keeping up his studies: "Yes, at night," he said.

I greatly enjoyed my visit to the old haunts of my youth, all changed now. Among those lovely landscapes and classic surroundings I received the inspiration that has never left me, and never will. Old Virginia is still in the lead!

Mansfield, La.

THE MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Conference convened in the splendid, new, commodious Methodist Church in West Monroe, June 1 to 3, 1920. This beautiful building, the erection of which was begun last year during the pastorate of Rev. J. R. Roy, will cost, when completed and furnished, about $40,000. It is a building in keeping with, if not in advance of, the material prosperity of that growing town, and will stand for years as a monument to the self-denying zeal and liberality of the members and friends of this church. It was a matter of regret that the furnishings for the main auditorium had been delayed in shipment so that the services of the conference could not be held in it, but the pews from the old church and chairs were installed in the basement and other rooms, which furnished ample accommodation for the sessions and services.

Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, the pastor, and his efficient committee on entertainment, had made every provision for the comfort and convenience of the members and visitors to the conference. A very pleasant social feature was the luncheon hour, the ladies of the Monroe church assisting by serving the lunch one day, while the West Monroe ladies served the other day. Speeches were made during the luncheon hour each day by different persons on various topics.

A new feature for our district was a District Woman's Missionary Conference, meeting simultaneously with the district conference in a separate department of the building. Another new feature, for us, was the manner of conducting the business. It was on the order of an institute, rather than a conference, every item of business or interest having its particular time on the previously arranged and published program, the conference being run by schedule like a mail or express train.

Eighteen of the twenty pastors of the district were in attendance, and forty-seven lay delegates, including three local preachers and nineteen women, some of whom were the representatives of Monroe and West Monroe churches. In addition, there were two visiting presiding elders, Rev. J. G. Snelling, of the New Orleans District, and Rev. C. B. Carter, of the Shreveport District; three pastors, Revs. W. W. Drake, R. H. Wynn, D.D., and Wm. Schuhle; and other visitors as follows: Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Geo. K. Nickerson, and Mr. Ditto, representing the Orphanage, at Ruston; Revs. Alonzo Early, E. R. Stanford and Miss Nell Richardson, representing the Sunday-school interests; R. E. Bobbitt, representing Mansfield Female College; S. S. Thomas, representing the Centenary Movement; Mrs. Niebergall, representing the Conference Woman's Missionary Society, and Rev. E. C. McLean, a brother of our Rev. S. J. McLean, all of whom were introduced to the conference.

The first session, Tuesday afternoon, according to schedule, was devoted to organization, reports of pastors and local preachers and passing the character and renewing licenses of local preachers, and an address on "The Preacher" by Rev. E. K. Means. Rev. A. S. J. Neill preached at night.

The second day, morning session, after some conference minute business, was devoted to the laymen's work and Orphanage campaign, being presided over by Rob't O. Randle, District Lay Leader. The session closed with a sermon on Missions by Rev. E. K. Means, followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Second day, afternoon, delegates were elected to the Annual Conference, as follows: W. McD. Hunt, West Monroe; W. L. Calhoun, Rayville; C. W. Scates, Gilbert; Mrs. Maggie Jordan and Rev. H. M. Banks, Chatham; L. G. Higginbotham, Mer Rouge; Mrs. W. N. White, Lake Providence. Alternates: Wiley Roberts, R. C. Halley, and S. M. Collins. Lake Providence was chosen as the place for the next district conference to meet. E. K. Means, W. R. Harvell, J. R. Roy and A. S. J. Neill were elected the ad interim licensing committee. Rev. George Warren was recommended for admission on trial in the Annual Conference. Rev. Wm. Schuhle, by special invitation, preached the sermon at night.

Third day, morning session, R. O. Randle was re-elected district lay leader. A motion introduced by Rev. W. R. Harvell, seconded by Rev. S. D. Howard, after some favorable discussion, was unanimously adopted, requesting Bishop McMurry to postpone the time for holding the Annual Conference from November 3 to the last week in November or the first of December, and requesting the presiding elders to join in this request.

The report of the committee on resolutions, in addition to the resolution of thanks, contained a resolution endorsing the campaign to raise $500,000 for the Ruston Orphanage, and the following concerning the Anti-Saloon League and the 18th Amendment: "That we continue to co-operate with the Anti-Saloon League in keeping down and out the liquor traffic. That we denounce any effort to have repealed, or made null and void, the 18th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States as unpatriotic and a direct thrust against the government and humanity."

The district conference then adjourned and the remainder of the day, except the 11 o'clock preaching hour, was devoted to a Sunday school institute, in charge of Rev. Alonzo Early, ably assisted by Rev. E. R. Stanford and Miss Nell Richardson. Rev. W. W. Drake preached on Christian Education at 11 o'clock.

On the whole, we had an interesting, pleasant and, I trust, profitable district conference and Sunday school institute. A. S. J. NEILL,

Secretary.

REVS. DRS. JOHN MATTHEWS AND JOSEPH B. WALKER.

By Payton A. Sowell.

Tennessee has been generous to Louisiana. Methodism in the midst of the hills, mountains and valleys of the "Volunteer" State, has loaned or given outright—in fee simple—a large company of laymen and preachers to Louisiana.

From the same good county, Bedford, two young men who grew up in the presence of its cedars and wheat fields, became itinerant Methodist preachers, and in their prime gave a fruitful ministry to Louisiana Methodism.

Perhaps in the "40's" there moved to Shelbyville, Tennessee, from Pennsylvania, a family of high social and financial influence. They were strict Presbyterians, and Shelbyville was a town of Presbyterians. From South Carolina had come colonies of well-to-do Presbyterians and they dominated the social and religious affairs of Shelbyville. Methodism was "in a corner"—shut up, apparently hopeless, in a little plain church—on a large circuit—Bedford.

One member of the family mentioned above was a serious-minded lad. Religion and personal piety gave him great concern.

One day, as this boy passed down the street on some errand, when he came opposite the plain little Methodist chapel, he was arrested by the strangely fascinating voice of some one in the church intoning a religious worship. He crossed the street, and entered the house of worship. In the house, there were one or two dozen plain, earnest people engaged in the service.

In the pulpit stood a young man with a spiritual face, his cheeks moist with tears, holding one hand behind an ear (an idiosyncrasy of his), leading the devotions.

The boy listened and was spellbound by the peculiar sweetness of the voice of Rev. S. S. Yarbrough. His heart was touched, as he listened. From that day the spirit of John Matthews was wedded to S. S. Yarbrough and the Methodists.

In spite of positive and fierce opposition from his family, he transferred his membership to the "little Methodist Church" and became a member of the class meeting led by George Ruth—a most saintly man.

Revs. S. S. Yarbrough, S. S. Moody, Ambrose Driskill, Wm. Mullins and Wm. Burr, and other preachers of piety, became his companions and advisers.

In a short time he answered the high call to the ministry, and in due time, as a mere boy, he entered the Tennessee Conference. He was licensed to preach in 1845—75 years ago.

Born in Bedford County—of which Shelbyville was the county seat—was another young man, who grew up among the fertile fields and on a circuit where such men as Yarbrough, Mullins and Burr preached, and under the ministry of one of them, or some one of like spirit, Joseph B. Walker was converted and joined the Methodist Church.

These two enthusiastic lads, about the same time—Matthews and Walker—in the same period of life and in the same good County of Bedford—heard and answered the "high call."

On horseback—with saddlebags and discipline, hymn book and Bible—they went out on circuits of twenty-eight preaching places.

At first they went as junior preachers, under the direction of such men as Burr and Moody. In a few years, these boys had become men, and were sought after for town and city pulpits. Both of them became brilliant and attractive preachers—and beloved pastors of large churches. Moved on by the current of itinerancy, they each became pastor of the largest Methodist churches of New Orleans.

These two youths went out from Shelbyville and Bedford County, Tennessee, when they were of ruddy cheeks; they went forth, not knowing whither they were bound. Both, after fruitful ministries, have gone to Him who called them in their youth. No doubt, as the clock of eternity marks the hours of an endless day, at every turn they meet the saints who were called into the Christian life by them in Tennessee, in Louisiana, and many other States. And the Recording Angel allows them to read the names of the thousands they won to Christ.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference met in session at the Methodist Church in the beautiful little city of Franklinton, parish site of Washington Parish, June 22-24. It was delightful to be there, and enjoy the generous hospitality and good-fellowship of its citizenry. A moral healthfulness seemed to permeate and disseminate itself in gentleness, generosity and brotherly kindness. The conference was not only highly and delightfully entertained, but its sessions were the center of attraction and interest to our people, resulting in a most extraordinary attendance of the people of the town.

The conference body itself was distinguished by the presence of many of our most gifted and devoted men and women of the district. The attendance, numerically, was above the average. Our presiding elder, Rev. A. S. Lutz, seems to be in perfect harmony and co-operative affiliation with the pastors and laymen of the district. Their united aim is to make the Baton Rouge District a "Greater District"—second to none in the Conference.

Some very fine reports were made, and generally healthful conditions reported. As a rule, the pastors have perfected plans and secured help for their several evangelistic endeavors to be launched in the next two months.

The preaching of the conference was of high order—deeply spiritual and evangelistic. Brothers Hill, Early, Joyner and McCain were the dispensers of the Word. The opening address by the presiding elder is worthy of honorable mention for its terse sayings, sane expressions, and logical presentation of the conditions and needs of the district and the work of the conference.

The work of the conference, while harmonious and operating without a discordant note, did not proceed along the line of least resistance, but met the issues and problems of the hour fairly and squarely and sought to solve them in a way fitting to glorify God and insure the growth of the church in the advancement of the kingdom of God.

The election of delegates to the Annual Conference resulted in the election of W. S. Holmes, O. H. Cline, Judge R. R. Reid, Mrs. James Coburn, Mrs. Dr. Stewart, H. C. Murphy, Judge Charles Kilburn, and B. W. Waltman. Alternates: W. S. Haney, Mrs. Ada Babington, G. W. Neasom, and Miss Nell Richardson.

The one radical act of the conference was the passage of a resolution memorializing the Annual and General Conferences to consider seriously the accession of our women to the ministry of the gospel. Its passage, however, was marked by no special demonstration of enthusiasm.

The conference goes to Amite City next year. Many of us know what that means; for we have been there before. The prospect pleases and occasions pleasant anticipations.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Then the Spirit of Wisdom took my hand and led me to a place that was large and fair. In this Palace Beautiful were all manner of pleasing things that were of great worth to him who dwelt therein. Hanging on the walls were pictures to delight the eye, lamps of gilt and crystal, tapestries on the walls, carpets and furred skins of strange beasts on the floors, sweet-toned harps set in precious cases for music, and downy couches for rest and sleep. All these filled me with strange wonder. Moreover, my guide showed this man's treasure of silver and golden monies, besides the precious stones and bonds, for the man was exceeding rich. And all about this rich man's house were groves and gardens of flowers and fountains of crystal waters, fair to look upon. And great fields of all manner of grain growing therein, with vineyards and orchards, were shown to me. And I said to my guide, "What power wrought among men, to fashion all these things so fair?" And he said, "This man bought the work of many with gold and silver; then with their work he gathered to himself yet more." "And doth he thank God for all these things?" And Wisdom wept, answering in broken voice, "Yea, he worships his God by day and by night—but his god is self." "And is this man awake and doth he live?" "Nay, nay," said Wisdom, "he hath no vision, he sleeps, he hath not life; he is dead." And I, too, wept, that a living man was dead.

The church is planning a great movement in the interest of Christian education. Never before in these latter days was there a greater need. And this need is the great incentive for speedy action. Great moral truths and ethical principles which underlie our civil and economic life must be taught to the youth of our land. Man is more than money. Truth, justice, right, are not in the market-place to be bought and sold. The rule of gold can never supersede the Golden Rule. The press is clamoring for more pay for our teachers—and they should be paid more—yet the true teacher toils not altogether for the things that perish with the using. His reward is greater. Wisdom is ever more precious than rubies or dollars. The great teachers of the past have left a heritage to this generation which is priceless. For some years I have protested against our materialistic, utilitarian, view of education. Now this system was about consumed in the recent world conflagration. But the ash heaps still smolder. Great is our opportunity, great is our responsibility, as a church, in these crucial times; but greater is our reward. But we must be faithful to the sacred trust. The hope of the world today is in the church, and the hope of the church is in her good men, joined and sealed by an unconquered faith to her glorified Lord. The wisdom of the poor wise man saved the city. The citadel entrusted to our keeping can be held only by eternal vigilance within and without. Watchman, what of the night?

WHAT IS THE SUN?

An Interesting Theory.

By a Layman.

A layman of ordinary intelligence and education asks a layman of similar intellectual equipment, living one hundred years hence, a series of questions regarding prevalent beliefs among intelligent people of that coming day and age. Following are the questions and replies.

"What is your opinion of the sun?"

"It is a huge electrical furnace, generating its own electricity. It is also the source of light."

"Is it also a source of heat? Don't the sun's rays warm the earth?"

"Yes, but not directly and they are not rays of heat, as you have been taught and probably believe. We believe, in fact we know, that such a thing is impossible."

"Why impossible."

"Because we know enough of the laws of heat to know that heat, no matter how intense it may be at its source, could not pass through the ninety million miles of ether between the sun and earth, which is as much colder than ice as ice is colder than hot water. To believe that heat from the sun can warm the earth directly is as contrary to intelligent reason as to believe that the heat from a huge camp-fire on an island in an inland lake surrounded by a wall of ice a mile thick could warm people living outside the wall."

"How then does the sun warm the earth?"

"By electricity. The sun generates and sends out both light and electricity. They travel at about the same speed, but neither is heat. Light passes through both the ether and blanket of atmosphere supposed to be forty or fifty miles thick which surrounds the earth, without obstruction. Ether offers no resistance to the electric current, but the atmosphere does. It is not a good conductor of electricity. The friction caused by the struggle of the electric current to reach the earth through the atmosphere heats the air and warms the earth."

"Can you illustrate this by something with which we are familiar?"

"Yes, the intense white electric light in the glass bulb which lights your room is produced by friction just as is the warmth of the atmosphere. Two copper wires, copper being a good conductor of electricity, pass into and out of the glass bulb. They are connected by a very small platinum wire which is not a good conductor. The electric current, in its struggle to pass through this poor conductor and reach the earth by the return copper wire, creates both intense heat and intense light. While the light can be seen for miles, the heat penetrates the atmosphere only a few inches. Fifty of them could not heat an ordinary room. Another illustration is that wood, especially when green, is a better conductor for electric current than air. Hence electricity in the form of lightning often strikes trees and sometimes houses. The latter, being dry, are likely to be set on fire by the friction."

"Why is it that in the tropics near the seashore the air may be uncomfortably warm, or even hot, while the not distant mountains are covered with snow?"

"Because of the difference in the thickness of the blanket of atmosphere which covers the earth. At the seashore surface the blanket is thick; on high mountains the blanket is thin and offers less resistance to the electric current from the sun to the earth, hence less friction and less heat. Exactly the opposite is true at the ocean level.

"Why is it colder in the north temperate zone in the winter than in the summer?"

"Because the electric current from the sun to the earth is less direct. It seeks the earth by the shortest route, and much of it is drawn off to the south of us before it reaches our latitude. For substantially the same reason the air in our longitude is colder in the morning and evening than at noon."

"We were taught in the nineteenth century, and so far in this, that while Mars, and possibly Venus, might be inhabited by beings constituted physically like ourselves, that life similar to ours would be impossible on Mercury and Jupiter; Mercury because it would be too hot, being so much nearer the sun, and Jupiter too cold because it is too far away. What is your belief in the 21st century?"

"I have seen those textbooks; they are still to be found in our libraries, but their teaching is discarded. Believing, as we do, that the earth's heat is produced by friction generated by the electric current passing through the earth's blanket of atmosphere, we reason that so far as heat is concerned all the change the Almighty would have to make in any or all of the planets in the Solar system would be to give to each its proper thickness of atmospheric blanket."

"How about the moon?"

"The moon is cold because it has no atmosphere. The same is probably true of the moons of Jupiter."

Lake Junaluska, N.C.—The Beauty Spot of North America
1819 MISSIONARY CENTENARY PAST AND FUTURE 1919
MISSIONARY CONFERENCE
1920 AUGUST 2ND TO 8TH 1920

Under the auspices of the Board of Missions, a great Missionary Conference will convene at Lake Junaluska, N. C., "The Beauty Spot" of North America, on August 2 to 8, 1920. August 6 and 7 will be devoted exclusively to the work of our laymen.

The Conference will open on the evening of August 2 and close with the evening service on August 8. There will not be a dull moment during the week. Full announcements concerning program and speakers will be made at an early date.

The railroads of the Southeastern Tariff Association have granted a reduced rate for the round trip, when round trip ticket is bought in connection with certificate entitling purchaser to reduced rate. Write J. M. Way, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn., or A. L. Dietrich, Lake Junaluska, N. C., for blank certificates.

The rates at the Lake Junaluska hotels range from $2.00 to $6.00 per day, or $10.50 to $40.00 per week. This includes both lodging and meals. All hotels furnish excellent accommodations. Make your reservations early. Write A. L. Dietrich, Business Manager, Lake Junaluska, N. C., stating the price you wish to pay for accommodations, and the exact date on which you will reach Lake Junaluska.

The strongest speakers are being secured for addresses. Quite a good deal of time will be devoted to free-for-all discussions, to asking and answering questions.

Through the Centenary funds the Missionary work of Southern Methodism has been extended into new territory and enlarged in the old fields until those who desire to keep up with what their church is doing will find it necessary to attend this Conference. The European Commission—Bishop Atkins, Dr. Pinson, and Dr. Beauchamp—sailed for Europe in May and will return just in time to make their reports at this Conference.

I gathered all the scowls and growls
Miss Grumble left around,
To sell them to the ragman
At half a cent a pound.
But, ah, he knew a thing or two,
For he shook his towsled head;
"No, ma'am! I'll have good-natured rags,
Or none at all," he said.

—Youth's Companion.

A WEEK-END ON AN AUSTRALIAN FARM.

By Wm. C. Allen.

Our destination was about one hundred miles out of Melbourne. Our train slowly jogged along and our first-class tickets proved good anywhere we could secure a seat. I do not wonder that the Australian newspapers and the public so often assail the government ownership and administration of their railways. Soon after reaching our station, a fat and comfortable steed, driven by our hostess, was pulling us across the hillsides towards her home.

The principal country highways thereabouts are "three chains wide," which means that they are 198 feet from fence to fence. This affords ample room for "mobs" of cattle or sheep to meet and not get mixed when near each other. Only eight or twelve feet of these broad roads are actually used, and most of them are left to their original condition of weeds, bush and undergrowth. The scenery of a good deal of Australia is much like the rougher portions of the United States, or resembles parts of California at the close of the dry season. The fields are yellow, the foliage green, eucalytus trees abound, while here and there a simple farm house and its surroundings reveal how, against many odds, the tillers of the soil contend with the inexorable forces of nature.

The home of our friends was far removed from the public thoroughfare. One side of the pleasant little house was adorned with a lovely garden of gay and brilliant flowers. When approaching it we followed a winding path under the deep shade of some cedar foliage, while close by, from the spreading limbs of a great mulberry tree, hung big black balls of that delicious fruit. The family have been living on the premises for 34 years; theirs is a dairy farm, and many of the cows are Jersey or grade cattle. The milking is done by machinery and the yield is sent to a nearby creamery. How we enjoyed the clear country air—how good it was to get out of grimy hotels and away from the supervision of even careful servants! How pleasant was it to see some vegetables en masse after the endless meats and gravies of antipodal hostelries! How we reveled in the strawberries fresh from the garden, with the early morning dew upon them—so rich, so cold, so sweet! And then the cream—real cream! Do I enlarge on the good things of life? Is it not well to do so after months, with few exceptions, of patiently paying in hotels for what we so often wanted but could so seldom get?

The morning following our arrival we walked in the glowing sunlight across the fields and through the hush to the tiny chapel where hearts joined in the delightful fellowship of prayer and praise to God. The remainder of the day was passed in our happy Christian surroundings. The contact with the young folks, the simple family worship at eventide, the broad attitude towards men and women of every race and creed—ever a product of real comradeship with Christ—the spirit of love that breaths goodwill and peace were there. Then the restful Sabbath came to its close.

We acquired much interesting information from these good friends regarding life on an Australian farm. They are too far from the main highway to be troubled by visits from "sundowners" or "swagmen," which terms, reduced to simple English, mean "tramps." We learned that the little tin can, so universally used throughout Australia to boil water in, is called a "billy." There is no telephone connecting the farm with the outside world. Efforts had been made to secure facilities in that direction, but the Government, which owns the telephone system, does not seem to encourage its development in country districts. If any one is ill, some member of the family is compelled to drive 10 miles for the nearest doctor. He charges three pounds and three shillings for his visits—let us hope they are worth this exorbitant sum.

One afternoon as I sat on the porch-step, a cock aburro or "laughing jackass" that queer bird fluttered down to the top of a nearby clothes-post, and, with a look of profound and superior wisdom, scanned me through and through. He was clad in a rough grey coat and was altogether a very solemn looking sort of creature to emit such ridiculous laughter as can be poured from his portentous throat. A charming creek babbles hard by the house, and within it is found the duck-billed platypus, known only to this part of the world is it bird or animal? These strange creatures have bills like ducks, fur on their bodies, are web-footed, lay eggs, suckle their young and stay under water for hours. They called to memory those other Australian marvels the kangaroos—some of which I had a few weeks before seen elsewhere. A friend whom I was then visiting held several of them in captivity in a paddock on his farm. One big fellow was almost six feet high when he stood upright on his hind legs and shook hands with his funny little fore paws. Another was a female, which, at the period I refer to, was caring for a baby kangaroo just large enough to crawl sometimes from its mother's pouch, but generally all we could see of it were three of its legs, and its tail literally "sticking out" of the pouch in various directions a comical sight indeed!

One hundred and ninety acres of the farm are enclosed in wire netting, three feet and a half above ground, and six inches below the surface. The gates into this part of the farm are fastened very closely. These expensive precautions are taken to keep the rabbits out, which animals have multiplied so tremendously, that, in some parts of the country, the farmers have been forced to give up their property and see the efforts of a lifetime swept away by the ravenous little pests. There are numerous deserted farms in the neighborhood. But of late rabbit-skins have become valuable [illegible] beautiful "sealskin coats" [illegible] and hunters with [illegible] on killing them. All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it, otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page, do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

"A WHITE MAN'S CHURCH."

At the risk of being grossly misunderstood, we undertake to say that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a "white man's church." We are prepared to have it said that we are narrow, bigoted, prejudiced, unbrotherly, unchristian—to say nothing of harsher terms that a perusal of the dictionary will readily supply. We do not claim to be expressing views other than our own; "with malice toward none and charity for all," we are willing to accord to every other man in the world the same privilege that we claim for ourselves—that of thinking and acting in accordance with the dictates of his own conscience in the fear of God. In exercising that privilege, we repeat, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a white man's church—and we add the conviction that it will remain such.

We do not maintain that the Kingdom of God is a white man's Kingdom. We hold to the doctrine of a universal atonement as a fundamental principle of the Christian religion; the benefits of that atonement, therefore, extend to all individuals of all races under the sun, and are not to be denied any human being on any grounds whatsoever. We accept most heartily the doctrine that "God is no respecter of persons"—we rejoice in its unequivocal expression and application. There is no limit to which we would not go in defending jealously this essential characteristic of Infinite Love; it is a glorious fact that "the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

The Kingdom of God is the all-inclusive term; the church—a denomination—is a part of the Kingdom, but it is not all of the Kingdom. Just as a church—a denomination—may have organizations within itself, so the Kingdom of God may have subordinate organizations which, while thoroughly in keeping with the principles of the Kingdom, are formed along lines that wisdom suggests and that experience has proved to be most conducive to the highest efficiency and largest success. We may assume that all churches—all denominations are, in some sense at least, a part of the Kingdom, but we cannot safely assume that they exhaust the content of the larger term.

Insistence upon the racial integrity of a church does not logically imply a limitation upon its territorial expansion, under appropriate adjustment to racial distinctions, or upon its spiritual ministry in the evangelization of the world any more than the corporate control of a public service utility implies a restriction upon its ability or willingness to minister to the needs of the community in which it operates or those to which it may extend its activities. This illustration may be crude, but it carries a suggestion of the truth. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for example, as a white man's church is not estopped from giving to all men, freely, fully, and lovingly, all that it possesses of the riches of divine grace. Any organization that is willing to share all it possesses with all mankind and that does all in its power to share what it possesses, does not recognize, either in thought or action, any limitation upon its function as an agency for universal welfare.

We have been led to make the foregoing remarks because of statements we have seen in various official organs of the Methodist Episcopal Church in connection with the election of two Negroes as general superintendents. Thus, Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, says: "'To-day is the day of our ecclesiastical emancipation,' exclaimed a colored delegate to a group of his race after the morning service consecrating the two Negro general superintendents was over. His words were not an exaggeration. The consecration of Robert Elijah Jones and Matthew Wesley Clair to the identical office and in the identical language as that used in the consecration of the fifteen white bishops, absolutely eliminated forever and forever any semblance of a color line in the Methodist Episcopal Church." And Bishop W. P. Thirkield, in the Southwestern Christian Advocate, says: "Their election by a body of 800 delegates from the whole world, not grudgingly, but with contagious enthusiasm and the vision of its significance as related to the whole world, is an event of far-reaching importance. It forever gives assurance that ours is not a white man's church, but a church as broad as humanity and as all-inclusive as the redemptive blood of Jesus Christ." Many others of similar import could be quoted. We have no disposition to find fault with what our brethren of the M. E. Church have done, or to call in question the sincerity of such statements as given above. We have not the slightest doubt but that Bishop Jones and Bishop Clair are well qualified for the positions to which they have been called, both of them being outstanding leaders of their race.

But facts are facts, and it is hard to see how the election of these men has "absolutely eliminated forever and forever any semblance of a color line in the Methodist Episcopal Church." We leave it for that church to settle the question as to whether the method followed in the election of these two bishops was constitutional—a question which some of their leaders at least seem to be ready to answer in the negative. But the openly stated and uncontradicted limitations placed upon the functions of these colored bishops—that they would preside over colored Conferences only—has, if it has done anything, accentuated the color line—the very thing which it is said to have eliminated. So, in spite of all that has been said to the contrary, we believe it is not going beyond the facts in the case to say that the Methodist Episcopal Church itself is a "white man's church" as much as is the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the sense given above.

Our position as expressed in the foregoing is not based upon race hatred, race prejudice, or race dislike; we accept the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, with all its legitimate implications; we think of and accept the Negro as a brother in Christ, and we count it not less a privilege than a duty to fulfill all the obligations of brotherhood. We would withhold nothing from him that Christ brought to humanity, and we would do all in our power to help him to the fullest realization of all his possibilities in the Kingdom of God. We maintain that the position herein assumed does not violate any of the teachings of Jesus, with reference to human relationships or go contrary to any of the requirements of Christian ethics. We assume no racial superiority, no matter what history may seem to teach, and we arrogate to ourselves no privileges that we are not willing to extend to all others of God's children. We simply recognize the ineradicable sense of racial differentiation, and claim for the white race only what we reverently allow all other races—the right to develop along separate, though parallel, lines.

BISHOP W. F. McMURRY IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop W. F. McMurry, who is now in charge of the Louisiana and the two Mississippi Conferences, spent Friday, Saturday and Sunday in New Orleans, attending a meeting of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions on Friday, meeting the pastors of the city on Saturday, and preaching at Rayne Memorial Church on Sunday morning. In spite of this full program, he honored the Advocate office with calls on Friday and Saturday. Though showing the effects of much travel and arduous labors, he was cheerful in spirit and optimistic as to the work of the church. It is his purpose to acquaint himself as fully as possible with his episcopal district, in order that he may serve it as completely and efficiently as possible. His great record as secretary of the Board of Church Extension is proof of his high administrative gifts, and we predict great success in the administration of the work of the larger office to which he has been called.

BOARDS AND CITIES.

For the larger development of our work as a whole, we believe it would be a good thing for our Connectional Boards to be domiciled in different cities in such way as to give every section of the church the encouragement that would come with the establishment of a great connectional enterprise within its own bounds. While there are good reasons for the centralization of the Boards in Nashville, we are of the opinion that the gain would outweigh the loss if some of these Boards should be assigned headquarters in other cities. The fact that the Board of Church Extension, in Louisville, and the Board of Finance, in St. Louis, have functioned effectively, makes it evident that other Boards could do likewise. New Orleans, Memphis, Atlanta, Birmingham, Dallas—not to mention other important centers—would, we are sure, be glad to be officially designated as the headquarters of any one of our great Boards. We suggest this as an appropriate matter for consideration at our next General Conference.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Good reports come to us of the work at Mashulaville, Miss., where Rev. Guy Ray is pastor.

Rev. W. B. Crichlow, of Salem, Ky., is visiting his son, Dr. R. S. Crichlow, a prominent physician of this city.

The pastor, Rev. T. B. Winstead, was recently assisted in a good meeting at Carthage, Miss., by Rev. E. L. Hillman.

On a quota of $1800 for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, of this city, has secured over $1900.

Bishop W. F. McMurry preached at the Seashore Divinity School on Thursday evening of last week. His message was helpful and inspiring.

Rev. J. A. Patterson, the pastor, is making arrangements for a tent meeting at Vaiden, Miss., to be held this summer, with Rev. W. M. McIntosh assisting.

Mrs. M. Skiles, of Sherman, Texas, a sister of Rev. R. A. Davis, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, is visiting her niece, Mrs R. S. Crichlow, in New Orleans.

We were glad to greet in the Advocate office on Friday of last week Rev. C. C. Miller, of Morgan City, La., Rev. J. D. Harper, of Opelousas, La., and Rev. A. S. Lutz, of Baton Rouge, La.

According to an exchange, nine pastors of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Boston, Mass., have been elected to the episcopacy. Two of them, Wilbur Fisk and Jas. R. Day, declined the honor.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of First Methodist Church, New Orleans, will preach the sermon at the 11 o'clock hour at Monteagle, Tenn., on Sunday, July 25, and teach a Bible class during the week.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, the pastor, is scheduled to begin a revival meeting at Bucatunna, Miss., on Thursday evening of this week. He will be assisted by Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Meridian District.

Miss Aileen Kling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Kling, active members of our church at Satartia, Miss., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. T. Carley, of New Orleans.

"Things moving along harmoniously, plenty of good, fresh butter and milk, and some fried chicken—come to see us," writes Rev. J. Cule Rousseaux, of Abbeville, La. How we wish we could pay him a visit!

Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Baton Rouge, and Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, were in the city last week, attending the meeting of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions. We did not have the pleasure of meeting other out-of-town members who were in attendance.

Rev. J. H. Shumaker, general secretary of the Methodist Benevolent Association, Nashville, Tenn., was a visitor to the Seashore Divinity School this year. He represents an institution which is rendering a great service to the ministers and members of our church.

Rev. B. E. Meigs is meeting with encouraging success in his work at Picayune, Miss. The Sunday school, the Epworth League, and the Woman's Missionary Society are well organized and are doing fine work. Congregations are large. Seventy-eight members have been received since Conference.

Rev. Robt. A. Clark, presiding elder of the Union City District, Memphis Conference, in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, gives us a cordial invitation to attend his district conference, in session this week. Brother Clark was formerly a well known member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Our church at Poplarville, Miss., is making splendid progress under the pastorate of Dr. C. M. Chapman. A $1000 debt has been provided for, a $1000 heating plant has been installed, and nearly $2000 is in sight for repairs on the church property. The pastor finds the work pleasant and the members faithful.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, is also president of the Board of Trade of Brookhaven, Miss., in which capacity he has rendered very great service to the community. The Directors of the Board passed highly complimentary resolutions concerning Dr. Cooper on the eve of his departure on his European trip.

We have heard fine reports of the recent meeting at First Church, Alexandria, La., in which the pastor, Dr. S. H. Werlein, was assisted by Rev. C. A. Fisher, of Fort Worth, Texas, one of our general evangelists. According to a local newspaper account, there were 92 additions to the Methodist Church, and about 40 to other churches.

It may be of interest to our readers to know that Miss Nina Estelle Redditt, now Mrs. Earl M. Harris, whose marriage we mentioned in these columns last week, is a granddaughter of Dr. R. S. Isbell, one of the best known members of the Louisiana Conference, now on the "Honor Roll," who is making his home for the present in Texarkana, Ark.

The following figures have been published concerning the results of the evangelistic campaign thus far: Members received on profession of faith, 27,092; received by certificate, 29,110; family altars erected, 11,078; tithers, 21,668; life service pledges, 2,127. Thirteen Conferences have not given final reports, and six Conferences have sent in only very meager reports.

A very successful revival meeting was held at Berwick, La., recently in which the pastor, Rev. C. C. Miller, was assisted by Rev. Clyde Winter. There were 32 additions to the church, with several more to follow. The pastor attributes the success of the meeting largely to efficiency in the Sunday school work and to the splendid attendance of the children and young people upon the services.

The Interchurch World Movement is undergoing a process of reorganization. All the officers have resigned in order that there might be no embarrassment in completing the reorganization, and a radical reduction in the budget of operating expenses has been recommended. A meeting has been called in New York City on July 8, to determine the form and personnel of the future organization.

Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, spent a few minutes at the Advocate office on Friday of last week. He was returning from Mobile, Ala., where he had been in attendance at the bedside of a sick brother. It was on account of this call to Mobile that he was unable to attend the Seashore Divinity School, at which he has always been a regular attendant.

The preliminary meeting of the Committee on Ecumenical Conference will be held at Geneva, Switzerland, August 10-11. This committee will discuss the desirability and the possibility of holding an international Ecumenical Conference. The chairman of the American delegation is Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D.D., of Brooklyn. The representatives of our church on the committee are Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and Dr. W. B. Beauchamp.

According to the latest report of the Finance Department of the Centenary Commission, the Mississippi Conference is tied with the Los Angeles Conference for twentieth place in the percentage of pledges collected, the figures being 19.6. The North Mississippi Conference is in the twenty-fifth place, with a percentage of 18.6, and the Louisiana Conference occupies the twenty-sixth place, with a percentage of 18.1. The Missouri Conference leads, with a percentage of 29.1, and the South Georgia Conference is last, with a percentage of 13.8.

The recent session of the Seashore Divinity School was one of the most successful in its history. More than one hundred ministers were enrolled as attendants, and the class work was thoroughly organized and efficiently conducted. A class of 26 received certificates or diplomas. Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., asked to be relieved of the office of president, and Rev. H. M. Ellis, pastor of Centenary Church, McComb City, Miss., was elected to succeed him. Under the aggressive leadership of Brother Ellis, the School will undoubtedly maintain the high standard already set, and go forward to even greater achievements.

Another of the Advocate "Old Guard" is Sister Lizzie Hanson, of Lorman, Miss. Her father was Rev. Calvin C. Watkins, for many years a member of the Mississippi Conference, to whose home the Advocate was a regular visitor from her earliest infancy. Her maternal grandfather was one of the original subscribers to the paper; thus her family has been related to it from its beginning. Rev. Calvin C. Watkins was a brother of Rev. W. H. Watkins, one of the most eminent ministers of our church in its early days, and an uncle of Rev. A. F. Watkins, the distinguished president of Millsaps College. We pray Heaven's richest blessings upon Sister Hanson as she quietly and confidently faces the Western Slope with a great company of the saints of God.

THE PILGRIMS' BOAT.

A perfect model of the famous Mayflower is to be built in England. It will sail to America just three hundred years after its famous original. The picturesque little craft will weigh only 180 tons. This trip, says Boys' Life, will be part of a great celebration to commemorate the landing of the Pilgrims and the settlement of New England three centuries ago. There will be several pageants both in England and America, and many notable buildings and monuments will be raised in honor of the event. One of the most interesting features of the celebration will be the moving pictures which will reproduce the famous scenes of the sailing of the Mayflower and its landing at Plymouth, which are now being prepared both in England and America, and will soon be shown throughout the United States.—Exchange.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT—MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To Whom It May Concern: This is to certify that Mr. T. B. Lampton has resigned as Conference Centenary Treasurer, and that the office of Treasurer has been combined with that of Conference Missionary Secretary. Therefore, in the future, please send your collections to W. D. Hawkins, Meridian, Miss., or deposit in the bank to the credit of John E. Edgerton, treasurer, and notify W. D. Hawkins, Meridian.

The Centenary Commission wishes to thank every one who has contributed to the success of the Centenary thus far, and requests that you heartily co-operate with the new Treasurer for full collection of the unpaid pledges.

G. L. HARRELL, Chairman,
Centenary Commission, Mississippi Conf.

To the Pastors and Centenary Treasurers: With reference to the announcement of the combination of the offices of Conference Missionary Secretary and Conference Centenary Treasurer, I wish to say that while it will require additional work, there are some advantages in having the offices together, which I hope will be to the interest of the Centenary, and I promise to do my best to fill both places. May I ask that you help me by co-operating in a most enthusiastic way in the collection of the pledges in your church—and promptly remit to me or deposit in the bank and notify me?

Much depends on you and the work of the Church Cabinet. I ask your prayers and co-operation in the work. Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

The frogs in our frog ponds are not very musical, but they are in Japan. There they are real marsh musicians, and are often sold for ten dollars a pair, like canary birds. One man, a Japanese poet, has a dozen or more of these pets, and sometimes he gives a party to his friends, who come often to listen to this very odd music.—Onward.

MRS. LIZZIE CORLEY, daughter of J. W. Cook and Mrs. Josie S. Cook, was born February 7, 1881, was married March 3, 1904, to Thomas Corley, and died June 6, 1920. She leaves three children, father, mother, one brother and sisters, numerous relatives and friends to mourn her loss. She was always an obedient child, joined the church (Methodist) in early life and lived a consistent life and left the best of evidence that she was ready, saying, "When I go to sleep I shall wake in Heaven." She suffered for more than a year, but was always patient, and did not complain. She had a severe case of influenza last winter that left effects from which she never recovered. We expect to meet her again. The writer performed her marriage and burial ceremony.

THOS. J. MARTIN, Sr.
Ringgold, La.

Mrs. (Dr.) R. L. ROBERTS (nee Ella Bubenzer), aged 35 years, was born November 17, 1884, in Avoyelles Parish, near Bunkie, La. She joined the Southern Methodist Church at Bunkie at the age of twelve years. She attended the public school of Bunkie for some time, but later went to Belhaven College, Jackson, Miss., and graduated there in the spring of 1903. On Dec. 20, 1905, Miss Bubenzer was happily married to Dr. R. L. Roberts, of Alexandria, and continued to live in various places in Rapides Parish until her death, which sad event occurred at the Shumpert Sanitarium, Shreveport, La., May 6, 1920, at 3:30 p. m. Mrs. Roberts was sick for six long months and away from husband and children. She put up a brave fight to live for their sakes. She was with her mother and sister, who did everything that money and love could do to keep her with them. But it was God's will to take her, and she was ready to go. In a letter to the writer, she said: "I have asked God, if it is his will, to spare me to my family, who need me here so, but I am perfectly resigned to go if God sees fit, for it is not mine to question the judgment of my Lord." We were told that at the last she said: "I see so many little children with Jesus," and then again a smile of such wonderful joy covered her dear face as she truly beheld Heaven in all of its glory. The faith she expressed, the life she lived, and the perfect submission to his will, bespeak for her the Christian character she possessed. As a daughter and sister she was devotion itself; as a wife and mother, quoting her devoted husband, "If she had a fault, it was that she was too good to us." As a friend, or such a friend as she could be! The five years that I knew her so intimately her life was such that her prayers must have been:

"Lord, help me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way
That when I kneel to pray
My prayer shall be for others.

"Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true
And know that all I'd do for you
Must needs be done for others.

"Let 'Self' be crucified and slain
And buried deep; and all in vain
May efforts be to rise again
Unless to live for others.

"And when my work on earth is done,
And my new work in Heaven's begun,
May I forget the crown I have won,
While thinking still of others.

"Others, Lord, yes others,
Let this my motto be,
Help me to live for others
That I may live like Thee."

She leaves, besides a host of friends, her mother, four brothers, three sisters, a husband and five little children to mourn their loss, but we have the assurance that we will meet her again, not now, but in the coming years in a better land where He will soothe our sorrows and dry our tears; some day, some time, we'll understand.

Her friend,
MRS. S. D. JORDAN.
Cheneyville, La.

"One by one we are going home." On May 26, 1919, I put my dear sister, Miss MABEL CLARA, on the train at Forest, Miss., for her to go to the Vicksburg Infirmary to be operated on for appendicitis. The operation was performed on the 27th of May, and she was doing nicely until chills and other ailments struck her. She had many pains to bear, but she bore them with a smile. When she was near death, mother would weep, and she would say, "Mother, don't weep; I am going to rest, sweet rest," and her face would show that she was happy and ready to go home. After a long suffering of almost one month, she went home, June 22, at 5 o'clock p.m. Her last word was "Mamma," her best friend on earth. She made many friends while in Vicksburg, and I thank them and Almighty God for the kindness shown her. She was born, December 11, 1903, and died, June 22, 1919, thus being 15 years, 6 months, and 11 days old. She was a member of the Methodist Church (Carr), and had been from the age of nine years. She was a true and faithful member. Her life was as the May flowers, too young and fair to wait for the great autumn of sin to sweep. After all was done that human hands could do, Jesus came and said, "Follow me home." O, what sweet consolation—one by one we are going home to live with Jesus! O, I miss her much, everywhere I roam, but O, how sweet, "One by one" we are going home. I bade her farewell in tears and sorrow, and now I'm left to weep and mourn. But, "One by one" we are going home. Friends, let us be prepared, so that when we die, "One by one" we will go home to live with Jesus forever and ever.

Prominent Man Testifies

GROVEOAK, ALA.—"In the early spring of 1900 I suffered from a severe attack of La Grippe—nasal catarrh of the most severe type, nervous indigestion, backache, constant headache, palpitation of the heart—an almost total breakdown being the result.

As a drowning man grabs at a straw I began trying this remedy and that. As a last resort, though greatly discouraged, I made up my mind to try Dr. Pierce's medicines and procured Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, which I used regularly with an occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets to keep the bowels regular. The effects were at first slow, but with continued use of these medicines the disagreeable symptoms disappeared and the relief was permanent. I most heartily recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to all suffering humanity."—REV. GEORGE R. WOMACK, Route 1.

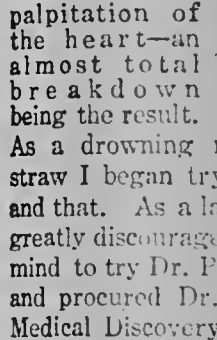
TOO WEAK TO DO ANYTHING

A Serious Feminine Illness Remedied By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Casco, Wis.—"After the birth of each of my children I had displacement and was so weak I couldn't do anything. I found about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it, and after taking it I was better. Since then I have taken it when I have felt run down and have found it a splendid tonic. I have also used it for female weakness and found it to be the best medicine I have ever taken. I have given some of your Compound and will soon all be using it. I always recommend your medicine and you may publish my letter for the benefit of other women."—MRS. JULES BERO, Jr., R. 1, Box 30, Casco, Wis.



Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills in this country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

MEMORIES AND REFLECTIONS.

Dear Mr. Editor: The Advocate for this week just received and partly read. We enjoy reading it. My father was one of the original subscribers and it has been in our home ever since I can remember. When a boy I loved to read it; now I am old, still I love to read it. My home and church membership are at Hazlehurst, Miss., but I spend most of my time here with my daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Peeler.

Transylvania is on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, and consists of a depot, store, boarding house, and two or three families. Others live from one to five miles. We have a nice church just completed, a union church, attended by all denominations in perfect harmony, and a new schoolhouse well equipped. As yet we have no regular preaching services, but are trying to provide for at least two Sundays a month. We have regular Sunday school, well attended, and weekly Wednesday night prayer meeting. I have seen people beg through mud and water to get to prayer meeting. We have an organ and a good organist, and some fine voices; the singing is just splendid. The people have religion. I don't mean to say that they are all saints, but we are hoping and praying that they will be. To any preacher passing through here Sunday or week-day night, we would give an audience and guarantee expenses.

Mr. Editor, we haven't got enough religion; preachers, laymen, church members haven't got enough religion. We need religion that will make God's house and God's service more attractive to us than theatre, picture shows, grand opera, singing, or any amusement the devil can offer. More church members attend picture shows than prayer meeting, and more gather a crowd to go to picture shows than to prayer meeting.

I have been in the service a long time, and have never grown weary, but have always found the yoke easy, and the burden light. I realize that I am fast approaching my journey's end, but the way grows brighter and brighter, and I will soon be there. There is not a shadow of a doubt. Je us said, "He that is faithful to the end shall be saved," and I leave it to him to judge as to my faithfulness.

I know personally some of the editors of the Advocate—Dr. Black and Bishop Galloway. Good friends, I loved them dearly. They are now in heaven and I will know and love them there. Brother Galloway was in Hazlehurst and preached for us before he was made bishop. I believe Brother Joe Michleson was our pastor. That good old man, Uncle Billie Graves, was sick. Brother Galloway, the pastor, and I went to see him, and had a prayer meeting with him. Uncle Billie got very happy, we all got happy, and had a happy time. Now that's what religion does for us, it makes us happy, and prepares us to enjoy heaven when we get there.

Oh, for a great revival of religion throughout the land!

R. W. MILLSAPS.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

By Rev. Isaac L. Peebles.

The word "commandment" occurs 218 times in two forms, singular and plural, in the Bible. "Commandment" comes of three Latin words: "com," with, "manus," hand, and "dare," to give, literally meaning to give with the hand because God wrote them and then delivered them to Moses. God troubled himself more with the Ten Commandments than any other portion of the Bible, and it was the only part of the Bible that he wrote himself; therefore, one can see how unreasonable it would be for Him to intend them only for the Jews, and not even for them after Christ came.

Let us see now what the Bible teaches us about them. The first thing to which we call attention is what Christ said to a young man who asked him: "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?" Christ answered: "But if thou will enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto him, which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honor thy father and thy mother; and Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Matt. 19:16, 17, 18, 19. Again, when Christ was asked by a lawyer: "Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Matt. 22:36, 37, 38, 39. Paul wrote: "Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet," Rom. 13:9, "commandment" is used for all that God requires and forbids. The Psalmist said, I know how to keep the commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in him." 1 John 2:4. And again John wrote: "By this we know that we know God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." 1 John 5:3. As a reason of keeping God's commandments, the Bible declares: "He that keepeth the commandments keepeth his own soul." Prov. 19:16. "Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing." Eccl. 8:5. Christ said: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." John 15:10. John wrote: "And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him." 1 John 3:24. "Blessed are they that do his commandments." Rev. 22:14. And John wrote also: "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in him." 1 John 2:4.

What plainer language from the Bible does one need than the above on the keeping of the commandments? One who declares that he does not, cannot and will not keep even the Ten Commandments, brands himself as an idolater, profaner, Sabbath breaker, dishonorer of parents, liar, thief, adulterer, false witness, and a coveter of his neighbor's wife and all else of his neighbors, for the Ten Commandments forbid all of the above, and therefore in order for one not to be guilty of the above, he has to keep the Ten Commandments. Read Ex. 20: 3-17.

A PRAYER FOR MANLINESS.

By Dwight E. Marvin.

O God, I thank Thee that Thou hast made me a recipient of Thy love and an inheritor of eternity. Help me to show my gratitude to Thee by a life of obedience.

As I wait for the crowning of manhood by the putting on of immortality, may I acquit myself as a follower of Thy Son Jesus Christ, hating that which is base or mean and seeking only that which is noble and of good report.

Give me a strong faith in Thy promises and an abiding love for Thee. May my life be linked to Thine in a holy fellowship and service.

Deepen my sympathy for others that I may in strength and manliness give support to the weak, guidance to the erring and help to the oppressed.

Ever keep in my mind the change less rule of Christ to do unto others as they should do to me.

This I ask in the name of Jesus my Lord and Master. Amen.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Wanted, one hundred praying people to intercede in behalf of the faculty and all connected with the heart life of the teachers of our children. Write and tell me that you will help to pray.

Send the names of the teachers or others that you would like to attend the Training School at Grenada, so they may receive definite information. Believe me, this is important. The pastor is not the only man that is permitted to do this kind act.

Rev. E. G. Mohler, of Sardis, Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Greenville, Rev. J. E. Stephens, Miss Willie Bratton, and Mr. J. G. Houston, of New Albany, Rev. Melville Johnson and wife, of Batesville, Mrs. Mabel Donald, of Goodman, Misses Ione Mansker and Lillie Mullins, of Holly Springs, are at Lake Junaluska Training School fitting themselves for a larger service in teaching the rising generation.

Rev. J. E. Stephens writes, "You can count on four from New Albany to attend the Training School at Grenada." You can always put this church with the first when it comes to doing good. As high-class work will be done at Grenada as can be done at Lake Junaluska or anywhere else. Our teachers deserve the best the church can provide for them.

Mr. E. E. French, Superintendent of the McKendree Sunday School in Nashville, will have charge of the course in Organization and Administration at Grenada. Mr. French will bring what he has learned by long experience. This course is designed for superintendents and preachers. We ought to have twenty-five men taking this course.

I have found a fine young woman who would like to attend the Training School, but has not the money. The school in which she is teaching has not the mind to send her. The need at this place is more than great. Some man may not be able to attend, but would like to have a substitute in this Training Camp. If this is true, write me a line and get in touch with your would-be-representative. That is one good thing about money, you can invest it in character-building.

LEMON JUICE FOR FRECKLES

REPORT FROM LELAND.

We came to Leland on December 4, 1919, as in several other appointments, almost a stranger, leaving the good wife in the Sanitarium at Amory, Miss. Here at Leland we found a small company of big-hearted Methodists to begin a new pastorate with. They had promised the elder, Rev. V. C. Curtis, a minimum salary of $1800 for the new pastor, but when the first quarterly conference came, about a month later, they made the salary $2400 for pastor. We appointed a Committee on Evangelism and asked this committee to select a man to hold our meeting; so, after some weeks they asked the pastor to hold the meeting. In the meantime, the Presbyterians and the Baptists were holding their meetings and ours was the third meeting in town. All the meetings were valuable. We have unusual singing talent in Leland. In my church we have a soloist in Brother James Whitehurst that never grows old to the people of Leland. We put the song service in his hands and I feel we had as good singing as I have heard anywhere. We had good attendance, with special interest upon the part of the men. Much good was done. There were 10 accessions, with the church greatly stimulated.

I left almost immediately after the close to be away two Sundays, preaching a commencement sermon at Merigold and on to hold a meeting at Lake Cormorant, with Brother Julian S. Duncan. So I appointed three men to make ten-minute talks, with song service for Sunday a. m., and one brother to hold prayer service in mid-week. All was well done, and while away the brethren sent me a deposit slip as an appreciation for the preaching of the meeting for $253.50, besides $25 to the lady who performed at the organ.

Now we have the remodeling of the parsonage in process, and if their prosperity keeps up this fall, we will seriously consider preparations for the building of a modern church. We have been greatly encouraged; still, there is much to be done—much worldliness and sin. But there is a good feeling between the churches. The town in recent years has grown away from the humble church houses; we are up against a necessity for a modern house of worship and Sunday school work. We have in J. T. Mathis one great superintendent, but he must have facilities.

CHILD WELFARE IN THE TRI-STATES.

That the work of Child Welfare in the three States, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana, might be more nearly perfected, on June 22, in the library of the Methodist Orphanage of Mississippi, at Jackson, a delegation from the child-caring institutions of the three States met and organized what will be known as the "Tri-States Association of Child Welfare Workers."

While the meeting was small, there being only twelve representatives present, a helpful and enthusiastic all-day session was held. Organization was perfected and an interesting program given. Splendid discussions were entered into, discussions which demonstrated the fact that the Tri-States are on the aggressive in the matter of child rescue and uplift. Encouraging reports were received concerning the progress being made in the States represented; some are remodeling their plants to meet modern mehods, others are erecting entire new buildings, while the Louisiana Baptist Orphanage, now located at Lake Charles, reported the removal and rebuilding of its plant at Monroe, La.

The field, too, is being more completely covered, with a determination that Child Welfare work in the Tri-States, as represented by its child-caring institutions, shall measure up to the possibilities contained for them.

The next place of meeting is to be New Orleans, the time being June, 1921. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintendent of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage; Vice President, Rev. F. C. Flowers, Superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Orphanage; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Alma G. Riley, Field Secretary of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage.

(Mrs.) ALMA G. RILEY,
Sec'y Tri-States Association, Child Welfare Workers.

THE COMING CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION.

By W. H. Patton.

The coming congressional election results are of vital importance to the nation. The Supreme Court decision which declared the 18th Amendment valid and the Volstead Act constitutional is one of the greatest victories achieved in the United States. The one ray of hope left for the liquor interests was found in the decision of the court conferring upon Congress the power to define "intoxicating liquors." Within a few hours after the decision had been made public, the liquor interests had announced their determination to elect a Congress that would change the definition of "intoxicants," permitting the manufacture and sale of so-called light wines and beer. Gov. Edwards, the brewers' presidential asphant, says, "Every candidate for Congress, every State and legislative official and the candidates for the presidency itself, will be called upon this coming November to declare their position unmistakably on the sane and reasonable interpretation of the constitutional amendment in favor of the permissible use of light wines and beer, each State to determine its regulations under the liberal limitations of a general Federal statute."

The Wets have a dozen new organizations backed by all the money they can spend with which "to restore the rights of the people through Congress, which will only take a majority vote." These organizations are composed of Democrats, Republicans, Liberals, bootleggers, etc., to elect to the next Congress men they can use and thus regain the political power. To prevent this catastrophe, get into these congressional election fights, accept the whiskey challenge, and demand to know how every candidate stands on this all-important question.

TO THE EPWORTH LEAGUES OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

No doubt you are acquainted with the fact that I have been elected President of the Epworth League Conference, a position which Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, has held for several years. This is an honor which carries with it responsibility of no little meaning. I greet you as my co-workers.

The Epworth League has a well established place in our church general, but it is not so well established in our Conference. Our aim is to accomplish the latter task. Surely no one will doubt the crying need for it as an organization which will do valuable service in a local church. There is no organization that will take its place. You are distinct, select, and serve your own designated purpose. So we need never think for a moment that we are not vital and important.

It is our plan during the year to perfect the district organization, secretaries having been appointed for each district. You can note the list in last week's Advocate. During the month of September, with the aid of the Central Office and the co-operation of presiding elders, it is our purpose to hold District Institutes in every district. Let the district secretary get busy and find a place that wants this Institute.

In the policy for the year, our goal is set for eight Standard Leagues, one in every district. To our shame we only had one this last year. Mr. Pastor, don't you want a Standard League?

Our next League Conference will be held at Grenada College in June, 1921, immediately following the Christian Workers' Conference, or at least the ministers' part of that Conference. We have great hopes for this plan; it will group the young people, as they will all be in the buildings on the campus. We can also have more institute work. Keep your mind on that Conference and plan to send delegates.

Every one for a great League year.

W. R. LOTT,
President of League Conference

Sleeping Sickness Fly of Africa

How Method of Fighting This Pest Inspired Manufacture of Sweet Dreams Mosquito Remedy.

A traveler in relating his various experiences in Africa, casually mentioned [illegible] the darkies predicted themselves [illegible] the bite of the Tsetse fly. As is generally known, the bite of this [illegible] is "sleeping sickness," a malady from which no unfortunate ever recovers.

It occurred to him that a remedy capable of keeping off these flies would also keep [illegible] off. So in America this remedy was produced as nearly as possible. Having been found exceptionally satisfactory as a mosquito remedy, this has since been offered in commerce under the trade name of Sweet Dreams. The efficiency of the preparation has caused its immediate acceptance everywhere. And the traveler doesn't yet know that his entertaining story resulted in the birth of an industry.

When mosquitoes are troublesome, try Sweet Dreams. Sold everywhere, 35c.—Adv.

REPORT OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL TREASURER.

The following Sunday schools have held their Sunday School Day exercises, and have sent in their offering, which was received in the order in which they are printed. This is a few in excess up to this time last year, and the offering in many cases is somewhat better, which is necessary, as the budget of expenses is somewhat larger than last year. If all the schools will hold their exercises and report promptly, it will avoid the necessity of borrowing to meet current expenses.

Pastors will please take notice and report to the secretaries that my address is now Meridian.

HOW TO MAKE A MILLION HONESTLY.

Often it is said that no one ever made a million dollars honestly—especially by those who have never trod the narrow highway of thrift. With such direct issue is taken by William H. Ridgway, writing in "Association Men" for January on "Money Makes the Mare Go." He points out that "a man has only to discover the secret of the firefly light without heat, and the General Electric Company and Westinghouse Company will hand him as many millions as he cares to ask and a grateful country will put his statue in the Hall of Fame. Every dollar an honest dollar, too.

"A man has only to discover how to 'crack' petroleum so as to get double the present amount of gasoline from a barrel of it and the Standard Oil Company and all the other great Oil companies will be camping on his doorstep with check books all ready to write seven figures. Every dollar an honest dollar, too.

"Harold Bell Wright stopped preaching from a pulpit to preach from the printed page and a grateful people made him rich by the millions and made him a millionaire. Every dollar an honest dollar, too.

"God intends his children to prosper. He intends that prosperity to be a blessing to his fellowmen and consequently a blessing to the man himself.

"The old Hebrew way was a one in ten way. The modern Christian way is that by schedule. 'As the Lord has prospered you.' Even Uncle Sam seems to think 15 per cent is about right and has put it into the income tax law."

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The Blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the Blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-two years ago, folks were learning to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Junior Missionary Society, Holly Springs, Miss.

Financial Report.

My report will bring you a story in figures, of the work of the Junior Missionary Society of Holly Springs. We use the Duplex envelopes, which are numbered and dated, and in these we bring our weekly offering. In one side marked "For Ourselves," we place something that goes toward the support of the Junior Department of our own Sunday school.

In the red side marked "For Others," we place our missionary offering, and it is of this that I wish to tell you. Our report, beginning with July, 1919, and ending with the present time, is as follows, by quarters:

July 1 to October 1, 1919	$ 90.81
October 1 to January 1, 1920	64.70
January 1 to April 1, 1920	53.96
April 1 to June 1, 1920	41.50
Total	$251.37
Christmas box to needy of town	51.30
Grand Total	$302.67

I am sorry that we have not had our mite box opening yet, for I am sure that the contents of these boxes and of the envelopes for the three Sundays yet remaining in this quarter would make my report much better. The ladies of the Adult Auxiliary are going to entertain the Junior Society this month, and the opening of the boxes will be a feature of the afternoon.

With our missionary offerings we support a little Chinese boy in Soochow under Miss Tarrant, a Sunday school in Japan, and we also have a $60 undirected pledge which we more than doubled last year.

Some of our boys and girls are already talking of becoming missionaries, and we are praying that our Junior Missionary Society may give life service as well as money gifts to this great cause.

HORACE BROWN, Jr.,
Treasurer.

Christmas Giving.

I wish to tell you of our Christmas Box for China which we sent last year. You know a Christmas Box must be sent off in July so that it will be sure to reach its destination on time. We met at the church on week-day, and made scrap books, mounted pictures, tied together pretty postcards with bright ribbons, made scrap bags and filled them with bits of solk and cotton material; we bought or gave simple toys, primers and story books with very easy words, for we knew that Chinese children were just learning English, and we filled up the corners with pink ribbon about an inch wide; this they cut up and give as special honor badges for high class work in school. Such fun we had making the things and packing them into the box!

Of course we mean to send another box this summer. We would not disappoint our little boy and his friends for anything.

Our giving at home last Christmas was done in this way: Each class met and voted what they wanted to do to help some one be happy. At the Christmas party, which we always have in our Sunday school room, we brought our gifts and placed them in a large white basket and called them, "White Gifts for the King." There was money (lots of it), clothing, toys and good things to eat. We carried them ourselves, and our treasurer has told you that we gave in all fifty-one dollars and thirty cents. I think we had a happier time ourselves, because we proved the truth of Jesus' words when he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Mission Study.

I wish to tell you some of the ways that we learn about Missions. We have many missionary stories told by our Superintendent or a teacher, and now and then a Junior boy or girl tells one.

Then we get up plays in which different ones represent children of foreign lands. We dress in costume and give the plays in the main auditorium of the church. Last year we also gave a play that showed the real reason for giving to missions. We make and use missionary posters.

And this record for a trip to China and Japan with a stop-over in the Hawaiian Islands gives us a chance to learn a great deal about the countries, their needs and what we can do. When the race is over, we tell all about it in our Sunday school department.

There is a missionary side to nearly all of our regular lessons, and in the summer time we have a series of studies about famous missionaries in our regular course.

So you see we have the missionary thought running like a golden thread through all our instruction and religious activity.

Our last report showed in our Baby Division 15 members, with one new one added during the quarter. In October two were promoted.

We have 64 Junior members now on roll, and eleven were promoted out of the society. We have five subscribers to the Young Christian Worker.

PRESIDENT.

MISSIONARY SCHOOL OF METHODS AT MONTEAGLE, TENN.

Dear Mr. Carley: Knowing the interest of your readers in a Missionary School of Methods, especially when located in the South and with Mrs. Hume Steele as chairman of the Program Committee and presiding officer, I write to ask you to print in the Advocate the program of Missionary Week at Monteagle, calling attention to the benefit to be derived from it, to missionary workers and leaders.

Mrs. Hume Steele is one of our most prominent workers in Methodist and interdenominational circles, having her office in Nashville.

Those wishing to attend the Missionary School of Methods, may write to Mrs. W. D. Taylor, Monteagle, Tenn., for information regarding accommodations. We hereby offer for a month, free, a room in the Missionary Home at Monteagle, to all missionaries under Foreign or Home Boards of any evangelical denomination, urging them especially to come during Missionary Week, July 11-15. However, we do not serve meals in the home. The offer of the room holds good until August 31.

J. L. Cuninggim, of the Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, is our Platform Manager. Rev. R. H. Harper, of First Church, New Orleans, will be here a week lecturing. Sincerely, MRS. D. BEACH CARRE.

FROM ESCATAWPA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed a splendid meeting at Escatawpa church on Sunday night, June 20. The meeting began on Sunday, the 13th, with two services daily after Monday. The Rev. S. W. White, of near Lumberton, Miss., did the preaching, which was fine and of a high order. Brother White is a young man just entering the ministry, but his earnest devotion to the service completely won a place in every one's heart.

Some of the results: 10 or 12 were reclaimed and scores were blessed; 26 members received into our church and one for the Baptist Church; 9 children baptized; a collection of $63 was divided between the evangelist and the pastor, and all are happy. Pray for us, that the revival may be lasting, and we will give God the praise. R. G. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Sulvar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I was about despaired of living when I began using Sulvar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Sulvar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from it now."

Mr. McClam [illegible] writes: "My wife has [illegible] Rheumatism and [illegible] gallons of [illegible] entirely relieved [illegible]."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had [illegible] hands, caused [illegible] Spring Water [illegible] the enlargement [illegible] excellent."

BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

The called meeting of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was in session in Louisville, Ky., one day, June 23. The chief business of the Board was to consider the report of the Special Committee, consisting of Bishop W. F. McMurry, S. H. C. Burgin, James Thomas, J. A. Baylor, O. F. Williams, Bishop John M. Moore, and T. L. Jefferson, to which had been committed the calendar of applications, together with the recommendations on same, which was before the Annual Meeting of the Board, April 29-30.

The Special Committee submitted a carefully prepared report, containing a statement of the several funds of the Board, cash balance, and deficits, which statement showed a deficit of $74,168.54 in the General Fund, and of $76,503.60 in the General Loan Fund, and a balance on hand in the Centenary Donation Fund of $84,102.97, and in the Centenary Loan Fund of $78,002.96.

The Board found itself very much embarrassed with the large number of meritorious applications before it, and with no regular funds to donate and a reduced amount available for loans. This does not mean that the income of the Board has been decreased, but that the funds which under the regular order of things would have been available for appropriation this spring, had been anticipated.

The Board voted to combine the General Loan Fund and the Centenary Loan Fund, and to enter upon its books in the list of loan funds the amount of loan funds coming from the Centenary as the "Centenary Loan Fund," which fund is to be a perpetual memorial of the Centenary celebration of American Methodist Missions. The total Loan Fund Capital of the Board, after substracting $25,000, entered as a loan fund, but which in reality is a trust fund, is $1,501,697.09.

No donations out of the regular funds of the Board were made, for the reason that the financial statement submitted by the Special Committee showed that the obligations of the Board were such as to consume all of the estimated income of the Board for the fiscal year closing March 31, 1921, and leave unpaid $77,552.44.

The Board granted loans amounting to $239,749.36, which makes the present loan fund obligation $500,000. To take care of these obligations, it will be necessary for the borrowers from the Board to be prompt in their payments.

At the Annual Meeting of the Board, the $1,000,000 to be received from the Centenary on donation account was divided as follows: $600,000 for the home field, and $400,000 for the foreign field. The $400,000 to the foreign fields is to be distributed by the bishops in charge and the Secretary of the Board of Church Extension. Of the $600,000 to be distributed in the home field, $411,000, the balance unappropriated, was distributed by the Board. It should be borne in mind that this amount covers the entire Centenary period, and the Board adopted the following for the guidance of its office in placing these appropriations:

"In placing this amount, it should be clearly understood that payment can only be made as funds are received. Authority should be given the Executive Committee to determine the order of payment. It should also be understood that the Board does not obligate itself beyond the amount received, and in the matter of Liberty Bonds which are received at par, the fund itself must stand any loss on the sale of same."

The Board passed strong resolutions requesting Bishop W. F. McMurry to consider the advisability of removing his residence to Louisville, Kentucky, "where he will be more accessible to the members of the Board, and especially the Secretary, and other members of the Executive Committee," and appointed a committee of six, which was authorized and instructed to act for the Board in arranging with the Bishop for such a change of residence, should he give favorable answer to its request. The name of the new Secretary of the Board appears first on these resolutions.

The Bishop thanked the Board for the expression of confidence involved in the paper adopted, and advised that he would take the request under serious consideration.

The Board learned with sorrow of the accidental death of the young son of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Randle, of Monroe, La., and instructed its Secretary to convey to this faithful member of the Board, and Mrs. Randle, its sincerest sympathy.

The President submitted to the Board a summary of its rules and advised that, "the time has come to restate and condense these numerous regulations." The Board instructed the Executive Committee to bring to its next annual session such revision of the rules as its judgment approves.

The Board endorsed the action of the Board of Missions, in which it said, "that we most respectfully request our bishops to discourage in every possible way the taking of collections in the Annual Conferences by Negro preachers, and on the ground that our church through its several departments is now making substantial contributions to the Negro work, and it further recommends that if such collections must be taken, the money be turned over to the Board of our church that would naturally handle the fund and the money distributed by that Board, and not by the collector."

S. H. C. BURGIN,
Secretary.

"THE MAGNET."

By W. Lomax Childress.

The fading light of fame has lured,
And dimly men have understood,
The riches that will perish not,
Is doing good.

Not might nor power, nor futile force
Has for the work essayed sufficed;
The springs that quench the desert thirst,
Are found in Christ.

Let us believe the promise true,
That through the ages long has stood,
True greatness only can be found
In doing good.

Then shall the seeming things be less,
The substance from the life above,
And out of darkness dawn the day,
Of universal love.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

BORN BLIND.

The beauties of life mean nothing to some people because they have no eyes to see. Their physical organs of sight are perfect and they walk along the streets without stumbling; they gaze upon the faces of friends and the objects which lie along their pathway, and vainly imagine that they are as other men. But, "having eyes, they see not." They are blind and know it not. They cannot see the evidence of God's presence all about them; they cannot see the signs of his goodness and the tokens of his love that surround them; they cannot see the spiritual virtues that beautify so many lives; they cannot see the radiant light that streams unceasingly from the hills of God. Yet there is One who can heal them of their blindness by the touch of his hand. How piteous is one who walks in darkness when light is possible!

RECORDING EARTHQUAKES.

The seismograph is a delicately constructed instrument designed to register the shocks and undulatory motions of earthquakes. So efficient is it that disturbances thousands of miles away are accurately indicated and charted. The achievements of science in dealing with the forces of nature are mervelous to contemplate. We should never forget, however, that the soul is attuned to spiritual influences that have their origin in Heaven. It is a wonderful provision of grace that permits the individual Christian to keep constantly in touch with the spiritual forces of the universe.

SIX DAYS.

The command to work six days of the week is as specific and binding as the one not to work on the seventh—"six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work." We do well to lay all possible emphasis upon the sanctity of the Sabbath; we do well, also, to remember that work is a duty as well as a privilege. If one day is set apart by divine ordinance for rest and worship, six days are set apart for the accomplishment of all the tasks that fall to our lot. Sunday is not a "clean-up" day for fragments of work that we could not finish on Saturday. The man who comes to the end of the week without having done ALL his work has failed of his duty as clearly as the man who refuses to keep the Sabbath day holy. If all of us would WORK as hard as we ought to for six days, very likely we should be glad to REST and WORSHIP for one. Laziness and loafing are poor preparation for prayer and praise.

TRANSLATING FEELING INTO ACTION.

One trouble with a great many of us is that we fail to express our feeling in terms of action. Good impulses abound—but too often they die because we do not put them to work. Activity is the law of life in the spiritual realm as well as in the physical, and those who "say and do not," are doomed to death.

CURTAILING PRODUCTION.

Press dispatches announce that the principal mills of the American Woolen Company have shut down completely for an indefinite period, the reason assigned being a slack demand for their output. Without knowing that such is the case, we presume that the "slack demand" means unwillingness on the part of consumers to pay the high prices heretofore prevailing. We have heard a good deal of late about "speeding up production;" it seems a little strange to us, therefore, that one of our great industrial enterprises should cease production altogether at a time like this.

"THE FORGOTTEN MAN."

The term, "the forgotten man," has come to mean largely in our speaking and thinking the minister who is no longer able to continue in the active itinerancy on account of the weight of years, and who is, therefore, compelled to eke out his existence without regular income other than the pittance the church has thus far seen fit to give him. He is forgotten in the sense that no adequate provision has been made for his support after years of faithful service. Shame upon us! But are there not others of our devoted preachers who are too much forgotten? In obscure places, on meager salaries, encompassed by many difficulties, hindered by many limitations, good men and true are spending their lives in the noble and self-sacrificing work of preaching the gospel. They endure the heat and burden of the day, but their chief reward is in the sense of duty done and in the conscious approval of the Lord. Yet without them the work of the church would be sadly handicapped and few waste places would be reclaimed. Not every hero's name finds a place in the Hall of Fame.

PUT IT TO THE TEST.

It is as impossible to maintain a bright religious experience without prayer as it is to develop a strong physical body without food. We may not understand the philosophy of prayer, but we can know how it works. The testimony of those who have practiced it is worth a great deal, for the surest test is to try it [illegible] the efficacy of prayer. Then [illegible] in all humility and faith, and [illegible] a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God.

THE DARE OF A DIFFICULTY.

Just as there is no [illegible] so there is no great achievement [illegible] overcoming of difficulties. Easy tasks [illegible] well with simple tasks in smooth [illegible] lose heart when [illegible] put in their blood to face [illegible] and overcome them valiantly. A [illegible], a brave man will go forward.

MAKING ISSUES.

The two great political parties [illegible] their conventions, adopted their platforms, and nominated their candidates. We must confess that both parties showed great skill in carrying out the task before them. The presidential candidates selected are both from the same [illegible] State, both of them hold high political [illegible], both of them have fine party records, and both of them are newspaper men. The platforms adopted represent, we presume, the prevailing sentiment among the leaders of the two parties as to the issues that ought to be discussed during the campaign. Whatever the platforms may set forth, we may be sure that interest will be concentrated upon the great questions at issue before the campaign is over. The evident attempt in both cases to follow a method of expediency with regard to some questions that would furnish a "talking-point" for the winning of independent votes, will accomplish little so far as deceiving the people concerned. The candidates themselves will probably give such interpretation of the platforms and of their own attitude as will [illegible] necessary to know exactly what to expect after the election is over. Of one thing we may be sure. The prohibition question cannot be evaded. Senator Harding, the Republican nominee, and Governor Cox, the Democratic nominee, will do well to declare their views unequivocally in the very beginning of the campaign. We do not know that the election will be determined by their attitude toward this question, but we do know it is one of the real issues at stake. The voice of the people has spoken in the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, and that voice has not become silent or weak.

THAT OTHER LAND.

"It seemeth such a little way to me
Across to that strange country, Beyond;
And yet not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond.

"So close it lies that when my sight is clear
I think I almost see the gleaming strand;
I know I feel those who have gone from here,
Come near enough sometimes to touch my hand.

"I cannot make it seem a day to dread,
When from this dear earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead
And join the lost ones, so long dreamed about.

"And so for me there is no sting of death,
And so the grave has lost its victory:
It is but crossing, with abated breath
And white set face, a little strip of sea."

IV.

Infant Baptism.

Many of the Protestant denominations which hold the view of baptism set forth in the preceding article, believe in and practice the baptism of infants. They do so, however, upon grounds altogether different from those upon which it is practiced by those who hold the doctrine of baptismal regeneration.

Methodists, for instance, regard infant baptism as a formal dedication of the child to God, a formal recognition of the fact that he is God's child, that he is an heir of redemption through Christ Jesus, that the Kingdom of Heaven belongs to him and that he is a subject of divine grace through the inner working of the Holy Spirit.

Infant baptism is not enjoined in explicit terms in the New Testament, but there are both Biblical and rational grounds for its practice that are thoroughly convincing and satisfactory.

There is precedent for it in the practice of circumcision under the Old Testament dispensation. Those who understand the religious beliefs of the Jews of Christ's time know that unless there had been explicit instruction to the contrary they would, upon accepting Christianity, have inevitably assumed that their children were included in the covenant of grace, that they were heirs of the Kingdom of God and therefore entitled to the rite which was the visible sign of membership in the Kingdom. And they would have been made all the more confident in this assumption by the teaching of Jesus, who, putting his hands upon certain little children who were brought to him by their parents, blessed them and said, "To such belongeth the kingdom of heaven." For the words, as Adam Clark well says, can mean nothing else than the Kingdom belongs to children and child-like men and women.

That the early disciples accepted this view and that infant baptism was practiced by the Apostolic Church, there is abundant reason for believing. For instance, in the sixteenth chapter of the Acts mention is made of the baptism of two entire households, namely, that of Lydia and that of the Philippian jailer. Of course, it is easy to reply that these households were without children; but such an assumption is entirely gratuitous and therefore entirely worthless. On the other hand, the very manner in which the two incidents are related shows that back of the narrative in the mind of the writer was the familiar assumption of the organic unity of the family and its common participation in the national religious inheritance.

I have already explained that the sacraments are valuable, not as charms or as arbitrarily appointed for the magical communication of divine grace, but because of their influence upon individuals and upon the church as a whole. Interpreting them thus, it is easy to see how baptism may prove more effective when administered to children than when administered to adults.

It is now coming to be generally understood that the only possible way of bringing about the realization of that triumph of the gospel for which our Lord teaches us to look and work when he bids us pray, "thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven," is by a vital and thorough process of religious training.

We are forced to this conclusion by facts which we can no longer evade and which are irresistibly convincing, and the conclusion is supported by the teaching of the Bible. Dr. H. C. Trumbull, who made a thorough study of religious education among the ancient Jews, tells us that Jesus' command to go and disciple all nations could have meant nothing else to intelligent Jews of the first century A. D., than that they were to Christianize the nations by the religious instruction and training of children and that there can be no doubt that those to whom this commission was first given actually did so understand it.

Let us now consider for a moment the bearing of infant baptism upon this supreme task of the church, the task of making real disciples and of building up the Kingdom of heaven by a thorough and vital process of religious education.

Influence Upon Parents and Church.

Think first of its influence upon the church and upon the parents of children receiving the rite. For both church and parents are parties to the act of dedication and in it both recognize the fact that the child belongs to God, recognize his sublime possibilities and acknowledge that these possibilities can be realized only through divine grace, recognize their own solemn obligation growing out of the fact that they themselves are the providentially appointed agents through which this grace is to be made effective for the cleansing, quickening and development of the child's life. Through it also they express their faith on the child's behalf and pledge themselves to throw their arms of love and protection about him, to seek to create an atmosphere fit for him to live and grow in, and to do all in their power so to minister to his life as to enable him to enter into the full possession and enjoyment of his inheritance as a son of God. It thus lays the foundation for a truly effective program of religious education, and solemnly and formally commits both church and parents to the duty of co-operating in efforts to carry out such a program.

Nor should the matter of intercession be overlooked. We believe in the efficacy of prayer and that its power is increased in proportion to the number of devout and faithful men and women who unite in it. And the act of baptism is always accompanied by prayer, prayer by the officiating minister, but in which both church and parents join. Furthermore, this dedicatory prayer in which we ask that God will look upon the child and sanctify him with the Holy Ghost, that the old Adam may be so buried that the new man may be raised up in him, that all carnal affections may die in him and all things belonging to the spirit may live and grow in him, and that he may have power and strength to have victory and to triumph against the devil, the world and the flesh, is supposed to be the beginning of continuous joint intercession on the child's behalf.

Influence Upon the Child.

And this formal and impressive dedication, if followed by proper instruction, is bound to have also a salutary influence upon the child. It is now generally understood that one of the most influential factors in the development of a soul is suggestion. This is the secret of the power of most of the vicious cults that warp the minds and characters of the young from the truth. But it is a power which may be used for good as well as for evil ends. Think, for instance, what must be the effect upon the child's life of constantly holding before him the thought that God is his heavenly Father, that by the act of baptism he was solemnly dedicated to God in his tender infancy and that he is expected to live as a child of God and not as a child of the devil. A story is told of a wise man who was selected as teacher of the son of a king. Finding it necessary sometimes to correct the lad's wrong tendencies and to move him to diligence and proper behavior, the teacher pinned upon him a purple badge and whenever he showed a disposition to go wrong or to neglect his duties, he pointed to this badge and said to him, "Remember, my boy, that you are the son of a king." Baptism puts upon the child the badge of royalty and, under wise and faithful training, serves as a perpetual challenge to all that is best and noblest within him.

It appears, therefore, that whether looked at from the side of church, parents or child, infant baptism, if rightly understood, may become an immensely influential factor in turning the child's mind to God and bringing him up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

A Danger to be Avoided.

Of course, there is always danger that it may not be properly understood, that the sacred rite may be degraded into a charm, regarded as a substitute for faithful training and vital religious experience. But there is the same danger in the case of adult baptism and of the Lord's Supper, as is manifest in the whole history of the church. For a very high proportion of the Christian world even yet believes in the magical efficacy of the sacraments. But the fact that a means of grace may be abused is no reason for its abandonment by those who know how to use it as God means it to be used.

I am sometimes afraid that there is a growing tendency among our Methodists to neglect to have their children dedicated to God in baptism. There are probably several reasons for such neglect. A part of it is doubtless attributable to the same cause which has led to a general abandonment of family worship. I am sure, however, that it is largely due to a prevalent confusion in the minds of our people in regard to the meaning of infant baptism. Intelligent Methodists, as a general rule, have definitely abandoned whatever belief they may have held in the magical efficacy of the rite, but have not come to see the deep spiritual import of it or its possible bearing on the religious training and development of the young. There is, therefore, urgent need that these shall be made clear to them.

Materialism and Christianity are just now engaged in such a life and death conflict as has no parallel in the history of the church.

I believe that the spirit of Christianity is more widespread and that the organized forces of Christianity are more determined and aggressive to-day than at any other period in human history.

But while this is true, it is also true that the forces which make for practical materialism are more powerful and menacing than ever before. There has never been another time when the world drew the rank and file of our young people as it is drawing them to-day, when the appeals of wealth and self-indulgence were so strong or reached so many. The only way to save our ambitious and intelligent boys and girls from falling under the power of this blighting influence is by taking advantage of the plasticity of childhood to implant in them the Christian spirit, win them to loyal allegiance to Christ as personal Savior and ideal, and unite them by living bonds to the church.

It is certainly no time, therefore, to neglect any means or agency which may help to keep this great duty definitely before us or aid us in any way whatsoever in discharging it. As teachers of Methodism we not only need to insist upon the dedication of our children to God in baptism, but also so to explain the doctrine of our church in regard to the nature of the child and his relation to the Kingdom as to make clear the meaning and value of such dedication. We need to get rid of the remnants of our Calvinistic as well as of our Romish inheritance and fully and heartily to accept the implications of our Arminian creed. In no other way can we lay the foundation for an appeal to our people in behalf of religious education that will be so convincing as to awaken a really enthusiastic response.

SOME EFFECTS OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

A careful balanced report by a practical sociologist on the effects of national prohibition, showing numerouus favorable results and some yet in question, has been submitted by Dr. W. E. McLennan, Director of Welcome Hall, a large social center at Buffalo.

Dr. McLennan undertook this study some months ago at the instance of the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. He was told to get the facts, no matter where they might lead. In order that the survey of the situation might be thoroughly representative, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Harrisburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Detroit were visited and consultation was had with social workers police officials, business men and others in daily contact with all classes of people.

Unsettled Questions.

"Some questions," says Dr. McLennan, "I have not been able to clear up, even to my own satisfaction. One of these has to do with the influence of prohibition on what we call the general prosperity. We know, for instance, that the banks in workingmen's districts have lately received extraordinarily large deposits. Bankers themselves are inclined to believe this condition is principally due to prohibition. They may be right, but it is clear that no amount of prohibition can of itself provide workingmen with funds for deposit, if there is not steady employment at good wages. On the other hand, the possession of money easily earned is not in itself a guarantee against the lure of drink. It may be said, indeed, that as a rule the larger the wage of the drinking man the more he will spend for his favorite beverage.

"Another question that cannot be settled at present is the relation between prohibition and accidents. It is perfectly clear that accidents due to drink have been reduced since prohibition went into effect. But as to industrial accidents we must wait until we know not only the number of accidents but also the number of employees in the different industries, the hazards in the different employments and the physical and mental condition of employees when injuries occur.

"No reliable data could be secured bearing directly upon the effect of prohibition on community life, especially among the poor, though, as the superintendent of the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity said: 'We know what way the wind is blowing.' The men who used to spend their money in the saloon are now inclined to give it, or at least a portion of it, to their families. It is true that there is still drinking and in some instances there appears to be a tendency to increased gambling.

Emigration.

"But if there are some mooted questions that cannot now be definitely answered, there are others that have been cleared up. One of these is the persistent charge that the recent emigration from America has been due to prohibition. In an interview with the official at Washington who has most to do with the issuance of passports to aliens, I was told there had not been discovered a single instance of prohibition being named as a reason for wanting to leave America. The reasons given are to visit relatives, to look after property, to bring back relatives to America, to spend last days in the place of birth and so on. These 'reasons' were confirmed to me by two educated Italians who had spent much time visiting their countrymen and others, either while they were contemplating leaving the country or while on the high seas. It may be added that there is a report that steamship agents are using the prohibition argument to induce aliens to leave. The best answer, however, to the charge that prohibition is the cause of recent emigration is in the Report of the Commissioner of Immigration for 1919, which shows that the total emigration for the last year was only 123,522, which is 41.73 per cent less than the average emigration since 1908, in which year the total number leaving our shores was 295,075.

Drug Habit.

"There appears to be a general impression that prohibition has caused an increase in the drug habit. Dr. George H. Simmons, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, does not think so. Moreover he has just published an editorial in his journal showing that the restriction of the use of alcohol in Germany during the war was followed by a diminution of the use of harmful drugs. In an interview with Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, former president of the American Medical Association, he dictated and afterward signed the following statement:

'It is possible that in this transition period a few people cut off from the use of alcohol have resorted to drugs as a substitute, but if this is true, it is simply a temporary matter and due to this transition from the free use of alcohol to prohibition, and the number of these cases is very small compared with the number that were made drug addicts by the free use of alcohol in the past.'"

Labor.

Dr. McLennan reports Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, as stating that the widespread opposition of union labor men to prohibition, due largely to their sympathy for brewery and distillery workers who supposedly would be thrown out of employment, has largely disappeared since it has been found that these men have rapidly been absorbed into other lines of work that in most cases are more remunerative than the old.

Police Records.

The most tangible evidences of the effects of prohibition are found in the police and court records of our cities. These show a decrease in the number of ostensible criminals confined or on trial running from 30 to 90 per cent, Columbus and Harrisburg showing improved conditions approximating the latter figure.

Hospitals.

"Returns from seven hospitals under the Department of Public Welfare of New York City substantially agree with the statement of Dr. G. Kremer of Sea View Hospital, 'West New Brighton, 'that the intoxicated lodginghouse and hospital rounder type is now the exception, while he was formerly the rule. In the psychopathic pavilion a marked decrease in the number of admissions for alcoholism is noted. There is a wonderful change for the better in the appearance and conduct of many employees who formerly drank to excess.'

"Dr. J. C. Deane, chief resident physician of the Philadelphia General Hospital, reported on April 14 that the alcoholic ward of his hospital was then running with from 15 to 20 inmates. Formerly the number was about 300.

"Dr. Karl Meyer, of the great Cook County Hospital, Chicago, said: 'We practically have no alcoholic patients any more. The typical hospital bum seems to have disappeared.'"

Even the Brewers are Happy.

Rescue Missions are finding so few of the old time "down and outers" to deal with that they are having to revise their methods of work. Practically all the liquor "cures" are closing their doors. Public sentiment seems constantly growing stronger for prohibition. Even the Secretary of the United States Brewers' Association, Hugh F. Fox, with whom Dr. McLennan spent an hour, says that he does not want the saloon to come back and that his clients will be [illegible] the continuance of non-intoxicating beer [illegible] under respectable conditions to [illegible] people.

BEING A BLESSING

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D.

In setting apart Abram [illegible] in the world, God said to him, "Thou shalt be a blessing." This is the divine idea of every human being.

It is ideal [illegible] a man should be that [illegible] out of disobedience is in harmony with God's [illegible] to obey God every day. It is [illegible] to rely constantly upon the [illegible] Holy Spirit.

Being personally [illegible] a patriotic and Fatherland [illegible] must remember that [illegible] activity are required.

To be a blessing one should see that the [illegible] life is what it should be. [illegible] that men and women are properly [illegible] properly trained must be believers in [illegible] teachings of the ways of God in [illegible]. The Bible should be read in the family worship and the children should be led to feel that Bible reading and prayer are among the most blessed privileges in the world. The children should be impressed from infancy that the Word of God is to be obeyed, and not merely known. Every child in the home should be taught to obey father and mother implicitly and to respect all proper authority. The home should embody all that is good in other institutions and should be the most instructive and the most entertaining place on the globe. It should be a kind of little Heaven in which father and mother and [illegible] daughters live and serve and rejoice every day.

Into that home should be brought religious people, religious books and periodicals. No home should be without its church paper. Parents should read these wholesome books and periodicals and talk of them with more constancy and enthusiasm than they do anything secular. If the church paper and the other religious matter are laid aside carelessly or seldom mentioned, no argument can convince the children that parents attach great importance to them. Enthusiastic interest in Bible and church papers is just as inspiring and contagious as enthusiasm in anything else. No Methodist family should think of spending a week without the organ of the Annual Conference where the family lives and the Christian Advocate published at Nashville. The local organ and the general organ should be a [illegible] religious literature. We can not neglect our Bibles and church papers in our homes and be a blessing to the extent of our privilege.

To be a blessing, the parents should be regular attendants at church and Sunday school. Too many children are developing irreverence and bad habits when sent out alone. Father and mother should sit by the children during worship, as far as practicable. The children should be led from the Sunday school into the [illegible] service by father and mother.

All this calls for constant and [illegible] effort, I know, but it is worth while to be a blessing. In being a blessing, we are happy. It is not those who are leading in family worship and public worship that are sinking or falling into premature graves, but those who are neglecting the duties and these joyous, refreshing privileges.

LIVING BY THE DAY.

One secret of a sweet and happy Christian life is learning to live by the day. It is the long stretches that tire us. We think of life as a whole, running on for years. We cannot carry our load until we are three-score and ten. We cannot think this continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us all at one time; it comes only a day at a time. Selected

UNIFICATION—WHAT NEXT?

By Rev. Robt. Selby.

For the past six years we have had much of negotiation, agitation and irritation regarding the question of unification, and it is about time we were putting our minds upon something that will be worth the while of Southern Methodism.

A recent re-publication of a very great and timely article, published in 1872 by Bishop E. M. Marvin, regarding unification, and edited by Bishop W. A. Candler, LL. D., has come to me, and I have read it very carefully. This paper reads as if the saintly bishop had prepared it for the special purpose of recounting certain attitudes of the M. E. Church to the M. E. Church South, during the past forty-eight years, and altogether pertinent to the present day discussion of this very much discussed issue before the two churches.

The footnotes, added by Bishop Candler by way of explaining the status of the situation, are of special value to those who care to keep the historical facts before them, and should be read with a deal of care in the study of the original paper. If this paper should be faithfully analyzed by the whole church, it would set at rest any further desire on the part of those who are so partisan for unification at this time.

There is a difference of opinion as to what proportion of the membership of either church desires unification, but it is evident that a very large number in both churches do not desire it. This is one of the positive statements coming from the General Conference of the M. E. Church, recently adjourned at Des Moines, regarding the attitude of that church, and I take it for granted that the speaker knew what he was talking about. Another statement, which was somewhat astonishing to the people down South, was that the members of that particular General Conference did not know very much about the plan submitted (but which was hid out by a special committee) and that they had no time for properly considering it. As a matter of fact, if they desired to study it with a view to intelligent action, they had more than two months for a thorough study of it. I understand, from an authentic source, that practically all of the Commission of the M. E. Church were members of the special committee for the disposal of the plan of unification, and it has not come to light that there was any sort of support given the plan in the committee, or on the floor of the Conference. This, to my mind, is a very strong confirmation of Bishop Ainsworth's prediction that there were many of the Commission who would not vote for it.

I maintain that for there to be a union of the two great bodies of Methodism there must first be a positive spirit of unity in the bond of peace, which certainly does not exist to-day, and so far as the history of the issue is concerned, there has not been since the memorable separation in 1844. Certain agreements have been made in the past, but in every instance, according to the record, these agreements have been treated as a "scrap of paper," and broken into shreds. All you have to do is to read the history of Methodism during these seventy-five years and acquaint yourself with the facts. I cite you to a leaflet by Dr. W. F. Glenn, of the North Georgia Conference, recently published, for a very concise statement of some of these historical facts, which will refresh the minds of those who have read them before.

One of the great difficulties with many of our people is that they do not know the past as it should be known by the leaders, both among the ministry and laity. It is not an evidence of a lack of piety or sense for one to lay stress upon a knowledge and proper application of historical facts that have to do with reaching a decision as to the righteousness or wisdom of a given position regarding any question at issue.

Some of the leaders of the M. E. Church, South, have very wisely and justly referred to certain historical facts in dealing with this very serious question, and others have taken them to task for bringing in dead issues. The action of the General Conference at Des Moines proves very conclusively to some of us who have had a keen eye upon all that has been published that these are not dead issues at all, but that they enter vitally into the thinking and reasoning of our brethren across the border. By the way, if the border had been recognized as it was agreed to be recognized, there would be no occasion for such a paper as this.

I asked one of the leading bishops of the M. E. Church, recently, if he knew his church was maintaining a missionary school for white people in the bounds of the State of Mississippi, and he admitted that he knew nothing of it at all. Another question I asked of him was: "Did you know that a Baptist minister served one of your two circuits for whites in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference for eleven months before it was known that he was a Baptist minister?" To this inquiry he made the same reply as to the former. This latter case may be isolated, but it shows the "way the wind blows" in certain sections.

This same bishop remarked that, if my opinion was correct as to the unreadiness of our people for unification, no further effort should be made for it. I heartily agreed with him, and my conviction is very fixed that we can very much better use our talents and time in the legitimate work of the Kingdom than to be frittering away our energy upon a useless task, as this question of unification is. It can never be forced upon an opposing church, and to try to force it is to hamper and haggle the forces that are waging a losing fight against sin and Satan.

It would be infinitely better for us to be given some time to try to recover what we have lost in our own connection by this untimely agitation, than to continue the effort to bring together in organic union two bodies that are not ready by many years for union or reorganization. If the two churches are let alone, they may come together some time in the future, but if this unfortunate discussion is continued they will grow further apart. Give us a rest for at least two years and then let our General Conference decide what should be done so far as we are concerned.

In the meantime, I would suggest that our leaders inform themeselves upon the question related to unification so that it need not be said of us as they said it of themselves at Des Moines, that they were not informed on the question that was supposed to be at stake.

Get Bishop Marvin's reprinted article, and Dr. Glenn's leaflet, and read them; and read again so that you may know where you have a right to stand. Let us be prayerful and at the same time cautious of every interest that has been committed to us, for we have a heritage from the fathers of Methodism that we may well be proud to conserve to the glory of a Methodism that is not fettered by political alliance or selfish ends with a view to absorbing all other bodies of Methodism, and much more to the glory of Him whom we serve and whose we are. May the God of all grace keep our beloved Methodism free from all entanglements that will destroy her usefulness in this day when our ideals of Christian life and service are needed to enforce the need of the world for Christ Jesus our Lord.

Jackson, Miss.

A SUPERANNUATE ACTING P. E.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Rev. J. M. Morse, the efficient presiding elder of the Jackson District, is a very busy man. In addition to his onerous work in running all the regular business of his great office, he does much planning for the Joint Board of Finance, of which he is the wide-awake president. He is tremendously interested, and his big heart drives him in every movement that looks to a more adequate provision for the comfort and welfare of our old worn-out preachers, and their families. The name of J. M. Morse will hold a sacred place in the grateful memories of scores of these old heroes. He is their friend and they know it. The same may be said of our sainted brother, J. W. Chambers, who worked in season and out of season for this sacred cause. Blessings on both of their names!

I have never sought any place in my life. Twice, I have asked a bishop not to send me to a certain place. In each case I was sent to the very place to which I asked not to be sent. That was the extent of my sinning on that line. No personal request I have ever made of any bishop or presiding elder has been granted. I am glad of it. I am mistaken about that. I did request Morse to have my name referred to the committee for the superannuate relation. He did that for me cheerfully. There is one place I have very much desired to fill, and even hinted to one or two members of the Conference that I would like it, but I have never gotten a look in on it. I would have been glad to be appointed as agent for the Joint Board of Finance, and given a free hand at raising money to meet the immediate needs of the superannuates. I like endowments. They are good. However, our present needs are the pressing ones. Would it not be good to take better care of our old preachers now? Many of them have been suffering all of their lives. They fought the battles of the church, and wore themselves out on very meager salaries. They have never known what it means to be comfortable. They never had any salaries such as the church is now paying its pastors. These old veterans are getting but little from the endowments. The preachers who are now getting fancy salaries will in the future be the beneficiaries of the endowments. It is not fair nor right, for the church to neglect the present needs. As a Conference in our next session, we should say to the Joint Board, "Ask for enough to take care of the present needs." Let everybody say, Amen!

To promote the interests of this sacred cause Morse dropped everything, and went to St. Louis to meet Dr. Todd and others. He asked me to represent him at four quarterly conferences, all to be held in Yazoo County. I agreed to do so with great pleasure. I love Morse and was glad to accommodate him. I love the four pastors, and was delighted to be with them. I love the people of Yazoo County, and was happy to renew the associations of the long ago. It was refreshing to me to take up work I dropped several years ago. The next best thing to being a real presiding elder is to represent one. The glory to me, though reflected, was better than no glory at all. My, what a fine thing it is to be a presiding elder! Saul's armor didn't fit David, and he, like a sensible man, put it off. I liked Morse's armor and kept it on, notwithstanding the fact that it didn't fit me at all. I could almost hear myself rattle in it as I rapidly moved around playing presiding elder. It was entirely too big for me. In spite of that, I had a fine time. I hope Morse will go off again before long. Presiding eldering is a fine job. All four pastors were my old district associates. Two of the four charges I had served as pastor more than thirty-five years ago. That was a jovous trip from beginning to end.

My first meeting was at Eden. H. M. Johnson is the very popular pastor there, and he has everything well in hand. It is strange to me that a handsome and popular preacher like Hancy Johnson should live in "single blessedness." It beats me. I had him one year at Roxie, and laid myself out on matrimonial arguments and advice. It was time wasted. I told him "It was an holy estate, instituted of God in the time of man's innocency." But Hancy would smile, and say, "May be, sometime." Finally he fell into Morse's hands. He had him sent to Eden. My! wasn't that a suggestive thing for Morse to do? It seems funny to me that an old bachelor was sent to Eden. There is no telling what Morse will do to a preacher when he falls into his hands. My timidity is so great that I would never have thought of making such a daring move on a single preacher when I was a presiding elder. They just put it up straight and hard, to Hancy. It is up to him to find his Eve. From "signs and appearances on and about" Hancy, I think he has a moving picture show acquaintance with her already. When he gets into double harness there is going to be some mighty steady and fine pulling. Hancy is one of our most promising youug preachers.

My heart was stirred by one tender incident at the Eden quarterly conference. A friend of long ago, a stanch Baptist, Brother Shirley, having heard that I was there, drove sixteen miles, round trip, to shake hands with me and have a few minutes' chat. I buried his wife 39 years ago. How tender and sacred are the memories of the sad ministries of life. Here and there in our sowing we scatter seeds—the fruit comes later. Thank God, we can sow. If we sow, we shall certainly reap.

From Eden I went to Parchman. I spent three days on this great farm, visiting the officials and their families, and doing what I could to cheer and help the poor convicts. They all gave me a glad welcome, and assured me that they would be delighted to have me serve them again as chaplain. My service in that important field I regard as almost, if not quite, the best part of my ministerial life.

Of course, I couldn't spend more than three hours at Tutwiler waiting for a train, and not go to the parsonage and chat with Rev. W. N. Dodds. I had a fine time with him and his excellent wife. I love a rantankerous "sputer." That man's name is Dodds. If you want a "spute," Henry, you go to the parsonage at Tutwiler, put down your vallse, and say, "Dodds, the whole world is going to the bow-wows." Dodds would say at once, "Carley, you were never more grievously mistaken. Everything is just right. I am expecting the millennium any day." The worst of it is, he would prove it to be so. He "argifies" prodigiously. I am too timid to have a real bout with Dodds. We agreed on one thing—we were both against unification.

I ran down Friday morning, May 7, to hold Brother Morse's job at Carter (Lake City Q. C.), at 11 o'clock. How it did rain! Water was everywhere. It came all the morning in great floods from the clouds. Tom Holloman, the greatly loved pastor, and two officials met at Brother Thompson's, and we were soon through with the business of the occasion. After eating a fine dinner at Brother Thompson's, Tom and I gave ourselves up, unreservedly, to a soulful fellowship which had, for more than fifty years' intimacy, ripened into a delightful mellowness. May God bless Tom Holloman! There is none better than he.

I reached Yazoo City Friday night, just as Rev. J. V. Bennett was closing services, and spent about forty minutes in reviewing the work of the quarter. Everything was in good shape. Of course, Yazoo City always keeps things in that way. Luke Alford is a fine fellow, and the church at Yazoo City is one of our very best.

I could not tarry at Yazoo City, as I was due at Midway at 11 o'clock Saturday. I closed my itinerary there. The services for two days were full of pleasure and profit. Thirty-four years ago I closed my pastorate there. Two of the most delightful years of my life were spent in ministering to the Benton and Midway churches. Many of the leaders there are now "sleeping in the city of the dead." I missed them greatly.

Brother H. S. Swayze is the only one of the old guard still living. He is nearly 78, but is steward emeritus now; his fine son, Clayton, is now the driving force.

I almost envy Joe King. How I would love to fill his place! I congratulate him on his good fortune to serve such a splendid people. He is loved by all of them. I claim Joe King as one of my trophies. While on the Brookhaven District I found him at Adams church, a dead local preacher. I did some hard work on him before I could get him started. I appointed him to Topisaw circuit as local supply. He stayed there four years, and has been hustling ever since.

I spent the night at Brother Swayze's, where everything good abounds. It was one of the rare nights of my life. I have spent many happy nights in that fine Christian home. This was the best of them. I was young and full of vigor then, but I am old and almost at the end now. There was the recognized nearness of heaven that made our communion tender and sweet. There were five of us in the company, and I was the youngest. I am in my 71st year—71, 74, 75, 78 and 79. Wouldn't you call that a company of ancients? But every one of us was happy on our way home. God be praised!

Brookhaven, Miss.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, CONFERENCE DISTRICT OFFICERS, TREASURERS, AND SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CENTENARY.

Dear Fellow Workers:

The report for May showing the standing of all the Conferences in the payment of Centenary Pledges showed the Mississippi Conference 36th in line. For the month of June, the report shows the Mississippi Conference to have passed up 15 Conferences, and now occupies 21st place in the list. I appeal to each and all of you to help during this month that we may not only hold the gain we made, but make further stride towards the top.

Let's all get interested and make a good, hard "pull together" for a campaign in every church during July or August for the payment of all the pledges for the first and second years. Later in the year will come Annual Conference, with its usual demands for service and money in order that the pastor may report "Everything in full, Bishop." Therefore, we should make good use of July and August for collecting Centenary Pledges.

It is the Lord's work, and requires haste. Please help that the Centenary may help—in the great things concerning the ougoing of His Kingdom to "all the ends of the earth."

I am anxious to help everywhere I can; please write me. Some important information is being mailed you, which please read carefully, and as far as possible, make use of it.

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.
Conference Missionary Secretary.

WALKING WITH GOD.

By Wm. C. Allen.

In the story of the long ago, Enoch stands out as in some respects the most wonderful character of all—he "walked with God." This does not just imply that Enoch had physical comradeship with God. It means that Enoch, in mind and affection, kept close to God—he had daily, spiritual fellowship with God. It was the kind of a walk that every Christian to-day can take as he treads the sod or streets of earth.

The Christian, whatever his calling or temptations, commences his daily walk with God in prayer. Before his head leaves the pillow the plans and duties of the day are laid before God. In essence he petitions: "My Father, be with me as I associate with others, give me courage, patience, skill. Help me to bear my burdens. Watch over my business affairs to Thy honor and for my good. Lord, send me light—my pathway is so often very, very dark that I need Thy light to guide me more than I can understand. Above all, Thy will be done!" So he commences his daily steppings with God.

And God answers him. God drives into his inmost soul some richly sacred thoughts that abide with him throughout the day: "My son, I am thy light in the darkness. Keep close to me—be obedient to the simple teachings of my Holy Christ—steady thy life with frequent thoughts of me. Do not run before me, for then thou shalt lose me—do not lag behind, else darkness overtake thee. Walk with me beyond the eventide until thine eyes are closed in sleep. More tenderly than the stars I will watch over thee; and through thee shall my perfect will be done."

So each of us—like Enoch in the old, old story—can walk with God.

A Savior's hand to guide you is better than a map. It upholds while it guides.—Mrs. Charles

A SUGGESTED PROGRAM FOR LAYMEN.

By T. Wynn Holloman

1. See that the Centenary pledges are paid in full.
2. See that the ministry is paid a fair wage.
3. See that connectional claims are paid in full.
4. Practice tithing of money.
5. Practice stewardship or tithing of time and service.
6. Make the Sunday school a real school of religious education.
7. Relieve the pastor so that he may devote himself to preaching the Gospel and to pastoral ministrations.
8. Be soul winners. Acts 6: 1-7. Push the evangelistic campaigns.
9. Make the Minute Men permanent and furnish emergency speakers until every pulpit shall be filled.
10. Be an Employment Bureau for Jesus Christ. Matt. 20: 6-7.

BOYS WHO BECAME NATIONAL HEROES.

"When we celebrate our country's independence, how many of us realize that our strong young republic was largely a gift from boys?" says an editorial in the July Boys' Life, the Boy Scout Magazine. "If we can judge from the ages of some of the officers of Washington's army, many of the rank and file must have been exceedingly youthful.

"La Fayette was but nineteen when he journeyed from France and offered his sword and service to the struggling Continental army. Georges Taffe, another French officer, was eighteen; Alexis Beaumont, seventeen. Elkanah Watson, an American, at the age of seventeen was being intrusted with charge of shipments of powder to various places of siege. Viscount Rochambeau, a French nobleman, who, like La Fayette, left the luxury of his life of wealth and ease to endure the privations and hardships in the American army for the sake of an ideal, was but fourteen years old when he enlisted.

"There is a long list of officers from seventeen to twenty years old, among them such noted names as John Trumbull and Charles Pinckney; Steven Mason, a colonel at twenty. Baron de Kalb was only twenty-five when he became famous in defense of our colonies, and John Paul Jones, hero of the sea, twenty-eight when he threw his then veteran experience to the cause of the colonists.

"Youth has done much to give our country independence. Youth, in many other ways, not on the battlefield, can preserve its freedom and honor."

Every man's life is a plan of God.—Horace Bushnell.

NEW LESSONS.

"No more school!" said the boy one day,
As he hastened to put his books away.
And he laughed as he gave his cap a turn—
"School's out! No more lessons to learn!"

The June wind smiled as he softly blew;
"Such a silly boy I never knew!"
He chuckled aloud. "Why, I can show
Him a thousand things he ought to know!"

Then a honey bee buzzed as he passed him by,
And glanced at him with a puzzled eye;
"No more lessons? How can that be,
When I know a great more than he!"

And a robin, aloft on a leafy spray,
Laughed as the boy put his books away;
"Does he think all knowledge is writ in those!
Why, he knows not the life of a single rose!"

And a wind-blown daisy, swaying low,
Winked her golden eye as she saw him go—
"Oh, the school is small and the world is wide!
He'll find most lessons are taught outside."

So the boy put his books safe away on the shelf.
And into the field he went himself—
Learning new lessons (unguessed) from the breeze,
And the birds, and the flowers, and the honey bees!

PROVING IT TO TOM.

"Did'ja get a job yet?" called Tom Brooks to Jerry Scott, as the two boys encountered each other on the street.

"No, I haven't yet, Tom," the other answered, coming to a stop. "I've been looking around, and answering a few 'ads,' but I haven't had any luck so far. How about you?"

Tom shook his head mournfully.

"Nothing doing," he said. "Jobs aren't plentiful right now. At least, I haven't found 'em to be. I tried one place this morning—got there just five minutes too late, and at another they wanted a boy with a bicycle."

As the boys were talking an old lady had passed them on the sidewalk; suddenly she stumbled a bit, dropping her purse as she did so. Jerry was at her side in one bound and had picked up the purse and returned it to her before she quite realized that she had dropped it.

"Thank you," she said, and Jerry tipped his hat.

He turned about to where Tom was standing, and the latter laughed.

"I don't see why you have to break your neck doing favors for strangers. She could have picked it up herself just as well as not, or if she couldn't you could have helped her then."

"You and I never will be able to agree on that subject," Jerry answered, for Tom had often made fun of his excessive, and, in Tom's eyes, foolish politeness. "Some day, maybe, I'll be able to prove to you that politeness pays."

"Some day, maybe, you will," Tom jibed scornfully, "and when you do, I'll guarantee to reform all my bad habits and become a model like you. It's all right to help some one, but you overdo it." At heart Tom was not a bad sort of chap at all, but he felt that too much politeness was "sissified," whereas a certain gruffness showed that a fellow was all right.

"Remember your promise to reform if I can show you the error of your ways," Jerry smiled.

"I will, all right—if you can ever show me," Tom agreed.

After a few more minutes of talk the two boys parted and continued down the street.

It was about a week later that Jerry, running down the "Wanted" column in the morning newspaper, came across the following advertisement:

"Wanted: Office boy. Chance for advancement. Apply 10 o'clock. Fleming Manufacturing Company.

Jerry jumped up, his eyes glistening.

"I surely hope that I can get that job," he told himself. "There is always a chance for advancement in the Fleming Company, and they treat their employees fairly, from what I've heard."

Looking at the clock, he saw that he still had half an hour's time before 10 o'clock. He spent this in brushing his clothes and in polishing his shoes. Then he set out for the manufacturing concern's office. He had not gone more than three blocks when he heard a familiar hail; turning, he saw Tom Brooks approaching.

"I guess we're headed for the same place," Tom said, as he came up. "We might as well go together. Not wishing you any bad luck, but I hope I get the job. They're fine people to work for. Fred Jennings started in there as an office boy a couple of years ago and he's been going up ever since."

The two boys arrived in the ante room at about five minutes to ten, and they found two other boys already waiting. Before ten three others had come, and promptly on the hour they were shown into the office of the employment supervisor. They stood in line in the order in which they had arrived, Tom being in line just before Jerry. The big office was fixed up in a modern fashion throughout, the only jarring note in its neatness being a crumpled bit of paper lying on the carpet in the middle of the room. Almost unconsciously, Jerry picked it up and tossed it into a waste basket.

The supervisor talked with each boy in quite an informal fashion as they came to the desk, filling out blanks on a sheet of paper as he did so. After he had questioned one, he asked him to wait in the ante-room until he had finished with them all.

Finally the supervisor finished the last one, and after a few moments' wait he joined them in the ante-room.

"I am glad to announce that this young gentleman has secured the position," he said, indicating Jerry. "It might be interesting to you to know why it was given to him rather than to any of the rest of you. Three of you had an equal rating with him in regard to the questions I asked, but you all failed in the one test which I set out. There was a crumpled bit of paper lying on the floor when you came in, and Scott, here, stopped and picked it up, instead of leaving it there as the rest of you did. It was his success in passing this one test that won him the position."

On their way home Tom reached out and grasped Jerry's hand.

"I want to congratulate you, old man, on getting the job," he said. "You deserved it, all right. And hereafter I'm going to take a leaf out of your book and try being polite—I told you that when you could show me that politeness paid, I'd reform, and I'm going to. You showed me today that politeness does pay."—Joseph Thalheimer, Jr., in Congregationalist and Advance.

A STRANGE FRIENDSHIP.

By Mabel J. Mollwaine

The strangest friendship that the writer has ever seen was that of a young Plymouth Rock hen and a white kitten.

When the kitten was about two months old she was very fond of being around in the chicken park, or wherever the chickens were. She was the friendliest kitten alive and showed a disposition to chum with every living thing. But the chickens paid no attention to her, except to get out of her way. The hen in question, however, met her advances kindly and they soon became boon companions.

Many times a day they were to be seen walking together around the place. The hen would frequently stand still while kittie would rub back and forth, back and forth against her breast. And while Biddy scratched for bugs and worms, the little white kitten was never far away. We do not know what was their means of communication, but they evidently had a satisfying one, for they never seemed to tire of each other. They associated together to the exclusion of the other fowls and cats on the place. One seldom saw Biddy with the other chickens, and little white kitten absolutely deserted her little white twin. We sometimes wondered if the kitten thought she was a chicken or the hen believed herself to be a cat. At all events they were most congenial.—Our Dumb Animals.

The graces of Christian character may be mixed in different proportion, but must all be found in every one who lives the life of Christ. For no man can conquer the world except by faith; no man can resemble God except by love. F. W. Robertson.

Be real about going to church. Go to be charged with power to go out and fight for Jesus Christ. Go, too, to show the world where you stand. Going to church is answering roll call; and what kind of a soldier is he who, when the captain calls roll, is not there to answer? Fiske.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 1211 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

NOTHING LESS THAN THE WORLD—A THREE-MINUTE TAIK.

The Kingdom of God cannot come in its fullness until the whole world has been evangelized. We can accept the teachings of Christ as individuals, and still lack a great deal of discharging our duty to our fellow-men if we do not include them in our plans of activity and service. We must save ourselves first, but we cannot remain saved if we are content to stop at that. Christ had a world-passion, and his disciples must yearn for the salvation of all men. The true Christian can never be satisfied with righteousness in spots.

John Wesley was not speaking idly when he said, "The world is my parish." A vital religious experience had given him an enlargement of soul that blotted out littleness and obliterated selfishness. He had learned to think God's thoughts and he planned to do God's work. Francis Xavier was doing his best to carry out the Great Commission as he planted the Christian religion in fifty-two kingdoms, preached his way through nine thousand miles of territory, and baptized more than one million persons during the forty-six years of his life. The impulsive power of a great faith drove both these men forward to the accomplishment of marvelous results.

Our missionaries to-day are men and women with a world-passion. They have gone to the uttermost parts of the earth because they love God—and men. They have caught a vision of what ought to be, and what may be, and they have set themselves to the accomplishment of a world-task. If they have given up much that most people hold dear, they have gained that for which all of us should yearn—a place in the forefront of the King's forces.

But all the forces cannot go to the front; the home base must be maintained. We are the home base, and we must be as faithful in the performance of our duty as are those in the far-away fields. They are as dependent upon us as we are upon them. If we fail to support them with our prayers, our sympathy, our means, their burdens will become heavier than they can bear, and they will have to lay down their work. It means much to pray, "Thy kingdom come."

PUSH THE EVANGELISTIC WORK.

Just as Jesus came to seek and save that which was lost, so the church, as the body of Christ in the world, has a supreme mission to fallen humanity. That mission is to bring into the Kingdom of God those who are living in bondage to sin. It is not a seasonal or occasional mission. By day and by night, month after month, year after year, century after century, it is the work of the church to point to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. In fulfilling this mission, many forms of activity have been developed, and many others will become necessary; but the end of it all cannot, by the very nature of the case, be changed.

It is true, of course, that good judgment will sometimes indicate that a given community is more likely to respond to the appeals of the gospel at one time than at another, and it would be unwise in such a case to undertake to force an evangelistic campaign through in the face of manifestly unfavorable circumstances. But experience has proved that the human heart is strangely responsive to the offers of grace at all times and in all places; and it is still true that such as should be saved are being added to the church daily. When such fails to be the case, we may well begin to examine our own hearts to learn wherein we have fallen short of the evident goal of our ministry.

Most of us are busy about many things—and we have to be; but we should never become so busy about anything as to neglect the prime mission upon which we have been sent. During the summer, which has come to be known as the revival season, it is likely that special efforts will be made in all sections of the church to reach the unsaved. This is as it should be, and we doubt not that such efforts will be abundantly blessed of God. But we have in mind the spirit of continuous evangelism that will make us strive for conversions and reclamations three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. If "Methodism is Christianity on fire," then Methodism will lose its place as one of the great religious forces of the world if it ever lets the fires of its evangelistic zeal die out. We have a gospel that can save the world; let us preach that gospel with the urgency of men who feel the compulsion of a divine imperative.

CHURCHES AND PASTORS.

We read in a recent issue of the Baptist Record, one of our valued exchanges, a long list of churches without pastors and, in the same connection, a list of pastors who were available for service. It cannot be denied that the congregational system has some features to commend it, but it certainly is not a shining success in providing churches with pastors and pastors with churches. So far as we know, the itinerant system of Methodism is the most effective system in the world for bringing preachers and people together in pleasant and helpful official relationship.

In spite of the fact that there is a tendency in some congregations of our church to select their own pastors, we do not believe there is the slightest ground for believing that there is any desire for a change of our system. It has stood every test to which it has been subjected, and its effectiveness to-day is made more evident by the contrast just cited.

We have no disposition to find fault with a system that pleases our sister denominations—but we rejoice in the fact that we have no churches without preachers and no preachers without churches.

TRAINING RELIGIOUS TEACHERS.

As we see it, there is no more important duty confronting the church to-day than that of training its preachers and religious teachers generally for the high duties to which they are called. The proposition does not need to be argued, but it does need to be emphasized. Without intending any reflection upon anybody, we do not hesitate to say that the demand for highly educated and thoroughly trained preachers far exceeds the supply. If our young preachers wish to qualify themselves for important positions in the church, they will not neglect the most careful educational preparation.

For a long time we have seemed to take it for granted that Sunday school teachers could do their work efficiently with nothing more than a few minutes' study of the assigned lesson each week; we are glad that that idea is passing away, and that we are coming to realize that the success of our work depends, in a large measure, upon the efficiency of these teachers who direct the religious training of our children and young people. Goodness is a prerequisite of success in such teaching, but it is not all that is necessary—there must be the knowledge of what to teach and how to teach, as well. The type of character developed by the Sunday school determines the type of the whole church life.

Holding these views, we cannot commend too strongly every movement of the church toward better training for our Sunday school teachers. And we cannot urge too strongly our teachers to take advantage of every opportunity better to fit themselves for their glorious work. The Training School to be held at Grenada, Miss., August 4-11, will furnish such an opportunity, for Sunday school workers and others in the territory of the North Mississippi Conference, and other schools and institutes are accessible throughout the church. All of these will be a means of grace as well as of better preparation for service.

THE SPIRIT OF HELPFULNESS.

The street car strike in New Orleans has demonstrated the fact that most men are generously willing to do what they can to extend a helping hand to those who are in need. Because the street car company and the conductors and motormen could not reach an agreement as to wages, the entire street car system was tied up. Since most of the workers of the city live long distances from their places of employment, there was serious danger that all business would be demoralized. But the automobile solved the problem. Many of the large employers made use of trucks and pleasure cars to convey their employes to and from their places of business, and the general slogan was, "Business as usual." But what we have especially in mind is the fact that private owners of automobiles displayed an admirable spirit of co-operation in seeing that those not otherwise provided for were able to go to and from their work. Hundreds of cars carried the sign, "You are welcome to ride as far as I go," and hundreds of other owners who carried no signs were exceedingly thoughtful in picking up passengers along the streets. It made no difference that they were strangers, or that they were not always dressed in the height of fashion—the spirit of community helpfulness was in evidence at every turn.

It is not often, perhaps, that such a crisis arises in a community, but there are always opportunities for individuals and groups of individuals to show, in various ways, their interest in the welfare of their neighbors. A spirit of helpfulness in times of need, whether the need be critical or not, always cheers the heart of the one who is helped—and it reacts helpfully upon the one who manifests it.

If we will keep our eyes open, it is altogether likely that we shall find many opportunities to lighten the burdens of those with whom we are traveling the rugged road of life.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., is assisting the pastor, Rev. George Fox, in a meeting at Bunkie, La., this week.

Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, who has a home at the Seashore Camp Grounds, is now visiting his youngest son at Orlando, Florida.

It is announced that Dr. C. C. Jarrell, who has been spending some time in Belgium and Poland in the interest of our missionary work, will sail for home on July 25.

Rev. Spencer J. McLean, of Farmerville, La., recently closed a good meeting, in which he was assisted by Rev. C. E. McLean, of Shreveport, La., and Mr. Paul Templeton, of Meridian, Miss. There were several accessions to the church.

Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, North Mississippi Conference, conducted a meeting at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., last week.

We learn from one of our North Mississippi exchanges that four of the teachers in our Sunday school at Holly Springs, Miss., are attending the Training School at Lake Junaluska.

Dr. Theodore Copeland is in a meeting with Rev. W. W. Graves at Hazlehurst, Miss., this week. "We have started off graciously," says Dr. Copeland in a personal note to the editor.

We have seen it stated that Bishop George H. Bickley and Bishop Charles Wesley Burns, who were elected to their high office at the recent General Conference of the M. E. Church, are first cousins.

The pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church being away in revival work, his pulpit on Sunday was filled by Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer, morning and night. He reports having good congregations and being happy in the preaching.

We were glad to greet Rev. H. N. Brown, of New Iberia, La., in the Advocate office on Friday of last week. He had come to the city with his wife for medical attention. We were glad to learn that her condition is not considered serious.

A two-weeks' meeting is being conducted at the Seashore Camp Ground by Rev. Chas. Winter, assisted by Miss Purdy in charge of the music. Reports that have reached us indicate much interest in this annual religious gathering at this historic spot.

We learn from the South-Reporter, of Holly Springs, Miss., that the official board of our church at that place has rendered the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott, leave of absence for the last two weeks in July to attend the Epworth League Assembly at Lake Junaluska.

Rev. E. B. Moll, formerly a student at Centenary College, Shreveport, La., is now engaged in evangelistic work in Georgia. A note from him informs us that the Lord is blessing his labors. He keeps in touch with his Louisiana friends through the columns of the Advocate.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Slidell, La., spent a few minutes in the Advocate office on Tuesday of last week. He gave an encouraging account of the work at Slidell. There have been about twenty-five additions to the church, mostly on profession of faith, since Conference.

Mr. H. C. Lipscomb, Secretary, of Oaknolia, La., requests us to announce that the Bluff Creek Camp Meeting will begin on Friday, July 30, and continue through Sunday, August 8. A cordial invitation is extended to all our preachers to attend the meeting as guests of the Association.

Rev. W. A. Terry has recently closed good meetings at South McComb and East McComb churches, which are under his pastoral care. The services were largely attended, and there were twenty accessions to the church. The work of this charge is moving along most successfully.

Dr. S. Earl Taylor, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the M. E. Church, has asked for and been granted a year's leave of absence from his official duties in order that he may regain his health, which has been greatly impaired by his arduous labors in connection with the work of the church.

The American Tribune is the name of the first Roman Catholic daily newspaper appearing in English. It is published in Dubuque, Iowa. As we see it, Catholicism is better served by the secular press than is Protestantism; if there is need of a Catholic daily, therefore, much more is there need of a similar Protestant publication.

Revival services were held at Walthal, on the Bellefontaine charge, North Mississippi Conference, during the week following the second Sunday in June. The pastor, Rev. R. B. Craig, was assisted by Rev. T. J. Halfacre, of Winona. Large congregations attended the services, and there was a general revival in the church.

Professor Hervic Branscomb, of Southern Methodist University, has been decorated by King Albert, of Belgium, for successfully carrying Cardinal Mercier's letter through the enemy's lines. Professor Branscomb is a son of Dr. L. C. Branscomb, editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate.

We are glad to learn that Dr. F. M. Thomas, Book Editor and Editor of the Review, who has been seriously ill, is improving in health.

We learn from the Hattiesburg American that the campaign in behalf of the Mississippi Methodist Hospital is making good progress under the direction of Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the campaign manager. One subscription for $10,000 was received a few days ago. It is assured that this great work will continue until success is attained.

It is with sorrow that we record the death of Mrs. Maria Gorden at Como, Miss. She was the mother of Mr. Frank H. Wall, a splendid Methodist layman of Como. Sister Gorden was eighty-five years of age, and had been a reader of the Advocate for more than fifty years. Her pastor, Rev. R. P. Neblett, conducted the funeral services on July 9.

Mr. Henry H. Ahrens, well known in Louisiana and Mississippi, who has been in the service of the Government for some time, has been assigned to New York City as a place of permanent residence. In a personal note, he expresses regret that he was unable to attend the Seashore Divinity School this year. We assure him that he was greatly missed by his many friends.

We regret greatly not to have been in the office one day last week when Rev. B. F. Lewis, Manager of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., called. He was accompanied by Mrs. E. E. Harrell, of Norfolk, Va., widow of the late Rev. E. E. Harrell, of the Virginia Conference, and her son, Mr. H. Lewis Harrell. Mrs. Harrell is a daughter of the late Rev. W. B. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. W. W. Nelson is in his fourth year as pastor of the Scotland charge, Mississippi Conference. The indications now are that this will be the best year of the four. He writes that Dr. Andrew Johnson of Wilmore, Ky., and Professor C. C. Connerly, of Columbus, Ohio, are expected to begin the Caseyville Camp Meeting on July 23. All ministers who attend the meeting will be entertained free of charge.

Dr. J. B. Hingeley, after a careful study of "Who's Who in America," finds that of nearly 12,000 names, almost 1,000 are of the sons of clergymen, a number out of all proportion to the whole number of ministers in the population of the country. According to that proportion, there should not have been more than fifty of these famous men the sons of clergymen. Another investigator finds that in the "Dictionary of National Biography," England, there are 410 more sons of ministers than sons of doctors and lawyers put together. If "ministers' sons are the worst boys in the world," they seem to do pretty well after they reach manhood.

At the meeting of the trustees of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate held in October, 1919, the editor, Dr. W. C. Lovett, and the assitant editor and business manager, Dr. R. F. Eakes, tendered their resignations, to take effect upon the adjournment of their respective Conference sessions in 1920. Their resignations were accepted, and Rev. W. P. King, of the North Georgia Conference, and Rev. L. J. Ballard, of the South Georgia Conference, were recently elected to succeed them. We shall greatly miss the fine fellowship of these retiring members of the editorial fraternity who have maintained a high standard of religious journalism. We extend a cordial welcome to their successors and bid them Godspeed in the great work to which they have been called.

A SUGGESTION.

I have often heard the expression, "old, worn-out preacher." To say the least, it is disrespectful. We speak thus of old shoes, or an old rug and other material things, but it does not sound right to call a man who has spent the best part of his life in the service of his Lord and King an "old, worn-out preacher."

True, they are old, else they would not be superannuated, but surely they are not worn-out. It is my privilege to know one of these noble men, and he is by no means worn-out. Of course he cannot do the work he did when he was younger, but he can preach a good, forceful sermon, which he does once a month, and he has charge of one of our Sunday schools; furthermore, he rides five miles horseback in order to perform these duties. It is an inspiration to those of us who are younger just to know him and to see how close he is to God.

The influence of these men is being felt throughout the country and on the foreign fields through those whom they have touched—those who have been converted under their ministry. I do not know whether the expression, "old, worn-out preacher," occurs in any of our official publications or not; if it does, I move that it be corrected.

NAMING OUR TOOLS.

A surprisingly long list of mechanical devices take their names from live things. Here are a few that The American Boy has collected:

"There is the cock that shuts off the water and the ram that lifts it. Then there is the sawbuck and the sawhorse and the bear which helps in a punch. Digging is done with a clam, hoisting with a crab, and a cat is part of the outfit of a shop crane. Also every automobile has a kit of tools and a jack.

"A printing press has a fly, and turtles fit the cylinders of a press. Flywheels are common and any automobile has a butterfly, whether it has wormdriven gears or not. The first locomotives had a grass-hopper valve motion.

"The rails of any trolley line are connected by fish plates, and in repairing the tracks a crow is used.

"A donkey engine often drives machinery by the use of a mule pulley, in drilling an old man is used, while in lathe work a doctor is used to prevent faulty work. And of course you all know how great was the use of caterpillar tractors and shells in the late conflict."—King's Treasuries.

Died, near Pleasant Hill, La., a few weeks ago, MARY ANN LITTLE. She was born in Simpson County, Mississippi, September 22, 1822. She was the daughter of James and Lucy Ann Hooks. She was married to A. B. Little in 1844, converted and joined the Presbyterian Church in 1850, and lived a faithful member of that church while living there. She came to Louisiana in 1892. There being no Presbyterian near her, she joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a consecrated life until death. She was left a widow in 1893. She was the mother of twelve children; five died in infancy; six sons and one daughter reached maturity. The writer was her pastor from 1909 to 1913, and I believe she was one among the best women that I ever knew. Her religion was of the old type. She was often happy when she was in good health, and before she left this world she sang and shouted glory to His name. It was sad to give up such a kind and faithful mother, but we know that she is not dead but sleepeth. We can say to the bereaved ones, "Be faithful a little while longer and you, like mother, will be called to the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

On June 26, 1920, the spirit of Mrs. J. R. JONES winged its flight to realms above to be at home with her Master. Mrs. Jones was born, April 17, 1854, and professed faith in Christ when a young girl. She joined the Methodist Church at old White Plains, and had lived a consistent Christian since. Though an invalid for nearly seven years, she was always cheerful and always trusted in the One who has all power to rule. The deceased, before marriage, was Sarah Mellssa Underwood. On January 15, 1880, she was happily married to J. R. Jones. To this union, nine girls were born; four of them preceded her to the grave in infancy, leaving behind five girls, all heads of families, and her dear companion to mourn her departure. The funeral rites were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Gillmore, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Houston, and the body was laid to rest in the New Home cemetery, Smith County, to await the resurrection morn. She has gone from us, but we know where to find her, and with calm resignation her loved ones realize their loss is her gain. So with patience and ever-increasing hope, we look forward to a blessed reunion with her who has gone to be "forever with the Lord." A niece,

(Miss) LAVONIA BOONE

Mrs. MARY ADALINE ROBERTS (nee McCormick), an old Methodist type, was born September 15, 1839, and departed this life, April 14, 1920. She was married to Dr. R. Roberts on September 17, 1867. To this union were born five sons, who survive to mourn their loss. To be expected of them from the training they received, they are all highly cultured, prominent Christian gentlemen. I knew Sister Roberts nearly all my life. I never knew a finer Christian character and one more untiring in her efforts for good. She had a great interest in Sunday school work. At the town of Shiloh, she often served as superintendent and teacher. Her life and thought were an inspiration to many a life. Though she is gone, she will live in the lives and memory of many. She continued her work in the Home Department up to her death. She was ill eight months and always expressed her readiness and willingness to go. I don't think any one ever did more for Methodism in North Louisiana than she and her husband, who still survives her. Her religion was a principle with her and she lived it every day and taught it by precept and example. Her home was the home of the preachers. Everything that could be done for the cause they represented was done gladly and willingly by her and hers, and it makes the Great Beyond more attractive to think that the citizenship of the home over there is made up of such characters as hers was. We trust to meet her and hers some glad day and rest in the shade of the trees.

$675 FOR A STAMP.

Collectors will recall that when Uncle Sam first issued an airpost stamp, which was in May of 1918, 24 cents was the denomination chosen, the colors being red, white and blue. They will recollect, too, that through a mistake a sheet of 100 of the 24 cent airpost stamps was printed with the central design, an airplane, up-side-down. They have read, also, how Col. E. H. R. Green obtained posession of this sheet, and how subsequently he broke the sheet and sold some of the inverts individually for $250 each. The question was asked at that time: Is it worth while paying as high as $250 for for one of these stamps?

The answer to that query was given recently at a stamp auction. One of these inverts was put up for sale and brought a price of $675, or nearly three times that at which Col. Green disposed of some of his rarities.—Kent B. Stiles in Boys' Life.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

WHEN A WOMAN IS NERVOUS—WORRIED

Most women neglect their health, and for this they pay the penalty. Any woman will find that neglect does not pay. A little more attention to health would brighten up her life. If she asks her neighbors she finds that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription benefits a woman's whole system. It not only acts upon the troubles and weaknesses peculiar to women, but is an all-round tonic that braces the entire body, overcoming nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, dizziness and a run-down condition.

SELMA, ALA.—"For about six months I have been going down in health. I would have pains thru the back of my neck and shoulders, and suffered with backache all the time, also pains in my side. My appetite left me, I became very weak and extremely nervous. I tried different medicines but did not get better. Then my mother advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did. I am now on my third bottle and the results have been very satisfactory. I am stronger, my appetite has returned, and I am feeling so much better in every way. Other women who suffer will not regret having given it a trial."—MRS. N. W. GRAHAM, 2301 E. Alabama Ave.

OUR DAILY BREAD.
A Prayer.

By Dwight E. Marvin.

We thank Thee, O God, for Thy goodness; every morning is filled with promise and every evening testifies to Thy care. Each folded hour witnesses to Thy love. What shall we render unto Thee for all Thy benefits? We will lift up our hearts to Thee in praise and thanksgiving and will seek to please Thee by lives of obedience.

Keep us from all doubt and anxiety concerning our daily needs. Thou art our Father and we are Thy children. Give us this day our daily bread; we ask not for to-morrow's portion. The lilies of the field are clothed by Thee, the young ravens partake of Thy bounty and we know that Thou wilt not withhold any good thing from us, Thy children.

Our confidence is in Thee through Christ our Savior. Amen.

PREVAILING PRAYER.

By Rev. J. A. Wells.

"In a certain town there had been no revival for many years. The church was nearly run out. The people were unconverted. Spiritual desolation reigned. There lived an old blacksmith in the town, who stammered so greatly in his speech that it was painful to hear him speak. At work in his shop his mind became greatly exercised about the church; his agony was so great that he locked his door and spent the afternoon in prayer. He prevailed with God. He then obtained the reluctant consent of his pastor to appoint a meeting, but with no hope on the pastor's part of any attendance. But the room was more than filled. All was silent until one sinner broke out in tears and begged, if any one could pray, to pray for him. Others followed, and it was found that persons from every quarter of town were under deep conviction—all dating their convictions from the hour the old man was praying in his shop. A powerful revival followed. This old stammering man prevailed and, as a prince, had power with God."

"Several members of Jonathan Edwards' church had spent the whole night in prayer before he preached his memorable sermon, 'Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God.' The Holy Ghost was so mightily poured out, and God so manifest in holiness and majesty during the preaching of that sermon, that the elders of the church threw their arms around the pillars of the church and cried, 'Lord, save us, we are slipping down to hell!'"—T. C. Jones, in Methodist Recorder.

Just suppose every pastor, as he starts out in the summer revival campaign, had a few members at every church like the blacksmith and those praying members of Edwards' church! Before September, thousands of people would be baptized with the Holy Ghost and fire and thousands of sinners would be crying, "Men and brethren, what must WE do?" God grant this, and more, for Jesus sake!

Gloster, Miss.

FROM WINNSBORO, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Things are moving along nicely on the Winnsboro charge—nothing startling or out of the ordinary. We are praying that God may manifest himself in great saving and reviving power, not only on the Winnsboro charge, but throughout the district and Conference as well.

I had the pleasure and profit of attending the Monroe District Conference, which was well attended by the preachers and laity as well. The delegates attending were both male and female. A fine spirit prevailed. Our presiding elder, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, presided with grace and ability. The conference was held in the $40,000 new church in West Monroe. That building is one of the nicest in the Louisiana Conference. It was started under the ministry of Rev. J. R. Roy, and completed under the ministry of Rev. H. W. Ledbetter. The preaching was done by Brothers Means, Neill, Schuhle, and Drake, and was of a very high type.

A strong resolution was adopted asking Bishop McMurry not to hold our Annual Conference until the last week in November or the first in December, and the presiding elders were urged to use their influence with the Bishop in effecting said change. To the writer's mind the change ought to be made. The 3rd of November is entirely too early to hold our Conference, and every preacher and layman should write a personal letter to the Bishop asking him to hold our Conference either the last week in November or the first week in December.

We had a great day at Crowville last Sunday. We observed Sunday School Day. We had a fine day indeed. Rev. C. D. Atkinson held our second quarterly conference on the 17th of June at Crowville, and preached a splendid sermon.

S. D. HOWARD.

A BALANCED RATION.

Dear Brother Carley: The last of April, 1919, I put in an order for some groceries; and of course I tried to get a balanced ration, as I think every one should.

The fourth Sunday in April, a young lady said to me, "I understand you are to be married next Sunday, and I'm sure you want to subscribe for the Christian Advocate." I said, "Yes." This thought comes to me: If it is important that we get a balanced ration for the physical man, it is equally so for the spiritual. To have a balanced spiritual ration, I believe we must at least study the Bible, the Sunday school magazines, and read our church paper.

The price of groceries has advanced since I put in my first order, but I am still using them, trying to take care of the physical man.

Our paper is more expensive than it was last year, but the spiritual man is still in need of food, so I wish to renew my subscription to the Advocate.

L. E. HAVENS.

Stillmore, Miss.

Perhaps some day a people may be inspired by the Holy Ghost to risk it all upon the Lord. Let us build Christ into our laws, into the administration of our laws, into our treaties with kindred States, into our dealings with inferior peoples. If we set this stone at naught, we may find the Nemesis that awaits us in the desolations of imperial Rome.—J. H. Jowett.

Good habits are not made on birthdays nor Christian character at the New Year. The workshop of character is everyday life. The uneventful and commonplace hour is where the battle is lost or won.—Exchange.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Are you praying that the teachers may be ready to receive the Holy Spirit in power during the session of the Training School? It takes as much of the Spirit's presence to teach the gospel as it does to preach the gospel.

If you have any money on hand from observing Sunday School Day, please send it to Rev. J. E. Stephens, New Albany. Do not wait to observe the day at all your churches. The amount you have on hand is needed badly, as I can testify.

The Young Men's Bible Class at Houston voted to send four teachers to take the training, if the teachers are willing to go. We need to pray to the Lord to convict men and women of their need of training for their high calling of teaching Christ to the children.

Thanks to the men that have sent in names of teachers who expect to attend the Training School. This puts me in touch with them and enables me to give them information they want. Send them in by the scores. Let us do some great team work.

Brother Holder gave me his hour at Cornersville last Saturday. A Baptist preacher was in the congregation. When the call was made for volunteers to take training, the preacher arose and said, "I will give five dollars toward the expense of any teacher that will attend." What do you think of that?

An excellent class in teacher-training is being taught by Mrs. Fay Peele at Potts Camp. Mrs. Peele is a member of the Christian church. She is in hopes to bring a number of her class to Grenada in August. We are a little mixed up down here and we may be mixed up in heaven a little more.

At Olive Branch congregation, attended services Sunday morning. The churches near Memphis have a harder time than the churches in the city. The people in the country get in their cars on the Sabbath and go to the city to frolic, deserting the church for the allurements of Sodom. There is a remnant that is true to God. In the congregation at Olive Branch was a member of the Presbyterian Church who offered to contribute five dollars toward the expense of any teacher that would attend the Training School.

In some respects the most important course offered is that in Beginners' Methods. It is the most important because children from four to five years of age are receiving the foundation for all future teaching. If anything is left out of the foundation in these early years, there is no way to put it in in after life. This is one of the reasons why mature people do not hear the gospel message. If we save the world, it must be saved before it is lost.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Reports are being sent out from the office to every superintendent in the Conference. When you receive yours, please fill it out and return to us as soon as possible. It is very gratifying to the Secretary, the promptness with which the reports are being answered.

Rev. Jno. C. Chambers, the Field Secretary, is attending the Training School at Lake Junaluska, July 7-21. The office work is being attended to by the efficient stenographer and the Elementary Superintendent.

The Junaluska Training School is holding a most delightful session at Junaluska. The Elementary Section as well as all the other departments of the work is in excellent hands, and all are having a large attendance.

This is some information that may surprise some of the members of Sunday schools in our Conference. Did you know there are twelve salaried superintendents in the following Conferences: Alabama, Florida, Holston, Louisiana, Memphis, Mississippi, North Alabama, North Georgia, Upper South Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia?

There are seven Conferences holding Third Rank: Central Texas, Illinois, Kentucky, Memphis, North Mississippi, Upper South Carolina and Virginia.

Eleven hundred and forty-seven Elementary credits have been conferred in Standard Schools and otherwise since the 1919 meeting of the General Board.

Have you observed Sunday School Day? If you have not, write to us and we will send you the programs.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Mrs. SUE STUART BRAME,
Elementary Sup't.

"THE LAKE JUNALUSKA CONFERENCE."

By Mrs. H. R. Steele.

A great Missionary Conference under the auspices of the Board of Missions will be held at Lake Junaluska, August 2-8. A program of unusual interest has been prepared, the general theme being the Centenary in action at home and abroad. Leading men and women of our own church and of the sister Methodism will be on the program and will present in vivid terms what the Centenary has meant and will mean to our work on foreign fields and in our own land.

American Methodism's greatest achievement will be set forth by men and women of experience who have had a part in planning the great Centenary Celebration, and have seen what this Movement will mean to the success of the missionary enterprise. Missionaries from the different fields will be present and will speak of their work.

The success of the Centenary will put an impetus in the work which cannot fail to inspire a deeper interest and a larger sense of responsibility. The conference will broaden the knowledge of missions and deepen the purposes and result in a larger service in the church.

This conference coming at this time will afford an opportunity for the women of the church to gain the inspiration which will make possible a large enthusiasm in their work for the coming year. It will also afford an opportunity for a delightful summer outing. Beautiful Junaluska, with its wonderful mountain scenery, its delightful climate, is an ideal spot in which to spend a vacation period. Combining as it does the opportunity for rest and recreation with the inspiration of a great conference, thus meeting presents an appeal which cannot fail to find a response in the hearts of the women in Southern Methodism.

One of the golden opportunities of such a conference is the fellowship of missionary workers.

Reservations should be made as early as possible. No woman interested in the Centenary should fail to be present. Write Mr. A. L. Dietrich, Business Manager, Junaluska, N. C., for information in regard to reservations.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Try This For Your Health

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, uric acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spent months at the Spas of Europe and were almost invariably benefited, or permanently relieved.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered, and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three week's treatment (two five gallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if it fails to benefit your case I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a hundred, on the average, say that they have received no benefit. The water is restoring thousands. It restored my health when my friends and physicians thought my case was incurable and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If I win you become a life friend of the Spring. If I lose I will be sorry for you but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial and will gladly refund your money on request. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Spring,

Box 17-E, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

He Did Not Forget.

"The Forgotten Man"

This appeal is published by THE BOARD OF FINANCE of the METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, in behalf of the superannuated preachers and the widows of deceased preachers of said church. Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary, 510 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

May I suggest to my readers a few things that were done by the preacher who is now superannuated? If his life in the active service of mankind was not fruitful, this everlasting pleading in his behalf should come to an end. But if he so lived and served among men that he poured innumerable blessings into their lives, it is shameful and sinful ingratitude when those to whom he so graciously ministered leave him in his old age and physical infirmity to languish in pitiless poverty. If he has helped you in other days, you should help him this day.

He Saved a Life. Was it yours. Was it that of one very dear to you, sin had marred. Body and soul were in the grip of wickedness. You went to church just to get away from yourself—maybe. Somebody preached, and he told a wonderful story about One who is "able to save unto the uttermost all that come unto God by Him." You were stirred. You saw a ray of hope, and you responded to the preacher's pleading invitation. You became a new person that day, and since then you have been as one "clothed and in his right mind." If some celebrated physician had given you a new eye for one that was blind, you would not let him spend his old age suffering for proper food and clothing if you could help it. Would you? That preacher gave you two new eyes, a new body, a new soul and a wonderfully happy life in this world, and a passport to eternal life in the world to come. Now that preacher is "laid on the shelf—superannuated. He has practically nothing on which to live. The Board of Finance is trying to raise an Endowment Fund of $10,000,000 to take care of him and others like him. Will you help?

He Christened a Baby. Do you remember the day when the first little cherub came to brighten your home? How happy you were! All your plans for the future were made with reference to that little life. Then came a day when the opening bud seemed sweeter and more beautiful than on any day that had gone before. What day was that? It was when the little one was taken into the arms of the preacher and consecrated to the service of the Lord Jesus for all time. Who was the preacher, and what has become of him? Your baby has grown into full manhood or womanhood, and the impress of Christian ideals remains indelibly stamped upon him or her. But the preacher who officiated at that consecration service of many years ago, is now retired from active service—superannuated, because of age and physical impairment. He is trying to exist on an allowance from his church of about $200 per year. The H. C. L. of the present day leaves him constantly in want and distress. Don't you think it would be a beautiful act of appreciation on your part to send a substantial contribution to the Board of Finance for the Superannuate Endowment Fund to help this man?

He Builds a Church.—May be it was your church that he built. You have been enjoying the privilege of that house for years!—your family, too. But what about the man who struggled and sacrificed to build it? He is old, no longer able to preach, superannuated and poor. Can you continue to be comfortable in that church, doing nothing to help him in this time of his great need? If you could send a liberal contribution to the Board of Finance for the Superannuate Endowment Fund, it would be an everlasting benediction to him and to others like him.

He Performs a Ceremony.—Was it your son or daughter that he joined in wedlock? Or was it yourself? Just think how happy you and yours have been. I can see your lovely children playing about, and your beautiful home. Who opened the door that let you into such joys? I hear you say "the preacher did." What preacher? What was his name? How long ago was it? Where is that preacher now? How goes it with him? You don't know! Well, I am writing to tell you that the preacher who married you to your heart's choice is now superannuated, maybe. He is very poor. He receives from his church the pitiful amount of $200 per year. He is lonely and forgotten. If you are half the man or woman that you ought to be, you will sit right down and write a check for the Superannuate Endowment Fund and send it to the Board of Finance in appreciation of the service rendered.

He Attends a Funeral.—Was it your loved one that he buried? Do you remember his comforting words? It was a very dark day for you, but he let the light come in. And when you returned again home from the cemetery and saw the "empty chair," O what torture gripped your soul! But you remembered that preacher's words, and you were calm again. Then the morrow came, and there was that "empty chair" bigger and more terrible than ever. Suddenly you seemed to give way entirely, and you were just about to collapse from your awful grief and loneliness—then somebody knocked at the door, walked in, and sat down in the "empty chair!" Who was it? It was that preacher who conducted the funeral. He knew that you would be needing him on the day after the burial, and he came. And now he is needing you. Will you come? Will you allow this man to spend his last days in want when a liberal contribution from you to the Superannuate Endowment Fund would serve to lighten his burden and to brighten his last days?

Lest You Forget.—The foregoing facts are brought to your attention to help you to remember. But it is not enough for you merely to picture in mental vision the service done for you and your loved ones by the preachers who are now superannuated. Let your interest assume a practical expression. Send a liberal contribution to the great fund we are building to care for these old heroes in their old age and physical impairment. Your help is badly needed now. The high cost of living is exacting merciless toll from all of us, but for the superannuated preachers it has created conditions of distress that are intolerable. Other men have a chance to meet the situation by securing higher salaries, but superannuated preachers have no salaries at all—they are dependent on the meager allowances granted them by the church annually. Help them.

A NOTE FROM EL PASO, TEXAS.

I came out here in January, 1919, with my stepdaughter. She passed away in August, 1919, but I lingered here in this glorious West.

I am one of the great family of Trinity M. E. Church, South, of which Dr. P. R. Knickerbocker is pastor. He is a great man. I never saw a church better organized; it is alive all through. Mrs. D. M. Smith is president of the missionary society (she is a sister of our beloved Mrs. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport).

I am glad that the M. E. Church rejected the proposition of unification. I felt, if they had accepted, that I would do as Dr. Steel said, "Go to heaven through the woods alone."

With prayer for your work as editor of the Advocate, and best wishes,

Your friend in Christ,

OLLIE HUTCHENS.

JAPAN'S NEW BISHOP.

At the recent meeting of the General Conference of the Japan Methodist Church, a Southern Methodist, Rev. Kogoro Usaki, D.D., was elected bishop, succeeding Bishop Haralwa, whose term had expired. He is the third in the succession of Japanese bishops, the first, Bishop Y. Honda, having been formerly a member of the M. E. Church, and Bishop Haralwa a Canadian Methodist.

The new bishop is a graduate of Kwansei Gakuin, our great college at Kobe, and was a student also at Vanderbilt University. For eight years he was editor of "Gokyo," the official organ of Japanese Methodism, for four years he was Missionary Secretary, and since that time has been President of Chin Zei Gakkawan, a Methodist college. He is an able man, eloquent of address, and in every way well equipped for the office of bishop. The General Conference voted almost unanimously to reduce the episcopal term from eight years to four, with privilege of re-election.—Missionary Voice.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Minutes of Woman's District Meeting, Houma District.

On the morning of Thursday, June 16, the first session of the conference was called to order with Mrs. A. P. Holt, Conference State Secretary, presiding.

After the opening hymn, "Oh, Zion, Haste," and prayer by the presiding elder, Rev. Martin Hebert, Mrs. A. E. Sayers, District Secretary, led the devotional hour with an inspiring message on the story of the Samaritan woman, the first missionary in the New Testament. Then followed a series of sentence prayers.

Mrs. A. P. Cantrelle, President of the Houma Auxiliary, welcomed the visiting delegates and spoke of her own deep interest in missions, so deep that she asked us to pray that God would call one or more of her own daughters to go out into the mission fields—that she would gladly give them to God for whatever service He might want of them.

To the calling of the roll, Mrs. Cantrelle, Miss Hooper, Mrs. Sayers, and Mrs. White, of the Houma Auxiliary, responded; and Mrs. Robert Martin and Mrs. Preva Matherne, of the Bayou Blue Auxiliary. There were no delegates present from either the Point au Chene or the La Croix Societies at the morning session.

Though a new district and one of scattered charges, the report of the District Secretary showed four live auxiliaries, all growing in interest and enthusiasm for the Master's Cause and all eager to learn more of mission work. She urged upon the auxiliaries now in existence the importance and the blessing in developing the pledge interest. She also urged the organizing of auxiliaries in all the churches in the district and the merging of the Ladies' Aid Societies into regular missionary societies.

While the Raceland church has no regular auxiliary, their Ladies' Aid Society was represented by several visitors.

In the group of visitors from Plattenville was Mrs. F. E. Baker, our State Superintendent of Supplies, who told us something of the work of her department.

Deaconess Ella K. Hooper spoke of the wonderful work for girls being done at our school in Georgia, the Vashti Industrial School, where homeless girls are trained for God's service. The morning session then adjourned to meet again at 3 p.m.

Promptly at 3 o'clock, the afternoon session of the conference was called to order and the congregation sang "Rescue the Perishing."

Mrs. Bihm, delegate to the district conference from Port Barre, led the devotions by reading Matthew 6:27-37, followed by prayer by Deaconess Ella Hooper.

Mrs. Bihm told us of the conditions at Port Barre, emphasizing the need of missionary work at that point, and stated that she intended to go back home and try to get the women to organize an auxiliary.

The presiding elder followed this talk with a strong appeal for workers at St. Martinsville.

Deaconess Hooper told us of the value of the Supply Department's work in having boxes sent to the MacDonell Wesley House, through which she is enabled to bring cheer and comfort to many poor homes "down the bayous" of Terrebonne and Lafourche Parishes.

Mrs. Kelly, Secretary of the Point au Chene Auxiliary, reported for her society, how the day of the Missionary meeting is the great day of the month for them, and how every woman in the society has made her pledge for the year. Mrs. Kelly is one of our consecrated volunteer workers, who goes to Point au Chene for each meeting and helps Miss Hooper with that work. She acts as their secretary because there is no woman in the society who can either read or write well enough to keep the record. The women down there sell eggs and chickens to the peddlers to earn the money for their dues.

Brother Robert Martin, delegate to the district conference, who is one of the pioneer Methodists of this section, stated that he wished to bear witness to the value of the work of the Woman's Missionary Society in these parishes. From a keen understanding of the needs of his people, he is convinced that this work is bearing the greatest results, in proportion to the expenditure, of any work being done by the church.

Brother Alcee Martin, pastor at Lockport and Raceland, told us of his work, covering an area that kept him constantly "moving," even with the aid of his missionary Ford; and he, too, made an urgent plea for more workers. Our District Secretary, Mrs. Sayers, followed him by a direct appeal for volunteers to help in this needy field.

In response to this appeal, Mrs. Schoen, of the Houma auxiliary, volunteered the use of her car and herself to drive workers into the field as needed, and to do all that she possibly could to help forward God's Kingdom.

Mrs. B. F. Key, State Superintendent for Young People, spoke strongly on that work and urged the young people to give a greater place in their lives to "the place of secret prayer."

Mrs. Sayers then read us a letter from Mrs. Lipscomb, Home Base Secretary, outlining plans for this year, with suggestions as to same, urging upon the members of the auxiliaries earnest prayer for missions.

After the closing number, an exquisite violin solo, "Meditation," by Rev. Mr. Bruiet of St. Martinsville, all were invited to the home of Mrs. J. H. Pullen, where we spent a most enjoyable social hour and were served delicious cake and punch.

The whole day was one of inspiration and helpful discussion of the problems in this field, and the conference closed with every one feeling that it had been most worth-while.

The next District Meeting for the Houma District is to be held at Patterson, and we pray that it may be as great an occasion as this.

Respectfully submitted,
LAURA M. WHITE, Sec'y.

If you have warning symptoms such as a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backache, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begin taking the medicine at once. We know it will help you as it did Mrs. Koppl.

Does Your Blood Need Iron?

How to Make the Test That Tells

A pale face, a nervous irritable disposition, a lack of strength and endurance—these are the warning signals that Nature gives when your blood is getting thin, pale, watery and starving for iron. If you are not sure of your condition, go to your doctor and have him take your blood count, or else make the following test yourself: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. All good druggists sell Nuxated Iron, on the distinct understanding that if you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

NOTES FROM DR. W. B. BEAUCHAMP.

Warsaw.

Before the war, Warsaw was a place of 800,000 people. Now it has one million and a half, or has nearly doubled so a room or a house is nearly impossible. We were able to secure a room only through the Embassy and the American Relief Association. The Mission has its headquarters in a hotel, The Bristol. Here also are the A. R. A. rooms, the Spanish Embassy, the Italian Embassy and Paderewski and his suite. I understand that he owns this hotel. We traveled with him from Vienna to Warsaw in the same sleeping car.

The suffering among the children is unspeakable. The A. R. A. feeds 65,000 children a day in Warsaw, 130,000 in Poland, at an expense of a million and a half dollars a month. This is a tremendous piece of work and yet I am informed that two-thirds of all the children in Poland are underfed. The women go barefoot on the streets. No country on earth presents such an opportunity for immediate service. We visited four of the feeding stations of the A. R. A. to-day—a milk station for babies, a rice station for sick children, the soup station for the many, and the breadline where they contend for place and chance to get bread. It is simply heart-rending; the faces white and stomachs distended.

We now think that we shall take a farm and get some five hundred children for permanent training—farming, nursing and real educational work. This seems to be the finest way to do abiding work. The government officials are very considerate and I think we can get all needful concessions. To get rooms here for work is most difficult. We ought to have headquarters and place for supply station.

We have good plans for the Czech country, but this country is more difficult for religions work.

Belgium.

Things are shaping up well. Our first building at Ypres will be ready for work, June 25, and we have a fine opportunity for service. We have elected school property on the Longcapes a most attractive property. The outlook is fine.

We are making an exchange of the central building for a larger building on Isle de Mars that is splendidly located for our work. We are already having a morning service for English speaking people and the promise is fine.

HELPING TWO YOUNG PREACHERS.

I have recently been engaged in a meeting at Lake Cormorant, Miss., assisting Julian S. Duncan, whom I helped on Oxford circuit last year. It did my soul good to help young ministers who are earnest and true; so I was glad to go to Brother Duncan at Lake Cormorant. He is one of our best results among the young men of the North Mississippi Conference. His people are very fond of him. They give the evidence of a readiness to follow his leadership.

We had a splendid meeting. The church was greatly stimulated and revived. We had people attending from Robinsonville and Banks, with the community much interested. Although the continued rains had put the farmers far behind, still they attended well. Brother Duncan is doing a splendid work.

Then we went to Coffeeville to help Bro. R. G. Lord, whom we helped two years ago at Taylor's. He and his good wife have great promise. They are in great favor at Coffeeville. Truly, Lord is every inch a man and the people know it. Our meeting had to close too, soon. It was getting in good headway when we had to close. Still, there was great good in the meeting as shown by the hearty response of many that showed the quickening of the Holy Spirit. No church can perish so long as such choice young men as Duncan and Lord come into her ministry.

W. M. YOUNG.

God's best gifts to his children are in the future, not in the past. There are always better things to come than those that have been received. It, therefore, a child of God thinks that the former days were better than these, he may know that the trouble is not with the days, but with himself.—Selected.

WANTED: A MORE THOROUGH STUDY AND UNDERSTANDING OF OUR BOYS.

Not long since, there appeared in the Advocate a wonderful little poem, "Wanted: A Boy." It is true that we all want our boys to come up to the specifications of that little poem. What a great place the world would be if all the boys lived up to that standard! And there is so much said about what the boys ought to be, that I can but wonder if the boy is really given his just due for what he is. Do we look for the good in the boy, and help him to develop that good, or do we magnify the boy's faults too much, and make him feel that we think him worthless, and cause him to dread to be around us?

The boy who is just emerging from childhood into boyhood—that mysterious age where the mysteries of life are being unfolded before him; where he is just beginning to grasp some of the real mysteries of life and to form opinions; where the child mind is struggling to reach out for deeper things—is extremely sensitive and easily embarrassed. His mind is in such a peculiar state of conception and wonderment that it takes a lot of study to be able to read him. Are we helping our boys to reach the standard of that little poem then, or are we finding it too much trouble to bother with them?

I believe that the boy between the ages of twelve and eighteen years, more or less, is the most abused and misunderstood being in the world. Most people are too prone to think they are in the way, nothing but a nuisance, and would like to be able to skip that age with them, just as they would like to get out of almost any other hard task. The boy is a problem, but he also has his problems, and I think that we should try to understand his problems and help him to solve and adjust them.

Boys at this age are growing and developing rapidly. They are perhaps lazy, both mentally and physically, and negligent and thoughtless. Should we, then, make them feel that they are no good, and will never amount to anything, or should we try to encourage them and help them to find their proper footing? I believe that we all, more or less, neglect our duty to the growing boy. After all, the boy is a great institution, and would be missed sadly, should the Lord see fit to skip with them from the age of ten or twelve years, to that of young manhood. Some people sit back at their ease and expect a boy to be infallible, and instead of helping him to be as near so as it is possible for humans to be, they give him a kick everytime he slips. Pick him up and try to help him to overcome his failures, rather than to expect him to get through the world without help. Some folk never remember that they were at that age once, and had to be helped and trained and taught and worried with. They actually seem to believe that they came all the way through the world accomplishing everything for themselves, never making a mistake, and never being given a helping hand. I suspect that most of that kind of folk were the ones who were the most trying.

I believe there is good in every boy, and that it is our duty to look for it. Why go through life expecting the boy to be bad? Why not expect him to be good, and help him to be? I believe that a boy with the right encouragement, with the proper amount of faith in him, will come a great deal nearer the standard of being the boy we want him to be, than the one who is always expected to be bad, and always given a knock, and made to feel that we have no faith in him.

There are altogether too many cases where boys struggling to do right, are ridiculed for their misteps and failures, rather than given the proper help and encouragement. There are too many people in this world prone to count the little things, and neglect their own duty towards the larger and deeper things. As the boy of to-day grows into the man of tomorrow, he is not always strong enough to fight out all the difficult battles of his life alone. Give him the help he needs, and bear with him in his failures. Help him to study his failures, finding out why they are failures in order that he may reconstruct his efforts, and make the success he will love to make, and that you want to see him make. I would that I had the time and money at my disposal to spend my life working among the young boys. They need sympathetic help and get entirely too little of it. Let us all buckle down to the study of our boys, and change that poem to "Found: A Boy."

FROM PONCHATOULA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We have been intending to write the Advocate ever since coming to Ponchatoula, but have put it off from time to time in order to have something extraordinary about which to write; as the unusual has not happened to any startling degree, we have decided not to wait any longer, lest we forget entirely.

In the first place, we have a peculiarly great field in which to labor. While we have a splendid citizenship, there are more unchurched people in and around Ponchatoula than in any place of its size in which we have ever labored, so we believe the Ponchatoula Methodist Church has the greatest opportunity of any church in Louisiana. We are, therefore, asking the prayers of the Advocate and its readers, that we may meet the situation intelligently and occupy the territory profitably.

While we have not turned the world upside down here, we have been doing some things worth while. We have held what we consider, in many respects, a most remarkable meeting at Ponchatoula, in which Rev. A. S. Lutz, our much beloved and able presiding elder, did the preaching, which, in our judgment, could not have been improved upon. We consider the meeting remarkable from the fact that in spite of the other things injected into it, we had splendid results. During the time the meeting was in progress, we held a district Sunday school institute, a church conference, a quarterly conference, attended two funerals, licensed two exhorters, received four adults into the church on profession of faith, and one young man professed to be called to the ministry and is now preparing for his examination for license to preach. So we feel that it has been a remarkable meeting and that its results will last.

Since coming to the work, we have baptized 17 children, 4 adults, performed 7 marriage ceremonies, officiated at 5 funerals, and have made many pastoral calls, and discharged other duties, so you see we have not been idle much of the time.

Last, but not least, the stewards raised the pastor's salary $218 over last year and they have kept paid well up to date, and besides they say they are going to bring the finances up in full, which will be a record-breaker for the charge.

Your brother in Christ,

FARMING BY ELECTRICITY.

Electricity is used today to perform 125 different kinds of chores on the farm. A few years ago electricity was only used in the country for lighting but every day finds some new application. There are, for instance, more than thirty kinds of farm machinery being operated electrically. Grain is thrashed by electric machinery, feed is ground, food for the live stock is cut and mixed, hay is hoisted into the barns and even the clover is hulled in this way. The up-to-date churn is run by electricity, even the incubator is heated and the chickens hatched out by the same mysterious power. The farmer of the future may find all the drudgery of farm work done away and instead of laboring for long hours can do the work quickly and well by merely turning on a switch. We hear a great deal nowadays about boys leaving the farm to go to the city. The Government is trying to teach farmers to use electricity and keep the boys at home.—Boys' Life for July.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE SIMPLE WAY IS BEST.

Wisdom suggests and experience has proved that the best way to say or do a thing is to say or do it the simplest way possible. A fine thought may be covered up with a multitude of high-sounding words and phrases, and the reader or hearer may fail to catch the idea that would have quickened his mind and enlarged his soul. A beautiful deed may be done with so much of fine acting and striving for effect that its real significance is lost sight of. Simplicity is one of the cardinal elements of beauty and strength.

WHAT OF THE PRAYER MEETING?

It may have been true once, but it is no longer true that the prayer meeting is the spiritual thermometer of the church; if it were, we should have to acknowledge that its spiritual life is almost extinct. So far as our knowledge extends, a well-attended prayer meeting is the exception rather than the rule. We have read a good many treatises on how to make this midweek service a success, and we have talked with a good many people who have given serious consideration to the subject—but we have found no solution to the problem. The class meeting, which was once looked upon as the spiritual dynamo of every society, has practically disappeared; will the prayer meeting follow along with it? Does the prayer meeting really meet a need in the lives of the few who still attend it? Has the multiplication of organizations in the church crowded it out or made it unnecessary? Is our modern social and industrial life so organized as to make the old-fashioned prayer meeting a practical impossibility? If the prayer meeting is passing away, what will take its place—or is it to have no successor? We find it much easier to ask questions than to answer them.

IN DEBT TO THE CHURCH.

Every man who joins the church from good motives and follows its teachings conscientiously, receives from it more than he gives to it. The church is a divine institution, sanctioned by Christ and supported by the Spirit of God. It does not ask men to ally themselves with it as a matter of favor, and it is not dependent upon their favors for its maintenance or success. The church appeals to men because of what it can do for them, rather than because of what they can do for it. Some people appear to condescend to join the church—how pitifully conceited they are! To say nothing of the spiritual benefits it confers, the church gives more than it receives in other ways. Many a family owes its high social standing in community more to its membership in the church than to any other one thing; many a man has been helped to success in business and profession because of his church activities and friendships; time after time membership in the church is all that stands between a person and loss of community respect. To take advantage of what the church does for us is hypocritical and mean; to recognize it is simple justice.

IT DOES NOT PAY.

A recent magazine writer estimates that about eighty thousand men, women, and children will be killed in the United States this year, and that about fourteen millions will be injured—all in accidents ninety per cent of which are preventable. With such figures before us, it is amazing that we should continue to be so unconcerned and so CARELESS, for it is carelessness that is responsible for this ninety per cent of preventable deaths and accidents. Most of us have a mania for taking a chance. If we are walking, we try to beat the street car or the automobile across the street; if we are driving, we want to dash around or cut in ahead of the other fellow. Whatever we are doing, or wherever we are, we are too prone to forget that taking a chance is a risky piece of business. "Safety first" may sound foolish and old-fashioned to some people—but it is a good motto for old and young alike.

POOR COW!

A news item last week was to the effect that an illicit distillery had been discovered by officers of the law by watching a cow that showed every sign of intoxication. Investigation indicated that she had been feeding on the mash used to make the forbidden drink, and a little search brought to light the concealed outfit. We pity the cow more than we blame her. We can scarcely conceive of her being in determined opposition to the Eighteenth Amendment. As an intelligent, peaceable, and law-abiding animal, we do not believe she could be convicted in any court of willful violation of the duly enacted statutes of the supreme legislative body of the land. She was too unsophisticated to have sought out the distillery of her own accord, and too simple-minded to realize the enormity of her crime. She was the innocent victim of circumstances, the unwilling sufferer from wrongs she did not commit. How execrable the men who led her astray from the paths of temperance and virtue!

A FREE COUNTRY.

Sometimes we are inclined to [illegible] people because they do not think [illegible] exactly as we should like to have them. Our attitude seems to be based upon the silent assumption that our way is right absolutely, and that those who do not agree with us are to be cast into outer darkness or some other uncomfortable place of abode. We may be right and all other people may be wrong—but we should never forget that this is a free country, and that within the limits of propriety and justice, people have a right to do exactly as they please. We are at liberty under obligation, it may be, to warn a man of the error of his way, to plead with him to change his manner of life, to endeavor with all the persuasiveness of affectionate concern to look at things as we look at them. But we are not at liberty to hurl at him epithets of condemnation or terms of scorn. Even the best of people sometimes have differences that are matters of conscience.

DRIVE THEM OUT.

Recent press dispatches state that the Allies, in replying to the objections of the Turks to the peace treaty, have indicated in no uncertain way that they will seriously consider the advisability of "ejecting the Turks from Europe once for all," if they do not change their attitude by July 27. If there were not still in our mind some faint recollection of what history has to say concerning the solicitude the European nations have shown for the "Sick Man of the East" for several centuries, we should be inclined to believe that the good day is near at hand when this villain among the nations would receive his just deserts. But international jealousies and an insane respect for the "balance of power" have been the Turk's salvation in the past, and we fear it will continue to be. It is a strange thing, though, that the Christian world will continue to deal gently with this monster of cruelty and iniquity in Europe while, at the same time, it is called upon to minister to the victims of his program of butchery in the East.

IT DEPENDS.

We happened to read in a local newspaper the other day a glowing account of a new era of great content that has come to the shoppers of New Orleans by reason of the remarkable reductions that are being made in the prices of shoes, clothing, etc. Among other items, we noticed that shoes that formerly sold for $20 or $25, can now be bought for as little as $17. After all, it depends upon the point of view. It is only fair to add, however, that some of the merchants, compelled, as they say, by late delivery of summer goods and the early arrival of fall stocks, have really helped the weary ultimate consumer by making material reductions from former prices.

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE SACRAMENTS.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D.

V.

The Lord's Supper.

Recalling the general statements contained in Article III in regard to the nature of the sacraments, let us briefly consider the significance and value of the Lord's Supper. This implies, of course, that in the very beginning we eliminate all the magical and sacerdotal meanings which have been imported into it by Roman Catholicism.

Partly because of its inherent nature and partly because of the associations that gather about it, the Lord's Supper is the most effective symbol that ever existed. The sacred meal had been a familiar institution for hundreds of years when Jesus gathered the little band about him in the Upper Room for the Last Supper. First of all in prominence and importance was the Paschal Supper, the symbol of God's covenant with the Chosen People and of their deliverance from the bondage of Egypt. Then there was the sacred meal of the Essenes and the Sabbath meal celebrated in every Jewish home at the beginning of the Sabbath on Friday evening. The description of the manner in which the latter was celebrated found in the Mishna reminds us very much of the celebration of the Lord's Supper in some of our Protestant churches. "At the beginning of the meal the cup, blessed with prayer by one of the family, preferably the father, was handed round. Then the bread was blessed which was broken and eaten during the meal, and a thanksgiving followed, to which the company responded 'Amen'" The force of all these age-long, hallowed associations was carried over into the sacramental meal instituted by Jesus and still lingers about it with others of like quality that have accumulated during 1900 years of Christian history. Add to this the fact that, as will appear in the course of our discussion, the symbol is in itself the most fitting and impressive that was ever conceived, and it will be easy to see why Christians have found in it a means of grace that is inexpressibly precious.

A Memorial.

The Lord's Supper, like the Paschal Feast, is a memorial, a memorial of his love and of his sacrifice. "Do this," he says, "in remembrance of me." The red juice of the crushed grape reminds us of his blood that was shed for us. The broken bread reminds us of his body that was broken for us. The feast as a whole recalls all the deep significance of his passion and stands as a perpetual sign of the new covenant sealed by his blood. It thus serves to keep vividly in our minds precious truths which we cannot afford for a moment to forget, and which, nevertheless, because of our necessary limitations and the distracting influences which we find it impossible to escape, we are in constant danger of allowing to slip from us. There are not many sincere Christians who cannot recall times when, as they reverently received the symbols of the broken body and shed blood, the sublime truths for which these symbols stand became so vitally real to them that their hearts were deeply stirred and their faith mightily quickened. In other words, truths which were in danger of becoming merely vague intellectual possessions have, in the moment of eating and drinking, suddenly become surcharged with spiritual power, power to renew the soul and lift it to a higher level of love and devotion.

A Symbol of Fellowship.

The Lord's Supper is also a symbol of fellowship—of fellowship first of all with the living Christ who sat with the Twelve in the Upper Room. As has already been observed, religion is fundamentally a matter of personal relation between the individual and the Heavenly Father. It is now generally admitted that the chief factor in moral and spiritual achievement is the influence of personality. John Tyndall said of his noble Christian friend and fellow-worker, Farraday, "His presence was inspiration and energy." And this is true in a measure of all men and women of high character and sympathetic and engaging personality. Their presence not only rebukes our selfishness and awakens within us holy desires and aspirations, but recruits our strength and confidence and courage.

The only friendship, however, that is completely satisfying, that is sufficient for the cleansing, quickening and nurture of the soul and for its support amid the conflicts of life is friendship with God. Herein lies at least a part of the significance of the incarnation. Christ came to reconcile us to the Heavenly Father by destroying the barriers created by our sin and ignorance.

And herein lies the whole significance of what we call "the means of grace." They are not artificial channels through which in a mechanical way spiritual blessings are poured into the soul, but, as some one has aptly expressed it, "are simply ways of getting into personal relation with God."

As Christians, we cannot, of course, think of God as absent from any place or as more truly present in any given place than in others. He is always everywhere. He is the inescapable One. "In Him we live and move and have our being."

"Whither shall I go from thy spirit?
Or whither shall I flee from thy presence?
If I take the wings of the morning,
And dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea,
Even there thy hand shall lead me
And thy right hand shall hold me."

The purpose of the sacraments is not to bring God to some point where he is not, but to help us to realize the presence of One who is already "closer to us than breathing, nearer than hands and feet."

By its vivid representation of the life and sacrificial suffering of Jesus and of his tender fellowship with his disciples in the Upper Room, the Lord's Supper kindles our faith and devotion and enables us to realize his promise, "Lo, I am with you always." In it we touch his very life and our souls are flooded with light and love and energy. From such vital and holy fellowship we go back to our lowly tasks, as the disciples went down from the Mount of Transfiguration, carrying with us a new sense of spiritual realities and of the divine presence and new strength and enthusiasm for the duties and difficulties that await us.

A Symbol of Unity.

The sacrament is also a symbol of the unity of believers in Christ Jesus and of the love that should bind them in a vital brotherhood. It is a rebuke to selfishness and narrowness and to all unholy and unbrotherly dispositions and tempers. It is difficult to see how a sincere Christian who understands the true Protestant position in regard to the sacraments can approach the Lord's Table without renouncing enmity, sectarian bigotry, the spirit of self-indulgence and every kind of worldly pride and ambition. Nor is it easier to see how one can kneel with his fellow-disciples and partake of the sacred symbols which recall the Savior's love and passion and the blessed fellowship in the Upper Room without being moved to a new dedication of himself to the manner of life which all the associations of the occasion and the symbols suggest.

A Call to Penitence.

The above statements imply that the call to partake of the Lord's Supper is a call to repentance. This is clearly recognized in the ritual of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which provides that the service of communion shall be preceded by a general confession in which all the people are expected to join and that the invitation shall be extended to those "who truly and earnestly repent of their sins and are in love and charity with their neighbors and intend to lead a new life, following the commandments of God and walking from henceforth in his holy ways." One needs but to study human life and especially his own life to see why this is necessary. Most of us are guilty of many actual transgressions, and the best of us constantly fall short of our ideals. The truth is, the latter must necessarily be the case in a growing life, for to such a life there come from day to day clearer visions of truth and nobler conceptions of duty and with these there is bound to come also a realization of shortcomings in the matter of conduct. Our acts of self-dedication, therefore, called forth by our participation in a rite which vividly recalls our Lord's sacrificial passion, are not a mere dreary round of penitential exercises. On the contrary, they mark the steps of our ascent, the progressive opening of our eyes and widening of our horizon. The call of the Lord's Supper is always to newness of life. For the possibilities of spiritual growth and of the deepening of Christian experience are never exhausted. "Forgetting the things which are behind and stretching forward to the things which are before" is the perpetual motto of every one who knows Christ and who finds the meaning and possibilities of life interpreted in him.

Who May Partake?

The terms of invitation in the ritual of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as indicated above, are to "all who truly and earnestly repent of their sins, are in love and charity with their neighbors and intend to lead a new life, following the commandments of God and walking in his holy ways." Of course, however, the invitation must be interpreted in the light of the fact that the eucharist is a Christian sacrament, standing for all that is involved in the sacrificial passion of our Lord. The new life to which it refers is the life to which men are called in him, the holy ways in which it challenges us to walk are the ways of purity, meekness, love and service which he marked out for us.

It therefore, implies loyalty to Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior. But it does not require the acceptance of a definite creed. It does not require that a man shall have been baptized in any particular manner or even that he shall have been baptized at all. This interpretation is repeated by John Wesley again and again, and he regards the fact that it stands on such a broad platform of Christian catholicity as one of the glories of Methodism. This does not mean that he regarded soundness of doctrine as unimportant, but only that he regarded but one thing as essential, namely, loyalty in heart and purpose to Christ and his ideal.

This I believe to be the true Biblical position. After laying down some general principles in 1 Cor. xi, St. Paul adds in verse 28: "But let a man test himself, and so let him eat of the bread and drink of the cup." The substance of his general directions is that a man's fitness or unfitness for partaking is entirely a matter of moral and spiritual attitude. If one sincerely desires to know Christ, to come into living fellowship with him to the end that he may be cleansed from his sin and empowered to live according to Christ's ideal, then he has a right to avail himself of the benefits of his blessed means of grace. The man who eats and drinks unworthily is not the man who is conscious that he is not as good as he should be, but the man who is impelled by unworthy motives or who, as is implied in 1 Cor. xi: 27, "Eats of the bread or drinks of the cup of the Lord carelessly"—that is, without such a sense of reverence as the sacred rite demands. But the man who is penitent, who is humble, who longs to get closer to his Lord and to serve him better can afford without fear to heed the invitation, "draw near with faith and take this holy sacrament to your comfort."

THE BISHOPS' APPEAL FOR THE CAUSE OF EDUCATION.

Your bishops, feeling deeply its importance, are moved to issue a brief address upon the urgency of the Educational Campaign shortly to begin. Responding to the askings from both foreign and home fields, our church has pledged fifty millions of dollars to be paid during the five years following. In order that the mind of the church may be concentrated on this great objective, the late General Conference postponed the appeal for education until the present year, despite its urgency the better to equip our educational institutions to man our work both at home and abroad.

In responding to the askings from our great foreign and home fields, and to the mighty appeal for help from the war zone of devastated Europe, we have awakened to a fresh sense of the divine blessing shown to our own favored land. There has been quickened a sense of our responsibility to share with our race the blessings of our Protestant faith and the larger opportunities which come with Christian education. We owe both money and life service to our brothers in remote lands. No college graduate has ever gone out into the world with such responsibilities. While old men may declare wars, young men must fight and win the battles of the world. The new China is possible not only through the labors of our faithful missionaries, but through the new ideas which have come from our educational institutions and through equipped men who are able to serve their country in every branch of useful activity. To make effective our help, we must furnish trained leaders and teachers. Never have such liberal gifts been made to the cause of education as have followed the close of the great world war, as untold millions have been consecrated in our own land to this great cause. It would seem that a new commission to educate has been given to the church and the nation. We now share Edmund Burke's estimate of education in his statesman-like words: "Education is the chief defense of nations." We have too long been counting cannon, munitions and navies as essential to a nation's defense, yet more necessary is the skill which can create the most powerful explosives or develop the greatest strategy. Marshall Foch's brain in time of war or peace is more than Von Hindenburg's brutal cannon. That which builds up a nation in the image of God is of far greater worth and counts more for its permanency than the mailed hand which threatens.

Moreover, our educational institutions when endowed outlive wars and revolutions, whether they be political or religious, which destroy nearly every vestige of the age in which these institutions were founded. Cambridge and Oxford are more stable than the British throne. Education develops power by strengthening the faculties and furnishing the intellectual and moral and spiritual resources. The function of the true educator is to "ring a rising bell in the dormitory of the soul." True education means the development of personality. The most enlightened nations owe their high ideals to the men of personality who have gotten all from Christ, to whom we owe the growing idealism of our day. The true goal of the race is the kingdom of God [illegible] Christ, the Son of God. [illegible] nation who [illegible] control of the [illegible] true pattern for [illegible] in the might of God. No weapon [illegible] against it [illegible].

The appeal to [illegible] appeal to [illegible] truly and, [illegible] to define [illegible] Patriotism [illegible] which truly [illegible] tion. No material motives can [illegible] ideals or [illegible] "Whatever [illegible] doeth greatly be [illegible] whole [illegible]," declared one [illegible] which best serve [illegible] bring to that service the [illegible] personality of her young men winning and [illegible] ing men. Let our youth learn what a college education brings into a life. It means "to be at home in all lands and all ages; to count Nature a familiar and Fortune an intimate friend; to gain a standard for the appreciation of other's work and the criticism of our own; to carry the keys of the world's library in your pocket and feel its invisible springs turning in your hands; to make friends among the men of your own age who are to be leaders in all the walks of life; to lose yourself in generous enthusiasms and cooperate with others in common ends; to learn manners from students who are gentlemen and form character under professors who are Christians—this is the offer of the college for the best four years of your life."

To secure for one's self this larger vision of life and to make it possible for others as, in our day, the worthy ambition of any servant of God or of man! Childless Alexander H. Stephens selected more than ninety young men of promise, whom he sought to aid in securing an education, and he declared that it was the best investment of his own heart and brain. Others are following his wise example. Especially notable have been the examples of our pioneer preachers who have left us the children of their prayers in the Christian institutions of learning which they helped to found, and thus served their own generation by the will of God. Their children rise up and call them blessed. We best honor them by seeking to build on the foundations which they so wisely and so courageously laid, and we can thus serve our own and future generations. Christianity has thus enlightened the race in erecting the college by the side of the church. Not only is Christianity the foe of illiteracy, but a nation is measured by what it does in securing the highest standard of culture among its citizens.

To make more effective what is being so nobly dedicated to the cause of Christian missions, we must reinforce our workers in the field with our trained men and women. When Antioch became the center of apostolic missionary activity, it was because, as the church waited on the Lord in prayer, the Holy Spirit commanded, "Separate unto me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." Thus the Lord of the harvest used the best equipped men for the forward movement, and the great era of missionary achievement began. The church must be willing to give her best at the call of her Lord.

The call is for large gifts for our universities and colleges that we may greatly equip them for their great work. A knowledge of what we have done should stimulate us to do far more. "He that soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly." Our call for our two universities, our colleges and other institutions of learning is urgent and is to be measured in dollars as was the Centenary call. A church of millions should think in millions of dollars when [illegible] the needs and claims of her several [illegible] for the best educational [illegible]. We [illegible] by [illegible] our resources which [illegible] year to year.

Peru: The Land of Mystery.

Peru, the seat of a wonderful ancient civilization, is large enough for a modern empire. Stretching from near the equator some 1200 miles south, it is as large as the combined area of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, and Arizona. Its coast line of about 1800 miles is rainless and barren, and has few good harbors. Its mountains in the interior are lofty and picturesque, and filled with every variety of minerals, the deposits of copper being probably the most extensive in the world. The climate, except on the greatest elevations, is mild, and products of every zone may be found in its fields and forests. While its western rivers are small, they are important, because, fed by the mountain snows, they furnish irrigation to the arid coastal plains. The eastern rivers flow into the mighty Amazon and afford transportation to the Atlantic Ocean. Its railroads, penetrating portions of the Andes, present some of the most picturesque scenes on our globe.

As the center of the ancient Inca civilization, Peru has prehistoric ruins of marvelous extent and variety. Thinking, as we do, of the Indians as roving and predatory bands without permanent habitations, we can scarcely realize that in Peru at Cuzca and elsewhere, Indians had great fortified cities with golden temples and palaces, which, in magnitude and splendor, vie with Babylon, Alexandria, Greece, and Rome. It is probable that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these Inca emperors who ruled over a greater populace and a vaster realm. When we see the descendants of these once prosperous and progressive people reduced to pitiful poverty and performing the most menial tasks, we are amazed at the mutations of fickle fortune, and wonder if, at some distant day, our populous cities will be in ruins and our proud people serfs to some dominating power. Indeed, we have built no such enduring monuments and the teeth of time will quickly devour the evidences of our boasted might.

Lima, the capital of the Republic of Peru, is nearly a hundred years older than our oldest New England and Virginia settlements, and was for three hundred years the capital of the Spanish possessions in America. Built at the foot of the Andes, it was located by Pizarro near the sea so that it might have transportation and yet eight miles back from the coast to escape the raids of the buccaneers. It is to-day a city of 200,000 souls, with substantial and beautiful churches, government palaces, schools and other public buildings. Its paintings and statuary include many masterpieces and its archives rare ristoric documents. The bones of Pizarro, who overthrew one civilization and established another, rest in the cathedral whose foundations he had laid.

Callao is the seaport for Lima and the interior, and with its semicircular harbor protected by San Lorenzo Island on the west, it affords ample facilities for large ships, and consequently is the most important port between Panama and Valparaiso, Chile.

As we steamed into the bay after night-fall, the city of Callao, with Lima far in the background, brilliantly illuminated, rose like enchantment out of the sea; but as the harbor lights are poor and many ships at anchor displayed no signals, the entry was neither easy nor safe. Five interned German ships stood squarely in our path, and might, but for vigilance, have involved a collision. The dawn of day revealed a busy scene. Ships of many nations appeared and the water was covered with small craft. A government dry-dock floats a mile from shore where it is sunk to admit a ship and then raised by pumping until the inclosed ship is high and dry. A big ship was in it undergoing repairs. Two wrecked and partly dismantled vessels serve as coaling stations. Three Peruvian war ships, gray and grim, lie at rest, but with fires burning ready for any emergency. The white and yellow buildings line the shore for three miles, and the trees along the Rimac River mark its course back to the barren mountains behind Lima, which shyly reveals itself as the clouds lift their filmy veils. There, on a 900 foot hill, stands the 350-foot tower of the government wireless station by which communication is maintained with all parts of the republic, even with distant Iquitos beyond the sublime Andes on the banks of the Maranan, a branch of the immense Amazon. The background of mountains, rising one above another in seemingly unending heights, is majestic, for, although the sides are naked, they look, now like gold, now like snow, and now like gigantic sculpture, as they respond to the subtle influences of the sun and cloud and mist. So, too, does San Lorenzo Island to the west play with light and shadow. There in its barren solitude is the quarantine station, where suspected visitors are inhospitably entertained, and there are also aviation field and storage for explosives. As the serene sun sets, its molten mass is mirrored in the placid waves of the puissant Pacific.

Peru, land of ruins and forgotten memories, home of mystery, combining the ancient and the modern, and with a wealth which neither regal Incas nor greedy Spaniards have exhausted, beckons wierdly to the Twentieth Century adventurer. With less than five millions of people, it could sustain multiplied millions more. With undeveloped resources it invites the careful capitalist. With varied and enchanting scenes it lures the traveler. Its government and its people trust our country and welcome interchange of products and courtesies. With improved railroad facilities the charming climate and marvelous scenery and mystic ruins and ancient records will attract many a tourist and student of humanity seeking both pleasure and profit.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The need of the world to-day is a right conception of Jesus the Christ. He stands fully revealed in the New Testament writings. His birth is announced by the herald song of angels, his mission declared by John the Baptist and the Spirit's descent, symbolized by the doves, together with the Father's voice proclaiming his Sonship. His ministry, his suffering, his character, blending Infinite grace and perfect manliness, and his vindication, before all the ages, of his lofty claim as the anointed Son of God, by the rising from the dead, are clearly set forth by evangelist and apostle. The Christ of prophecy is fulfilled in the person, life and labor of the Man of Galilee.

To know him is eternal life. To serve him in obedience and loyal devotion, solves our deepest problems, for in him is no darkness. But this One, who is the assured faith and sure dependence of the race, is infinitely more than a mystical dream or a creature of fantastic human thought. A Christ of mere imagination has no power, nor grace to pardon sin and save to righteousness. To deny that sin exists—is real—is to deny the historic Christ and discredit all the vast range of his atoning work from Bethlehem to the Mount of Ascension. Men and women by scores are busy bowing down to false Christs—figments of an error as hideous as the cults of Venus or Baal. When Jesus stands in the gateway of life, calling the world laden with sin to him, he is no fanciful figure. He is the strong Son of God, perfect in his personality. He is no mystery to be unlocked by a key. In the majesty of his being he is the "Way, the Truth, the Life."

On the editorial page of the Advocate some weeks since appeared an article which was nothing less than a prose poem, an idyll of childhood. The grace and beauty of its style only enhanced the real worth and permanent value of its thought. Our editor was certainly on memory's train born backward over the bygone years, and wandered again beside the crystal streams and through the gleaming groves of his boyhood home. In the crash of the great city's din he heard again the music of the hills and saw the light shine through the spaces of the valley's forest trees. The theme was worthy of the man and the man bore the message of childhood's worth and childhood's wealth of ever-recurring beauty and grace to many who know and love childhood. St. Luke, in recording the words of the Master, places eternal value on these. Read anew these words: "Whosoever shall receive this little child in my name receiveth me, and whosoever shall receive me receiveth him that sent me; for he that is least among you, the same is great." Little children, then, are ministers, bearers of Christ to others. And receiving him through this ministry of child life, we receive the Father. That is about all the child theology one needs. Theirs is the birthright in the Kingdom. And no elder brother has a right to exclude them, for they never left the Father's home. Good old Bishop Keener said: "The church shall yet march on to victory through the glorious gates of childhood."

Money, by the millions, is being given for the endowment and support of institutions devoted to charity, education and industrialism of every conceivable type. While the great movements are sweeping the country and garnering rich harvests, why not subsidize some of this capital for the uses of our church papers? As a member of the Publishing Committee, I move, Mr. Editor, we start a drive to endow the New Orleans Christian Advocate. If a great university needs millions to conduct its affairs properly, reaching as it does some three or four hundred students, surely a great religious organ which reaches ten thousand readers should by all means have an endowment fund. There is no educative force in the world today more influential and efficient than the press. It is the great common school from which none ever graduate, whose curriculum is world-wide, and whose student body is the wide, wide world. No educative power in this country is more extensive in its scope, no other so urgent and continuous in its appeal to the people, no other so successful and fruitful in accomplishing results. We can never know what are the formative forces set in motion, and the crystallized purposes formed by the silent influence of a newspaper that stands for civic righteousness. Ten thousand Methodists reading this paper weekly and yet it toiling strenuously to live! Turn the golden tide toward Camp Street and infuse new life, new hope, new vigor into the old organ that speaks for three Conferences of our church. Let some man of wealth gladden the heart of our faithful business manager and add another rift to the smile on our editor's countenance, by sending a substantial check as a starter. Let us endow the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

WHY COLLEGE STUDENTS LEAVE THE MINISTRY.

By Lewis H. Chrisman,
Professor of English Literature, West Virginia Wesleyan College.

Every now and then the charge is made that even in our denominational colleges the influences are such that students who enter upon their educational careers intending to prepare for the ministry are diverted to other fields of activity. Without a doubt it is true that many men who originally planned to give lives to the church some time during the four years in college decide in favor of other fields of activity. Yet there is much to be said on the other side. The institution with which I am connected has over fifty ministerial students and possesses such an atmosphere that the ranks of this group are more likely to be increased than depleted. I spent my undergraduate days in a college which has given the church some of its most effective workers. But I must admit that in the fifteen years which I have lived in a collegiate environment I have seen approximately a hundred men desert the ministry as a future life work.

Recently I have been thinking over the reasons for this exodus and through catalogues and year books have been endeavoring to refresh my memory in regard to individual cases. It will be noticed that not all of the causes given below reflect to the discredit of the college. Some of them on the contrary redound to its honor. But I am not trying to defend the college; the task which I have set for myself is simply to state the facts as I have found them.

Misfits.

1. Some men leave the ministry because they discover that it is not the arena of life in which they can do their best work. Henry Ward Beecher once said that "the loudest call to preach comes when a man is born." If an educational institution in any way prevents a man from embarking upon a vocation for which he is utterly unfit, it is doing a work which in the long run will militate to the advancement of God's kingdom. Sometimes it is just as important to keep some boys from religious work as a profession as it is to persuade others to enter it.

2. Once in a great while a prospective minister is sidetracked by intellectual difficulties arising from an inability to adjust his new knowledge with the simple faith of his childhood. Such cases, however, are extremely rare in our Methodist colleges. A broader grasp of truth makes an individual a better Christian. It is in general the narrow specialist, almost entirely lacking in breadth of cultural education, who vaunts his unbelief. The boy who is driven from Christian service by creedal difficulties is mostly one whom some extreme conservative persuades that the inevitable "growing pains" of youth are evidence of blatant heresy. Make a young person believe that he is dangerously heterodox, and he will do his best to live to his reputation. I remember one group of boys who looked upon themselves as extreme radicals because they believed in evolution, which, according to one of their professors, was a doctrine instigated by the prince of the power of darkness.

Moral Shipwreck.

3. Too frequently even in our church colleges young men lose their ideal in reference to their life work on account of their having undergone a moral shipwreck. For a young life to deteriorate is the epitome of tragedy. Yet after all here is no place in which it is harder for a man to go wrong than in the ideal-illumined atmosphere of a college of the right type. Nine times out of ten when a school fails with a boy it is because of the earlier failure of his parents. The college, nevertheless, must not attempt to shirk its tremendous responsibility along these lines. Everywhere morale is a potent factor. A campus which is not pervaded by a spirit of vital Christianity is not a good place for any mother's son. In determining the general attitude of a college community toward ethical and religious truth the importance of the faculty must not be minimized. Flippant, irreligious teaching in the class room is a subtle poison and must be guarded against with the utmost care. A moral undertow, whatever its cause might be, is the pre-eminent danger which our educational institutions must avoid. Atmosphere always counts more than precepts.

Ministers Who Repel.

4. I have known more than one promising youth to be repelled from the pulpit on account of his having come into contact with preachers who made him lose respect for the profession. Pompousness, pettiness, ignorance, ultra-piety and official tyranny could be mentioned as deleterious influences in this regard. To multiply illustrations of these influences would be neither practicable nor edifying. I know of one really choice young man who had to remain out of college for a year because of a district superintendent's failing to keep his definite promise of a student appointment; his reason being that the youth, at a certain stage of his correspondence, failed to enclose a stamp for reply, under circumstances in which an honest, sensible man would have unquestionably paid his own postage. I recall another instance of a boy, working his way through college, spending two days and eight dollars in order to supply a three-thousand-dollar pulpit, while the regular occupant was away on a lecturing tour, and never even receiving thanks. An unjust or tyrannical superior officer causes young men to hesitate to enlist in his command. It is an outstanding fact that he who loses respect for an individual is apt to regard him as typical of his profession. But real men more than offset the negative influence of those who do not ring true. But of the factors which repel students from the ministry the loss of respect for those who should be exemplars is not the least dangerous and detrimental.

5. Another negative influence which must be chronicled is the real or fancied lack of respect of the public for the clerical profession. The highly necessary agitation in reference to the small salaries of the ministry has had a tendency to cause young men to look in opposite directions. This is not necessarily because of an unwillingness to endure the limitations of a restricted income, but is rather due to the natural self respect which causes a man to revolt from being an object of pity. In addition red-blooded preachers have found especially obnoxious the rather widely prevalent idea that there is a great gulf fixed between the clergy and the rest of the human family. There are some very good people who positively refuse to treat the minister as a real man. They appear really to believe the inane aphorism: "There are three sexes: men, women and clergymen." Sometimes an artificial, exaggerated politeness is as distasteful to the preacher as downright disrespect. But young people in selecting their life work are by no means impervious to the general attitude of the public.

The Wrong Measure.

6. But the influence which has done the most to deplete the ministerial ranks is the materialistic conception of life which has to such a large degree permeated American society. Too often the worth of a man is judged by his salary. Success is measured in terms of dollars and cents. As long as such standards prevail, the professions which are not enriching will not appeal to some of the best-endowed of American youths. The orgy of extravagance and luxury in which so many have indulged within the last few years has undermined the ideals of many a young man. It is against such tendencies that our denominational colleges must stand with adamantine firmness. Most of our institutions are really places of "plain living and high thinking." When a Methodist college becomes a place of pseudo aristocracy it will cease to be a school of the prophets. But in the main the college has been a militant power for real idealism. Yet it cannot leaven the whole lump.

This article makes no pretension to inclusiveness. It does, however, give facts with which I have personally come into contract. Some one, though, may object and say: "Not one of these so-called reasons should at all weigh with a man called of God to the Christian ministry." This contention may be entirely valid. Nevertheless, man's actions are determined by motives that are both high and low, selfish and unselfish, noble and ignoble. We must deal with people as they are. Facts are facts and unfortunately cannot be annihilated by pious phrases. College life naturally is a time of decisions; consequently it is inevitable that the parting of the ways be reached during these years. The college must neglect no effort in helping those intrusted to it to make the right decisions in the right way. But it must also be remembered that the college is only one of the character-molding powers. The public school, the community and the home all help to determine a youth's attitude toward life. But it goes without saying that a fundamentally Christian institution of higher learning is the most natural and logical place for the enlisting and the general training of the men and women who are to lead the forces which march beneath the banner of the Great White Captain.—The Christian Advocate (New York).

A weak man may make his boy go to Sunday school, but it takes a strong man to make himself go to church.—Dr. J. A. Holmes.

WE MUST HAVE STRONG MEN.

We must do more than build big ships. Tyre did that. But long ago her ships with their embroidered sails and royal towers were forever swept from the seas. Her wharves, once crowded with a world's commerce, long since rotted away. And she who sat "at the entry of the sea," the commercial queen of the world, ages ago became as "the top of the rock," "a place to spread nets upon." We must do more than cut lumber and dig ore, for the lumbermen of Lebanon, the miners of Cyprus, and the smelters of the Hittites are all gone, leaving no memorials save bared mountain slopes, burned furnaces and abandoned mines. We must do more than raise wheat and make wine; for husbandmen of Egypt and the vine dressers of Eshcol are without monument. We must do more than fatten hogs and export cattle, for the cattle kings of Goshen and the swine herds of Gadara have perished without name. These material things are all well in their way. They are good, but merely as a means to the making of manhood. Humanly speaking, the only thing that makes a nation live, that renders it potential while it does live, and remembered when it ceases to live is manhood. That is the calm, dispassionate, universal verdict of history. And if we, as a nation, are to survive, to grow strong, and to be permanent, then manhood modeled after the Nazarene pattern should be our most precious and pre-eminent production.—James M. Barkley.

IF YOU HAD BUT A DAY—

Would you neglect your private and secret devotions?

Would you leave your Bible unopened and unread?

Would you find it prudent and highly desirable to cancel some engagement you had made?

Would you hasten to correct some misunderstanding that had driven a friend from your side and filled your soul with bitterness?

Would your mind be filled with anxious foreboding over vows solemnly made to God in your time of great need and which you have wickedly neglected to pay?

Would you have occasion to pay some debts that have been outlawed or make restitution of money wrongfully received or recall some untruth declared?

Would you, if it were a Sunday, spend the day with your Sunday newspaper, or go to a baseball game, or attend a moving picture show, or take a pleasure trip into the country or to some near-by city to the neglect of the worship of God's house?

Would your past, because uncovered by the blood, loom up before you like a hideous nightmare, filling your last hours with anguish and terror?

Would the things for which you have been laboring and striving for years seem as much worth while when facing such a certainty as they now do?

What would be the things most prominent in your mind and heart—if you had but a day?

Have you more?—Evangelical Messenger.

The most beautiful sight from the pulpit is a whole family seated together in a pew. The church service is not a convention, that a family should merely send a delegate.—Dr. J. A. Holmes.

"THE STATE OF INFANTS"—A REJOINDER.

By Rev. J. W. Ramsey.

In the issue of ... Rev. J. M. Huggin, a ... of Providence and ... design ineffectual ... recently published ... Louisiana.

... that the "dying ... with Calvinism, ... better to give the ... even if this should ... frankly; but am I not ... rights when I as- ... just as fair, and ... later than his? But ... theological impossibilities ... Who would have ... Huggin would have been ..., to accept such ... Brother Huggin then proceeds to ... that the doctrine of inherent depravity does not ... the necessity of explaining how infants dying in infancy are saved. Then, why the insistent mental and spiritual demand for satisfactory explanation on demand so insistent that the old theologians were forced to invent their illogical and unscriptural "dying grace" theory to satisfy their own logical questionings as well as the interrogations of those who had sustained losses and wanted to know? To reinforce his position, Brother Huggin alludes to the fact that the doctrine of general atonement involves the fact that some people are saved who never heard the gospel, and then asks, "Can any one explain how and upon what condition they are saved?" It seems to me that Paul has explicitly answered this very question in the second chapter of his letter to the Romans, to which I respectfully refer Brother Huggin for careful consideration. Now, if the great Apostle to the Gentiles regarded this question of sufficient importance to give answer, surely the question of the spiritual status of infants is of equal importance, and the manner of the salvation of infants dying in infancy is just as urgent, if not more so, in its demand for explanation, and the only satisfactory solution is to be found, not in the sophistical inventions of the ancient theologians, who were undoubtedly tainted with Calvinism, but in the scriptural teaching that children are, by virtue of the atonement, born into the world inside the kingdom, and, dying in infancy, are saved. It is beyond me to see any necessity here for the "dying grace" theory. To me, there is here no mystery—it is as clear as a cloudless day.

In his interpretation of Matt. 18:3, Brother Huggin tells us that "converted" does not mean regenerated or born of the Spirit. Well, what does it mean? Let Brother Huggin answer: "A condition necessary in order to entrance (black letters mine) into the kingdom of humility." I am glad to be introduced to the kingdom of humility, and must confess my ignorance of the existence of such a kingdom. Previously, I had supposed that the only kingdom in the spiritual realm is the kingdom of heaven, and that humility, as well as all the graces, is a characteristic of its citizenship. And "converted" means to be in a condition to get ready to start to enter the "kingdom of humility."

My reviewer quotes the words of Christ to Nicodemus, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," and after the positive declaration that "according to Brother Ramsey, and others," the word "flesh" does not mean much, if anything, asks, "How is the word used in other parts of the Scriptures?" He then quotes one passage of Scripture in which the word "flesh" means inherited depravity, according to his interpretation. Then, by inference, he reads his interpretation into the language of our Lord to Nicodemus and thereby puts these absurd words into his mouth: "That which is born of inherent depravity is inherent depravity," evidently a tautologic statement; but our Lord, so far as my reading has gone, never allowed himself to indulge in tautology. So far from making the slightest allusion here to inherent depravity, Jesus intended to speak of the natural birth only. It is when the mind of Nicodemus had fastened when Jesus said, "Ye must be born again." Our Lord, with his divine power of analyzing the hidden and intricate processes of the human mind, saw that the thought of Nicodemus had fastened itself upon a lower concept—the natural birth, and, according to his usual method of teaching, taking Nicodemus upon his own ground, beginning with the lower concept, endeavored, by contrasts and comparisons, to lift the mind of Nicodemus into a sublimer realm, where it would be possible for him to entertain the higher concept—the New Birth. So in answer to Nicodemus' question, "How can a man be born when he is old?" Jesus exclaimed, "Verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water (natural birth) and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Brother Huggin, in the next place, constructs for himself a straw-man, and immediately demolishes it by quoting several proof texts from the Bible in support of the doctrine of depravity. Had he read my articles closely, I am sure that it would have been apparent to him that, in his effort to establish the doctrine of depravity, he was engaging, so far as I am concerned, in a work of supererogation, since nowhere in any of my articles do I deny the existence of depravity. On the contrary, I admit it, as may be seen from the following quotation: "The question may be asked, Do you reject the doctrine of depravity?' I reply, I do not, because all men know it to be true by experience; besides, it is taught in the Bible." Again, "No, I do not repudiate the doctrine of depravity, but I do reject, with all the expulsive powers of my soul, the erroneous and exceedingly dangerous conclusions and inferences which theologians have deduced from it, viz., exclusion from the kingdom with the logical sequence of eternal damnation of infants dying in infancy, and, hence, the necessity of the invention of the 'dying grace' theory."

Since Brother Huggin does not seem to have caught the meaning of my articles, I shall briefly restate my position on this whole question:

1. I accept the doctrine of depravity. That is, that all are born with a tendency toward sin; but no one is responsible for it except Adam. Since Jesus died on the Cross, I disclaim all responsibility for it for myself and my children, except as we yield to it and commit personal sin. Because no one is responsible for it, it does not exclude from the kingdom. The thing that relieves us of responsibility is the atonement of Jesus Christ.

2. Depravity does not necessitate the New Birth or regeneration. If it did, evidently the process of regeneration would remove it, but both the observation and experience of men teach that depravity exists in the regenerate, and, since it is a part of the physical and moral constitution, it can only be removed by the process and dissolution of death.

3. The atonement is as wide in its results as the sin of Adam. If through Adam's sin all men died, then through the atonement all were made alive—the adult conditionally; infants, even unborn generations, unconditionally. Hence, every child born into the world is born inside the kingdom, and, dying in infancy, is saved without the interposition of some mysterious operation of grace, or the theological inventions of men.

4. Nothing but the taint consequent upon personal sin necessitates the New Birth or regeneration; but children who have not arrived at the years of discretion are incapable of personal sin; therefore, children, previous to the period of discretion, do not need regeneration to introduce them into the kingdom, because they are already in the kingdom.

5. When the child arrives at the years of discretion, something must happen; but since regeneration implies cleansing, it cannot properly be called regeneration, because the child has not sinned, and, therefore, needs no cleansing. What then? Coming to the period of accountability, this is what happens: Either the child accepts, rejects, or neglects to accept, Jesus Christ as his personal Savior. If he rejects, or neglects to accept, either act constituting sin, he passes out of the kingdom and now needs to be regenerated to re-enter the kingdom from which he was excluded by his own act. If he accepts, he merely remains in the kingdom of which he is a member, not by regeneration, but by virtue of the atonement of Jesus Christ, our risen Lord.

Having read practically all that has ever been written on this subject, and having perused the ponderous volumes of theology, my mind simply could not accept the conclusions of the theologians because they were mentally repugnant to me. So I was still "at sea" and, like a boy trying to learn to swim in deep water, there was nothing left for me to do but to strike out for myself; and now, after all these years, I have reached the above conclusions, which are exceedingly satisfying to my own mind, and, because they were so, I presented them in my series of articles recently published in the Advocate, not with the least thought of arousing controversy, but hoping that others would find in them, as I have done, complete satisfaction. Moreover, I am so sure that I am right, I challenge Brother Huggin, or any one else, successfully to controvert any one, or all, of the above propositions. I know I may safely do so because I feel secure in my conviction that I stand on the Bible, "which is the only rule, and the sufficient rule, both of our faith and practice."

OBLIGATIONS OF FREEDOM.

We have been born into freedom. Our freedom is an inheritance. We have inherited it from men and from generations who earned it, who paid for it by their sufferings and their life. The price of it was blood, and you that know history know that I am speaking by the book. History in all its earlier chapters has been one long war of emancipation. We are free, not because we made ourselves free, but because of ancestry who fought the battle out to the death, achieved victory, and bequeathed liberty to us who are their heirs. That is the animum with which we want to read those gory old chapters.

If we had earned our liberty ourselves, then the discipline required in earning it would insure all the necessary vigor to our sword-arm to be put forth in its defense. We did not earn it, and we have not had the discipline of earning it. That, exactly, is our peril. The enjoyment of inherited prerogatives is inherently debilitating. We require to be on our guard, and all the more so for the reason that the process of being dispossessed of familiar prerogatives is such an unconscious one.

It is a matter of unutterable amazement how much in the way of despotism a man whose civil liberty is only an inherited liberty will put up with, before he begins to get out his armor and gird on his sword. Our arms have not been so trained by fighting for liberty as to have much civic muscle wherewith to maintain our liberty and pass it on to the generations still unborn, nor have our hearts been so trained by fighting for liberty as to have learned how unspeakably precious liberty is, and how solemn, therefore, the obligations pressing upon us to see that it is passed on to generations still unborn.

Now that willingness to put up with despotism, mark you, is exactly the condition upon which autocrats and dictators feed, and our American life is full of autocrats and dictators. It is the beginning of slavery not to feel that you are being enslaved. Those who have any intense appreciation of what civil liberty means will not consider this the cry of an alarmist, and I don't care whether the rest of the people consider it so or not.—Charles H. Parkhurst, in the Treasury.

Nothing lasts but respect; and that is something that can be won even from enemies. We can live so that misconstruction, misrepresentation, misleading, will fall to the ground. After all, our daily life is the final challenge, the last word.—Exchange.

KIND WORDS.

By Willie C. Page.

Kind words are like the sunshine,
  They cheer us all the day;
They are like a beacon light
  That drives the dark away;
The heart grows glad that hears them,
  That feel their soothing power—
Kind words are like the sunshine,
  They brighten every hour.

Kind words are like sweet music,
  They stir memories in the heart;
Where its singing can be heard
  The shadows from life depart;
As sweet as dreams come crowding
  Their happy notes to greet—
Kind words are the magic music
  For making lifetime sweet.

SOME DIFFERENT FORFEITS.

"I can't think of a thing to tell them," said Ethel, when it was her turn to impose the forfeit penalties. "We've done everything over and over. I wish we could have some new ones."

"Do you know any different ones, Miss Benson?" asked Fred doubtfully. Miss Benson was the new teacher. She was visiting them that day, but they didn't know her very well yet. "I might think of something different," she said, with a pleasant smile.

So she took Ethel's place. And, as the forfeits she taught them were new to the children, they treasured them in their minds to be used in their frolics that winter. Fred and Jamie came first, in a curious wrestling match. They faced each other, each standing on his right foot. Their left hands were clasped, and the object was to see which could make the other put his left foot to the floor. This must be accomplished by pulling or pressing with the clasped hand. The free right hand was not to be used at all. Fred had to put his foot down first, but he said: "I'm going to practice that at home, and the next time I won't be beaten so easily."

Anna was told to ask a question that could not, under any circumstances, be answered in the negative. She thought of a great many curious and laughable questions, but had to give up at last. Then Miss Benson reminded her that if she had asked, "What does yes spell?" she would have had the one question that could not be answered with "no."

Ted and Frank then had a rooster fight. Each stooped down and grasped his own ankles, and then tried to push over his opponent by shouldering. The children had a great deal of laughter over this curious contest before Frank was victorious.

Clara and Emma were next. They were blindfolded and led to opposite corners of the room. Then they were directed to walk toward each other until they met, and shake hands. As they were not to make any sign to help each other, it was some time before they met.

Gerald, who was the "nonsense boy" of the crowd, was told to yawn until he made some one else yawn. He went through the motions of an exaggerated yawn so realistically that he raised shouts of laughter, and for a while it seemed as if he could not succeed. But when the laughter died down a little, several felt impelled to follow his example, and there was an epidemic of yawns.

The next five children were grouped and required to imitate a German band. Each was told what instrument he was to play, and the tune given them was "Old Grimes." Besides going through the motions of playing, each was required to imitate with his voice, as nearly as he could, the sound of the instrument. It is needless to say that the selections of the German band were insistently encored.

Alice was last. She was sent from the room, and Miss Benson told the children to decide on three questions to be asked her when she returned. When Alice came in, Miss Benson said: "Will you answer the first question with 'yes' or 'no'?"

"With 'yes,'" said Alice.

Then George asked his question: "Do you consider yourself the best school teacher we have had?"

And modest Alice was obliged to answer "Yes."

She said she would answer "No" to the next, and Russell said: "Do you want to see us win the next baseball game?"

"No," said Alice, who was one of the best baseball partisans of the school team.

She decided to answer "Yes" to the last, and Mary asked: "Would you like Dot to give you his collection of spiders?"

Spiders were Alice's abomination, and she had refused to visit her cousin Don's house since he began keeping tarantulas just to study their habits. But she had to answer "Yes" to this, and Don immediately proceeded to bring them over in the morning.

The forfeits were all completed now, but the children begged for a few more, the boys rashly offering themselves as victims.

"I have just three more in mind, and I will give you those," said Miss Benson.

Russell was told to repeat, "Peter Piper," numbering the words thus: Peter, one; Piper, two, picked, three; and so on. If he misplaced his words or lost count he was to begin over again.

Fred and Don were then blindfolded and taken out on the back porch. They were seated, and each was given a bowl of cornmeal and a spoon and told to feed the other. The other children stood about and laughed themselves helpless. When the feeding was over, it was easy to see why Miss Benson had suggested carrying out this test on the back porch.

They went back in the living room, and Roy and Jamie were told to get down on hands and knees on a hearth rug. A knotted towel was slipped over both heads. They held heads up to prevent this collar's slipping off. When Miss Benson gave the word, each began to pull at the collar. The one who could drag his opponent from the mat would be the winner.

The children thanked Miss Benson for her help and invited her to attend the next Friday afternoon frolic.—Elsie Vernon, in the Christian Standard.

UP IN THE ATTIC.

Martha said she wouldn't and Arthur said he wouldn't and Doris said she wouldn't.

But somebody had to. The great big pile of things in the attic had to be taken care of. Mother had said if they would clean up the attic, they could have it for a playroom, but my goodness! Didn't they realize how chuck full of old things it was? The basement wasn't so big, but Martha said she'd rather have it to play in than to have to go up that old attic, even if it was much nicer than the basement.

"Well, take the basement then," said Mother, who was very busy with Esther ready to graduate from grammar school and really didn't have time to go into the matter of playrooms very much. "Only, some one will have to fix up that attic pretty soon, and then, after it's all fixed, you will probably want to play in it."

"I'll take care of it, Mother," said Esther. "I can do it while you're sewing on my dress."

Then Martha and Doris and Arthur felt quite ashamed that they had not offered to do it instead of leaving it to Esther, who was busy enough getting ready for graduation. So they all looked at each other guiltily and finally Arthur said:

"Of course we could do it."

"No, I want to do it," said Doris eagerly. "You see, Mother, our Junior Red Cross is sending old clothes to some poor children, and there are just stacks of perfectly good things up in the attic. I bet we could give more than anybody else in the whole school. Wouldn't that be great?"

"Oh, I want to give some too," exclaimed Doris and Martha. "Please, Mother, let us clean up the attic."

Mother smiled at the sudden change of feeling.

"All right," she said, "you can all go ahead and divide up the things so that each of you will have something to give."

"Just think how many things we can send," said Martha, picturing rows and rows of little refugees dressed in the attic's treasures.

"And think of what a dandy playroom that attic will make," added Arthur, "when all of those things are out of the way. I guess that was just a pretty good idea of Esther's to get us to clean out the attic."

And Esther did not deny it.—American Red Cross (Juvenile.)

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 811 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it, otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page, leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page, do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

THE FIRST INHABITANTS—A THREE-MINUTE TALK.

Whether other peoples inhabited America in ages gone by or not, the Indians, for all practical purposes, are to be looked upon as its first inhabitants. The white men found them here when they first landed on these shores, and there was nothing to indicate that they had not been here from time immemorial.

We cannot but feel that, in many cases at least, the Indians were unjustly treated by their white visitors, and we cannot very well justify the attitude of our own Government toward them in every instance. But we can record with gratitude the fact that we are beginning to realize our obligations to these primitive people, and that earnest efforts are being made by the Government and by various organizations to see that their rights are safeguarded and that they are given the advantages of education, industrial protection, and Christian civilization.

The Methodist Church has been interested in the welfare of the Indians for nearly a hundred years. When the Methodist Church divided, in 1844, the Five Civilized Tribes voted to adhere to the M. E. Church, South. Since that time we have carried on work more or less actively among them, spending more than a million dollars in missionary labors. By order of our last General Conference, an Indian Mission has been organized, embracing the Creeks, Seminoles, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Kiowas, Comanches, and the Apaches. Among the workers who are ministering to them are several full-blood Indians.

A part of the Centenary funds was set aside to establish a school for training Indian workers. This school has already been organized, and it is now closing its first year. It is located at Smithville, Oklahoma, and is under the superintendency of Rev. E. A. Townsend. The course of study embraces those subjects which are most directly related to the development of an intelligent citizenship as well as the formation of high Christian character. Thus our Centenary work is making itself felt, not only in the remote fields across the seas, but also among the needy first inhabitants of our own country. This is as it should be. The Centenary purpose was the evangelization of the whole world, and in ministering to the Indians, we are helping to carry out that purpose.

SCHOLARSHIP IN THE MINISTRY.

The church needs recognized scholars in its work of establishing and maintaining the faith of which it is the custodian. The gospel needs interpretation, defense, and application to the constantly changing order of industrial, social, and intellectual life. These things are not possible without a thorough exploration of the fundamental principles which lie back of and are a part of the revelation made by God to man. And this exploration cannot be made by untrained investigators, or in a haphazard, desultory manner.

For this work of interpretation, defense, and application of the principles of the gospel, the church has a right to look, first of all, to that group of men who have heard her call to service and have entered her ministry under the compulsion of a divine imperative. A preacher is, in a very real sense, a teacher of divine truth; but he must know before he can impart instruction.

Knowledge comes through study. There may be some bits of information scattered along the road of life to be picked up by the careless traveler, but the great wealth of learning that enriches the mind and soul of men for all ages is available only for those who are willing to dig deep for the treasure that is concealed oftentimes far beneath the surface. The miner of metals uses pick and shovel and other mechanical devices to get down to the levels where "pay dirt" is to be found; the preacher, the teacher, must use the tools of the mind to uncover the truth which it is his mission to discover.

Study is hard work. It means days and weeks and months and years of diligent application and unremitting toil if its goal, scholarship, is to be attained. No lazy man has ever been a scholar—and, by the very nature of the case, he never can be. Silver and gold may be inherited, but learning is always an individual achievement.

The church should not make it practically impossible for its ministers to be great students of the truth; yet we sometimes fear that it has actually done this very thing. We certainly do not think that a preacher should be dissociated from the everyday life of his people or from the interests of the community in which he dwells, but we do think he should have ample opportunity to meditate upon the deep things of the Kingdom. In spite of many things which seem to indicate otherwise, we are profoundly convinced that there is a tremendous interest to-day, on the part of the great masses of our people, in fundamental religious truth, and good preaching is at a premium all over the world. The charge is often made that "the pulpit has lost its power." We do not believe it. After all has been said, it is still true that men and women go to church Sunday after Sunday because they find there that which helps and strengthens and inspires them. The pulpit has not lost its power, and preachers are not pitiful exponents of a program that has perished.

But the preacher needs to be freed of some of the limitations that hinder his greatest usefulness. There may be a few geniuses who can "serve tables" six days—and nights—during the week and still stand in the pulpit for two services on Sunday with messages throbbing with life and power; but the average preacher is just an ordinary man called of God to a high service in which he needs to make diligent use of all the powers of mind and heart with which he has been endued in order to carry out the divine injunction to "feed the sheep." In many cases where the "hungry sheep look up and are not fed," the trouble is not that there was no food to be had, but simply that the shepherd did not have time to gather it. When he might have been garnering in fruitful pastures, he had to be nailing a picket on the fence or trying to mend a broken scythe.

We are in favor of a shifting of emphases that will make preaching stand out as the main business of the preacher, and that will elevate fundamentals above incidentals.

SOME GREAT RECORDS.

The Mississippi Conference has made a great record in the payment of its Centenary pledges. The official report of May 30, 1920, showed that it was in 36th place, with a percentage of 13; the report of June 30, 1920, showed that it had climbed to 21st place, with a percentage of 19.6. We extend congratulations to Brother W. D. Hawkins, the efficient Centenary Secretary and Treasurer of the Conference, and all the Centenary workers and subscribers who have made such a fine record possible.

In the same connection, we call attention, also, to the fact that the North Mississippi Conference, during the same period, has climbed from 30th place to 25th, raising its percentage from 15 to 18.6. Congratulations are due Rev. Ben P. Jaco and his efficient co-workers for this splendid showing.

We are convinced that the correct figures for the Louisiana Conference would show a like gratifying increase. By some re-arrangement of the figures showing the amount pledged, with the basis of which we are unfamiliar, the total for the June record is considerably larger than for the May record, thus increasing the ratio and decreasing the percentage collected, while the reverse is true in the Mississippi Conferences. We do happen to know, however, that collections in Louisiana have been coming in very satisfactorily. We feel a justifiable pride in the records our three Conferences are making in the collection of their Centenary pledges.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop John M. Moore is now in Brazil where he will be busy with his episcopal duties until December.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, of Brookhaven, Miss., assisted Rev. W. W. Nelson in a protracted meeting at New Hope recently.

"Our lot has been cast in a pleasant place, and it is good to be with this people," writes Rev. A. A. Simms, of Johns, Miss.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, publicity director of the Centenary Commission, will have the same position in connection with the educational campaign.

Recent reports show that the increase in the salaries of the 6,500 pastors of the M. E. Church, South, this year will amount to nearly $2,000,000.

Mr. S. D. Kim, who was once a student at Hendrix College, has become one of the editors of the East Asia Daily, the leading newspaper of Korea.

Rev. F. L. Applewhite is in his fourth year on the Sharon charge, Mississippi Conference. He speaks of this as being a delightful year in his work.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, of Ackerman, Miss., is meeting with encouraging success in his work. He expects to have a good report at Conference next fall.

We learn from the South-Reporter that Rev. C. A. Parks, of Tunica, Miss., will assist the pastor in a meeting at Pine Mountain during the first week in August.

Dr. R. H. Bennett, secretary of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, has been elected secretary of the Life Service Department of the educational campaign.

Rev. W. G. Harbin, of the Texas Conference, well known in Louisiana and Mississippi, has recently been appointed a general evangelist. His home is at Center Point, Texas.

The Central Methodist has advanced its subscription price from $1.50 to $2, effective September 1. Dr. W. E. Arnold was re-elected editor, and Dr. S. A. Arnold was elected business manager.

Dr. R. T. Webb, pastor of St. Paul's Church, Parkersburg, West Virginia, has been elected president of Morris Harvey College, to succeed Dr. S. B. Vaught, who recently resigned the position.

Rev. B. H. Rawls, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference for the past four years, finds himself much improved in health, but his wife is in poor health. Their home is at Moselle, Miss.

From a press dispatch last Monday, we learn that Rev. J. H. Bell, agent for the superannuate endowment fund of the North Mississippi Conference, received subscriptions amounting to $2000 at Winona last week.

We thank President Hunt for a copy of the Gibsonian, the annual issued by the students of Port Gibson Female College. It is beautifully printed, and is full of interesting pictures and sketches of college life.

According to the Centenary Bulletin, the Epworth League is the only organization of the church to report an increase last year. Among the Conferences in which increases were reported, are the Louisiana and the Mississippi.

We have been honored with an invitation to attend the marriage of Miss Eloise Wallace to Mr. Thos. E. Hand, at the First Baptist Church, Laurel, Miss., Tuesday evening, July 27. We extend best wishes in advance of the happy event.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, who has recently held a meeting at Hazlehurst, Miss., will go to Washington, D. C., early in September, to hold a meeting for Dr. Prettyman, chaplain of the United States Senate and pastor of a Washington church.

The Volunteer Class of our Sunday school at Winona, Miss., is making a remarkable record. From a small beginning a few weeks ago, it now has 78 members enthusiastically interested in the work. Mrs. J. B. Randolph is the teacher.

Rev. W. N. Ware, pastor of the Walnut Grove charge, Mississippi Conference, will soon complete a summer course in Millsaps College, after which he will spend six weeks in revival work on his charge. He will continue his work in Millsaps next fall.

A new parsonage has just been completed at Cockrum, Miss., said to be one of the best in the Sardis District. Rev. W. A. Bowlin is pastor. Brother Bowlin is being assisted by Rev. J. A. George, of Hollandale, in a meeting this week at Palestine.

The Louisiana Child Finding and Home Society is planning to move its general offices from Shreveport to New Orleans, still maintaining a Home in Shreveport, however. Rev. Jno. L. Williams, superintendent, will move to New Orleans in the near future.

The committee in charge of the educational campaign is composed of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, Mrs. J. H. McCoy. As is already well known, the financial drive will come in the spring of 1921.

We have been hoping that Dr. T. B. Holloman would soon send us another of the interesting articles he knows so well how to write, but he says doing double work—farming and preaching—leaves him little time for writing. But won't it soon be time to "lay by" the crops?

"Things moving well with us; suffering (?) from a pounding from the Bonita folk; plenty of chickens, milk, butter, and our own garden—are you hungry?" writes Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., of Bonita, La. Who wouldn't be in the face of such an appetizing bill of fare?

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the marriage of Miss Jessie Schultz, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Schultz, Gallman, Miss., to Mr. Joseph Catchings Traweek, on Wednesday evening, August 4, at the Methodist church at Gallman. Blessings upon these fine young people!

We learn from an exchange that Dr. Thos. Carter and Dr. O. E. Brown, both of Vanderbilt University, have recently declined invitations to become members of the faculty of Southern Methodist University. Dr. Carter has a new book on the press, "The Story of the New Testament," which has been adopted as a textbook by the Epworth League Board.

Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, Jr., eldest son of Rev. and Mrs. N. B. Harmon, of Vicksburg, Miss., received the M. A. degree from Princeton University in June. He was graduated with high honors, being the winner of the Manners prize. He is a member of the Baltimore Conference, serving last year as chaplain, or soldier-pastor, in the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C.

Dr. O. E. Goddard and Mrs. J. H. McCoy, of the Mission Board, were in New Orleans during the early part of this week in the interest of the great work of which they have charge. A careful study is being made of the situation in New Orleans, and we are confidently expecting to see a great forward movement in this city that will mean much for Methodism and the extension of the Kingdom of God.

Publicity directors for all the Annual Conferences have been appointed, whose duty it will be to supply the Centenary Bulletin with information concerning the work of the Centenary. In our territory, they are as follows: Louisiana Conference, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Bogalusa, La.; Mississippi Conference, Dr. Stuart G. Noble, Jackson, Miss.; North Mississippi Conference, Rev. R. P. Neblett, Como, Miss.

Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, from whose pen we are publishing a series of interesting articles concerning South America, was a visitor to Ruston, La., recently. In the July 15 issue of the Arkansas Methodist he gives an interesting account of his visit, including highly complimentary references to our local church work. He expresses the opinion that the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, located at Ruston, will become, within the year, the largest and best institution of its kind in the church.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., Bonita, La., 3; Mrs. E. M. Fant, Coahoma, Miss., 3; Rev. R. G. Lord, Coffeeville, Miss., 3; Miss Lola Van Devender, DeKalb, Miss., Miss., 7; B. F. Goza, Magnolia, Miss., 2; Rev. A. A. Simms, Johns, Miss., 2.

I WILL.

I will start anew this morning with a higher, fairer creed,
I will cease to sit repining while my ruthless neighbor's greed;
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;
I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear.

I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;
I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but I'll strive to prove my own;
I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach your duty, and be more concerned with mine.

WOULD YOU?

We have a few questions to ask:

If you were sick, and sad, and lonely, and wanted comfort and cheer, would you send to a card-party, or a theater, or a ballroom, or a dancing-party for some one to come to you? If not, why not?

If you were an unsaved sinner, and wanted some one to pray with you and show you the way to Jesus for pardon and peace, would you send for a worldly, dancing, card-playing, theater-going, pleasure-loving church member? If not, why not?

A man died the other day in a prayer-meeting. Another died in the pulpit. Would you not rather die in a hall-room, or a theater, or at a card-party, with gay worldlings around you? If not, why not?

Jesus is coming one of these days, "in such an hour as ye think not." Would you like to have Him find you with the dancers, the card-players, the theater-goers, the gay, heedless throng, when He comes? If not, why not? The Evangelical

SOME ONE CARED.

There came into my church in an Eastern city a man who worshiped with us for a time. His family were in the mountains. I made it a rule never to allow one to attend the church that I did not speak to him personally. One day I called on this business man. He took me into his private office. When I took him by the hand I said, "I have come to ask you to be a Christian." He looked at me in amazement; and I said, "I am not asking you to join my church, that may not be the church of your choice, but I am asking you to be a Christian." He drew his hand out of mine, walked away to the window, and stood looking down upon the busy street for fully five minutes. I thought I had offended him. Then he came back, and, brushing the tears out of his eyes, he took my hand again and said, "It is the first invitation to be a Christian I have ever had in all my life. Nobody ever asked me before. My mother never asked me; my wife has never asked me; no minister has ever asked me." Then, sinking back into the chair by his table he used the words which are almost identical with the words of David, "I thought no one cared."—Wilbur Chapman.

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING JULY 30-AUGUST 8.

The Annual Bluff Creek Camp Meeting will be conducted this year by the writer, Rev. Alonzo Early, and Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District. Mr. Paul J. Templeton, of Meridian, Miss., will be in charge of the music. Brother Early will have charge in the morning service at 9 o'clock, Brother Lutz in the afternoon, and the writer will conduct the 11 o'clock and the night services. Having been in meetings in several nearby towns, I trust that many of my good friends from those places will be present. Let's make this one of the greatest occasions in the history of the camp. Come prayed up and ready for a great Pentecostal occasion. Board and accommodations and cottages can be had on the grounds at reasonable rates.

CHAS. E. DOW, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dow, was born at Mendenhall, Simpson County, Miss., December 9, 1881. He was named in honor of Bishop Chas. B. Galloway and was dedicated to God by Rev. C. A. Guice, May 25, 1882. He ratified the act which his saintly parents did for him, October 20, 1895, thus becoming a member in full fellowship of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the church for which he manifested such fervential love. On May 22, 1905, he accepted employment in the train department of the G. & S. I. R. R. as brakeman. On October 19, 1905, he was received into the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of America and was a member until death an honored member of same. On April 10, 1907, he was promoted to train conductor. It was in this capacity and while in charge of a freight train on April 28, 1908, at Florence, Miss., his train was wrecked in which his younger brother, one of his brakemen, was killed. On April 14, 1917, he was married to Miss Ema Jones, who, on August 26, 1918, was baptized and received into the Methodist Church by the writer. On October 22, 1919, while returning from the State Fair at Jackson, Miss., in his automobile to his home at Mendenhall, his car was wrecked on a defective bridge, killing him and greatly injuring his companion. He was buried at Mendenhall cemetery after services conducted by the Rev. J. L. Smith, assisted by Brother Williams, the pastor of the Baptist church. GEO. G. YEAGER.

SARAH JANE BARNES, wife of Dr. W. H. Barnes, now of Homewood, Miss., was Miss Sarah Jane Miller, who was born in Coffee County, Ala., June 15, 1847. She was married to Dr. W. H. Barnes, of Dale County, Ala., in 1865, on November 12. They together moved from there to North Alabama in 1867, moved to Neshoba County, Miss., in 1870, and in 1879 they moved to Homewood, Miss., Scott County, where they lived together until she died, May 19, 1920. Sister Barnes leaves the good husband, who is seventy-five years of age, one son, W. W. Barnes, of Trenton, Miss., and one daughter, Mrs. Cornelia Neblin, of Forest, Miss., twenty grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, two brothers, S. D. Miller, of Raleigh, Miss., and Rev. M. J. Miller, of Rocky Springs, Miss., and a host of friends to mourn the loss of a devoted wife, loving grandmother and friend. She joined the Methodist Church in early girlhood and was a consistent member until she went to join the church triumphant. She was very active in church work all of her days, so much so that the Woman's Missionary Society, which has been reorganized just recently, named the Society, the "Sarah Barnes Missionary Society," as a tribute to the good work which she had done in the Society in the past. She and the doctor were certainly happy together. She was on several trips, in fact most all of them, to the reunions of the Confederate Veterans in company with the good doctor, who belonged to Co. D, 57th Ala. Volunteer Regiment, and served two years. Sister Barnes suffered a long time, and for nearly a year she was in an unconscious state of mind, but in all of her suspense and sickness she was sweet and patiently waiting the call. She had told her devoted husband that she had a presentiment that she might get to where she could not talk and wanted to tell them that she was ready to go. So, dear friends and loved ones, weep not as those who have no hope.

Her pastor,

MARRIED.

On Monday, June 21, at 2:30 p.m., at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. Brent C. Oxley, Louise, Miss., Miss EMMA MAE OXLEY was married to Mr. GEORGE H. BARNES, of Louise, Miss., Rev. M. K. Miller officiating.

At the residence of Brother S. D. Dement, on July 3, 1920, Meridian, Miss., Brother C. V. DEMENT was joined in holy matrimony to Miss RUTH ELAINE FOWLES, by Rev. Isaac L. Peebles.

At the parsonage, Saturday evening, July 3, 1920, in Leland, Miss., by the pastor, Rev. W. M. Young, Mr. G. F. DUFFYHILL, of Sunflower City, to Miss ELLA LOUISE FRYER, of Indianola, Miss. The young couple will make their future home in Sunflower City, Miss.

OBSERVATIONS FROM THE HILL CITY.

Dear Brother Curley: Have you space for some observations from the Hill City? I'll try to be brief. This is our fourth year at Gibson Memorial, and in every way it is the best of the four. Gratifying progress has been made along all lines. Our revival meeting began the 4th Sunday in May and closed the 4th of June. Brother J. V. Bennett did the preaching. I have never had more thorough or satisfactory help. The members were thoroughly revived and a deep, abiding work was done. Bennett is a blessing to any community and will do any pastor a great service. Besides the good work done with those in the church, 28 were added to the membership. A total of 44 has been added this year. In the three and a half years we have been here, 217 have been received at Gibson Memorial. There has been much spiritual growth for which we give praise and thanks to God. The Lord has been gracious and good, and given many remarkable answers to prayers.

Material progress has also been made. The third coat of paint is being applied to the parsonage and enough paint is provided to paint the front and trim the windows of the church. We are gradually paying off the old parsonage debt, including a new lot, 70x140 feet, and the installation of a $725 furnace.

The Sunday school is breaking all records. The Young People's Missionary Society has the record of being the best in the Conference. The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary is doing a great work also.

Our people were greatly blessed by the League Conference held here in June at Crawford Street. It was a wonderful sight to see so many young people earnestly devoting themselves to the Master. Our League is [illegible] work.

LEMON JUICE FOR FRECKLES

Girls! Make beauty lotion for a few cents—Try it!

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless and never irritates.

Millions for a New Stomach

One of the greatest American millionaires said to his physician, "A million dollars, Doctor, spot cash and no grumbling, for a new stomach," and then the sick man groaned and turned away. All his wealth could not make him happy or contented, for happiness largely depends upon digestion. Without health where does happiness come in? After all the stomach plays a great part in everyday life. Without a healthy stomach and good digestion our blood is thin, watery and poor, our heart action is weak, our liver does not do its duty, and man is miserable and unhappy. Prevent disease by putting the house in order and strengthening the system against the germs of disease.

Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., years ago understood diseases and their prevention, and he discovered certain roots and herbs which were nature's remedies, and succeeded in putting them up in a form that could be easily procured at the drug store (liquid or tablets). This he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This Discovery gives no false stimulation because it contains no alcohol or any narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. It gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. For over fifty years it has enjoyed the confidence of the American public. Try it now!

POLICY OF HOLLY SPRINGS CHAPTER EPWORTH LEAGUE, 1920-21.

It is the aim of the chapter:

1. To conduct fifty-two interesting and helpful devotional meetings during the year.

2. To maintain our Quiet Hour Covenant by reading the Bible and praying each day, as the Covenant suggests.

3. To have a definite plan of making people welcome at the preaching services, especially strangers and members who do not attend often. (It is to be worked out by Department Two).

4. To emphasize the Fellow-Workers' Covenant, having as the aim at least five conversions as result of League work during the year.

5. To have one social hour each month.

6. To have one missionary program each month, to be held on the fourth Thursday night.

7. To have conducted one mission study class during the year, using some book recommended by the Epworth League General Secretary.

8. To have twelve Council meetings, one each month, the same to be held the first Tuesday in every month.

9. To hold four quarterly business meetings, the same to be held the third Thursday in August, November, February and May. At these meetings, every officer is expected to report on the regular report blanks what work has been done during that quarter.

10. To adopt and carry out the budget plan of finances; letting each member decide what amount he wishes to pay monthly.

11. To pay quarterly on our pledge to the African Special. The pledge being $85, we will pay $21.25 on the night of our several business meetings.

12. To secure as members of the Stewardship Covenant three-fourths of our membership, the purpose being: To secure pledges to tithe.

The Budget: Advertising, $5; Delegates, $10; First Department, $2.50; Second Department, $25; Third Department, $10; Fourth Department, $2.50; Bros. $25; Mission Special, $85; Miscellaneous, $15; Total, $185.

(Miss) HAIDEE CURD,
President.

The above is a policy which I believe can be used by almost all Epworth Leagues. As President of the Conference, I recommend it for your consideration. W. R. LOTT.

REVIVAL AT MAGEE, MISS.

Magee and the surrounding community has enjoyed an old-fashioned spiritual revival, conducted by Rev. Dan E. Kelley, of Hattiesburg, and his singer, Dan Ward Milam, who is a specialist in his line of work. Both of these men believe in a Spirit revival, instead of a revival brought about by methods. Officially, our meeting was not a union meeting, but practically it was, as the revival swept all over town and the surrounding community. All the business establishments in the town closed their stores for each service, and every denomination of the town joined whole-heartedly in the meeting. The result was that a great spiritual feast was ours to enjoy. We received one member by certificate and one by baptism. And there was a general straightening up between those who were out with each other.

As the meeting was reaching its climax, Sister Kelley joined her husband, and remained with him until the close of the meeting. Her presence added much power to the meeting, which was highly appreciated by all I think, and I don't think I am thinking alone, when I say that Brother Kelley and his singer, Brother Dan Milam make about as good a team as Southern Methodism has. Brother Milam carries along with him Sister Milam, who is also an attractive singer and she has a sweet disposition. Magee was blessed with [illegible] Christian workers. We want them to come back again.

Our meeting began [illegible] and lasted until July [illegible], closing with a delightful [illegible] "Our Beautiful Home and Will We Meet Them Over There," and a short [illegible] The last service was [illegible] way through. I [illegible] a flower on [illegible]

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sarepta, Miss.

Now is the time to order the graded lessons for beginners, children four to five years of age. You order one copy of Teacher's Text Book, No. 1 for the teacher; Beginners' Stories, No. 1, order as many as you need for your class; also order Beginners' Picture Set, No. 1. The pictures are needed to make the story effective. The Oliver picture cards are not worth much in teaching the child to know God.

Dr. M. Porter, superintendent of the Water Valley, Main Street Sunday school, writes that he and six of his teachers expect to be with us at Grenada, August 4-11.

Rev. Robert H. Ruff, one of our young men of the best training, a graduate of Emory University, will teach "The Program of the Christian Religion" at our Training School. This is a good course for young preachers as well as for other teachers.

Our Sunday schools would make wonderful improvement if about one hundred superintendents would take the course of Organization and Administration under Mr. E. E. French, Superintendent of our McKendree Sunday school. Mr. French knows things that have not been put in the books. Few men have a greater opportunity for rendering a lasting service to our homes, to our country, and to the kingdom of God than the superintendents of our Sunday schools.

If you cannot attend the Training School, the next best thing is to get some one else to take one of the eight courses offered.

An eight-page Announcement will be ready to mail out the 20th inst. If you have teachers that are undecided, send me their names so they can see what is offered them.

We hope to lead all who attend the Training School into a deeper religious experience. The prayer life will be emphasized at every class meeting and in every service held. We all may receive a Pentecostal experience if we so desire.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

During the long summer days, when we have much more time than in the short winter days, it seems a good time to prepare for the work that is to come in our Sunday school life.

Do you ask what is the Training Course of the church for Sunday school workers? It is composed of twelve units—eight general and four specialized units that meet the demands of the different dimensions of the work.

If one is a teacher in any department in the Sunday school, one can take a course for that work and be more efficient.

In any department of the Elementary work, Intermediate or Senior, Young Peoples, Adult or Administration courses are given. Examinations are given and you can get credit for the work done.

Write to the Field Secretary, Rev. Jno. C. Chambers, Jackson, Miss., for information and get to work. God wants efficiency, and if we are to be a servant that is worthy of our Lord, we must study to be approved.

The following is taken from the Elementary Newsletter:

A Splendid Gift.

The elementary forces of the church are indebted to Mrs. W. W. Adams, Elementary Superintendent of the Memphis Conference, for a beautiful gift of one hundred silver forks and one hundred silver spoons. These are to be used at the various elementary festivities at Junaluska and are to be a part of the permanent furnishing of the Elementary Club House to be built there. Mrs. Adams has also asked that the money left after the silver was purchased be used to carve the Elementary motto on the mantelpiece of the lodge. We are sure that all the elementary workers will join with us of the central office in our appreciation of the love for the children and the interest in their welfare which are back of the gift.

REVIVAL AT HAZLEHURST.

Dear Brother Carley: We are in the midst of our revival meeting at Hazlehurst. Dr. Theodore Copeland, of Dallas, is with us doing the preaching, and doing it well. He has already won not only the hearts of my people but of all denominations, and they are flocking out in great crowds to hear the wonderful gospel messages that he is bringing to us daily.

Dr. Copeland's great loving heart and gentle spirit, and the gospel messages of love and redemption through Christ, will win the hearts of any people.

Lay aside your "quill" for a while, Brother Carley, and run up to Hazlehurst and be with us for a few days.

W. W. GRAVES, Pastor.

A LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE ITS SPOTS

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

We are proud of the confidence doctors, druggists and the public have in 666 Chill and Fever Tonic.—Adv.

Fame of Sweet Dreams Spreads Quickly

This Great Mosquito Remedy Now Used in 27 Countries. Sold by Local Druggists.

The absolute efficiency of Sweet Dreams as a mosquito remedy has resulted in its becoming quickly recognized everywhere.

Sweet Dreams is now being used in 27 tropical countries, and, to bring the story closer home, it is being used with success there just as it is here.

As everyone knows, Sweet Dreams is a double strength remedy. This fact explains the wonderful results attained.

If mosquitoes are troublesome, try Sweet Dreams—the remedy of proven efficiency.

Liberal bottles, 25c. Sold by every druggist—everywhere.—Adv.

FROM SUMRALL, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a splendid meeting of two weeks' duration. There were twenty-eight valuable accession to our church and two to the Baptist Church. Brother J. V. Bennett, Conference evangelist, assisted us, and greatly endeared himself to this people. He is good help and works in perfect harmony with the pastor.

Sumrall station is forging to the front as among the leading appointments in the Harriesburg District. They are good to their minister, and are constantly remembering his family in substantial ways.

A nice bathtub has been recently installed, which adds to our comfort. Come up to see us sometime, Mr. Editor; right now the watermelons are fine, and the peaches can't be excelled in deliciousness. The figs, too, are beginning to ripen; thanks to a thoughtful predecessor, there are three fine trees in the backyard that promise an abundant yield. I am sure if the elder sees this, he will appoint a Q. C. almost instanter. Rev. H. MELLARD.

NOTES FROM THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

My Dear Brother Carley: The sun of the camp meeting day will not set while there remain sections of our country unevangelized. I am planning to attend a camp meeting 25 or 30 miles southeast of Alexandria in a community much in need of Methodism and the gospel of grace. The camp meeting at Point Meeker is a new enterprise, financed largely by Rev. John Paul and his brother, a well-to-do merchant. The Rev. John Paul, vice president of Asbury College, with the presiding elder of the Alexandria District to assist him, will conduct said meeting.

Rev. Leon I. McCain, of Hammond, La., is holding a revival meeting in Lecompte with Brother John Faulk, the pastor. Emphasis is given to the doctrine of tithing and the unsaved are called to repentance. McCain's gospel is full-orbed; he is a man of God and the church is edified wherever he goes. The Alexandria District has been greatly blessed during the revival campaign which began in January and will continue. The increase in our membership will approximate one thousand on profession of faith and otherwise during the period of revival meeting.

The unification question has been settled just as I expected it would and wanted it to be by the other folk. The Interchurch World Movement seems to be breathing its last. The church of God lives and will live; immortality is written upon her banner. God is with His own; His Word shall not return void. I am in the midst of the greatest year in our history. Come to the camp meeting; we will be glad to see you and promise you a good time. Blessings upon you. HARRY W. MAY,
Presiding Elder, Alexandria Dist.

FROM WEST MONROE, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: For the first time this year I would like to report conditions and achievements at West Monroe.

As reported before, we had our opening of the main auditorium in June. Dr. E. K. Means preached the sermon. In addition to the previous report, will say we raised in cash that day $1,000. This money had not been previously subscribed. This put the building fund in good shape. Dr. Means and his people were very kind to us, assisting in raising the collection.

The pastor's salary was raised over last year at the beginning of the year. It is now paid ahead and will be raised a second time before the close of the year if they continue to pay in advance. The Woman's Missionary Society is doing a splendid work here. The Sunday school is coming into more perfect organization. Every class has its own room and the classes are fast furnishing their rooms. The superintendent is Mr. C. E. Faulk. He is rapid in action and moves the school in a businesslike manner. He has his heart very much in the work and with his splendid ability there is bright prospect for this school.

We have received sixty-eight members into the church this year. We have just closed one of the best meetings ever held in the church. Rev. W. W. Drake did the preaching. Have received twenty-eight on profession and ten by certificate as a result of the meeting. Others are yet to be received. Mr. J. B. Grambling led the singing. He organized a Senior League of forty members while here. Mr. Grambling put energy into his work. Day after day he drilled and explained to the members the working of the League. So the League starts off well instructed. A Junior League will also be organized—the leader has already been appointed. Mr. Grambling should make us a splendid State President.

This being my second term as pastor here, the roll shows that I received half of the present membership into the church here. We expect to receive many more members before the year closes. The finishing touches are being put on the new church. The benches and pulpit furniture have arrived. So in a few days the new church will be complete in ever way.

The opening of this letter seems contradictory. The report referred to was only a quotation the Advocate took from the daily paper here. We are expecting to close a great year here.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, P. E. of the district, was with us much of the time during our meeting. He is a pastor's pastor. A man of his great heart and equipment can but succeed. How safe we feel when he is around! So far as I've heard, things are O.K. in the district.

H. W. LEDBETTER, pastor.

SUPERINTENDENCY OF PROGRAM FOR SOUTHERN ASSEMBLY AT LAKE JUNALUSKA, N. C.

Dr. L. C. Branscomb, editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, has been requested to serve as Secretary of the Program Committee of the Southern Assembly at Lake Junalnska. This committee is composed of the following members: Bishop James Atkins and Mr. W. H. Stockham of the Southern Assembly; Dr. E. B. Chappell and Dr. J. W. Shackford for the Sunday School Board; Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Dr. E. H. Rawlings and Dr. C. G. Hounshell for the Board of Missions; Dr. F. S. Parker for the Epworth League Board; Dr. W. R. Beauchamp for the Laymen's Missionary Movement; Dr. O. E. Goddard and Dr. George R. Stuart for the Commission on Evangelism; Bishop James Cannon, Jr., for the Commission on Temperance and Social Service, and Dr. Stonewall Anderson for the Board of Education.

Inasmuch as this Program Superintendency will take Dr. Branscomb from his office in Birmingham only a few weeks through the summer, he has consented to accept the position and has entered upon his duties. Rev. E. M. Glenn, D.D., during the absence of Dr. Branscomb from the Alabama Advocate office, will have charge of his desk and will act as assistant editor of that paper. Dr. Branscomb believes that the Institution founded at Lake Junaluska by Bishops Atkins and Cannon, Dr. George R. Stuart and Mr. John R. Pepper has in it unlimited possibilities for good to the Southern Church and its people. A. I. DIETRICH,
Business Manager Southern Assembly.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT.

Mrs. T. W. Baker.

District Meetings.

If I could only sing, I'd sing the doxology with all my heart, so grateful am I for the large per cent of representation of our Young Peoples' Superintendents and of the Young People themselves at the district meetings recently held. While last year only two or three Superintendents and an equal number of young people greeted me at each of the district meetings, except at the Sardis District meeting, this year, up to date, the number has been doubled.

The per cent stands as follows:

Aberdeen District meeting, 71 per cent present.

Greenville District meeting, 75 per cent present.

Sardis District meeting, 77 per cent present.

Holly Springs District meeting, 85 per cent present.

At the Aberdeen District meeting it rained, it rained again and still some more! But Aberdeen, Houston, Nettleton, Okolona, and Tupelo Young People all sent their delegates to Pontotoc with good reports and increased pledges for 1920. It was a source of regret to the District Secretary and to me that so few adults from territory not yet organized in Young Peoples' Work were present to get instructions for organization. Pontotoc found herself in need of organizing the young women for service. I hope to report them organized by July 1.

Mrs. Neblett kindly consented to direct the Young Peoples' part of the program at Senatobia. She reported to me these auxiliaries represented at the Sardis District meeting: Charleston, Coldwater, Como, Cockrum, Hernando, Courtland, and Senatobia. Cypress Corner and McGee's Chapel have been recently visited by Mrs. Neblett. I'm sure they are going to send in their reports this quarter. The young people of Sardis District nearly doubled their pledge for 1920.

The Holly Springs District is ahead in new Young Peoples' organizations. When Byhalia young people are organized (and they promised to organize right away), Holly Springs District will be the first to reach the standard set of five (5) new Y. P. auxiliaries to each district during the organization campaign. Three new auxiliaries, Water Valley, Holly Springs, and Mt. Zion, and three old, Grenada, Grenada College, and Holcomb, were represented.

Report time has come around again. I'm expecting reports from every auxiliary. Some are already in. Social Service Superintendents, see to it that you report to Mrs. W. V. Pittman, Sunflower, Miss. This is what she wrote me a few days ago: "I had five (5) reports from the young people last quarter. They came from Tupelo, Grenada, Coffeeville, Como and Itta Bena."

The Holly Springs District meeting was held in Byhalia on June 10-11. More delegates were present and more societies represented than at any former district meeting. Byhalia gave the delegates and visitors a most cordial welcome. The church was decorated with beautiful flowers, the choir gave us such good music and many people were present at each service.

On Thursday night Mrs. Lester Fant gave us the Council Message. She told us so many interesting things about the Council meeting and made all of us wish that we could have been present at this wonderful gathering of missionary workers. Friday morning was given over to the hearing of the reports of the delegates from the many societies represented at Byhalia. All of these reports were most encouraging, many reporting increase in membership and finances and much more interest in mission study. There have been thirteen societies organized in Holly Springs District since the first of January and much more interest is shown in mission work than ever before.

On Friday afternoon the Byhalia Juniors entertained the conference with a most interesting program. This was followed by the reports from the Young Peoples' societies and a most interesting and instructive lecture on the Young Peoples' work by Mrs. T. W. Baker. Then the Juniors gave their reports and Mrs. Lester Fant told of this most important work with the children.

Friday night Mrs. W. T. Boswell gave a very inspiring address; a message so full of love for the Master and for our fellow creatures that every one's heart was strangely warmed and the workers left Byhalia with a new zeal and a greater determination to do more and better work in our missionary societies.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Alexandria District Meeting.

The Alexandria District Woman's Missionary Society was held in Bunkie, June 16, in conjunction with the district conference. The first session was held in the Baptist Church at 10 o'clock, with Mrs. T. E. Brown, District Secretary, in the chair.

The address of welcome was made by Miss Fannie Norman, response by Mrs. Brown.

The following delegates were present: Mrs. Chas. E. Fike, De Ridder; Mrs. J. W. Sanders, De Ridder; Mrs. J. T. Feeler, Pineville; Mrs. F. W. Schaedel, Pineville; Mrs. Alonzo Early, Mrs. W. D. Haas, Mrs. John Evans, of Alexandria; Mrs. W. L. Fort, Mrs. D. B. Boddie, of Rochelle; Miss Fannie Norman, Bunkie; Mrs. Bryan, Oakdale; Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Mrs. J. T. Pierson, Mrs. R. W. Winstead, of Natchitoches, and Mrs. B. F. Key, of Shreveport.

After silent prayer, the Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Mantiply, of Bunkie. She read the twelfth chapter of Romans. Business was then taken up. Mrs. R. W. Winstead was elected recording secretary.

Reports were read from the following auxiliaries: Alexandria, Bunkie, De Ridder, Oakdale, Natchitoches, Pineville, and Rochelle. All reports showed auxillaries in good working order and well organized. Specially good reports came from Pineville and Rochelle, these societies having been organized since January 1, Rochelle having a membership of 25 and Pineville having 33.

Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Superintendent of Mission Study, made a helpful talk on the importance of definite Bible study in the auxillary. She suggested that after mission study books have been used, they be passed on to other societies for use. She made a plea for the establishment of the family altar.

Mrs. B. F. Key, Superintendent of Young People, spoke on different phases of her work, stressing in particular the importance of holding missionary rallies; she told of one held in Mansfield, stating that in spite of rainy weather, fifty young people were present and fourteen adult visitors. An invitation was given by Mrs. W. D. Haas, of Alexandria, for the rally to be held there the second Saturday in October. This invitation was gladly accepted. Mrs. Brown stated that Mrs. Elma Drew, of Mansfield, would be glad to give the first week in July to the Alexandria District to promote the children's work. Any auxiliary needing Mrs. Drew can make arrangements with Mrs. T. E. Brown, Oakdale.

This closed the morning session. After prayer the meeting stood ad-

Letters From Rheumatics.

Possibly you have imagined that you could not get your own consent to write a testimonial letter, but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including Indigestion, Gout, Uric Acid Poisoning and Liver and Kidney diseases, but no patrons of the Springs are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water that those who have been relieved of their rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the Management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have used your Shivar water in several cases of Rheumatism, Indigestion, Kidney [illegible] and in Nervous and Sick Headache and find that it has acted promptly in every case, and I believe that if [illegible] for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. FROM LOUISE AND HOLLY BLUFF, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On Wednesday, June 2, we closed a very [illegible] and fruitful series of meetings at Louise. For ten days, beginning Sunday, May 23, Rev. Claude [illegible], of Fayette, Miss., "sounded [illegible] with no uncertain sound." [illegible] during the meeting our [illegible] church building was filled to [illegible] with the crowds who came [illegible] to the messages delivered by Brother Jones; and quite a few [illegible] unable to find seats inside [illegible] outside upon the sidewalk, and [illegible] was drawn up near the church [illegible]. The Holy Spirit was present in great power. We received sixteen accessions to the [illegible] (12 by vows, 4 by certificate). [illegible] a great revival of "old-time [illegible] among our people whose [illegible] were already enrolled upon the church register.

[illegible] close of the meeting, our [illegible] made up a purse of $170, which was presented to Brother Jones by the [illegible] as a token of appreciation of [illegible] efforts among us. The [illegible] was not forgotten in the round of good things; he received a goodly [illegible] of presents in the form of [illegible] and merchandise; and the official [illegible] have him a check for $80 due, on [illegible]'s salary, which brings our [illegible] account up in full to date.

During the meeting we organized a Women's Missionary Society with [illegible] members, which will be a source of much valuable assistance to us in planning and securing funds [illegible] the new church and parsonage [illegible] we contemplate building in the [illegible] grove.

On June 13, the pastor announced [illegible] the morning offering would be [illegible] exclusively to our Orphans' Home, [illegible], Miss., and that throughout [illegible] coming months of the year the [illegible] taken on the second Sunday [illegible] month at Louise, and taken [illegible] first Sunday at Holly Bluff, [illegible] be given for the same purpose. [illegible] our contributors are asked to [illegible] themselves accordingly.

[illegible] meetings are very encouraging [illegible] Holly Bluff. We are praying for [illegible] people" and believing that [illegible] Fraternally yours, journed to meet in joint session with the brethren at 2 o'clock.

At the afternoon meeting, Mrs. Brown was called to the chair by Brother May. She called for reports from Oakdale Young People and Juniors. Mrs. Bradic gave the report for Young People, and little Paul Brown read a good report from the Junior Society.

Mrs. Key presented the Young People's work, stating that there are twenty-five Young People's societies in the State. She urged that the Young People's Missionary Society and the League work together in harmony. She asked that the ministers pray for this important work.

A splendid paper on "Life Service" was read by Mrs. Alonzo Early, of Alexandria. Mrs. R. W. Winstead made a talk to the ministers, urging them to help the women in organizing Woman's Missionary Societies.

Mrs. Brown read the Standard of Excellence and suggested that the women keep this ever before the auxiliary and report to her those who have attained this Standard.

After a circle of prayers, the district meeting stood adjourned.

A reception was given immediately afterwards at the beautiful home of Mrs. Randle to the visitors by the Bunkie ladies. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent.

RESOLUTONS ON SOCAL REFORM.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote of the Mississippi Epworth League Conference, held at Vicksburg, June 15-18, 1920. There were nearly 400 delegates in attendance at this Conference.

We, the members of the Mississippi Epworth League Conference of the M. E. Church, South, assembled at Vicksburg, Miss., June 15-18, 1920, in the light of social conditions revealed by speakers on social service subjects at said Conference, hereby wish to express to our bishops, pastors, social service workers, and all others interested in the highest welfare of our young people, our unqualified endorsement of the General Rules of our church, which forbid the taking of such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord, with particular reference to dancing, card playing and kindred evils, including every form of gambling and games of chance, which are sweeping our young people from their Methodist moorings, and unfitting them for the responsibilities of citizenship in church and State. Therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we request our chief pastors, our beloved bishops, to prepare and publish through our church press a pastoral letter of admonition to the church at large respecting the unprecedented tide of worldliness now swecping over the land and through the church.

Second—That our pastors be requested to read before their respective congregations said pastoral letter.

Third—That our pastors speak warningly to their congregations regarding the insidious and subtle harm resulting to the individual, the community and to unborn generations from indulgence in the aforesaid and kindred evil practices.

Fourth — That we Epworthians, through the several League Chapters of our Conference, assure our pastors and social service workers of our loyalty and co-operation in their efforts to correct and improve the present appallingly low social standard by strict observance of the General Rules of our church, assumed by each and all of us when we became members thereof.

Fifth—That we Epworth Leaguers further encourage and assist our pastors by attendance upon all the church services each Sunday evening, instead of spending the time in a social way elsewhere.

Sixth—That the social and recreative life of the League and the church be projected on such lines as will meet all necessary requirements, but all of which shall be compatible with true Christian spirit.

Seventh—That our hearts rejoice in the large class of 142 volunteers for life service at our Assembly, who are parties hereto; that our prayers ascend for them and for others that the needy fields of earth shall be supplied with reapers that the Kingdom of our Christ may be established in all the earth.

Eighth—That a copy of these resolutions be printed in the Epworth Era, the Nashville Christian Advocate, and in our various Conference organs throughout the church, and that other League Conferences be hereby requested to join us in our prayers and efforts for social reform.

Signed by: Vera Britt, James W. Sells, Mrs. A. L. Bilmore, W. Wray Bowie, Truman Lewis, Osmond S. Lewis.

A FINE MEETING AT KOSCIUSKO, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our meeting is in progress here and this is the 9th day of the meeting. I have with me Rev. Lee M. Lipscomb, Oxford, and Rev. C. T. Floyd, Byhalia. Brother Floyd is a good singer and helper. As every one knows, Brother Lipscomb is one of our greatest preachers.

Brother Lipscomb is preaching to large congregations at each service, stressing the need for righteousness and denouncing sin in his own characteristic way. All congregations are co-operating and the meeting has already taken on a depth of interest and power that will abide. Six joined the church yesterday (Sunday school pupils) and only one opportunity as yet has been given for membership. It is a meeting in the church. Cordially,

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

July 12.

Ownership seems to imply bondage, slavery; but in God's service ownership implies liberty, freedom. "I am thy servant, O Lord," said David. "Thou hast loosed my bonds." He makes us free that he may make us serve, and it is the liberty of God that makes us serve with a glad heart.—Exchange.

Your Greatest Problem—That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Prncipal of the Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped, and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects. Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tennessee, today, and let him send you a cathlogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

DREAM A DREAM.

If things are not what they ought to be, dream a dream of what should be. Close the eyes to the sorry sights of wrecked lives and ruined homes; close the ears to the pitiful wails of weeping children and heart-broken men and women; forget the sorrows and disappointments and disillusionments that have come into your own life—and dream of beauty and joy and happiness in a world from which injustice has been banished and in which sin is no more. Dream of a world in which men are brothers, in which work is worship, and the love of God is shed abroad in every heart. Dream sweetly and peacefully of the Kingdom of God set up on earth. Then awake and go to work. Dreams sometimes come true.

TRY TITHING.

All the objections to tithing we have ever heard came from those who did not practice it; and we have never known a tither who was not satisfied with it as a system of proportionate giving. It is not a limit to liberality, but it is a safeguard against thoughtlessness and carelessness in keeping accounts with the Lord. We do not look upon it as a specific requirement of the New Testament, but as the reasonable expression of a recognized obligation on the part of Christian people. So far as we can see, tithing has nothing against it, and everything in its favor. It is at least worth a year's trial on the part of every loyal member of the church; if the trial is unsatisfactory, it can easily be given up for a better method. (If any of our readers discover a better system of giving, we should be glad to hear from them).

THANKFUL FOR WHAT WE HAVE.

Our desires may outrun our possessions, but when we stop to count our blessings we always find that we have enough to be profoundly grateful for. Not the least of our blessings may be the fact that God withholds what we ardently desire—our limited knowledge makes it impossible for us to foresee what is perfectly plain to Omniscience. If we should make use of all we have, we should probably soon find that we are richer than we thought. It is greediness that makes us want more than we can use—and many of us, while asking for more, already have talents carefully hid in the earth. Let us be thankful for, and use, what God has given us, with the full assurance that all our needs will be supplied in due time and in due measure.

BIG THINGS AHEAD.

We thank God that the church is looking forward to big undertakings and big achievements. We would that His Kingdom had already come in its fullness, but since it has not, we are called to labor with all our might at a task that is worth while. We are living in a day of big things—but the biggest things are yet to come. The church has wrought nobly in the past, and the wonder is that it has achieved so much; but it has not yet entered into its glory. The future is a challenge to the best that is in us, and only the faint-hearted will hold back. It is not with misgivings, but with eager anticipation that we look forward to the carrying out of a great program that means so much for the welfare of the world. The raising of millions of dollars for our educational work will be no easy thing—but who is looking for an easy job? "The slothful man saith, There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the streets"—but the determined man arms himself and adds a new trophy to his collection. Millions of human beings are in the scales against our millions of money—and humanity will tip the beam. Happy the man who has even a small part in the accomplishment of a mighty undertaking!

HEIGH-HO, OHIO!

Harding, Cox, Watkins—all presidential candidates, and all from Ohio! The Republicans, the Democrats, and the Prohibitionists, in looking about for a party standard bearer, evidently were of one mind as to the State from which their leaders should come, although they were in utter disagreement as to the platforms upon which they should stand. We shall not be surprised to learn that the population of the Buckeye State will receive large accessions within the next four years from the ranks of those who feel called to serve their country in the White House; candidates for the vice presidency will probably do very well to maintain their present places of residence.

FUN FOR THE BOY.

The United States Labor Board has at last rendered its decision concerning the increase of wages asked for by the railroad employes of the country. Under the decision, an increase amounting to $600,000,000 has been granted. We should naturally suppose that this increase would be gratifying to the employes, but press dispatches announce that the unions have accepted the award under protest, preparing in the meanwhile to renew their cases before the Board. The railroads, in order to provide the additional revenue [illegible] asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to authorize an increase of 20 per cent in passenger rates, and of 9.13 per cent in freight rates, in addition to an increase of 27.6 per cent granted. They also asked for [illegible] cent in Pullman rates, the increase to go, not to the Pullman company, but to the railroad, them also. The Interstate Commerce Commission will probably grant the increased rates asked for, so the public, it would, will have to stand the additional cost of transportation. Mr. Samuel Gompers [illegible] that efficient management of the railway officials would make any [illegible] unnecessary; but how could they show greater efficiency than by taking advantage of the opportunity to get more money from the public? We are reminded of the old story of the boys throwing stones at the frog: fun for the boys, but death to the unfortunate amphibian.

LIVING EPISTLES.

Comparatively few men read books, but everybody reads people. Many books stay on the shelves of the bookstores or in the [illegible] at the library, their covers unopened, their pages uncut, but people walk the streets at all hours to be read and known of all men. We can put away pernicious literature and warn our children against the contamination of evil on the printed page, but we cannot keep them from seeing people and learning from reading what they see. Our own lives are open to the inspection of the passer-by, and we teach a lesson to every man we meet. As living epistles, we are shaping the thought and life of the world. "How readest thou?" and how are [illegible]?

STRANGE VALUES.

A newspaper item states that [illegible] promoter has offered Dempsey, the [illegible] champion, $250,000 to [illegible] the European champion. We [illegible] as to the correctness of the [illegible] significant that such a sum should be proposed in connection with a contest of mere physical strength and skill. It is a strange thing that such a value could be placed upon that which has not a single element of true worth. It is simply another illustration of the fact that we need to go a long way before we shall have reached that point where the spiritual is elevated above the material. The poorest preacher in the world renders more real service to society than the [illegible] of any age.

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE SACRAMENTS.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D.

VI.

Modes of Administration.

There are no sadder chapters in church history than those which contain the records of the bitter controversies which have been carried on in regard to the modes of administering the sacraments. For if the general view of the nature of these symbols set forth in previous articles of this series be correct, then it follows as a necessary conclusion that modes of administration are matters of subordinate importance and that there can be no one universally prescribed mode, since the proper mode for any special group of people is that which they find most suggestive and helpful.

Administration of the Lord's Supper.

I believe it will be generally admitted among those who have given the subject serious consideration that for spiritual suggestiveness and from the viewpoint of its influence upon the life of the believer, the Lord's Supper occupies the first place among the rites of the church. And yet, strange as it may appear, very much less emphasis has been placed upon the mode of its administration than upon that of the administration of baptism.

The first communion took place around an actual table. Those who participated in it reclined on their left elbows, their lower limbs extended on the couches upon which their bodies rested. Jesus took a loaf of bread, blessed it; broke off a piece for each communicant and, handing it to him, said. "Take ye, this is my body." Then he took a cup filled with wine and, having given thanks, "he gave it to them, and they all drank of it." (See Mark xlv: 22, 23.)

The same kind of literalism applied here which is in some quarters insisted upon elsewhere would require that this exact procedure be followed in order to make the sacrament effective. But no Protestant denomination, so far as I know, stands for any such contention. No denomination insists upon the necessity for real tables and couches for reclining in order to make the sacrament valid. Nor does any denomination require the use of the common cup or that the ministrant shall take loaves of bread, break them up and divide them among those communicating. On the contrary, because it is more convenient, we generally use thin hard cakes which have been previously prepared and broken into small fragments by some pious woman of the congregation and, because it is more sanitary, we use individual cups instead of requiring that all drink of a common cup. And instead of demanding that the people recline about a common table, we permit them to sit in their pews or invite them to kneel together about the altar rail.

In other words, we recognize the fact that the efficacy of the sacrament depends upon the spirit in which it is received, rather than upon the external circumstances attending its administration and reception. And we are entirely willing to concede that the best mode for any particular group of people is that which those composing it find most suggestive and spiritually stimulating. I was born and brought up in the Methodist Church and from my childhood have followed the custom of partaking of the sacred symbols while kneeling with my fellow-Christians before the altar. It is not strange, therefore, that I find this method of receiving the sacrament vastly more helpful than receiving it sitting upright in the pew. Indeed, so much am I under the spell of custom in this regard that I find it difficult to get real spiritual benefit from the rite when administered in the latter way. And yet I can readily see why a devout Presbyterian, because of the life-long hallowed associations connected with it, might find this method immeasurably more effective than the more formal method practiced by Methodists. Is there any reason then why I should insist upon his giving up the method which he finds most effective for him for the one which I find most helpful to me?

On a memorable occasion Jesus said to the multitudes gathered about him, "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life." His disciples, not yet delivered from their crass literalism, said to him, "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" Jesus answered: "It is the spirit that giveth life; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I have spoken unto you are spirit and are life." These words should be kept in mind when we are seeking to interpret the sacraments. Here, as everywhere else, it is the spirit that counts; the outward form is mere shadow.

While all this is true, however, it does not follow that it makes no difference how the Lord's Supper is administered. Whatever be the plan adopted for its administration, it should be carried out in a reverent and dignified way. I have frequently seen the communion service conducted with such irreverent haste and in such a slovenly fashion as to rob it entirely of its impressiveness. The minister often omits all of the ritual except the prayer of consecration and the people crowd each other in their efforts to reach the altar in a way that reminds one of a company of street urchins trying to get to a free dinner. The result is that the service takes on the appearance of an unpleasant performance which both minister and people want to finish as quickly as possible. The ritual of our church is simple and beautiful and not long enough to tire any one provided the minister is able to read it, or, better still, to repeat it in such a way as to bring out its rich meanings. Moreover, one of the benefits of communing lies in the opportunity it gives for quiet meditation on the things for which the sacred symbols stand, and this benefit is entirely destroyed by any appearance of haste on the part either of ministrant or communicants.

Administration of Baptism.

It will probably strike most of my readers as surprising that one should deem it worth while to give any serious consideration to the mode of administering the Lord's Supper. Such a conclusion would be by no means unreasonable. To a large majority of educated Christians throughout the world, however, it is equally surprising that any one should regard the mode of administering baptism as a matter of fundamental importance. And yet there are Protestant denominations which maintain not only that baptism is essential to salvation, but also that, in order to be efficacious, it must be administered in a particular way and by a line of duly accredited ecclesiastical functionaries.

Such a view has no adequate support either in the Bible or in reason.

There is no indication that either Jesus or the writers of the New Testament regarded the mode of baptism as a matter of vital importance.

The evangelists record only one instance in which Jesus speaks of Christian baptism and one in which he may have referred to it. (Matt. xxiii, 19; John iii, 5.) In neither case, however, is there any suggestion in regard to the mode of its administration. Is it conceivable that a matter upon which would depend the destiny of untold millions of human beings should have been dealt with in such a fashion by him who came to bring to us the word of life, to show us the way to God?

And the New Testament writers seem to have been quite as indifferent in regard to the mode of administering the ordinance as was their Master. It would have been so easy for Paul or Peter or John to tell us that we must be immersed in water in order to become members of the body of Christ and partakers of the divine nature. So far, however, from doing so, they left the matter in such doubt that a vast majority of educated Christians who accept the Bible as the inspired Word of God find no reason for regarding it as a matter of vital importance.

Those who hold that immersion is essential maintain, of course, that the New Testament does really place the matter beyond doubt; but they find it impossible on the basis of such an assumption to explain why it is that millions of their fellow-Christians who are just as intelligent, loyal and faithful as they are still remain unconvinced, and quite as impossible to answer the arguments which are advanced against the exclusive immersionist theory.

Baptism, as I have already shown, had been for hundreds of years before the birth of Christ a symbol of ceremonial cleansing. As such it had acquired a technical sense that was quite different from its classical meaning. That the Greek word "baptizein" originally meant to dip or immerse is beyond dispute. But it had no necessary reference whatever to water. One might be immersed in mud or filth or sand or salt water or trouble or any one of a score of other things that might be mentioned. If a man had approached an intelligent Athenian in A. D. 30 and told him that he wished to be baptized, the Athenian, being unacquainted with the secondary meaning which the word "baptism" had acquired among the Jews, would have been at a loss to know what the person meant, for he might have meant that he wanted to be immersed either literally or figuratively in any one of a score of things. If the person, however, had approached an intelligent Jew with the same request there would have been no such uncertainty, since the word "baptism" had been long used to designate the use of water as a symbol of purification.

This use of words in a secondary sense is common in all languages. For instance, the original meaning of the Greek word "baptism" was "to dip," but it later came to mean "to dye" or "color" without reference to the way in which the coloring matter was applied. If, for instance, a writer spoke of one's dyeing one's beard or hair he used the word "baptein."

That the word "baptize" is used in the New Testament in the secondary sense explained above and that it had been so used by the Jews for generations before the New Testament was written there is abundant evidence. If you will refer to the passage in Num. xix, 17-19, in regard to the ceremonial purification of a man who had touched a dead body, you will discover that the method was to take running water, mix with it the ashes of the burning of sin offering and, dipping into the mixture a bunch of hyssop, sprinkle it upon the unclean. In the apochryphal book of Ecclesiasticus (xxxiv, 25f) the author, who was evidently a pious and intelligent Jew, speaks of this ceremonial purification as baptism; and Josephus, the distinguished Jewish historian, speaks of it in the same way. Of course both of them knew that the process of purification to which they referred was by sprinkling. They were concerned, however, about the use of the symbol and not the mode of its application. In the same way the author of Hebrews (Heb. x, 10) speaks of the Old Testament ceremonial as embracing "meats and drinks and divers baptisms" (translated "washings" in our English versions), but when we come to examine the Old Testament we find that all these "baptisms" or ceremonial cleansings were by sprinkling or pouring.

The only explanation of this usage is that among the Jews the word "baptism" had come to refer simply to the use of water in ceremonial cleansing without any reference to the mode of its application.

The only thing they seem to have concerned themselves about in this symbolic use of water was that it should be running. Even in taking the ceremonial bath their custom was, if no running stream was convenient, to stand by a bowl or basin and pour the water over their bodies

THE PENTECOST.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

As I have gone from field to field in these Eastern lands, I have gotten many impressions. But a few of these impressions emerge as deep and abiding convictions, and of these convictions, the one that stands out clearest and sharpest I wish to set forth in this letter. With others from the beginning, I felt that the Centenary was to be a great spiritual movement. And with others, as the movement unfolded, I realized more and more the import of that emphasis. "The drive with the marvelous success of it is itself a revival" was said on all sides, and I believe that an experience of my own, a few days before the eight-day drive, was not different from that of many others. Momentarily discouraged at some section that seemed not to be working smoothly, it suddenly came over me that we might be facing the most humiliating failure any church ever experiences—if after all our talk and planning and preparation we should not get pledged the thirty-five million dollars asked. And on this wise came my testing: If the Centenary is not a great spiritual movement—if not of God—we cannot do the work in all lands the Centenary is designed to promote and that is harder far than the execution of any mechanical plan we may call a "drive;" and so success in the Centenary would itself be a delusion to be dispelled ultimately in a failure to achieve spiritually in all the world which, while maybe not so patent, would be infinitely more far-reaching, and tragic. That sort of success, however brilliant and complete, would only mock us at the last, and for one I do not want it. But if it is of God, as certainly it must be, if we finish afterwards the work only begun in the big drive for money, then why worry? Work, wait upon Him, and His divine skill will win.

Before the drive was over, and with increasing eagerness afterward, men were talking the great revival, and in the conversation processes just beginning as I left for the East, the objective surviving and standing out supreme in the thought and aspiration of the Centenary was a great evangelistic ingathering that should come in a far-reaching Pentecost.

I thought I felt the need of it then, and understood the providence underlying and directing the pathway that had brought us to this great opportunity. But really I never did till I went in and out of the churches in these fields, seeing the millions surrounding them, and felt, even if dimly as felt the early disciples, the need of some power by which men and women in great multitudes might be brought to salvation in Jesus Christ.

Heroic But Impotent.

I have had the privilege of visiting probably seventy-five churches and chapels in these three countries, and always in the church, the interesting and notable thing was the little group that gathered to greet us, because, alien though we were in tongue and race, we had come to them in the name of our common Lord Christ. As the missionary or pastor would tell us the story—how the members of the little flock had been found and gathered, through what opposition and sacrifice and bitter persecution they had, well-nigh every one, made their way into the blessed experience of discipleship, it was an impression of heroism that came to us everywhere in their congregations. But it was an impression no less of impotency, impotency in the midst of dangers that threatened the integrity of their existence, and impotency even more in the presence of the great task of winning the multitudes of their non-Christian brothers and sisters in the communities surrounding them.

In the city of Matsuyama, Japan, I attended a district conference, a very respectable body of preachers, laymen and laywomen, and was entertained in the auditorium of the principal bank building of the city for Japan, sensing many tokens of the growing influence of Christianity in the community. But in the afternoon, in company with a missionary of the Congregational Church, we climbed to the castle of the old dynasty, hundreds of feet to the top of the hill, and looking around for miles and miles over the valley, got a vision at once inspiring and oppressive of what a militant evangel and the power of a Pentecost might, in the brief years of the Centenary, do for all that part of Japan.

In Choon Chun, Korea, I spoke Sunday morning to a congregation that practically filled the auditorium, saw the people bring their offerings, heard them sing the songs of the gospel, and follow in orderly and practiced way the familiar forms of Christian worship. But that afternoon, with the missionaries, I climbed to the top of the mountain overlooking the city six hundred feet up, and looking around beheld the smoke ascending from what they said was sixty towns and villages in perhaps not more than a dozen of which had Jesus been preached in any adequate way, and I wondered how we should reach the fifteen million Koreans unChristian, and many of them till now without even the knowledge of the gospel.

From the city of Suchiang, in China, we walked a distance of five miles to reach a country church. On our way back, for miles and miles as far as the eye could reach, we saw great fields under finest cultivation, and only one solitary person anywhere in view. I did not believe, from the multitudes I had seen everywhere, that there was that much space anywhere in China where at any one time hundreds of China's four hundred million would not have to crowd for standing room. From the cold they had taken refuge in the villages in the distance, and in the one from which I had just come, so jammed were they that one could scarcely force his way through the street. They crowded around literally scores deep when we ate our dinner with the pastor, and when the bell rang for a short service in the church, almost before we could get to our places in the pulpit the people had pushed their way into the aisles to see the strangely dressed foreigners who had come with the missionary to visit their town. As the multitudes crowded around us, I could not get out of my mind the distressing reflection that at this moment there are more people unChristian in China than there were a hundred years ago when Robert Morrison, the first Protestant missionary, came to this land to bring to them the good news of salvation.

Power Poured Forth.

I thanked God for the Sunday schools and kindergartens, the Bible classes and Bible women, and for all those quieter processes that through the years have brought the people in all these lands by ones and twos so genuinely and effectually to the Savior. But surely the time now has come when we need some process by which men and women may be won by hundreds and thousands, by which whole civilizations may be touched and changed, whole cities stirred to the weltering depths of their wickedness, and whole nations may be born in the day of some new era of conquest planned for this unusual time.

I believe that just such a process Jesus provided and promised when He commissioned His disciples to go forth and make disciples of all the nations. "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, but ye shall receive power." He was thinking of the impotency of this first group before the world task confronting them. It was power they needed and power He promised. Well, the power promised came upon them in the Pentecost, and it was the Pentecost that made the difference. Before the Pentecost Jesus, the greatest religious teacher the world ever saw, wrought industriously and faithfully for three years, and had to show for His faithful teaching at the end of His ministry only a few hundred disciples. But after the Pentecost, see what a change! Peter, the weakest of His followers, suddenly has courage to face the multitudes, and when he tells the simplest gospel story, that story attracts the [illegible] from seventeen countries. [illegible] dialects of language [illegible] own tongue, the ceremonially [illegible] and in one day three thousand [illegible] into the church.

Winning Races and Generations.

So it has been ever since when [illegible] ties and civilizations have been [illegible] The slower and subtler processes [illegible] training have gone before, but [illegible] a time when a process has [illegible] more contagious and more dynamic [illegible] It was so when Paul evangelized [illegible] of Asia Minor, crossing the sea to [illegible] ing westward who could stop [illegible] to Spain. So it was in [illegible] Europe, and so in [illegible] America for Christianity.

This is no reflection upon [illegible] been done already and is being done by the [illegible] processes. In all these fields, [illegible] to say that the Pentecost does not often come to reinforce these faithful workers [illegible] a service through the ministry [illegible] lands than which none more [illegible] valuable has been done in the [illegible] than church. They have been [illegible] of work Jesus thought it worth [illegible] three years of His personal life to [illegible] which they have been building into the [illegible] of little groups a foundation without which no superstructure of a national or [illegible] be builded. I mean only to say that as far as I have seen or heard there are not in any large way attending the Christian movement in our own or other churches in these lands the tokens of a general awakening with Pentecostal power [illegible] as have always attended the work of the church when there have been large ingatherings and far-reaching conquest.

But there are tokens that the [illegible] when these little groups [illegible] receive the fire and power of a great Pentecostal enlargement, if they are in the spirit of the apostolic church and in the spirit of the promise and plan of the Master to grow and strengthen into a stream that shall swell and widen and deepen with salvation the countries and races that are still without Jesus Christ.

The Meaning of the Centenary.

The Centenary has seemed always to me a splendid conjunction of providential [illegible] looking to the achievement of some mighty [illegible] purpose, and in that purpose was [illegible] distinctly conceived, I am now no longer in any uncertainty. It is not lightly or [illegible], but reverently proclaimed as the deepest conviction of my heart as its highest hope and prayer: God's set time has come to favor with Pentecostal endowment the church in all lands. We need not bother ourselves with the times and seasons, but conditions are ripe—in the very [illegible] is the promise that the Master means it. If His people are faithful, and will pay the price, to pour out upon the church in these lands the Pentecostal preparation for a mighty advance.

The old order is changing everywhere, men and women are groping for the light, in heart dissatisfied, in great numbers reaching [illegible] fields are open, as perhaps they have not been in our lifetime, to the preacher or teacher that comes to these lands to show them any [illegible], and in numbers so large are awakening that [illegible] process of teaching nothing [illegible] Pentecostal revival with worldwide [illegible] and satisfy.

Missionaries feel the need of it as of nothing else when from many lands they testify of their Centenary hope and prayer. They may differ in many things, but in one thing they are agreed—the hope that burns for a great revival. National leaders are catching the contagion of this desire and are beginning to lead their people in earnest prayer for revival; and in the plans for the Centenary in these three fields, led by the [illegible] themselves, the thing outstanding the thing central around which all else revolves, and the supreme in all their endeavor, is revival

Are There Signs of World-Wide Revival?

And there are already the drops before the shower—a going in the top of the mulberry trees. In the great Mass Movement in India the ingathering in one week reached a thousand in one communion. I heard of a remarkable awakening in one of the provinces of China in which probably ten thousand people, suddenly moved by the Spirit under the guidance of the missionaries, are pressing their way into the Kingdom of God. I was in one of our schools in which, in a revival conducted by the preacher, every solitary girl in the student body of probably two hundred accepted Jesus Christ.

Did Dr. Pinson bring this celebration to our attention through no providential leading, and was the purpose of God in that providence only that we should put on a great drive for money, winning a new place for ourselves among the churches of America, or with this money building for ourselves three times as many churches, three times as many schools and hospitals, sending out twice as many missionaries, and multiplying several times the material evidences of our missionary activity? No, no, it is no accident that men have said from the beginning, it is a great spiritual movement, that in the church at home, and, I trust, many hearts are turning to revival, that in the fields abroad, as in the church at home, men tremble to think what blight and curse will come if the Centenary—how infinitely better it had never come, if the money we spend in these lands may not be spiritualized in a mighty vision, a mighty passion for souls, and a mighty prayer that may be answered only in a world-wide Pentecost.

PRESENT STATUS OF THE EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

The Educational Campaign ordered by the last General Conference for the purpose of saving the schools, colleges and universities of the church is a reality. The headquarters organization has been practically completed and the movement will be launched throughout the church at an early date.

Of the campaign personnel thus far selected, Dr. J. H. Reynolds, president of the Hendrix College, is the director general. Prof. W. E. Hogan, assistant secretary of the Board of Education, will be associated with him as assistant secretary and business manager. Dr. Stonewall Anderson, general secretary of the Board of Education, is the treasurer of the campaign commission. These general officers have established headquarters at 160 4th Ave., North, Nashville.

Certain departments have already been organized and at least one of them has already begun to function actively. The department of publicity will be in charge of Elmer T. Clark, the general secretary of the publicity department of the Centenary Commission. Associated with him will be Dr. J. S. Chadwick, of Birmingham, who will be in charge of the Religious Press Section of the publicity department. Dr. Chadwick was formerly assistant editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, and during the war was on the publicity staff of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Q. B. Schenk is in charge of the Graphics section of the publicity department, and will have in charge the work of producing photographs and manufacturing lantern slides. One other associate secretary of this department is yet to be chosen; when selected he will have charge of the Secular Press Section. The publicity department has already produced the campaign Survey Book and now has under way other items of literature.

The department of Life Service will be in charge of Dr. R. H. Bennett, the secretary of Ministerial Supply and Training of the Board of Education. Mr. J. M. Way, the secretary of the Minute Men of the Centenary Commission, will head a similar department in the Educational Campaign, and will carry into the new movement the organization which was perfected during the missionary drive.

All of these departmental secretaries and their staffs have offices at 160 4th Ave., North, Nashville, and are now outlining their policies for the campaign. Other departments will be organized at a later date. These will have charge of the field forces, the work of organization throughout the church, and the general campaign plan.

Certain preliminary plans have been well developed and may be announced at the present time. The survey volume or Case Book, which will present full facts concerning the present assets and needs of each institution of the church, is now on the press and will be issued early in August. There are other items of literature in course of preparation, researches are being made, charts for display purposes have been produced, thousands of photographs have been secured, and illustrated lectures are being prepared for each Conference in the church. Set-Up Meetings have been scheduled to be held during the next month.

The bishops have taken official action allotting a full day at each Annual Conference to the cause of Christian education, and teams are now being organized to visit the various Conferences. These teams will be made up of the best men and women of the church. At these Conferences the whole program of the campaign will be outlined.

In view of the present status of the campaign, the educational forces of the church appeal to ministers and members everywhere for their cooperation and hearty support. The cause of Christian education is now the foremost interest before the religious forces of the entire nation. The world has at last come to understand that its salvation depends upon educated Christian leaders, and only the success of the present movement will enable the M. E. Church, South, to take its place by the side of the various denominations and other constructive forces laboring for the redemption of the world. There must be no backward step taken by the church; certainly none will be taken by the Educational Campaign Commission. Those on whose shoulders the church has placed the responsibility of the present campaign are entering it with that enthusiasm and determination which the church expected of them, and they appeal to those whose servants they are and in whose interests the labor for cooperation, encouragement, and support in every possible way.

EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN COMMISSION.

JUST FOR FUN.

By Rev. Ben P. Jaco.

I was filled with delight and surprise when I read that the Centenary Secretary of the Mississippi Conference had so stirred his people as to get ahead of the North Mississippi Conference in the per cent raised. "I thought, hurrah for Hawkins! He has had a hard time of staying down near the foot of the class with the others of us sorry folks.

But I did not shout long. I wanted to make sure I was right in my exultation. I read the June Report again and noticed a note which said, "Some Conferences making low pledges have advantage in percentage." I looked at the figures again, and found that the Mississippi Conference whose percentage stood 19.6 to North Mississippi 18.6 and whose quota stood much higher than ours on May 25, 1919, and whose amount paid in to date is much over twenty thousand dollars less than ours. I am so glad he told on us. I was ashamed to tell on my folks but now his telling it relieves me. It is out! Now I want Brother Felts to distribute some of "Too Much Mustard," and warm up our interest until we shall have 40 instead of 18.6 per cent. If we had one hundred and seventy-four pastors and six or seven hundred treasurers who could do as well as Cunningham and Carlisle at Aberdeen, those folks down in the Mississippi Conference would take a back seat.

I am going to look for several pastors to write me a scorching letter for not calling their names, too. Let every one who has raised the second installment blister me, in a letter. Then let all the others call together their local church cabinets, organize, go out and collect all that is due in one afternoon and then write me a warm letter. Look out, Hawkins! I dare you fellows to crow too loud. These fellows up here will hear you and wake up.

BIBLE, EVANGELISTIC AND SOCIAL SERVICE PROGRAM AT LAKE JUNALUSKA, N. C., AUGUST 8-22, 1920.

This period at Lake Junaluska this season is under the management largely of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and Dr. George R. Stuart, and they, together with the management of the Southern Assembly, are glad to publish news that follows regarding the speakers for that period. On Bible exposition, they announce such speakers as Dr. M. N. Waldrip, pastor of McKendree Church at Nashville, Tenn., formerly of Arkansas; Dr. F. N. Parker, of Emory University; Bishop E. D. Mouzon. Among speakers on evangelistic subjects, they announce Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Dr. Geo. R. Stuart and Evangelist Bob Jones. On the Social Service phase of the program, they announce Dr. Charles L. Goodell, of New York, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Col. John E. Edgerton, of Nashville, Tenn., Mr. Thomas S. Southgate, of Virginia, and a series of illustrated lectures on the subject "Better America." The evening devotionals will be in charge of Rev. Walter Anthony, of Atlanta, Ga., and the music in charge of Mr. J. Dale Stentz. Among others who have been asked to take part in this series of conferences are Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League of America, Melvin Trotter, the noted evangelist, Senator W. R. Webb, of Tennessee, Senator Heflin, of Alabama, and a number of other laymen and preachers, many of whom it is hoped will accept the invitation to appear on the program.

This promises to be one of the most profitable programs that have been put on at Junaluska on these subjects, and pastors and laymen interested in these departments of the work of the church should make their plans to go to Lake Junaluska during these two weeks and not only enjoy a pleasant vacation, but, at the same time, gain profit through attendance upon a series of lectures the like of which they may not soon have another opportunity of hearing. We understand that arrangements have been made with the railroads whereby round trip tickets may be obtained at one and one-third fare by the use of certificates which will be freely furnished upon application to the Southern Assembly at Lake Junaluska.

DEATH OF A GOOD MAN.

Dear Brother Carley: We buried from our church here Sunday morning, July 18, Brother N. A. Mott, one of our best and most public-spirited citizens and an active member of the Methodist Church for about forty years. Brother Mott was born in Alberg, Vermont, April 4, 1856. He learned the printer's trade as a boy. He came to Yazoo City in 1880 by way of New Orleans. He began work here as foreman of the Herald office. Later he became associated with Judge W. A. Henry in the Yazoo Sentinel. He next established the Mott Job Printing Office, until the disastrous fire of 1901. Then for a few years he was engaged in the insurance business. He represented this county in the State Legislature in 1912-16. He was one of the active prohibition workers during that session of the Legislature.

He bought the Yazoo Herald in 1914, and had published it since that date. He served on the building committee for the two brick Methodist churches that have been built in Yazoo City. He did more of the detail and hard work in the building of the present splendid church than any other member of it. We shall miss him in our work here.

On his last journey from home, the 8th of June, I had a long talk with him on the train from Jackson to McComb, and I found his faith in God strong and his hopes bright. A good man has gone from us. He leaves a wife and three sons.

L. E. ALFORD, Pastor.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HOSPITAL.

To the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference:

Your Hospital Committee met at Hattiesburg, Miss., on July 20, and carefully reviewed all matters with reference to the Hospital for our Conference.

We wish to make the following statement in regard to the same: [illegible] of the entire affair is that we have been unable to [illegible] the contributions [illegible] "South Mississippi Infirmary" offer, on account of the short [illegible] of time allowed for the [illegible] of our portion [illegible] campaign. We have the enterprise to [illegible] We are [illegible] heartily devoted [illegible] Conference. On the [illegible] we find that already $[illegible] has been [illegible] with only [illegible] of a [illegible] Conference have taken up the matter [illegible] the individual subscriptions are of [illegible] amounts and to be greatly [illegible] final accomplishment of [illegible] While it is not [illegible] to take up [illegible] of the Easter Drive, we are [illegible] to a [illegible] our people [illegible] we will be [illegible] and [illegible] like manner earnestly to [illegible] offering.

We earnestly urge our [illegible] to regard [illegible] as one to be pushed to success, feeling [illegible] that [illegible] will be [illegible] property of [illegible] and [illegible] We ask our [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] right of way [illegible] and to [illegible] in [illegible] [illegible]

To our [illegible] and women of means we appeal [illegible] an opportunity to render signal [illegible] in the case of His children. Conscious of [illegible] and [illegible] they lead us in gifts that will [illegible] the success of this Hospital. The manner with which our people respond himself to this appeal will determine the [illegible] with which we may [illegible] the actual [illegible] and the [illegible] of the Institution [illegible] we shall build.

UNIMAGINED FRIENDLINESS.

We have a great deal more [illegible]ness than is ever spoken. Margie all the [illegible]ness that chills like east winds the world, the whole human family is bathed with an element of love like a fine ether. How many persons we meet in house, whom we scarcely speak to, whom yet we honor, and who honor us! How many we see in the street, or sit with in church, whom, though silently, we warmly receive to be with! Read the language of these sparkling eyebeams. The heart knoweth. • Ralph Waldo Emerson

THE MARCH TOWARD FREEDOM.

The outstanding fact in human history is the march of the race toward opportunity and freedom. The early man was largely influenced by climate and soil. The cultivated man builds for himself, not alone houses for shelter, but all manner of conventions against the brute tyrannies of matter and of force. He not only has a wider field than any other animal, but he has also enabled his diet from every corner of the globe. So he seeks to make every opportunity and every possession available in every place. Neither men nor nations have yet realized what the great gift of freedom. But the triumphant [illegible] man will one day be king of the world. —Samuel G. Smith

A MINIATURE DEMOCRACY.

By Dr. W. W. Pinson

A ship is a floating democracy. Nowhere else is a group of people gathered from so many races and climes into so small a compass for so long a time. It was a mixed and motley aggregation that crowded the Grampian on its eleven days from Montreal to Antwerp. A sea of unbroken smoothness and good weather atoned for the slow sailing and congestion. Conditions were altogether unfavorable for profit in the dining room. The writer broke his usual record by an unfailing appetite, and, barring the breath of the icebergs and a few shivering fogs, made a most comfortable voyage. The trip furnished a fine opportunity for a curious American to study the temper of the restless tide of humanity and to note the varying moods of different races and nations in these post-war reactions.

There was something like a score of nations represented. For illustration, in my stateroom there was a German-Canadian, a German-American and a Belgian-American, for my companions. We got on finely. The Belgian at once offered to exchange his lower for my upper berth, solely for my convenience. The purser told me there were a large number of Germans aboard, for the first time since the war. It was worthy of note that a great disproportion of these came from Chicago. It was even whispered that there were Bolshevists aboard and that they were altogether fit for treason, stratagem and spoils. A boat is not a place, as a rule, for many children. On this boat there were crowds of children. It made one wonder if people are moving back to the East to take advantage of the confusion in monetary affairs for investing the money they have made in the West.

One of the most striking exhibitions of enthusiastic Americanism was that of a Roumanian Jew from New York. Nothing was too extravagant for him to say of America. On the other hand, there was a Hungarian Jew who hailed from Liverpool and nothing he could say about England was too good in his eyes. He was equally sure of the glaring defects of America and outspoken in their exposure. This Jew from Hungary and this Jew from Roumania became so heated in their discussions that an American and an Englishman, both to the manner born, had to interfere in the interest of fraternal relations.

I was led to serious reflections on the unifying effects of the Gospel when a Christian Chinese came to Mr. Ward, an Englishman, and to me, and asked that we join to pray for the Roumanian Jew. Here was a Chinese, an Englishman and an American pledging one another to pray for a Roumanian Jew. That is the process which alone will bind the world neighborhood into a world brotherhood.

It happened one evening that an English clergyman seated at the piano in the saloon began singing German songs. A Belgian priest protested, and was joined by a chorus that put a stop to the offensive performance. The blunder was not repeated during the voyage. It would have been easy to uncover an ugly sore that was only beginning to heal. Indeed, the purser told me he was not letting the crew into the secret that so many Germans were on board, since that knowledge would not contribute to the cheerfulness and good will of the service, to say the least. Indeed, I happened once to overhear my German-Canadian roommate urged to declare his blood, and taunted in unmistakable foreign brogue with being afraid to say that he was German. This race antipathy, ranging all the way from good natured, patriotic banter to the bitterness of national antipathy, was evident all the way over. An American told me he and his party had been insulted every day. I was told that we of the United States were to be soundly licked by Canada, but when, how, and for what, I did not gather. In fact, this floating democracy carried within its small citizenship the possibilities of diplomatic deadlocks and war-like explosions.

Is not the same thing true of this whole planet? While the war was hammering the links of brotherhood, its forges were white with the flames of hate. If peace cooled these flames, it left the fires cherry red with suspicion; and what they lost in intensity they seem to have gained in subtle pervasiveness. On every frontier, national or racial, one finds a mined field where he must move with caution. The dragon-teeth of suspicion have been sown, and unless uprooted they will produce a harvest that will be gathered in tears and blood.

There was aboard our ship a company of Y. M. C. A. workers going to various countries of Europe, and missionaries to Africa, all Americans, going out to preach the Gospel of brotherhood. There was a Chinese on the same mission. Mr. Ward, Commissioner of the "World Brotherhood Federation," who has been so helpful in our European work, was along, and with him, Brigadier General Davey, Senior Chaplain in the British Navy. These fine, cultured Christian Englishmen made my voyage delightful and profitable by their companionship. Besides, there were a number of clergymen of the church of England. All these messengers of peace were to me a sign and a pledge of the triumph of love over hate, of confidence over suspicion, and of service over greed.

Circumstances had made it necessary for Bishop Atkins and Dr. Beauchamp to take one boat and me another. They had preceded me by a week. I found them in Brussels on June 1. With them was Dr. C. C. Jarrell, who is to be permanently connected with the work over here. This work is opening to us more and more inviting prospects.

Some day you will meet a temptation or undergo a trial, but you will come through triumphantly, for all through the years you will have been laying up strength against that day from the bread of moral life, which is broken for you at the church service.—Dr. J. A. Holmes.

Centenary College of Louisiana

SHREVEPORT, LA.

THE COLLEGE OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE FOR MEN

PEOPLE ARE TURNING TO CENTENARY COLLEGE BECAUSE OF:

1. THE RICH HISTORY.

No college in the State has a stronger line of alumni and the years of fine service guarantee a tradition that is entirely wholesome. This atmosphere is worth much as a fundamental part of the life of the institution.

2. THE NEW ORGANIZATION AND EQUIPMENT.

For the first time in its history, the college and the academy are entirely separated. The work of the college is done by college men and no academy teacher has any other than academy subjects. This guarantees a standard quality of work. Equipment has been purchased to meet the requirements of the college association.

3. THE SPIRIT OF GROWTH.

The Board of Trustees was reorganized last year and the men who are controlling the policies of the institution are made up of business men and of clerical members from the Louisiana Conference, who are interested in placing the college on a firm basis. They are looking forward. They are planning big things. Everything that a college needs they propose to give.

MORE THAN $100,000 SPENT THIS YEAR.

ENROLLMENT THIS YEAR FIFTY PER CENT INCREASE.

BUDGET OVER DOUBLED FOR NEXT YEAR.

4. THE SPLENDID FACULTY.

For this year there has been employed the largest, most expensive and the most experienced faculty that we have ever had. Many of these men have been engaged in similar institutions with a great deal of success. Centenary has been fortunate in procuring such a body of men—in fact, it seems providential. With such men in charge, the institution must succeed, for the faculty is the only test of an institution.

EXAMINE THE LIST AND THEIR RECORDS.

5. THE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE.

The institution proposes to stand for moral and religious training. Each member of the faculty has been employed with this in view. Their records show that they have done it elsewhere. And they are coming to Centenary with this hope. If we fail in this, we have no further justification. With your assistance, we shall not fail.

SEND US YOUR BOYS, AND THE RESULT WILL SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

One day I was not very good -
I answered back- no nice child should.
Then, in the corner on a chair
I had to sit; nurse puts me there
Until I'm really sorry- then -
Perhaps I won't do so again.
The time was not half gone, and yet
A something warm and soft and wet
Licked one hand hanging at my side
Dear Fido's tongue! And then I cried.
He nudged up close, the darling pup.
Soon nursie called: "The time is up!"
I must be careful what I do
If Fido dear is punished too.

TRUE BRAVERY.

"How fast you sew, Alice! I really believe you have made the most blocks."

"I'm sure I have. Well, the swiftest sewer is more apt to win the prize, you know."

The girls were making quilt blocks for Grandma Martin. Aunt Susie and grandma had cut out the pieces so nicely and evenly and, placing the parts of each block together, had run a thread through the center of the pile.

Grandma had promised a prize to the girl who, in two weeks, should have made the most blocks; and since grandma was always as good as her word, the girls were trying hard to win the prize, especially Vera, who was very covetous.

At the end of the first week the girls had made exactly the same number of blocks; then Alice's pile began to grow more rapidly. She was very enthusiastic, and bent all her energies to win.

Now, unfortunately, Vera, besides being covetous, was of a very jealous disposition, and could not endure the thought of being beaten in the contest. Consequently she began to make plans to win, if not by fair means, then by foul.

When the girls were called upon to assist grandma, Vera always suggested to Alice that she respond to the call, adding flatteringly, "You are ahead, anyway." These were the times when Vera's pile began to grow larger. A block now and then was quickly slipped from one pile to another.

Alice, who was the soul of honor, did not once suspect her companion of dishonesty.

"I must get to work," she said to Vera one day when she had finished counting her blocks. "I thought I was ahead, but your pile has grown so fast. I shouldn't wonder the prize will be a set of books, for grandma knows we like to read."

Vera sewed steadily. She didn't feel like talking. In fact she could hardly look Alice in the face.

"How do you think I know?" said Aunt Susie, her eyes twinkling, as she placed an arm about each girl and embraced them when they begged her to give them just the least bit of a hint as to what the prize would be.

Saturday evening, when the supper dishes had been washed and put away, grandma said, "Now put aside your needles and thimbles. No more sewing this evening. Bring me your blocks, girlies, and Aunt Susie and I will count them."

Just then a sentence in her copy book recurred to Vera's memory.

She blushed a rosy red, and grandma thought this was due to her embarrassment and surprise as, taking the two neatly bound books, "Beautiful Joe" and "Black Beauty," she murmured her thanks.

"I ought to give Alice one," she said, an accusing conscience continuing to annoy her.

"No indeed," demurred Alice, "you made the most blocks and the prize belongs to you."

"Honesty is the best policy." Vera had written that sentence a dozen times in her lesson, and now the words sounded loudly in her ears.

She had turned over the leaves in her new books, but failed to concentrate her thoughts so that she could understand what she was reading. She did not feel as happy as she had expected; on the contrary, she was feeling quite miserable.

During the evening Aunt Susie and grandma had admired the blocks so much and the evenness of the pieces that Alice's conscience

"Keep right on," grandma [illegible] "and you will soon be ahead of your own [illegible]"

After [illegible] Vera's troubled conscience [illegible] awake. Ten o'clock struck. —"Oh, my!" sobbed the poor girl, "I know I'll not sleep at all."

When she closed her eyes, it seemed that real faces surrounded her, crying, "You were not honest; you cheated."

By and by the continued sobbing awakened Alice.

"What's the [illegible]? Are you sick?"

"The blocks are not mine," sobbed the weeping girl brokenly.

"Yes they are," declared Alice.

"But I tell you they are not," insisted the girl. "I cheated. I took some of your blocks.

"Well, don't cry any more. You'll have grandma. If you want to, you can tell her in the morning."

And tell her she did.

Grandma tenderly placed her arm about the little girl when she had done confessing and made her confession.

"Good [illegible] little one," she said earnestly. "You can't win a victory in the fight with self, and that means a good deal." Youth's Comrade.

WHAT HETTY KNEW.

"There isn't [illegible] to play in," said the strange little girl, who had been left on Hetty's front porch while her father went to mend the automobile.

"It won't be quite a little while," her father warned her. "You play with Hetty, and have a good time."

But that was what to cry about, she said.

"Oh, I have lots of things to play with," cried Hetty. "You just come with me. I can make a great many things."

They went down to the barn, and Hetty opened the big box that was her treasure-chest.

"First we'll make a corncob village," she said, and she brought out a big basket full of clean corncobs.

"How do you do it?" asked Nina.

So Hetty showed her how to build the house with the biggest cobs, [illegible] up until the walls were high enough, and then laying a roof across. Then they built a kitchen on behind and a parlor in front. Then they moved a little way, and made the barn and chicken coop and pig pen. Next they made a playhouse for the children that stood in the house.

"But where are the children? You haven't any dollies, have you?" said Nina.

"Oh, I can make all the dollies I want," said Hetty.

She took a piece of white cloth out of her box, and rolled up one end till it made a little ball. Then she drew the cloth smooth over it, and tied a string around. Where the string was, was made the doll's neck. The smooth knob was her head. Hetty took a pencil and drew eyes, nose, ears, mouth, and hair for her. Then she pinned a piece of pink gingham around for a dress, and folded a square of yellow cloth for a shawl. There was a nice dolly, all made in five minutes. Nina thought that a wonderful way to make dolls. They put the cloth baby in the corncob house to rock, and gave her half a dozen clothes pin children.

"Here is something lovely," said Hetty, taking up a dingy looking little article. "Just hold it to your eye and look out at the orchard."

Nina did so, and all the ground looked as if it had turned to gold. It was a piece of colored glass, and when you looked through it, all the world seemed turned to gold. Hetty had blue and red and green pieces of glass, too, but the gold was the prettiest.

After they had looked at all the colored glass, they went to the sand pile, and Hetty showed Nina how to make sand cakes, and laid them on a board to bake in the sun. And by that time Nina's father was back.

"Did you get lonesome?" he asked.

"Oh, no!" said Nina. "Hetty has the loveliest playthings, and she knows how to do the most things. Will you please bring me to see her again? I just love to play the way she does."

"Of course I'll bring you again," said father.

And Hetty and Nina smiled and nodded as they said good-by.—Elsie Vernon, in the Christian Standard.

THE FRUITLESS FIG TREE.

The parable of the fruitless fig tree is wonderfully simple and wonderfully suggestive. The owner of the vineyard naturally expected to find it producing fruit of its kind at the proper age and the proper season. When he failed to find it, the sense of loss, of wasted time and effort, of ground uselessly occupied, was so great as to cause him to give the perfectly proper command that it be cut down. A fruit-bearing fig tree is worth having; a fruitless fig tree is a poor ornament at best.

But the entreaty of the keeper of the vineyard that the tree be spared was as natural and proper as the command of the owner that it be destroyed. He had set it out, presumably, watched it carefully for three years, and still believed that it was possible to make it produce fruit. At least, he wanted it to have one more chance. He knew that it ought to produce figs—and he hoped that another year would vindicate his judgment.

The record does not state that the owner of the vineyard granted his request—but we may very well believe that he did. And while we do not know the outcome, it is a reasonable presumption that the tree actually did respond to further treatment and produced a generous crop. Having already had a fair chance, no fault could have been found with the owner if he had insisted upon his order's being carried out; reasonable representation having been made that another chance would produce results, no fault could be found with him for suspending the sentence.

So it is with all of us in the Christian life. It is the very nature of the Christian to produce fruit of some kind. All Christians, however, cannot be expected to function in exactly the same way. If the tree had been a pomegranate tree, the owner would have expected to find pomegranates on it. There is a diversity of gifts among people, and each Christian must exercise the gift that has been bestowed upon him. Unless he produces results in the Kingdom of God, he is an unprofitable servant and will ultimately have to lose his place. Infinite mercy is loath to bring the period of probation to an end, but infinite justice cannot continue it forever. There must be fruit or failure.

It is not too late for us to do something that will commend us to the Master of the vineyard as worthy of retaining a place among those who have been called to do his will.

THE GREATEST ENTERPRISE OF THE CHURCH.

The Sunday school is undoubtedly the greatest enterprise of the church. This fact becomes evident when we consider that a very large proportion of the membership of the church comes through this organization, that it enlists the services of more of our people than any other branch of our work, and that its meetings are more largely attended than are the meetings of any other of our organizations.

We need to consider the further fact that it alone supplies systematic instruction for all our people, old and young, in the Bible and in moral and religious truth generally. If we could conceive of the Sunday school's being abolished, we should have to contemplate in the near future a generation devoid of that training in religious matters that we have come to look upon as essential to an intelligent interest in the establishment and maintenance of the Kingdom of God on earth. Without the Sunday school, or some similar organization, we should be facing the almost hopeless task of carrying out the greatest program the church has ever undertaken, with uninstructed and untrained forces.

The criticism has sometimes been made that the Sunday school receives an undue proportion of the attention and interest of those who are charged with its management, to the neglect of other important phases of church work; we offer no excuse for those who may actually neglect one duty for the sake of another, but we are inclined to believe that it is the Sunday school that is more often the victim of neglect than any other department of church work. Comparatively few of our people, ministers as well as laymen, are as well informed concerning Sunday school methods and the principles of religious teaching as they should be, in view of the fact that the Sunday school is the channel through which the great current of church life flows. It is almost a tragedy that we still have to maintain schools and institutes to instruct our leaders in the elementary principles of religious pedagogy and Sunday school management. Long ago we should have developed a corps of experts in every congregation which would be equal to the task of supplying every need of this superlatively important department of our religious activities.

We believe, however, that a better day is dawning. We are reading and thinking and learning; and we are beginning to realize that the Sunday school furnishes the best opportunity we now have of reaching this age with the vital messages of the gospel. We are not discounting preaching, and we are not unmindful of the high place that must be given other agencies of the church in promoting its work; but the Sunday school is our open door to the hearts and lives of the great masses of our people.

KEEPING UP MORALE.

We are just now in the midst of the season when there is a relaxation in nearly all kinds of activities, especially church work. The weather is oppressively hot, a great many of our most faithful workers are away from their accustomed places, and conditions generally are not favorable to the energetic prosecution of aggressive plans for forward movements.

But there is no reason why there should be a loss of morale among the forces of the church. We can set ourselves determinedly to hold what gains have been made in the past, and to be prepared to act vigorously and decisively when the time for action arrives. We do not like the expression, "starting over," as applied to the beginning of activities in the fall. It ought not to be necessary to "start over" the work that has been going on for months. It may be a part of the plan of campaign to "dig in" for awhile, but that simply means holding the territory already gained and making ready for further advances.

Wherever we are, at home "by the stuff" or away on a vacation, we can keep ourselves fit in body and mind and spirit for the rounding out of the best year's work in the history of our church, locally and connectionally. Good soldiers are always eager to respond to the bugle call to advance.

THE CHURCH EXTENSION HANDBOOK.

A copy of the Church Extension Handbook for 1920 has just come to our desk. In addition to the minutes of the Thirty-Eighth Annual Meeting of the Board, it contains a great mass of interesting and valuable information concerning the work of the Board of Church Extension from the beginning to the present. It ought to be in the hands of every preacher and every layman in the connection; we hope they will write to Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, Secretary, Louisville, Ky., for a copy.

THE METHODIST QUARTERLY REVIEW.

The July number of the Methodist Quarterly Review has just reached us. Although we have not had time to read it, we could not resist the temptation to take a hasty glance through the table of contents and hurriedly turn the pages that hold such promise of future pleasure and profit. We will read at the first opportunity the article, "Sam P. Jones, The Preacher," by Dr. George R. Stuart, and the one entitled "Methodism- An Exponent of Christianity," by our own Dr. John W. Boswell. Two dollars a year is a mighty low price for such a feast of good things.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. W. W. Pinson landed in New York on July 27, after an absence of two months in Europe.

Rev. C. E. Downer began a meeting at Sanford, Miss., on last Sunday, with the assistance of Rev. F. B. Ormond, of Richton, Miss.

A good meeting was brought to a close at Oak Bowery church, on the Seminary charge, Mississippi Conference, on July 15. There were four additions to the church. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Downer, was assisted by Rev. Jasper Smith, of Mendenhall, Miss.

We regret very much that we were not in the office when Dr. R. A. Meek, formerly editor of the Advocate, now presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, called on Thursday of last week. He was in the city on personal business.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, our pastor at Greensburg, La., is assisting Rev. John Paul in a camp meeting at Center Point, La., this week. He has just closed a tabernacle meeting at Oakland, La., in which he was assisted by Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District.

President W. R. Bourne, of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., was in the city on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week in connection with his work. He is looking forward to an auspicious opening of the next session of the college. We regret that we were not in the office when he called.

We learn from the Lincoln County Times that work has been begun on the new gymnasium and swimming pool at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss. The walls of Enochs Hall are now at the third story, and Margaret Hall is being remodeled throughout. Greater Whitworth is in rapid process of realization.

Dr. Marion Browning, of China, Texas, who has had much experience in religious work among Latin-Americans, passed through New Orleans last week on his way to Cuba, where he goes to consult specialists concerning a serious injury received some months ago. He honored the Advocate office with a call while in the city.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, of Bucatunna, Miss., has just closed a splendid revival at Winchester, Miss., resulting in 12 additions to the church. Rev. W. E. Dickens, of Pachuta, Miss., did the preaching, and did it well. There have been 50 additions to date on the Bucatunna charge, which represents a larger increase than this work has had probably for years.

Dr. W. F. Vaughn, one of the strong men of the Kentucky Conference, passed away recently. The editorial page of the Central Methodist carries a high tribute to him as thinker, preacher, man.

Rev. H. L. Norton, of Logtown, Miss., recently assisted the pastor, Rev. J. H. Grice, in a good meeting at Vancleave, Miss. "A better series of sermons I have not heard," writes Brother Grice.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth and President C. M. Bishop, of Southwestern University, received the honorary degree of LL.D. from Baylor University, Waco, Texas, at its Diamond Jubilee, held some weeks ago.

Dr. John S. Chadwick has just taken charge of the religious press section of the publicity department of the Educational Campaign. He is eminently well qualified for this responsible position.

The presiding elder of the Jackson District, Rev. J. M. Morse, requests us to call attention to a change in the date of one of his quarterly conferences: the conference for Monterey will be held at Thomasville, August 24-25.

Rev. F. L. Applewhite, of Sharon, Miss., is being assisted in a meeting at Millville, Miss., by Rev. W. T. Gillon, Conference evangelist. This is a developing church, and it is confidently expected that a gracious revival will be had.

The pastor, Rev. J. W. Dorman, writes in a highly complimentary way of the recent visit of Rev. A. C. McCorkle, the new presiding elder of the Durant District, to this charge. The year promises great things under his leadership.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer reports for last Sunday, that he preached at 11 a. m. at the Epworth Church, and at 8 p. m. at the Ravne Memorial Church. Both of his congregations, he says, were attentive, appreciative, warm, and of sufficient size.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, who has just closed a successful meeting at Hazlehurst, Miss., where he assisted the pastor, Rev. W. W. Graves, favored the Advocate office with a call while passing through the city on Tuesday of this week.

Mr. Frank Reely, whose work as bursar of Southern Methodist University has made his name almost as well known as that of the institution itself, has resigned his position. Dr. A. D. Schuessler, head of the department of Germanic languages, has been elected to succeed him.

The religious press reports that Dr. J. C. C. Newton, for many years president of Kwansie Gakuin Japan, has resigned that position, feeling that the expansion of the college requires a younger man. Dr. J. C. L. Bates, a Canadian Methodist, has been elected to succeed Dr. Newton.

We were happy to run across Mr. and Mrs. T. Wynn Holloman and little daughter, of Alexandria, La., on Monday of this week. They were returning home from Lake Junaluska, N. C., where they had been attending the Sunday School Training School. They were enthusiastic in their reports of this great gathering.

Rev. W. F. Henderson occupied the pulpit at Mooringsport, La., during the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. T. Ware, in Mississippi to attend the funeral of his father-in-law. Brother Henderson served the Mooringsport charge for four years, and the people counted it a privilege to have him with them again.

We learn with sorrow of the recent death of Rev. M. M. Mabbes, for more than thirty years a minister of the Methodist Protestant Church in Mississippi. He was the father-in-law of Rev. R. T. Ware, our pastor at Mooringsport, La. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. S. W. Johnson, our pastor at Magee, Miss.

Rev. W. O. Wagoner, of Webb, Miss., writes as follows: "We have just closed a successful revival at Webb. Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Winona, Miss., assisted me in the meeting. He is one of the best pastor-evangelists in the State. His sermons and personal work are both effective and wholesome. We had 24 additions to the church—19 by profession of faith."

Rev. W. P. Bailey, of Roxie, Miss., closed a good meeting at Hamburg, Miss., on July 23. He was assisted by Rev. R. L. Collins, of Shannon, Miss., who preached a very helpful to the community. The revival was postponed on account of one by several weeks. Brother Bailey began a meeting at McNair, Miss., last Sunday, with Rev. Edgar Hillman assisting.

We learn from our exchanges that Dr. John R. Mott has resigned from membership on the executive committee of the Student Volunteer Movement, a position he has held from the beginning of the Movement. His interest has not grown less, but he finds it necessary to give more time to other pressing duties. He is succeeded by Dr. Mosed C. E. Bohn, secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society.

The Pacific Methodist Advocate of July 17 has this note which will be of interest to the many friends of Brother Barry in Mississippi: "Rev. A. B. Barry, pastor of our church at Coquille, Oregon, was recently elected president of the Oregon State Sunday School Association. He had previously been elected president of the Coos County Ministerial Association. Our Mississippi transfers have all made good in the West."

We are in receipt of the catalogue of Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La., with announcements for the opening of the next session. This school for girls, founded in 1851, occupies an important place in the educational history of the State. President Pebbles has wrought wonders in the equipment of the college and in its general development since he has been in charge. Our church in Louisiana is proud of its girls' school—and of its president.

Mr. Charles M. Alexander, the famous gospel singer, has had a notably active career. Since leaving the Moody Bible Institute twenty-seven years ago, he has participated in a thousand or more evangelistic campaigns in cities and towns of the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Australia, and many other countries. He has circled the world three times, crossed the Atlantic twenty-seven times, and has personally given away New Testaments in recent years to the amount of $20,000. Seven million hymn books have been issued through his instrumentality.

Dr. D. C. Hull, for many years superintendent of public schools in Meridian, Miss., later president of Millsaps College, and recently principal of the Pulaski County Agricultural High School, has just been elected president of the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College. Dr. Hull is the son of a preacher and himself a local preacher in our church. He is an alumnus of A. & M., and was a member of the faculty of that institution for eight years. He is well known to all Methodists in Mississippi through his efficient work as Conference Secretary during the "Six Drive."

The Crowley Daily Signal of July 19 gives a full account of the cancellation of a debt of $11,500, with accrued interest, against our beautiful church which was built in 1912, during the pastorate of Rev. C. D. Atkinson. The church originally cost $20,000, though it is estimated that it would cost more than twice that amount now. Rev. B. W. Tucker is the efficient pastor who, with the loyal co-operation of the membership and friends of the church, has succeeded in raising the money with which to clear the church of debt. Plans are being made for the dedicatory service in the near future, with Bishop W. F. McMurry in charge. We congratulate Brother Tucker and the Methodists of Crowley, La., upon the successful issue of their great undertaking.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. W. P. Bailey, Roxie, Miss., 5; Rev. J. W. Dorman, Louisville, Miss., 10; Mrs. H. J. Norris, Oak Ridge, La., 3; Rev. F. L. Applewhite, Sharon, Miss., 2; Rev. A. D. George, Gilbert, La., 2.

TRAINING SCHOOL AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

This is our last word for the Training School at Grenada College. We are expecting a good attendance of pastors, superintendents and teachers to take advantage of the splendid opportunity this school will offer. Write Rev. J. P. Comiss to reserve a room for you.

Conference Centenary Treasurer.

DON'T WORRY.

Don't worry about your position if your heart is right. God knows just where you ought to be. You do not. He may get you discharged so you will find something better, or he may have the whole management changed in order to keep you where you are. You never can tell which it will be.

Eaglets learn to fly, you know, by getting tipped out. They would stay in their nest and eat spring lamb as long as the old bird would bring it, if she did not push them off into space. That first drop must be a feather-raising experience for the eaglet. But it never fails to do both. Underneath him sweeps the watchful mother. "The eternal God is thy dwelling place and underneath are the everlasting arms." Deuteronomy 33:27.

But if you fly, you must expect some sickening, blood-curdling spells, nose dives and slide slips. You may have the worst of luck, but the best of providences. That is our Instructor.

"For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge. He putteth down one and setteth up another." Psalm 75, v. 7.—Exchange.

Christ likes to see the tender shadows on the path, but I love the shining light, pure and bright and high above the hills.—Orison Swett Dwight Hillis.

Our Father who art in heaven called Mrs. THOMAS PERKINS, nee Pearl Collins, (1889-1920) to His home for a new glory. No more lovely guest ever graced a home on earth than did Miss Pearl, for she was like unto the most beautiful bouquet of flowers in cheering up the folk she chanced to be with. Her face was full of joy, from the very center of her being. To gladden those she met and passed was so natural with her that the young and aged alike were compelled to feel that some one cared for them very much. The rich and poor loved her alike. The well and sick could make no complaint, because none ever passed her unnoticed, or without that cheer which lifts one to higher heights of joy and hopes for better things. No one has ever stood on the stage of the world with a life that was so much to be coveted as was the life of Miss Pearl.

As a daughter, sister, wife, and friend, she was devotion itself. She allied herself, with the sons and daughters of God while young in life, and was a faithful follower of Jesus to the last step. She first joined the Presbyterian Church, but after her marriage she put her membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with her husband. The church, community, and friends are going to miss her; but O! how mother, brothers and husband will miss her!

Sister Pearl was not in good health for sometime. One year ago she underwent an operation, and was back at the sanitarium for another operation. But she was not strong enough to be operated on. She went out to the home of her uncle in St. Louis, and there, on June 30, had her last words with loved ones. She bore suffering with unspeakable patience. No one ever dreamed of her being so close to the end, because of her cheerfulness and and good spirits. It was here that her Heavenly Father said, "Pearl, come home with me." And in His invisible elevator she stepped and was lifted into God's own sweet and blessed paradise, the refuge of her own dear Savior, Jesus, for three days and nights awaiting His resurrection. So she is now awaiting for that "Great Easter" morning when all the saints of earth and Paradise shall hear the trumpet call for their assembling to crown Jesus "King of Kings and Lord of Lords."

She leaves, besides a host of friends, her mother, two brothers, and husband to live for Him, and bless humanity until God calls them to come up and sit down in her presence in eternal glory.

FRANCIS EDWIN BOWMAN.

When a good man finishes the full three-score and ten years of service, and enters into the presence of the Master, "whom not having seen, he loved," we who are still waiting the summons, pause to cast a flower of love and affection to his memory. The life of such a man is an inspiration to those who knew him, and an added impulse toward better things.

Briefly let us consider those things which set apart our translated friend, and drew to his dying bed friends from all over the country. He was no great statesman, poet, philosopher or soldier. Yet he was more than that: he was a man. He held a peculiar place in the affections of his friends, never to be occupied by another. Our tears are mingled ones, partly joyful, that he has entered into that rest for which his pain-racked body often longed—painful when we think that never more shall we enjoy his tender counsel, his affectionate regard, and his loving helpfulness.

The passing of such a man merits more than a brief notice. His is a life to think over, study and imitate.

Mr. Bowman was born in Tensas Parish, Louisiana, 73 years ago. He was the son of Rev. James Bowman, one of the pioneer Methodist ministers of the State. In 1870 he was happily married to Miss Pauline Chapman, and shortly after both joined the Methodist Church, and made a start for that ideal family condition which marked so eminently the almost fifty years of wedded happiness. I have never seen so perfect a specimen of blended lives as was theirs.

I first met Mr. Bowman in the Jefferson Street Methodist Church in Natchez, twenty-two years ago. I was instantly attracted to him, and our friendship thus begun was never clouded. His genial smile, twinkling eye, and that expression of gentle kindliness, which was so noticeable, were ever mine when we met. He often consulted me on matters of the most private consideration, and was very free in his expressions, but never once did he repeat a slander, or indulge in those carping criticisms which he well knew would never be repeated.

He was always a man of the big out-of-doors. As a lad of tender years, he entered the Confederate Army, and was a warm defender of the Lost Cause. He spent his life as a planter—a producer of the necessities of life. Not once did he ever accept public life, or office. His home claimed all his time and affection—his was truly a life of service. He was a keen observer of the trend of events, and his comments showed a wonderful penetration, and a grasp of things which astonished those to whom he could be induced to talk.

Modestly he spent his long life in service, and as quietly, peacefully and gently as a babe falling asleep, he entered into the "joy of his Lord." No one will ever guess the extent of his charities. His loving wife who walked for almost fifty years at his side, was never told all that he did. His was ever the preacher's home, and many an itinerant's heart was made glad because he knew this good man.

His married life was most happy. Ten children came to bless the union of these lives, and all save two remain to call him blessed. Two waited for him at the gates of life, to welcome him to that house not made with hands.

One of the sad things to him, as he often spoke of it to me, was the fact that the children grew up. He often said that he wished he could gather them around his knee and keep them thus near him. He was proud of them all—but how he did miss them, as the weight of years began to press heavily on his feeble shoulders! "Family prayer is not the same without the children. They seemed to belong to me then, and now it is only for a visit now and then, that I see them."

He loved his church—the old faith of the fathers—and for him religion was something real. He took little time with fads and fancies. The Bible was the rule and guide of life, and the one fact to stand when all else falls.

What do his children think of him? I have never seen a parent so tenderly loved, or so deeply respected as he was. Often have I seen his young daughters pass his chair when he was reading, and pause a moment to drop a kiss on his cheek, or tenderly fondle his hand or hair. No one could ever doubt the love of such children—it was literally poured out of full hearts. Marriage would be to change with them. As fathers and mothers—for six of them have married—they were, if possible, more tender and affectionate. The memory of such a man is a sweet incense poured out: it will linger through the years, and become the heritage of those who knew and loved him.

Such a life cannot end. The form is changed but life still pulsates in the bright, loving influence he left to those with whom he came in contact.

AIMLESS PREACHING.

Every sermon should be preached with a view to the salvation of souls. For what else is the free utterance of clear thinking about the gospel intended? And why should the assent which is so highly prized in the legal profession be so persistently avoided in the clerical vocation? Thousands of pulpit discourses are delivered weekly without the slightest idea on the part of the preacher that there will be any shaking among the dry bones; and presently the preacher, hardened by custom, settles down in the valley of dry bones.—Christian Work.

50 Years Ago

a young man who practiced medicine in a rural district became famous and was called in consultation in many towns and cities because of his success in the treatment of disease. This was Dr. Pierce who afterward moved to Buffalo, N. Y. He made up his mind to place some of his medicines before the public, and he put up what he called his "Favorite Prescription," and placed it with the druggists in every state in the Union.

For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has sold more largely throughout the United States than any other medicine of like character. It's the testimony of thousands of women that it has benefited or entirely eradicated such distressing ailments as women are prone to. It is now sold by druggists in tablet form as well as liquid.

EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION ENDORSES STEWARDSHIP CAMPAIGN.

By Rev. J. J. Stowe

Stewardship and tithing have played an important part in what the church has done in the Centenary. This is recognized by the director general of the Centenary, Dr. Beauchamp, who said in one of his reports:

"The pledge and comprehensive declaration of Christian Stewardship by thousands of speakers, preachers and laymen, during the two previous periods of the Centenary Drive has been the greatest single lifting force in all the Centenary program. The realization of the responsibility of stewardship to God of time and property and life has come to Methodism in a remarkable degree, and yet we know that we are only at the beginning of the application of this great fundamental truth in the life of the individual member of the church. The purpose, therefore, of the Centenary leaders is to proclaim with an increased faith this doctrine of Christian stewardship in all its relations to life. We definitely stress tithing as the minimum financial expression of stewardship of property. We do not believe it is the measure of responsibility, but that it is both a rational and a scriptural rule for giving. In the Conservation Program, therefore, for this year Christian stewardship will hold a central place."

This declaration of the value of past facts no one familiar with the facts will deny, nor will any one who has studied the situation question the necessity of vigorously pushing this matter in the future. From the first the Department of Stewardship and Tithing has been an important branch of the Centenary organization. By action of the General Conference the Centenary Commission was to have right of way until May 1, 1920, and the Educational Commission from May, 1920, to May, 1922. Such Centenary organization and activity as may be necessary to maintain the morale and secure payment of pledges will, of course, continue, but the Educational Commission now has right of way and every one is expected to give to the Commission the most whole-hearted and active support. The principles of stewardship and tithing are fundamental and perpetual and must not be thought of as being limited to the Centenary period. If these principles apply to any period, they apply to all periods, as necessary in the pushing of Christian education as in the pressing of missionary claims.

The presentation of stewardship should never be employed as a mere method of raising money, but should always be pressed in order that men may acknowledge God's sovereignty in the getting and using of money. The purpose of a stewardship campaign is not to get money, but to set men right with God; the end to be gained is not cash, but Christian character.

The Educational Commission is in hearty accord with our stewardship plans and wishes it understood that emphasis given these matters is in no sense an infringement upon their prerogatives; on the contrary, it is just what they want done. Most of the churches of Southern Methodism are located in the country, and revival services in these churches are usually held in the summer and autumn. No better time for the evangelistic Christian to work up to can be found than during a revival. A "revival" that the presentation of this vital subject will inspire is without official endorsement. Where it is not is widely preached during a revival, the spiritual life of the church is deepened and influence of the church is increased. The subject could be effectively presented, the literature furnished free by the Nashville office, could be systematically distributed, and all signed tithing stewardship cards should be sent promptly to the Nashville office. Where the work has been properly done, gratifying results, spiritual and financial, have followed.

BRAZILIAN CONVERTED BY READING THE BIBLE.

"One evening I was introduced to a fellow-passenger, a wealthy Brazilian gentleman from the State of Minas Geraes," says Rev. H. C. Tucker, Brazilian representative of the American Bible Society, in the Bible Society Record, "who, when told that I was the Agent for the American Bible Society, related to me the following story: Sometime ago he found it convenient to move to the State of Minas Geraes to educate his children. About a year ago he became impressed with the importance of giving more serious thought to the subject of religion. For a long time he had had little faith and interest in the form of religion prevalent among his people. He had never attended a Protestant service, but had heard men speak of the Bible; had also heard that there was a store in Rio de Janeiro, the Bible House, where Bibles were on sale. He asked a merchant to order one for him, began reading, and continued until he had read the entire book. It was thrillingly interesting to hear him tell of his impressions, and what light, blessing, and joy had come into his life from the reading and study of the Word of God.

"I asked him how he could account for the thought and desire awakened in his mind to read the Bible. He said he could only attribute it to the goodness and mercy of God. He has acquired a fair knowledge of the Scriptures and an intelligent conception of salvation through Jesus Christ."

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Training School to be held at Grenada, August 4-11, will usher in a new day for our Sunday school workers and leaders in Religious Education in North Mississippi. There are a few splendid people who want to attend and cannot; there are many who could attend, but will not. Satan is a deceiver.

From the letters I have received I would guess there will be more than one hundred to register at this first session of our Conference Standard Training School for teachers and other leaders.

The Intermediate-Senior workers will take the course under Rev. J. E. Stephens. He has been under one of the greatest of teachers at Lake Junaluska recently.

We will have a great teacher for those who desire to take the Beginners' course. Do not fear but that we will have teachers for every kind of work we are expected to do in our church schools. We will have eight of the best teachers and eight lecturers to give instruction.

The hours of recreation will be under the direction of Messrs. Stephens and Ruff. You can bring your tennis racket and comfortable shoes. If you play any of the stringed instruments and are willing to make a contribution of that kind, bring your instrument with you.

For one week you will be associated with the best people in our church. You will be under the guidance of the best instructors that the church can secure. You will have an opportunity to get a vision of the field that has not been in our reach in the past. You are promised more for your time and money than has been offered this year.

You are urged to come in the spirit of prayer, to continue in that spirit until you have felt the presence of the Holy One. Come expecting the best time you have ever had. Come expecting to be blessed and above all to be used as a channel of blessing to others.

Remember, work begins Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. If you miss this first session, you cannot make it up by any "hook or crook."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The outlook of the Sunday school through the entire Conference is most encouraging. Report blanks that are being sent out from the office are being filled and quickly returned. We find that the schools are doing good work.

Much has been contended with during the past few months. Considering the influenza, the bad roads and the general unrest of the young people following the war and other conditions, figures show a large increase in our work.

The need is for teachers. May it be on the heart of every pastor and worker to earnestly pray that men and women may hear the call to do their part of the Master's work.

We are delighted with the increase and revival of the Wesley Bible Classes. This is a very encouraging sign and we hope to have strong evidence of the good that this part of the Sunday school work is doing.

We find one of the weak parts of our Sunday school is the Cradle Roll Department. If you haven't a Cradle Roll in your Sunday school, go to work and organize one. It is a paying investment. Try it!

We take this object of the Cradle Roll from "The Golden Now":

"To bring the spirit of our Sunday school into the lives of the babies of our Cradle Roll. To strengthen the bonds of sympathy and friendship. To make membership in the department of present moment and greatest interest to one and all. To make the mother's work lighter, the baby's life happier, and its future larger. Not to bind burdens, but to lighten them. Not to suggest more work for mothers, but to give helpful direction to all efforts in the interest of the baby."

A Prayer.

Dear Father, I must go to sleep,
Stay close to me to-night.
Send down a little dream of Thee
To keep my spirit white.
Bless everybody that I know
And all I don't know, too.
Ask Jesus to remind me of
The things I ought to do.
I pray Thee make our hands and hearts
As glad as glad can be.
I thank Thee, God, for everything,
But most of all for Thee.

—Little Folks.

Elementary Supt.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Training Schools at Dallas and Lake Junaluska are over and I know of eight from Louisiana who attended one or the other of these and will bring the educational training to our churches.

Miss Caroline Hess, Sikeston, Mo., will take up the work of Elementary Superintendent. She is one of our Methodist girls, trained in our own schools. She has been employed in Central League office at Nashville, Tenn. She has a degree from the State Normal College of Missouri. Write me regarding work in your territory. She will begin work about the middle of August.

Pastor and Sunday school workers who desire to do credit work in life of Jesus will have opportunity at Bluff Creek Camp meeting, July 30 to Aug. 8, where I'll teach a class. Will take last half of Rall's "Life of Jesus." Bring book with you.

THE MAN OR THE MULE—WHICH IS WORTH MORE?

By Robert B. Eleazer.

Some years ago I published in a local paper a communication entitled, "The Man and the Mule," which aroused considerable interest and was rather widely copied. It recorded a conversation I had just had with a wagon driver in the street, which brought out the fact that the owner of the team was getting $3.50 a day for it, and was paying the driver a dollar a day. I pointed out the obvious but startling fact that this was $1 for the man and $1.25 for each of the mules. Then I asked if this meant that we really value mules more than we do men; and if not that, what did it mean?

Lately I have been pleased to learn that men are much better paid, and I have wondered how it is with mules. The other day I found out. The mule still has the best of it. My friend X keeps a dozen teams which he hires out when not using them in his own business. He tells me he gets $3.75 a day for each team and pays his drivers $2.75. That leaves him $3 a day for each mule. So you see the proportion is much the same.

Now think about this matter a bit. The man is a man, made in the image of God. The mule is just a mule. Without the guiding brain of the man, the mule would be worth less than nothing. The man perchance has a family to feed, clothe and shelter. The mule, as Senator Carmack said, "Is without pride of ancestry or hope of posterity." The man is an immortal spirit, supposed to be worth more than all the mules of earth. Yet we pay the man $2.75 a day and the mule $3. Practically we count the man and all his family worth less than one flea-bitten, wind-broken, spavined old mule.

Now, let somebody please explain us this paradox. You editors, whose sole business it is to enlighten us, what is the answer? You good Christians, who pay your employees less than you demand for your mules, how do you explain it? Was that the way Christ rated them? You preachers, our twentieth century prophets, what message have you to a generation that values mules higher than men? What would the prophets of old say about it? What did they say? Had Jesus no word on the subject? Maybe here's your coveted chance to share in the "fellowship of his sufferings" and to "follow in the train" of the other martyrs of old who paid the penalty of making men face the ugly truth.

Everybody, are we to go on like this, putting the emphasis on property and letting humanity take second place? Surely there must be a better way. And if so, ought not every good man to be seeking it, honestly and earnestly? A restless world awaits the solution.

Nashville, Tenn.

A SONG BEFORE BREAKFAST.

"Sing before breakfast and you cry before sunset" is a miserable old saying that never was true. It is a joy to begin the day with a song. If one is an early riser, he must respect the rights of others, but he may have the song in his heart just the same.

In an old-fashioned home it was the custom to have family worship before breakfast and that worship always opened with a hymn of praise. More often than anything else it was the Doxology, and the family sat down to their morning meal with praise in their hearts.

Such a spirit of thanksgiving is a tonic for the whole day. It helps one meet the hard work with a hopeful spirit. Some may think it is easier to sing at the close of the day, but it is the morning song that best prepares the way for the evening praise.

There are all kinds of ways to express the song. It may be a smile or a cheery good morning or a word of appreciation or a prayer of gratitude. It's a good resolution for the summer-time and it is better than medicine for discouraged souls.

"Lord, in the morning Thou shalt hear My voice ascending high."

DODSON TELLS THE HORROR OF CALOMEL

You Don't Need to Sicken, Gripe, or Salivate Yourself to Start Liver.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel headachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, cast-iron calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick, I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

We are proud of the confidence doctors, druggists and the public have in 666 Chill and Fever Tonic.—Adv.

FROM COQUILLE, OREGON.

Bishop Horace M. Du Bose, accompanied by Rev. W. J. Fenton, presiding elder of the Portland District, reached Coquille in the afternoon of July 3, and met with the officials of Coquille station, at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, where plans and means for the building of a new Methodist Church were discussed. On Sunday morning Bishop Du Bose preached a wonderful sermon, taking as his theme, "The Glory of The Mystery of the Gospel of Christ," from a text found in Col. 1:27. At the conclusion of the sermon, a collection was taken for the new church building, which amounted to nearly $6000. The Bishop also addressed the Epworth League in the evening and followed with another sermon of great inspiration and power. The following day he also addressed the multitude assembled in the city park for the celebration of the Fourth of July.

The church building that has long been talked of in Coquille will be in process of building within the next thirty days, and when completed it will be worth at least $25,000.

This has been a great year with us. Love to all the brethren of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences.

Yours In His Service,

A. E. BARRY, Pastor.

FROM HORN LAKE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am sure the brethren will be glad to know that the Spirit of God has visited Horn Lake in great power, and given us a great victory over Satan. We closed a ten-days' revival last Tuesday and received 24 members into the church. Fourteen of these were by baptism, three by profession of faith, and the balance by letter. Three others secured during this time will probably be received later, and will make our increase almost equal to the original membership. Two others joined the Baptist and Christian churches.

We were extremely fortunate in securing the services of Brother W. A. Wilson for this meeting. All that I heard express themselves say his preaching is the best they ever listened to, and a good judge says he is equal to Gypsy Smith.

It is sufficient to say we had the largest congregations ever seen in Horn Lake and at times the house would not accomodate them.

Not only were sinners converted, but, to use an expression of a church member, "The joy of our salvation was restored to us."

A very notable feature of the meeting was the way the church members took their cars and went out into the highways and byways and brought in those who had no way to come to this great feast of spiritual bread. Several were converted who otherwise would not have been. The invention of automobiles does not do away with this scriptural method of advancing the kingdom, but only multiplies many fold the earnest Christian opportunity of serving the Master. I would like to recommend it as a cure for spiritual blues in the church members.

We are planning to hold the ground gained and to go forward to greater victories for the Master. Our meeting at Hines Chapel began July 18, with Dr. S. A. Steel, preaching. Yours in Christian service,

N. D. GUERRY, P. C.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport District Young Peoples' Rally.

On Thursday, June 3, a rally was held at Mansfield for the young people of the Shreveport District. As it was a rainy day, a rainy day of heavy showers, our attendance was considerably smaller than we had had reason to expect, but we felt that those who did attend were deeply interested. Charges not on gravel roads could not send delegates at all.

There were delegations from six churches, and seventy persons were served at the delicious luncheon provided by the Young Peoples' society of Mansfield. After the luncheon a social hour was enjoyed by all, and then there followed the program, which measured up to our best expectations: Opening prayer, Rev. Charles A. Battle; Song, "True-hearted, Whole-hearted," Congregation; Devotional, Mrs. C. K. Shepherd; "Our Aims," Mrs. E. F. Key, Conference Superintendent of Young People; "Our Specials," Miss Marjorie Hughes; "The Value of the Quiet Hour," Miss Amelia Foster; Talks on our mission work among the Mexicans and Brazilians were given by members of the Mansfield Young Peoples' auxiliary; Solo, Mrs. Caldwell; Inspirational Address, Mrs. A. P. Holt, Conference Corresponding Secretary of Woman's Missionary Society; "Joy Work in France," Mrs. Caldwell.

At the conclusion of the program a vote of thanks was tendered the Mansfield Young People for their gracious hospitality.

We considered ourselves very fortunate to have present three of our Conference officers, Mrs. Holt, Mrs. Key, and Mrs. Drew. Next year let us hope our rally plans may be carried out without the hindrances encountered this time.

We sincerely trust that Young Peoples' Superintendents of auxiliaries, where the young people are not now organized, may find courage to effect organizations this quarter. This department of our work is of vital importance and deserves more attention than it receives from most of our women. Mrs. J. D. WOOLWORTH,
District Secretary.

Houma District Young Peoples' Rally.

On Sunday night, June 20, the Young People of the Houma District held a rally at the Houma church. Mrs. B. F. Key, State Superintendent of Young Peoples' work, presided, and the following interesting program was rendered:

Hymn, "We Shall See the King Some Day," Congregation; Devotional, Miss Cecile Matherne, of Bayou Blue Church; Sentence Prayers, by five of the young people; Quartette, "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me." Misses Vera and Fern Hebert, and Revs. Alonzo Early and P. J. McCoy; Report on Mansfield Epworth Institute, Miss Nettie Brunette, Houma Methodist Church; French Hymn, by group of Bayou Blue Young People; Talk on Value of Bible Reading and Prayer, Rev. E. V. Duplantis; Solo, "When My Ship Comes Sailing Home," Rev. F. J. McCoy; Talk on Recreation for Young People, Mrs. A. P. Holt, State Conference Secretary; Duet, "Full Surrender," Misses Vera and Fern Hebert, New Iberia; Talk, "My Call to Service," Mr. Edgar Dufrene, Houma Methodist Church; Recitation, "Two Offerings," Miss Josephine Cantrelle, Houma Methodist Church; Song, "Loyal Christian Workers," Congregation; Talk, "Consecration and Call to Service," Rev. Alonzo Early.

At the close of this talk an invitation was given for all who would reconsecrate their lives, or who wanted to give themselves for the first time for complete-time service to the Master, to come forward and give their hand to the minister; God graciously led many of the young people present to respond seriously. The Spirit was present in power and all felt God's blessing on the service.

MRS. A. E. SAYERS,
District Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Newton District Meeting.

The meeting was called to order by the district secretary, Mrs. W. L. Hunter. After the devotional, the welcome address, and response, Mrs. Hunter brought her message to the conference stating facts about the work done and that which needed to be done throughout this district. We then enjoyed special music furnished by a quartette from the Newton Woman's Missionary Society. The conference officers present, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Mrs. Z. D. Clark, and Mrs. Riley, were then introduced. Miss Marzie Hall, our missionary soon to sail for Africa, was also present at the conference.

The roll was called and the following places were represented by delegates: Montrose, Newton, Bay Springs, Philadelphia, Union, Lake, Decatur, and Deemer.

Reports from conference officers were heard with interest, Mrs. B. F. Lewis stating that the first quarter of 1920 closed with a 20 per cent advance over the last quarter of 1919. Mrs. Z. D. Clark presented in an impressive way the Young Peoples' work and urged that this department be given more consideration by us all.

A program was then given by the Young People, which was as follows: With the Young People, Mrs. Z. D. Clarke; Four Minute Discussions; Loyalty to Self, Forest "Young People;" Loyalty to Others, Union "Young People," Loyalty to Christ, Newton "Young People:" Song, Young People; Our work at Scarritt, Miss Willie Hall, student volunteer.

Reports were read from each auxiliary present. These reports showed a general improvement of conditions over the entire district.

Miss Maud Fail, the deaconess from the Meridian Wesley House gave an inspirational address about the work being done there.

A questionnaire on Mission and Bible study was led by Mrs. W. L. Hunter; many rousing responses were given, presenting the many phases of this important part of our Missionary endeavor.

Mrs. B. F. Lewis brought a wonderful and inspirational message to the conference body. At the close of the meeting Wednesday evening, an Impressive Consecration Service was conducted by Mrs. W. L. Hunter.

BREAD OF LIFE.

Jesus declared that he was the bread of life. Bread is called the staff of life, because it seems to be necessary food. No other kind of food quite takes its place. Just this is Jesus to the soul. Nothing else can satisfy the soul. Bread is for daily use. Spiritual religion is provided for us, it will not feed us unless we eat. Jesus cannot help our souls unless we receive him by faith.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

MEETING AT SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS.

Rev. Charles Winter, of Lakewood, Ohio, has just closed a two weeks' religious campaign at the Seashore Camp Grounds. Services were held morning and evening, and special services for children in the afternoon. Mr. Winter is the most untiring and indefatigable of workers and throws his whole heart and soul into his work. He is not only a gifted speaker, proving every utterance by close adherence to Bible teaching, but he is gifted in song and is an admirable leader. He plays with skill on chestra bells and the ballad horn, gliding from one thing to another with perfect ease and with all thought of self eliminated from everything that he does. He had with him a wonderful musician, Miss Purdy, who has spent much time in work at the camps during the war. Miss Purdy accompanies well and has a sweet voice that sings the gospel with as much earnestness as it is preached by the evangelist.

The night services were very well attended and for the first time in years there were seekers at the altar for salvation, many young people evincing great earnestness.

Mr. Winter was accompanied by his wife and young son, Spurgeon. No more delightful spot can be found anywhere than under the tabernacle, where the breeze is wafted freely and where all the beauties of nature conspire to make one feel the love of God.

One night during the campaign, Mr. Winter gave a sacred concert, training the children and the choir himself, and all who attended were loud in praise of the treat given to lovers of good music.

Mr. Winter adds to his many accomplishments "sign painting," and all over the tabernacle were attractive quotations and appropriate mottoes.

The three presiding elders from Mobile, Seashore and New Orleans Districts were in attendance during part of the meeting.

Mrs. GEORGE S. BROWN.

FROM DECATUR AND HICKORY.

On July 11, with Rev. W. H. Saundaers, of Jefferson Street M. E. Church, South, Natchez, Miss., to do the preaching, we began our first revival for the Decatur and Hickory charge. We had a most splendid meeting. Brother Saunders' preaching was of a high order with no uncertain sound as to his crying out against sins of all kinds. He won his way into the hearts and confidence of the people and all wanted him in their homes. He is a great preacher, and anybody may count himself happy when he secures Brother Saunders to do the preaching in a revival meeting. While there was not that outward demonstration that sometimes is the case, yet there was an unusual interest manifested from the beginning. A large crowd was present at almost every service, especially at night.

The Spirit was manifestly present, convicting of sin, causing a number to make request for prayers. Seven were received on profession of faith, the church revived, and we all were greatly strengthened by the sermons that were delivered. Already, Brother Saunders, the cry is going up for your assistance with the Hickory folks next year in the revival meeting.

What of Your Boy?

His education and training, and the development of his mind, body, and character depends on you, his parent. It is a grave responsibility, for there are so many antagonistic influences that come into play in a boy's life. As every boy looks back over his education and training he can always point out some one influence, some one life that has had a more profound influence. To thousands of boys this influence has been the guiding spirit, the personal association and the inspiring character of Mr. Robert K. Morgan, principal of Morgan School for twenty-five years. He knows boy nature. The close personal associations which he has fostered between his boy students and himself, his carefully chosen faculty, his careful attention to the boy's work, his thoughts, his talents, and his special needs, have given great prominence to his school and have characterized the success that he has merited in successfully shaping the lives of thousands of youths at the shaping age.

A postal card to Mr. L. L. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., will bring you a catalogue and full information about this school.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHOSE TIME ARE YOU WASTING?

If we have more time than we can possibly use to any good purpose—though we know of none such—it may be our privilege to waste it by tinkering at trivialities; but we have no right to waste the golden minutes that belong to another man and are used by him in the performance of his necessary work. Even if we are wasting time, some people are trying to save it.

A BAD EXAMPLE.

We understand from press reports that President Wilson has decided to retire from the sheep business. Heretofore he has maintained on the White House grounds a flock of forty-eight, which, in addition to keeping the lawns beautifully cut, produced a good crop of wool, which was sold throughout the country for the benefit of charity. With the example of the Chief Executive to inspire them, there was more than ordinary inducement to the plain tiller of the soil to include at least a few sheep among his possessions; now that the President has decided to get rid of his flock, others will probably lose interest in what will have become for them a kind of "low-brow" occupation. Watch wool go up!

THE PERSONAL TOUCH

One of the difficulties in the way of the adjustment of the problems that arise in the industrial world is to make the employes feel that their employers have a personal interest in their welfare and are willing to deal with them as men rather than as mere pieces of machinery. We believe that the great majority of employers do feel such interest, and that they are anxious to apply the Golden Rule in their dealings with those who are associated with them in a business way. But one great trouble in the way of their expressing their feelings satisfactorily is in the fact that they are not trained in the beautiful art of showing by their actions the sentiments that are really in their hearts. Misunderstandings often grow out of words and deeds that were inspired by the loftiest motives, but, unfortunately, were capable of a wrong interpretation. From these misunderstandings, antagonism arise, and often bitter conflicts are precipated. Men need to cultivate the art of making their fellowmen really understand them and they can do this best by establishing a point of personal contact. Many a politician has enjoyed the emoluments of office year after year because he has made Bill Jones and John Smith, et al., feel that he was really their friend. He may have prostituted his art—but he enjoyed its fruits. It would be a good thing for some of our colleges to establish a chair of "Dealing With Folks."

THE TRUTH-SEEKER.

The searcher after [illegible] man knows anything about. It is [illegible] from earth to heaven. The [illegible] long, but if he never loses [illegible] his goal, he may wander through dark valleys and climb rugged mountains, becoming foot-sore in body and weary in spirit, but the eagle yearning of his soul for that which alone is eternal will keep him constantly struggling onward and upward. He will fear no evil, though ten thousand dragons stand against him in the way. Even false lights lure him into the quicksands of error and despair, he will retrace his steps to the [illegible] ing path that points toward the [illegible] it with renewed ruthfulness and [illegible] His appointments will not discourage him and [illegible] will not embitter him for he knows they are but incidents of all noble endeavor. When darkness seems to settle over the land, he will look to the hills whence the light streameth, and he will even sing a song when around him are [illegible] of envy and hate. He will patiently, even lovingly, endure all manner of contempt, having only sorrow in his heart for those who [illegible] progress. He knows not how or when but in the recesses of his soul he has the assurance that some day he will attain for truth never [illegible] those who make it the passion of their lives. So he presses on and finds the truth and God.

TAKE A VACATION—OR GO TO WORK.

Some people need a vacation every summer because they have been working hard the rest of the year; others do not need a vacation, because they have been loafing on the job all along. We hope those who need it will get it, and we hope those who do not need it will go to work. We do not mean to suggest, however, that a vacation is a period of idleness. If it were so, it would cost infinitely more than it is worth. Doing nothing is the most nerve-racking employment in the world. It wears out mind and body, and [illegible] a somnolent state. To replace and [illegible] the daily mental and bodily [illegible] impaired by it. The man who [illegible] a time of doing nothing is likely to go back to his work with the feeling "nothing doing," in which case his [illegible] worse than the first. A vacation is [illegible] a period of recreation. [illegible] contacts, [illegible] cope [illegible] Nature [illegible] of a busy life. The automobile that is never run seldom needs to go to the repair shop.

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE SACRAMENTS.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D

VII.

Modes of Administration.

In the preceding article I endeavored to show that the word "baptism" settles nothing as to the mode of administering the ordinance, since it had been employed for centuries before the Advent simply to designate the use of water in ceremonial purification without any reference to the mode of its application.

A study of the language used in describing various baptisms recorded in the New Testament and of the circumstances attending these baptisms leaves us in the same uncertainty.

Take, for instance, the preposition eis. Every Greek scholar knows that its meaning is to be determined entirely by the connection. In our English Bible it is translated about as often "to" as "into," and it is often translated "at." One who was anxious to defend the exclusive use of sprinkling or pouring in baptism, on the basis of Old Testament precedent and of the well understood preference of the ancient Jews for running water in ceremonial purification, might very reasonably contend that those baptized by John, instead of going down into the River Jordan, simply went down to it that John might dip up running water and pour it on them. And one might support this contention by referring to the fact that some of the ancient paintings in the Catacombs actually represent the Prophet as baptizing in this way.

If it should be answered that those baptized are spoken of as "coming up out of the water," our advocate of sprinkling or pouring might again remind the objector that one of the prepositions so translated—(apo in Matt. iii. 16) always means from and that the other (ek in Mark 1:10 and Acts viii. 38) often means from, and may have that meaning in the two passages referred to. And he might further answer that even if John stood in the water and those seeking baptism waded in and stood by him, this still does not prove that he did not observe the familiar Old Testament method of purification by dipping up the water and pouring it on the subjects, or, what is still more probable in view of John's Jewish training, by dipping a bunch of hyssop into the water and sprinkling it upon them.

The advocate of immersion, however, might urge still another philological argument against the contention in favor of sprinkling, namely, that the preposition en used in Matt. iii. 11 and Mark 1:8 should be translated "in," that being its usual meaning when followed by the dative. To which the advocate of the opposing theory might very properly answer:

1. "This is often true, but by no means universally so. In fact "en" is frequently followed by the dative of the instrument. For instance, in Luke xxii. 49, where the disciples ask, "Lord, shall we smite with the sword?" and in 1 Cor. iv. 21, where St. Paul asks, "Shall I come unto you with (en) a rod?" The only way to determine whether it means "in" or "with" is by the connection.

2. "There are reasons for believing that in the cases mentioned above it should be translated "with." One of these is that in Luke iii. 16 and Acts 1:5, which refer to the same incident as the passages from Matthew and Mark, the preposition is omitted and so we are bound to translate them "with water." Does Luke say one thing and Matthew and Mark another? If so, which is right?"

3. "Another reason for believing that the preposition in the cases cited should be translated "with" is that if it is translated "in," consistency makes it necessary to translate it the same way when the baptism of the Holy Spirit is spoken of. Take the Acts passage and notice into what inconsistency this position leads. Jesus is made to say, in Acts 1:5, 'John baptized "with" water, but ye shall be baptized "in" the Holy Spirit,' and then in verse 8 to add, 'Ye shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you.' I cannot believe that Jesus was guilty of any such absurdity."

"This inconsistency," an advocate of affusion might continue, "comes out in a still more striking fashion in Acts xi. 15, 16. The Apostle Peter is answering the Judaizing Christians who have brought charges against him for preaching to Gentiles and baptizing them. He tells them how he was providentially called to the house of Cornelius, and adds: As I began to speak, the Holy Spirit fell on them, even as on us at the beginning. And I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said, "John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit." That is, according to this translation Peter is made to state that the Holy Spirit fell on Cornelius and his company and that this reminded him that Jesus had said, 'Ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit.' Since it would be in perfect accord with good usage to translate with instead of in, why not do so and save the sacred record from glaring inconsistency?"

It seems to me that such a contention would be entirely reasonable. I have for years recommended the American Standard Version of the Holy Scriptures, because I think that, taken as a whole, it is much superior to the King James Version, but I believe that in this particular case the makers of this translation, in attempting to follow the rule of always translating a given word in the same way if the connection will permit, have fallen into a serious error. Since, however, nothing essential depends on the translation one way or another, I do not regard the error as of sufficient importance to justify us in rejecting the translation as a whole.

Turning for a moment to the concrete cases in which baptisms are recorded in the New Testament, we find that a number of them are anything but favorable to the contention that the rite was always administered by immersion. It is recorded, for instance, that three thousand persons were received into the Christian fellowship on the Day of Pentecost. It would have been utterly impossible for the Apostles to immerse that number of people in Jerusalem in a single day. Indeed, there was no place in that city to immerse any one. The only stream near Jerusalem is the Brook Kedron, and that is a dry bed at Pentecost. I was in Jerusalem at Easter in 1919 and even that early in the spring the stream had practically vanished. The only other places about the city in which one might have been immersed were a few pools from which the people got their water for drinking and cooking, and it is absurd to suppose that the Jews, with their strict ideas of ceremonial cleanness, would have permitted the despised sect of the Nazarenes to pollute their water supply by baptizing their converts in it. But even if they had permitted it, the Christians, all of whom were themselves Jews, would not have consented to baptize in standing water, since the universal requirement among the Jews was that only running water might be used for purposes of ceremonial purification.

The story of Paul's baptism (Acts ix. 18) is that after the restoration of his sight, "standing up he was baptized." There is not even a hint that he left the house of Ananias and walked across the city to find a running stream. On the contrary, the clear inference is that he was baptized on the spot. The same is true of the baptism of Cornelius and his household (Acts x. 48) and of the Phillippian jailor and his family (Acts xvi. 531). Indeed, it is inconceivable that immersion should have been the mode in the latter case. The jailor's conversion occurred soon after midnight and "he was baptized immediately." Paul and Silas, the only persons present who could have baptized him, were in prison and were still there the next morning. Therefore, even if the jailor had consented to gather his family together and go out in search of a stream, there would have been no one to administer the rite after he had reached it.

I am not at all concerned, however, to show that sprinkling was the only mode of baptism practiced in the Apostolic Church. The Methodist position is that the mode of administering the ordinance is a matter of no importance whatever. Some of our immersionist friends talk as if the admission that the mode of baptism for which they contend is permissible had been forced upon us by the discoveries of modern scholars. As a matter of fact, the authoritative interpreters of Methodism have never denied it.

Wesley, commenting on Col. 11:12, says: "The ancient manner of baptizing by immersion is manifestly alluded to here, as the other manner of baptizing by springling or pouring water is in Heb x. 22. But no stress is laid on the age of the baptized or the manner of performing it in one or the other place, but only on being risen with Christ by the powerful operation of God in the soul."

Speaking of the baptism of the eunuch (Acts viii 38), Adam Clarke says: "While Philip was instructing him, and he professed his faith in Christ, he probably plunged himself under the water, as this was the plan which appears to have been generally followed among the Jews in their baptisms; but the person who had received the confession of faith was he to whom the baptism was attributed as it was administered by his authority."

I do not quote these interpretations as approving them, for I am not sure that either one of them is correct. I simply quote them to show that neither of these great interpreters of Methodism called in question the fact that immersion was a common mode of baptism among the ancient Jews and in the early church.

The point is, however, that neither of them regarded it as a matter of any importance. In his note on Col. 11:12, Clarke quotes with approval the following statement by Alford: "To maintain from the use of these figures that immersion is necessary in baptism is surely the merest trifling and a resuscitation of the very ceremonial spirit against which the Apostle is arguing. As reasonably might it be argued from the use of the word 'unclothing' that nakedness was an essential in that sacrament. The things represented by both figures belong to the essentials of the Christian life; the minor details of the sacrament which correspond to them may in different ages and climates be varied, but the spiritual figures remain."

This admirably expresses the position not only of Methodism, but also of most of the other great Protestant denominations. The rubric in the ritual for baptism in the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, prescribes that where the candidate so desires, "the minister shall immerse him in water."

That is, while it is the duty of the pastor to instruct his people in regard to the natue and meaning of the sacrament and especially to seek to free them from the deadening influence of literalism and ceremonialism, if there are still those to whom baptism by immersion appears more significant and suggestive than any other mode, there is no reason why their preference should not be satisfied. For, as I shall seek to show in the next and final article of this series, there is no difference in principle between the position of one who maintains that immersion is the only legitimate mode of baptism and that of one who holds that sprinkling is the only mode. Both attribute the significance and value of the sacrament to the mode in which it is administered. Both lose sight of the real spirit of the ordinance and stick in the letter

PROHIBITION NOT A PARTISAN POLITICAL ISSUE.

Both of the great political conventions have met and both very wisely decided to make no reference to Prohibition in the party platforms, both agreeing very wisely that as Prohibition has not been a partisan political issue in the past it should not be made a partisan political issue in the present campaign. The writer does not forget that there has existed for nearly forty years a National Prohibition Party, which has made Prohibition the dominant issue in its platform and which has regularly nominated a national ticket, but the refusal of the great mass of the voters to support the Third Party Prohibition movement indicated that the Prohibition question could not be handled successfully as a partisan political issue, and the Anti-Saloon League of America was organized a non-partisan, omni-partisan League, to destroy the beverage liquor traffic. Making due acknowledgment for the splendid educational work which has been done by other agencies, the fact remains that the Anti-Saloon League has been the efficient organization which by strictly non-partisan methods has led in the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment. The writer has been a member of the National Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League for fifteen years and the Chairman of the National Legislative Committee since its organization in 1913, and knows that there has never been during that time any change whatever in the policy of the League that Prohibition is not a partisan political issue.

It cannot, therefore, be too strongly emphasized at this time that the Anti-Saloon League of America did not ask for a Prohibition plank at either the Democratic or the Republican Conventions. The only request made by the Anti-Saloon League was made in conjunction with the W. C. T. U., and was for the following brief Law Enforcement plank: "We declare for the effective enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and laws enacted pursuant thereto as construed by the Supreme Court of the United States."

The discussion at Chicago was brief and never went beyond the Committee room to the floor of the Convention. It is reported that some Third Party Prohibitionists asked various delegates to introduce a Prohibition resolution on the floor of the Convention as an additional plank in the platform. But no one would agree to do so, and no Prohibition plank was introduced or adopted in the Republican Convention.

While the Democratic Convention likewise refused to adopt any plank on Prohibition, the question was more prominent than at Chicago. The Committee on Platform gave an hour to a public hearing, at which Mrs. L. L. Yost, Legislative Superintendent of the W. C. T. U., and Dr. W. B. Wheeler, national attorney of the Anti-Saloon League, spoke in favor of the Law Enforcement plank given above. Some others spoke in favor of a dry plank

The writer also spoke [illegible] of the fact that in some press [illegible] referred to as "[illegible] as "advocating a dry plank" [illegible] view of the late Senator [illegible] speech on the acceptance of the [illegible] of the convention [illegible] and emphasized very strongly [illegible] by him before the platform committee against the adoption of [illegible] prohibition, the kernel of that statement [illegible] that there may be no question as to [illegible] taken by the writer at the public committee hearing.

"I have been hearing the Democratic [illegible] boyhood, and have spoken before State [illegible] temperance organizations, church [illegible] councils, legislative and congressional committees, but never until today have I appeared before a committee of politicians on the subject of Prohibition. And I would not be here today but for the fact that it has been reported that certain State conventions had voted to urge the adoption of a wet plank in the national Democratic platform. I am not here today in the capacity of chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America, but as chairman of the Commission on Temperance and Social Service of the M. E. Church, South, which church has the third largest membership of the Protestant denominations of our country, and a larger proportion of democratic voters than any Protestant denomination, unless it be the Southern Baptists. As a representative of hundreds of thousands of Democrats I protest to this Democratic Committee against any action by this Committee which will put a wet label on the Democratic party, or brand it as the 'wet' party of the country. The prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes is a great economic, social and moral issue. It has not been dealt with heretofore as a partisan political question. I have personally for thirty-five years participated in contests for local, State and National legislation, and in those contests I have never known any difference between Democrats and Republicans. Party lines have been absolutely ignored. The Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act both received the vote of more than two-thirds of the members of both political parties in Congress. As chairman of the Commission of a great church, including in its membership both Republicans and Democrats, I insist that it is unwise to change the policy of the past and now make Prohibition a matter of party creed. If gentlemen are opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment, let them follow the methods prescribed in the Constitution to secure its repeal. If gentlemen are opposed to the provisions of the Volstead Act, let them make their fight in Congress for the repeal or modification of that Act. But as a voter in good standing in the Democratic Party, I most earnestly protest against the proposal to make this question a party issue, and to cause thousands of Democrats to hang their heads in shame because a wet brand has been put upon the Democratic party."

After the public hearing, the Prohibition question was discussed at length in the executive session by the members of the platform committee and all proposed plans were voted down. The question was then debated upon the Convention floor and the issue squarely drawn. Both the dry and wet planks were voted down by such sweeping majorities as indicated that the Convention was in hearty agreement with the policy that Prohibition is not a partisan political issue under which policy the Anti-Saloon League has won all its local, State, and National victories, under which the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified and the Volstead Act passed over the President's veto. It was [illegible] gratifying to note of the 284 votes in the distinctively dry Southern States, only [illegible] votes were cast for the dry plank and only [illegible] for the wet plank, the practically solid dry vote of the South being cast against making prohibition a partisan political issue.

While the writer would have been pleased had both Conventions adopted the short Law Enforcement plank given above, yet after it failed of academy subjects. One dormitory will be used for the academy students and the other for the college students. This will enable the college to be organized on a standard basis. All regulations and requirements of the College Association have been met by the board of trustees looking forward to this standardization

3. The Enlarged Faculty. The employment of a full corps of men for the college work and of the separate faculty for the academy work, requires a double budget, which has been met by the board. The effect of this movement has already shown on the administration of the college, and its general effect upon the instructional side is obvious. The work of the college can be done on a standard basis. In many other ways the test of efficiency of the institution will be made through the faculty. The employment of the faculty has gone forward under the distinct stipulation that each teacher is to engage in the work of the college under the definite ideals of Christian education. No man has been employed who has not either been trained in a church institution or has taught in a church college, or both. This guarantees the attitude upon the part of these men which will insure the complete success of the work which they have in hand

4. The Educational Campaign. Centenary College is taking its place in the general drive of the Educational Campaign of the church. Our share in the twenty-five million campaign which has been authorized by the church, has been determined by the educational campaign commission. We are looking forward confidently to the complete success of this great work of the Methodists of the South. We do not believe that Methodism will fail. If she succeeds, it means that all her fundamental institutions must succeed!

Centenary College is moving onward and upward. The enrollment of last year represents a fifty per cent increase. The distribution of the students shows that the territory represented is a broadening area. The budget for next year has been doubled over that of last year. The people of the State are beginning to realize the truth of the statement made by the Bishop at the last Annual Conference, "As much as Centenary College needs us, we need Centenary College more."

W. R. BOURNE, President.

THE UNIFICATION MOST NEEDED NOW.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

During the last several years the growth of the churches in the United States has not been so great as in former times. The increase in the membership in our own church has been smaller; and last year the statistical reports made to the Annual Conferences by the preachers showed a decrease.

Various causes have been assigned to explain this retarded progress, all of which may have had something to do with the diminished growth of the churches. Unquestionably some mistaken courses have been followed or larger and better results would have been accomplished. We have suffered from divisive agitations, distracting discussions, and diverting "movements." The church has suffered much from the doctors, and has been no better, but rather worse, for their treatment.

It is now high time for getting down to our main work, namely, that of spreading Scriptural holiness. And the hour has come for putting behind us all the things which tend to draw the church away frfom the fulfillment of the mission to which God has called it.

Our church has a mission of its own, and if it be faithless to its trust, it will sin against both God and man. For a time our forces were engaged in a divisive agitation concerning "unification." That movement came to naught at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church held at Des Moines, Iowa, last May. The "plan of unification" "transmitted" by the Joint Commission was set aside by an action of that General Conference which was something worse than outright and absolute rejection. It has been contemptuously characterized by leaders in the Northern Church as a plan to "Balkanize American Methodism." It is now evident that nothing but "organic union," which is but another name for their old policy of "disintegrating and absorbing" our church, will satisfy them. To that we ought not, can not and will not consent. Perhaps it is best for all concerned that the Northern General Conference set aside "the plan of unification." At any rate, our duty is perfectly clear in view of the present situation.

The unification which to us is now most important and imperative is unification among ourselves. Great obligations rest upon us and great tasks lie before us, and the weight of them should unify us into the most perfect solidarity of zealous effort.

God has committed to our church a high mission and blessed it in its work during all the years when it has prosecuted the fulfillment of this mission with undivided counsels and consecrated energies. At the Ecumenical Conference, held at Toronto, Canada, in 1911, it was shown that above one-third of the increase of world-wide Methodism from 1901 to 1911 was in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This was a most remarkable showing and especially notable in view of the fact that the field in which our church mainly operates is less populous than other sections of our country, and that the results of our work on behalf of the negroes of the South were not included in our reports to the Ecumenical Conference, but were sent up through the statistics of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, which we organized in 1870, and whose enterprises we assist.

It is but nine years since this great record was made. What hinders now that we can not go on with our work in the same gloriously successful manner? We can, and we will.

If we will preach fervently and practice faithfully what Jesus taught when he said, "My Kingdom is not of this world," and pursue unwaveringly the high spiritual mission set before our church by our Lord, we shall defeat all sinister purposes and ambitious schemes framed against us; extend our work wherever our forces are engaged; render the most valuable service to all American Methodism; and promote the Kingdom of Christ to the ends of the earth.

God was with our fathers and blessed them, and established the work of their hands. He has been with us, their sons and successors. "Best of all, God is with us." If God be for us, who can be against us with any hope of prevailing over us? Let us cleave to God and love one another as never before.

We have had agitations, and distractions, and "movements" enough. Now let our Israel move under the leadership of the pillar of cloud and of fire which has guarded and guided both our fathers and ourselves in all the way which our church has come while making its glorious history.

Let us be unified among ourselves by the unifying presence of the life-giving Holy Spirit.

SOUTH AMERICA: THE UNDEVELOPED CONTINENT.

Chile: Fertilizer of the World.

On my voyage on the steamship Nika, of the Hodge Ship Co., I had better opportunities to see Chile than any other country. It is a strange land, extending from Peru, about seventeen degrees south of the equator, 3000 miles, to Cape Horn, within thirty-seven degrees of the South Pole. Although only seventy miles wide in the middle and 200 wide at the widest point, Chile would reach across the United States from Maine to Oregon, or stretch along our Pacific Coast from Mexico to Alaska. It is divided into three fairly distinct regions—the Southern, which is cool and damp and has great forests and pastures and coal fields; the central, which has a mild climate, similar to that of Southern California, and, with irrigation, is a fine farming and fruit district; and the Northern, which is, except on the Eastern edge among the real Andes, absolutely rainless and barren, but has immense deposits of nitre and silver and copper. While this last section is in a tropical region, its climate, moderated by altitude and sea breezes, is extremely pleasant and healthful.

Africa was the first place touched by our ship. It is a fair port and lies on slightly elevated ground backed by hills with the morro, probably 800 feet high, jutting by its side into the sea. Here in the war between Peru and Chile a desperate battle was fought in which every Peruvian perished. There are pretty plazas, streets paved with round stones, and typical houses with no yards but patios in the rear. Although it has only 5000 people, it is an important town, as it is one of the three western outlets for Bolivia. From here is shipped much copper. It is a quaint old place with plenty of burros but no automobiles. It is clean, and as its water is piped from the snow-covered mountains, it is considered healthful. Securing an interpreter, we took the train for Tacna, the capital of the province, 38 miles north. The road runs over level, barren sand with no intermediate villages. At Tacna vegetation appears, because irrigation is practiced, the water being obtained from a little river which under cover passes down the principal street. It is remarkable what the soil will produce with a little water. In the market we obtained luscious grapes, apples, and pears, and saw many fruits and vegetables which we could not sample. Here are good houses and public buildings, but as the country was once Peruvian and the city is near the boundary where difficulties may occur, many Peruvian families have migrated. There are well-kept barracks and several companies of soldiers whose helmets and training suggest the German army. We got a good picture of a company as it assembled for morning mass on the plaza, and enjoyed the military music. At the market we saw women milking cows as their customers waited. Fruits, vegetables, and bread were brought in on the backs of burros. The hotel was good, and the quiet after 9 o'clock was perfect, as there were no trains nor vehicles at large. Only one mosquito ventured in and he was speedily slain without compunctions of conscience. Tacna, like Africa, has pure drinking water piped from the distant mountains. Here we visited a middle-class family, personal friends of our interpreter, and observed the perfect courtesy of their manners and the artistic touches in furnishings.

Our next stop was Iquique, about 200 miles south. It has deep water, but a harbor exposed to the surf which beats in from storms thousands of miles away. The city of some 50,000 inhabitants extends for three miles along a level beach, and while it looks well at a distance, inspection dispels the enchantment, because most of the houses are of wood or galvanized iron with flat, open roofs, as here it never rains. With the exception of the plaza and a park along the beach where both soil and water have been imported, the streets, unpaved and never swept, have a dreary and unsightly appearance. Water is brought in many miles and stored above the town. Absolutely everything—wood, coal, oil, water, food, and clothing—is imported, and there is no reason for a city except the shipment from here of a large part of the nitre produced in the interior. Six or eight merchant ships are always in the harbor receiving cargo from the many lighters, boats fifty feet long rowed by two stalwart Indians from docks to ship. The nitre is brought down in jute bags on open flat cars from the reducing plants 20 to 80 miles away.

It was the privilege of my son and self to visit the plant called Oficina Condor, where we were royally entertained over night by the Chilian manager, Senor Benavides, who, at the request of the general manager, had met us at the station with fine saddle horses on which we rode five miles over hills on a bare trail to the camp. This courteous manager gave us his full time for two days and then brought us back to the railroad. Out twenty miles from the city is the reducing plant with electric light, machine shop, commissary, tenement houses, school, and an elegant house for the manager who entertains visitors in comfortable rooms with bath and other modern conveniences.

The "caliche," or soft ore from which the nitre is extracted, is found in small valleys, and is usually covered with earth two to ten feet deep. This is stripped and the caliche blasted and conveyed in ox carts or trains to the crusher, where the soft rock is broken and then dropped into vats and covered with warm water obtained from a 210-foot well. The nitre dissolves and the solution is drawn off into other vats, where the desired product crystallizes and sinks, and is then removed after the water has been withdrawn. The nitre, which looks like very coarse white or brown sugar, is dumped into great heaps until it is dry and ready for sacking and shipment by rail to the port for export by sea to all parts of the world for fertilizer or explosives.

The deposits extend 200 to 300 miles north and south and cover some 300,000 acres, valued at $2,000 to $3,000 per acre. The railway and most of the "oficinas" are owned by foreign capital, but as Chile levies an export tax the government derives twelve to twenty millions of dollars revenue annually from this great industry, and the world gets the materials for explosives and commercial fertilizers. It is remarkable that this vast, absolutely barren area furnishes riches for the soil of the poorer portions of the earth. From 50,000 to 75,000 people, mostly native Indians, descendants of the Incas, live in this desolate region and engage in this profitable industry under the management of a few thousand trained foreigners. The conditions are very similar to those of other mining regions. Some variety is added by the presence of occasional mines of silver and copper. I saw one hill from which it was claimed that the biggest chunk of silver in the world had been taken. As the bottom fell out, the mine is not now worked.

When we returned to Iquique, a small tidal wave was beating in. It stopped our loading, and as one of our anchor chains broke under the strain, our ship was in danger of being driven ashore and wrecked on the rocks. However, we were saved by the prompt use of an extra bow anchor, and when the surf ceased a diver rescued the anchor and 500 feet of chain.

The Iquique English College, founded forty years ago by Bishop Taylor, is a fine mission school with sixteen teachers and 445 students. The work is done in English and the attendance is limited only by the capacity of the buildings, and these are soon to be enlarged with Centenary funds. It is a worthy enterprise and monument to the wisdom of the great pioneer bishop of Methodism in South America. As always at missions, we were graciously received and I found those who were related to friends in the United States.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

God and Mammon—the one, Father of all, Giver of spiritual gifts, the other, god of this world with a host of devoted, busy worshipers. The thoughtful minister of Jesus Christ is asking himself, "Am I a preacher and shepherd of the flock, or a financial agent for every charitable and benevolent movement in and out of the church?" Have all these money getting plans and purposes a right to claim my time and talent to forward their never-ceasing campaigns? Have preaching and praying, studying and visiting a secondary place in the Kingdom of Christ? The Master had much to say about money, warning his followers against its insidious dangers, but had more, much more, to say about the great spiritual interests of his Kingdom. As a rule the more money a man controls, be he preacher or layman, the less time he has for worship, for Mammon is a jealous master, and brooks no interference. Drives! When the Spirit of Get and Gain obsesses a man's soul, you must array yourself among the driven or get out of the synagogue. Your private opinion as to the righteousness of the cause is a mere figment. The circus has come to town, and the price is paid, low the band wagon we go!

THE UNSPOKEN NAME.

Twenty-five hundred years ago a great soul nearly lost his faith. He looked out upon a world athlame in which cruelty and force were conquering everywhere. He cried to God and the heavens seemed empty. Where, he asked, was the God of righteousness who could allow such things to go on? The answer came in a single word: "Watch."

The man waited, and as he waited he studied the ways of the nations that seemed to be conquering, and he saw that in every evil deed lay the seed of its own destruction. Then he unfolded the ways of his God down the [illegible] and in the end the man, who was once [illegible] began to [illegible] upon the inconsistencies of the doctrine of the supposed government of God, ended by writing a great psalm of faith.

During the past four years thousands of souls have relived the experience of the old prophet. When the war began countless persons cried out that they had lost their faith; countless more had not even any faith to lose. Today God has been rediscovered. Men have found him individually in the cataclysm and the fire. Now we are catching glimpses sometimes clear, sometimes vague and distant, of his great working through the nations. One such interpretation with its deep lesson is described in the Record of Christian Work.

In the early days of the war, when Great Britain was calling for Indian troops to the colors, the Young Men's Christian Association asked permission to put a secretary upon each transport. The Indian government refused, fearing to offend the Hindu soldiers. Again the Association made the request and again it was refused. The association would not give up, and finally, after the seventh request, the government offered to compromise: it would permit the secretaries to go, but upon the condition that they should not mention the name of Jesus Christ. The Young Men's Christian Association considered the compromise long and earnestly, and finally agreed to it.

"Our secretaries," they pointed, "shall not name the name of Jesus Christ, but they will live as nearly as they know how to live like him."

So the secretaries went. At first it seemed as if there were nothing for them to do. Then a strange thing happened. The hair of the Indian soldier had grown long and needed cutting, and there was no one to do it, for among orientals a barber is the lowest man on earth; and although these soldiers were themselves of very low caste, there was not one of them low enough to act as a barber for one another. So came the opportunity of these university men. They began serving as barbers. It was not long before the soldiers began [illegible]

"When we left there was no Mohammedan who cared for our souls, no Buddhist to look after us. But these Christians have been brothers to us. They have acted as [illegible] There is not anything they have not done for us. They sang her or my son into the mission school. We want to know what the Christian religion is."

Two thousand years ago the greatest missionary the world has ever known [illegible] expressed. "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ," was his words, do his deeds, to use his character. Wherever in all the world the humble [illegible] that day will his kingdom begin to come, and there will faith [illegible] dear.—Youth's Companion.

THE WELL DIGGER

By [illegible] M. [illegible], Ph.D.

[illegible] wells [illegible] Allenby's army [illegible] from Dippersby, [illegible] centers [illegible] on the capture of the Holy City, [illegible] on the wells [illegible] by the [illegible]. The well digger lived [illegible] years ago. We wish that he could have [illegible] the camels and the cavalry. We wish that he could have [illegible] Allenby's army [illegible] at the well of Beersheba.

[illegible] he was the well [illegible] visitor who could see [illegible] The opening of a well was [illegible] ordinary [illegible], nevertheless to open a [illegible] was a very wonderful thing to do. Who does not love to drink, as did David of old, from some old spring of clear, cool water that he knew as a boy? Why should we not remember then the one who opened the spring, cleared it out and waded it up so that it invited the passer-by to drink?

Like the one who digs a well do I think of the one who establishes a family altar in his home. It is opening up a spring of living water. Abraham, Jacob and Jacob's children and the pathfinders of the 19th century drink from the well of [illegible] where all may drink from the living fountain of water for [illegible] immortal home. There is no [illegible] a home becomes "a thirsty land," and a land [illegible] by a fountain, "its branches run over the wall." A fountain, then fruitage, then rest to the passer-by.

When Isaac passed away his children swept the old wells cleared. They do not permit the Philistines to come and stop up the wells. The flowing well belongs to the traditions of the family. Enrich the memory of the new generation by refreshing them at the fountain, the family altar and the well will be kept open. It may be for thirty centuries and more. What a rich kind of immortality to have, to be known through all the centuries as a well digger! Blessed is he man that digs a fountain! The Independent.

KEEPING AT IT.

A little girl had spilled the beads with which she was playing, and a great many of them had fallen into the cracks of the floor. She was prying them out with a pin when her big brother came by. Looking on for a moment, he said, "You can never get your beads out that way."

"Why, yes I can," replied the little girl, "if I only keep at it." And she set to work again, while her big brother walked off thinking. He had been almost discouraged about some work he was trying to do. Now his sister's words led him think. "Perhaps," he said to himself, "all I need is to keep at it." Anyway, I'll try.—Apples of Gold.

"A MISSISSIPPI METHODIST."

By Rev. T. W. Adams

In last week's issue of the Advocate appeared a spirited defense of the superannuates. I wish the writer had signed his name. It is not easy to criticise an anonymous article. I can see but one reason for not signing it. It was well written, and expressed worthy sentiments. I am sorry it was not signed. I have always objected to unsigned articles appearing in the Advocate.

My chief objection to it is that it is unfair to the superannuates. I have never sensed any disrespect in the use of the expression "old, worn-out preacher," as applied to the superannuate. None whatever. Invariably there is in using the term a suggestion of the "deepest veneration and love." Technically, they are all superannuates. Really and truly, they are not superannuates if they are not "worn-out." They may not be "old" in years, but they must be "worn-out." Otherwise they are barred constitutionally from that relation.

The Conference ought to be very careful in dealing with the old preachers. No preacher ought to be continued in the active work when he is worn-out, or seriously threatened with a breakdown. If I had been superannuated at 66 years of age I would in great probability have been saved from the painful and distressing breakdown that came last year. The Conference ought to provide for the support of its men, and then say to them, "Stop, you must not kill yourself." For the good of its members the Conference ought to exercise its authority, lovingly and fondly.

No worn-out preacher should be appointed in charge of a congregation with all its multitudinous interests and intricate machinery. It would kill him if he did the work needed to be done. If he failed in the work, the church would suffer. Why not say, "I must have rest?" We old men ought to settle this question right. Don't let us hold on until we are choked off.

The Conference has no constitutional right to superannuate an active man. By no means. The law is very clear.

I am "old and worn-out." I can preach some, and do. I have preached twenty-one times since Jan. 1. The preachers tell me I preach as well as I ever did—I take all they say in their sympathy and love "Cum grano salis." They are kidding me. But I enjoy it and hope they will continue it. I know that I am "old and worn-out." Nobody can fool me.

Tell a "Mississippi Methodist" not to worry. Everybody loves us, if we are, "old and worn-out." None of us is more loved than the one who "rode five miles" to preach and care for the Sunday school.

Brookhaven, Miss.

TO PASTORS AND STEWARDS, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

At the mid-year meeting of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, the Secretary was instructed to convey to you certain information. When Conference convenes in DeRidder in November, there will be many requests for funds from the Board of Missions. In order that the money entrusted to us may be spent in a truly missionary way and that it may accomplish the largest possible results, the following resolution has been spread upon our minutes:

"Resolved, That all applications for aid filed by the presiding elders shall be accompanied with a statement showing the result of an every-member canvass for pastoral support taken on the charge for which aid is asked, and that said canvass shall have been taken within 60 days immediately preceding the date of the Conference session."

The Board of Missions oftentimes disburses money to points that, if they would but feel of themselves, would not need aid, and in other instances, when the truth is learned, places need more aid than a presiding elder thinks. Request for aid for a charge should have its beginning in the charge, and should be initiated by the board of stewards after advising with the pastor in charge. If your charge is to receive mission money next year, see to it that there is made sometime in September or October an every-member canvass for pastoral support.

A. J. GEARHEARD, Secretary.

WHAT A SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER DID.

A Baptist lady took a class of girls just beginning to be interested in society. Their former teacher, a very devout Christian, was wearied with the lightness and frivolity, and asked to be relieved of the class. The new teacher won from the start, and presently had a model class, and the girls became thoughtful and prayerful. "How did you do that?" I asked. She scarcely knew but told me it was her custom to invite all her class, occasionally to spend an evening with her, and after some social entertainment, she took the girls into a private room and said, "I hope you have had a pleasant evening, and I am so glad you came. Kneel down now, and let us all pray." They knelt in a circle around her. She made a short prayer, and putting her hand on the one next her, said, "Dear, won't you pray?" The young lady made a sentence prayer, and she said, "All pray just a sentence or two." They did so, every one. The young ladies loved this teacher most devotedly. She was a beautiful woman, dressed well, and was in every way attractive. There was much in all that for the girls. I have observed that for young men or women a teacher should be a model of manly or womanly character and bearing. This teacher moved to Springfield, Mo. She wrote me from time to time asking about her class, and if any of them had joined the church. It is this heart devotion that makes a successful teacher.—The Rev. J. E. Godbey.

Centenary College of Louisiana
SHREVEPORT, LA.

THE COLLEGE OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE FOR MEN

PEOPLE ARE TURNING TO CENTENARY COLLEGE BECAUSE OF:

1. THE RICH HISTORY.

No college in the State has a stronger line of alumni and the years of fine service guarantee a tradition that is entirely wholesome. This atmosphere is worth much as a fundamental part of the life of the institution.

2. THE NEW ORGANIZATION AND EQUIPMENT.

For the first time in its history, the college and the academy are entirely separated. The work of the college is done by college men and no academy teacher has any other than academy subjects. This guarantees a standard quality of work. Equipment has been purchased to meet the requirements of the college association.

3. THE SPIRIT OF GROWTH.

The Board of Trustees was reorganized last year and the men who are controlling the policies of the institution are made up of business men and of clerical members from the Louisiana Conference, who are interested in placing the college on a firm basis. They are looking forward. They are planning big things. Everything that a college needs they propose to give.

MORE THAN $100,000 SPENT THIS YEAR.

ENROLLMENT THIS YEAR FIFTY PER CENT INCREASE.

BUDGET OVER DOUBLED FOR NEXT YEAR.

4. THE SPLENDID FACULTY.

For this year there has been employed the largest, most expensive and the most experienced faculty that we have ever had. Many of these men have been engaged in similar institutions with a great deal of success. Centenary has been fortunate in procuring such a body of men—in fact, it seems providential. With such men in charge, the institution must succeed, for the faculty is the only test of an institution.

EXAMINE THE LIST AND THEIR RECORDS.

5. THE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE.

The institution proposes to stand for moral and religious training. Each member of the faculty has been employed with this in view. Their records show that they have done it elsewhere. And they are coming to Centenary with this hope. If we fail in this, we have no further justification. With your assistance we shall not fail.

WINKY'S MYSTERY BOX.

Rob Gayton stood beside the two big automobiles which were to carry the pupils of the little country school to the picnic at Coldspring Grove. His sisters, Berry and Laurel, stood behind him, waiting to see how the dispute would end.

Winky Philbrick, the newest boy in school, had just come panting up with a wheelbarrow upon which rested a good-sized box done up in heavy canvas with loops of rope for handles. Big Lute Jones, who was in charge of the picnic, stared at the box and then at the boy.

"You don't expect us to stow that thing on board these two cars when we're loaded to the water's edge already?" he asked severely.

"Well, everybody else is taking something to the picnic, so why can't I?" argued Winky. "This box is my something."

"What is it - anything to eat?" demanded Lute?

"No."

"Then you can't take it, youngster? If we take food enough for the crowd, we'll do well. What do you think we are- a freight train?"

Winky blinked in the odd fashion that had won him his nickname. "I can't tell you what's in it," he said. "It's a mystery box. But I shan't go without it."

"Then stay here." Lute climbed angrily to his place and raised his hand as a signal to start, but Rob Gayton broke in.

"Here, hold on, Lute. You don't mean that. You can squeeze the Kid's box in somewhere. He wants to do his share like the rest of us."

Rob remembered that the children from the poor little Philbrick home had never yet been able to do the smallest thing towards any school undertaking. The little chap had looked so pleased when he came up with that box, it was plain he thought he had got hold of something valuable.

"I don't see as you've any more right to refuse to take his box than you have to leave the others out," Rob insisted.

"Then let him tell what's in it, so we can decide whether it's worth taking or not," growled Lute, but Winky shook his head firmly.

"No, sir, I told you it's a mystery box," he declared.

"Well, leave your mysteries in the bushes and hop into this auto if you're going with us," ordered Lute. "All aboard, Rob; we're late now."

He repeated the signal to start, but Rob stood looking at Winky and his box.

"Never mind, little chap," the bigger boy urged, "I'll go help you wheel that box to Coldspring Grove."

Winky, who seeing Lute so cross had given the picnic up for lost as far as he was concerned, looked up with sparkling eyes. The two big cars started with a rush and then Rob looked dismayed as he found that his sisters had been left behind too.

"Lute Jones always goes whizzing off just like a hornet when anything puts him out," observed Berry. "We didn't mean to get left, Rob, but don't you bother you head about it. Five miles is nothing, is it, Laurel?"

They marched off down the Coldspring road, Rob briskly wheeling the mystery box while Winky ran beside him and the girls came on behind.

"You must let me do part," coaxed Winky. "Say, I never could have got the box there myself, and I couldn't go without it- honest, I couldn't."

"We'll get there all right," cried Berry gaily. "I've read about a man that goes clear across the United States with his things in a wheelbarrow."

However, they soon had to admit that the job was not as easy as it looked. The mystery box was no end of trouble. When they wheeled it up a hill it threatened to slide off, and when the road was rough Winky looked so worried over the bumps that Rob finally agreed to leave the wheelbarrow and carry the box between them by its rope handles. That did very well for a while but it was soon plain that the smaller boy was getting fagged, though they had only covered one of the five miles. It seemed to be growing hotter, too, and the dust was choking both. Rob stopped at last and looked discouraged.

"We're not going to get there [illegible] to Berry. "But, say, we [illegible] poor Winky disappear in the [illegible] can stop and have a picnic all by ourselves such as it is."

"What's to be doing," asked Berry, peering down the road ahead where the automobiles had vanished.

It was an old delivery wagon of a car which the men at the public garage had offered to Charlie Seymour for the summer if he could make it go. Charlie was quite a genius with machinery, everybody said, and he did make it go, part of the time. He drove up with much commotion, and leaning to Nan who sat beside him pointed triumphantly to the empty back seat.

"Get right in, you poor things, box and all. There's room for Berry over in front."

"When they got along to our house," explained Charlie, "and we found they'd been out and left you, we wouldn't have any fun going to-day. We just dug out this old car and came after you. All aboard for Coldspring Grove."

He swung the car around in fine style and had just started up the road when there was a crash and a jar, and they came to a standstill in the middle of the highway. A glance showed the chauffeur that it was no use to think of going on. The automobile settled into the dust and stayed there.

"There isn't a thing we can do," announced Charlie. "Here ends the picnic for us!"

"No, it doesn't!" cried Berry, pointing to the road behind, where a great truck loaded with wooden crates was chugging busily towards them.

"It's Milton Hovey, with a load of little pigs for Hopefield Farm," she said. "Why can't he hitch us right on behind and tow us up to the picnic?"

Old Milton's wrinkled face shone with sympathy as he listened to the story of their troubles.

"I can take a trailer and never know the difference," he told them. "Sit tight now and don't squeal because the pigs do."

When they pulled into the picnic grounds behind that load of grunting pigs, a shout of laughter went up that caused Laurel's cheeks to burn crimson. The Coldspring School and the Wilmer School were there, besides their own boys and girls. They would make all sorts of fun of this, and Lute Jones would be more [illegible] than ever. Worst of all, Laurel was at [illegible], Miss Everard, would be [illegible] them as her pupils. There [illegible] pretty white dress, overseeing the arrangements at the tables, how cool and dressed up everybody was.

Miss Everard turned and saw, and [illegible] she came hurrying to [illegible] "And you bring it, Winky [illegible] guests I engaged couldn't come and we [illegible] a thing, boards or part in the entertainment.

"You [illegible] us, and it's been a mystery box all the way," [illegible] Winky. "I never told."

From the [illegible] wrappings he tugged out, with Rob's help, a [illegible] once gladiators. At present, he explained, from an [illegible] who had just visited them. They could all [illegible] how pleased Winky had been at the [illegible] his share at the picnic in this way. Which [illegible] had never before had a share in anything.

"Only think if we'd all [illegible] and left the poor little fellow behind," [illegible] Laurel.

They set the instrument on one of the tables and Winky [illegible]. Next minute the grove was filled with [illegible], and even Lute Jones's sulky [illegible]. The Coldspring School had brought a [illegible], and the Wilmer School had [illegible] a ball game, but they would have been [illegible] all without the mystery box.

"You said to keep it for a surprise and I did," said Winky, looking up at his teacher. Mabel S. Merrill, in Zion's Herald.

A WARNING.

Lord, with what care hast Thou begirt us round!
Parents first season us, then schoolmasters
Deliver us to laws, they send us bound
To rules of reason; holy messengers,
Pulpits and Sundays, sorrow dogging sin,
Afflictions, sordid anguish of all sizes
Fine nets and stratagems to catch us in,
Bibles laid open, millions of surprises,
Blessings beforehand, ties of gratefulness,
The sound of glory ringing in our ears,
Without, our shame; within, our consciences,
Angels and grace, eternal hopes and fears;
Yet all these fences and their whole array
One cunning bosom sin drives quite away.

RELYING ON THE PROMISES.

If the promises of God were taken out of the Bible, there would still be a sufficient revelation of the nature of God to show His attitude toward men and His yearning for their eternal welfare; but the Christian would miss something of the joy that comes with a realization of the abounding mercy of the Heavenly Father. The hope of reward may not be the highest motive that inspires human action, but it is a tremendous influence in regulating the activities of the average individual.

In the devotional reading of the Bible, we cannot fail to be struck by the fact that God wants us to know what is in store, here and hereafter, for those who faithfully follow the way of life. There are multitudes of promises for him who puts his trust in God and does his will under all circumstances, running all the way from assurance concerning the satisfaction of material wants in this world, to the fulfillment of the deepest desires of the spiritual nature in the world to come. The promises are there for him who doubts it read again the Book with open eyes and feeling heart.

And these promises are to be relied on. The Omnipotent and All-Loving One has not mocked His children with unrealizable hopes. The condition of fulfillment rests not with God, but with us. Implicit faith, hearty obedience and cheerful service on our part will make us know the reality of the blessings that are in store for those who follow after righteousness.

As we read, let us mark the gracious promises of His Word, and, relying on them in the full assurance of faith, let us claim their fulfillment in our own lives.

THE CLAIM OF THE SUPERANNUATES.

The fact that the first two years of the present quadrennium were devoted to the Centenary interests, and that the second two years are to be given up largely to the educational campaign, should not be allowed to interfere with the full performance of our manifest duty to our honored superannuates. That it was not intended that this great campaign should so interfere, is seen in the fact that the General Conference specifically provided the Board of Finance, which has charge of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, should be at liberty to solicit funds quietly throughout the quadrennium. Under the splendid leadership of Dr. Luther E. Todd, secretary of the Board of Finance, this quiet solicitation has been carried on, and will be carried on until the way is open for a more aggressive method of securing what is so urgently needed for so noble a cause.

We wish all our people would secure and read two recent publications of the Board of Finance—the Second Annual Bulletin and "By Their Fruits Ye Shall Know Them." If the facts contained in these two booklets could be brought to the attention of the local membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we believe there would be a spontaneous response in the way of contributions that would, within a very few months, enable satisfactory provision to be made for every one of these veterans who have given their all to the service of the church. We want to call attention to a few of these facts:

1. There are, at present, just 830 of these superannuated preachers in the whole church—surely not a number large enough to constitute a burden to the 2,000,000 members of our great church, even if the most generous provision should be made for their support. In addition to these, there are 1313 widows of preachers, who are justly entitled to financial help.

2. These preachers have given to the church a total of 23,884 years of active service—an average of nearly 30 years each. Many of these men have served between 40 and 50 years and not a few of them more than 50 years.

3. These living superannuated preachers added to the church during their active ministry, in churches and parsonages built and repaired and other property secured, material resources to the amount of $15,700,000—not an insignificant sum!

4. As pastors, they baptized 322,000 infants, organized 35,000 Sunday schools, 9,000 Woman's Missionary Societies, and 7,000 Epworth Leagues, raised $6,000,000 on Conference collections, and added 1,750,000 members to the church. What would the church be to-day without the results of their labors?

5. Of the sons and daughters of these superannuated preachers, 234 are preachers of the gospel, 48 are foreign missionaries, 303 are teachers in church schools and 39 are editors of church papers. In addition, 53 of their daughters have become wives of Southern Methodist preachers, and, at the lowest estimate, 1,000 young men entered the ministry through their influence. What a testimony to their devotion and faithfulness!

6. These superannuated preachers served 5,000 mission charges at an average annual salary of $700 (including missionary appropriations); they served 11,000 self-supporting charges (so-called) at an average annual salary of $1160; they received as the actual highest annual salary, $800, and the average lowest, $202; they suffered a total salary deficit of $3,000,000—$3,000,000 less than the amount actually promised them by the congregations they served! (How foolish of them not to save for a "rainy day!")

7. The average age of these superannuates is 67, and the average age of their wives is 59; of the whole number, 440 are invalids, or practically so, and 170 have dependent invalids to support. The Annual Conference is the one event of the year around which the interest of a Methodist preacher centers, but 400 of these superannuates are unable to attend Conference on account of the small expense involved. (These old preachers might get jobs and go to work!)

8. THESE SUPERANNUATED PREACHERS NOW RECEIVE AN AVERAGE SUPERANNUATE ALLOWANCE OF $212.

It is in our heart to say a good deal; but we will allow the facts to carry their own message.

"LET'S MAKE THE CO-OPERATION UNANIMOUS."

Under the above caption, the editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate makes a plea for co-operation on the part of the preachers of his patronizing territory that is both a commendation and a suggestion. We would fain see the circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate reach the point where it would be fairly representative of the great body of Methodists it strives to serve. Read what the Alabama editor says, and "let's make it unanimous." We can have a circulation of twenty-five thousand and more—if we really will to do it.

"There is not a paper in Southern Methodism that has had such support from the ministers of its patronizing Conferences as has the Alabama Christian Advocate. To swing the circulation from only a few thousand up to twenty-five thousand means work and a lot of it. But the pastors of the Alabama and North Alabama Conferences have done this very thing. They have given their paper the largest circulation of any Conference organ in Southern Methodism. And they are not through yet. Hundreds upon hundreds of Methodist homes in our two Conferences are still without a religious paper, and our preachers will not be satisfied until these homes are weekly visited by the 'assistant pastor.' But while all of this is true, there are just a few of our hard-worked ministers who for one reason or another rarely send us a subscription. If they follow a pastor who put the paper in well nigh every home, they make no effort to receive the renewals; nor do they put themselves out in the least to get new ones. They forget to appoint an Advocate committee, or if they do, they fail to keep behind that committee until it does its work. They seem to think that it is a lowering of their dignity to 'peddle papers.' If the other pastors were like them, this paper, instead of being at the head of the class, would be at the foot. Worse than that, it would probably have to suspend, as would all the publications of the church, if they were dependent upon men of such type of mind for their circulation.

"John Wesley believed in the use of printers' ink and every Methodist preacher will do well to follow the example of the great and good man who, under God, was the founder of our church. May we plead with the few brethren who are indifferent towards a work so necessary to the success of the church as is its Conference paper? Brethren, let's make it unanimous. The Advocate has had such a wondrous support, such an unexampled co-operation, that we covet the privilege of saying, 'There is not a minister of either Conference but who is vitally interested in putting Christian literature in the home of all his people.' Either by a committee, guided in it's work by the pastor, or by direct personal effort, let every man do his full part and in a surprisingly short time our present circulation will be far surpassed and Alabama and West Florida Methodism will have given the American church an example of what preachers can really do for their paper when they all do their best."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. L. S. Massey, the gifted editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, has announced that he will retire from editorial work after this year.

Rev. and Mrs. M. B. Sharbrough, of Biloxi, Miss., have been spending their vacation on the Pacific Coast, where Brother Sharbrough spent several years in highly efficient ministerial service.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer filled the Rayne Memorial pulpit at 8 p. m., last Sunday. He had a large congregation, and a most delightful service. The Editor of the Advocate preached at the 11 a. m. service.

Rev. G. P. White, our faithful pastor at Plaquemine, La., was recently operated on for appendicitis at the sanitarium in Baton Rouge. According to our latest information, he was recuperating satisfactorily.

A note from Rev. H. E. Raley, of Matherville, Miss., informs us that he is engaged in a fine meeting there, being assisted by Rev. H. A. Wood, of Quitman, Miss. Already there have been nine professions of faith, and the meeting is growing in power.

Rev. W. P. Bailey closed a successful meeting at McNair, Miss., on July 31. There were five additions to the church, and many testimonies that the meeting had been a great blessing. Brother Bailey began a meeting at Knoxville, Miss., last Sunday, with Dr. Rolfe Hunt, of Port Gibson, Miss., doing the preaching.

We learn from the Lincoln County Times that Rev. W. H. Lewis, our pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., assisted the pastor in a meeting at Bentonia, Miss., last week.

Mr. William Foulke, for thirty-four years Treasurer of the American Bible Society, died recently in New Rochelle, N. Y. He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The Third Annual Meeting of the Southern Association of High Schools, Normal Schools and Colleges is in session this week at George Peabody for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn.

The first "set-up" of the educational campaign will be held at Blue Ridge, N. C., August 10-12. A meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association will be held in connection with this gathering.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary secretary-treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, accompanied by his wife and Mrs. H. T. Carley, is attending the missionary conference at Lake Junaluska, N. C., this week.

The Training School for Sunday-school teachers and workers for the North Mississippi Conference, is under way at Grenada, Miss., this week. It will be the editor's privilege to spend next Sunday at that important gathering.

Rev. E. W. Pfeiffenberger, editor of the Western Christian Union, Boonville, Mo., has recently published a revised edition of his booklet, "Heaven and Our Sainted Loved Ones." It is highly commended by the church press as a comforting gospel message for the bereaved. It may be had of the author for ten cents a copy.

A great meeting has recently been held at Amory, Miss., where Rev. F. R. Shoot is pastor. The meeting was held in a tent, the preaching being done by Rev. J. O. Haines, general evangelist, of Birmingham, Ala. There were 73 additions to the church.

Rev. J. A. Wells, of Gloster, Miss., received a unique compliment recently. During the progress of a meeting at Wiggland, a friend handed him a check with this notation on it: "For good preaching." It is not always that good preaching is so substantially rewarded.

According to press reports, Rev. R. P. Shuler ("Bob" Shuler), pastor of our First Church at Paris, Texas, has been appointed to the pastorate of Trinity Church, Los Angeles, Calif., to succeed Rev. C. C. Selecman, who succeeded Dr. Purcell at First Church, Dallas, Texas.

The committee to arrange for the entertainment of the next General Conference met at Junaluska, N. C., last Tuesday. We have no information as to the outcome of its deliberations, but we understand that Hot Springs, Ark., has been the most likely contender for the honor of entertaining this great assembly.

A medal has been prepared for award to chaplains who served in the World War. The General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains, 927 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C., urgently requests all chaplains who were in service to send their names and addresses at once, that they may receive this deserved recognition.

Our Sunday school at Gulfport, Miss., has just about reached the four hundred mark in attendance. Judging from the first issue of the Sunday school bulletin this is one of the livest organizations in the Mississippi Conference. Rev. W. L. Linfield is pastor, and Col. J. C. Hardy is superintendent of the school.

We learn from a press announcement that Rev. B. F. Lewis began a meeting at Flora, Miss., last Sunday, being assisted by Rev. Dan Kelley, Mississippi Conference evangelist. The singing will be under the leadership of Rev. J. M. Lewis, of Collins, Miss. Our church at Flora has recently been repainted, both inside and out side.

The congregation of Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., presented Dr. and Mrs. D. C. Hull with a handsome silver platter, with carving set to match, recently. It will be remembered that Dr. Hull has lately been elected president of the Mississippi A. and M. College. Dr. Hull has been president of the board of stewards of Central.

Rev. F. M. Freeman, the pastor, began a revival meeting at Pa Per Memorial Church, Jackson, last Sunday, to run for two weeks. He has with him Rev. R. A. Ferrell, of Texas, and Mrs. Scott, a soloist associated with R. A. Ferrell in charge of the music. There was a large crowd the opening day of the meeting. Pastor and people are encouraged.

We learn from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate that Mrs. W. A. Candler underwent a serious operation at Wesley Memorial Hospital, Monday of last week. The operation was successful, and Mrs. Candler was doing as well as could be expected. Many of our readers will remember Bishop and Mrs. Candler in their travels during the days of anxiety.

By October 1, barring accidents, work will start on a beautiful new church building at Lockport, La. At the same time a new parsonage will be started and when the two buildings are completed Lockport will have one of the most modern church plants in the State. Both buildings are to be of Spanish Mission style, built of pressed stone and stucco. Rev. A. J. Gearhead is the pastor.

The Texas Christian Advocate announces the death of Dr. J. W. Hill, at Honey Grove, Texas, on July 26. He was one of the most prominent members of the North Texas Conference and was well known throughout the connection. Under the nom de plume "Gulliver," he was a frequent contributor to the church papers. Many of our readers will recall several interesting articles by him in this paper. He was a greatly-beloved and very useful man.

It is with great sorrow that we learn that Rev. J. E. Wynn, the oldest living member of the Louisiana Conference, now a superannuate, has been passing through a painful illness and is now much weakened in body. We are sure his multitude of friends throughout Louisiana will remember him in their prayers. His son, Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., is with him at his home in Crowley, La.

The editor of the Advocate will spend a part of next week at Blue Ridge, N. C., attending the first "set-up" meeting of the educational campaign. During his absence, Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city, will look after the editorial interests of the paper. His ability to do this is so well known that it is unnecessary for us to speak even a word of commendation. Brother Harper has just returned from Montcagle, Tenn., where he rendered distinguished service by sermon and lecture.

TITHING LITERATURE AT LESS THAN COST OF PRINTING.

We hereby offer to send to all ministers who are interested in tithing, samples of 18 Tithing and Stewardship pamphlets, any or all of which we furnish, two at a time, gratis, postage paid, in such quantities as they can wisely use at one-half the published price. This is less than the present cost of printing. The postage, which we pay, averages about one-fourth the cost of printing.

If they have not already been circulated, we advise "Thanksgiving Ann" and "How to Tithe and Why" for the first order. The price of each of these is $1.00 per hundred. Remit at the rate of 50 cents per hundred.

This offer will stand until further notice.

THE CHILDREN'S CREED.

We must teach our children that beyond what they feel and see and touch there is something better and greater, which they can neither feel nor see nor touch. Goodness, kindness to one another, unselfishness, fairness and uprightness—these are the best things in all the world. It is true that goodness and kindness have no faces that we can kiss, no hands that we can clasp; but these are certainly close to us, both in the midst of our work and our play. And this goodness and kindness which, except in outward acts, we cannot see, is something which existed before we were born. It is from this that we have all the pleasant things of the world, the flowers, the sunshine, the moonlight—all these were given us by some great kindness and goodness which we have never seen at all. And this goodness and love are the Great Power out of which all things come, which we call by the name of God. And because God is so much above us and so good to us we call him by the name which is most dear to us.

When a father goes away from his home, still his children know that he is somewhere, though they cannot see him, and they know what to do in order to please him. So it is with the great unseen Father of us all. Let us then teach our children that God is goodness and justice; that the rules which he has laid down for the government of the world are his will and wish for us; even frost and cold, even sickness and pain, are for our good, and we must trust that he has some good reason for it—perhaps to make us strong and brave and healthy.

"God loves not the sadness of fear and distrust,
O, serve him with gladness—the loving and just!
His bounty is tender, his being is love,
His smile it is with splendor the blue arch above."

THE RUG MAKER'S MISTAKE.

A friend of boys and girls and young men and women, who often came to him for advice about their lifework once told in answer to an inquirer:

"Beside my table I have a rug of intricate design. The Oriental who made it missed the pattern one day, for some reason, and failed. Afterward through all his weaving of the long web he was able to correct his mistake when he came to it more and more apparent as the rug became complete. In like fashion we must be prepared to present duty, however unexpected, to see a flaw in life's pattern and perhaps by it will in order all that comes after, and that will appear even when the crosses have been forgotten. The only safe rule in following duty is to put all of life into every act, for these are woven into the warp of the very fabric itself. I am bound to invest my life in the service that will yield to God the largest return for what he has invested in me."

CHARLES FELDER CARRUTH, son of Prof. J. L. and Hattie Felder Carruth, was born August 12, 1912, and was taken to heaven February 22, 1920. Little Charles had often been a great sufferer, but the fond parents were hopeful he would outgrow his ailment, and their affections were centered for him all the while; he was so affectionate and gentle and unselfish it seemed he must live to fill out such a beautiful life. But God willed it otherwise, and took him to be with him and make heaven dearer for them. A lover of music, he has joined the children's choir up there; and Jesus, who loved the children while on earth, cares for him now. The parents' hearts were deeply grieved, but they have made their contribution to that mansion above and are sweetly submissive to the Father's will. God bless them.

BROTHER GRIFFIN.

Summit, Miss.

N. M. PARK was born at Park Springs, N. C., near Danville, Virginia, December 22, 1867, and died at Alligator, Miss., April 6, 1920. He came to Mississippi when a young man, and settled at Alligator, where he spent the remaining years of his life. Several years ago he was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, and gave freely of his time and money to all branches of church work. He was Sunday school superintendent and steward, and ever faithful to his duty. At all times he was his pastor's friend. In his home life, love, sympathy and kindness flowed from his heart daily, and for this he reaped an affection and kindness from the loved ones there, that was beautiful and impressive. Brother Park was truly a great man. He stood for the right at all times, and lived for the good he could do. He was a friend and neighbor worthy of the name, and a citizen whose life was helpful and uplifting to all his acquaintance. He was pure in mind, gentle and unselfish—a man with many friends, and as the great number of people gathered to see his body laid to rest, many were heard to say, "we have suffered a great loss." But we would ask the sorrowing loved ones and friends to keep in mind the Great Day, when sorrow and tears and partings are no more, but we shall meet our loved ones again, and dwell with them forever. Brother Park is survived by his wife, and two brothers, Charley and James, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Dunn, and nieces and nephews, who, when bereft of father and mother, found a father's love and care in the heart of this great and good man.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in His wisdom has seen fit to call Mrs. Damie Mathison from her earthly labors to her reward in heaven; and

Whereas, she lived to reach the ripe old age of 79 years, having been a consistent member of Mount Zion Methodist Church for a period of more than 65 years; and

Whereas, her life has been worthy in every respect of emulation, not only by the members of the Mount Zion Church, but by the entire charge and district,

Therefore, be it, Resolved by the members of the quarterly conference, this day assembled in Mount Zion Church, that we extend to the bereaved family of our beloved sister, Damie Mathison, our sincere sympathy in their great sorrow, and point them to Him whom she so long worshipped and loved, and who alone can comfort the sad and broken-hearted.

Resolved that we as a conference can point to her and say: "She was indeed a mother in Israel in whom there was no guile," and her devotedness will ever inspire us to walk more closely in the footsteps of Him who was ever her friend and guide.

Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of this conference; that a copy be furnished the Premiss Headlight and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (5 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wider popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

AN APPRECIATION OF MR. ARCHIE PETREA HOLT.

By Rev. Charles W. Crisler

Mr. Archie Petrea Holt, eldest son of Mr. Anthony Lakin Holt and Mrs. Sarah Lavinia Petrea Holt, died at his home in Jackson, February, May 18, 192[illegible], aged fifty-three years and six months, after a painful illness of many weeks, resulting from a vicious attack of a cow he was leading to the pasture. He was born in Yazoo County, near Benton, November 15, 1866, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the old home neighborhood, at the age of thirteen.

He has always lived a clean, upright, Christian life. Early in youth he made a solemn pledge that he would, under all circumstances, endeavor to do his whole duty as a Christian and a church member; that he would not use slang and would use all his influence against it; and that he would, as much as was in his power, refrain from anger or speaking too hastily. These resolutions, found among his papers after his death, were strictly kept during his useful life.

For the past twenty-five years, except one in Vicksburg and two at the old home in Yazoo County, he has lived in Jackson and been identified with some of its leading business interests, either as manager or bookkeeper. He made many friends of all classes and soon became one of the city's leading church workers. For many years he was officially connected with Capitol Street Methodist Church, being, at the time of his tragic death, a member of the board of stewards, an officer and teacher in the Sunday school, an active member of the Epworth League, secretary of the church conference, and recording secretary of the quarterly conference.

It was my privilege to have known him more or less intimately for over thirty years, having been his pastor twice, and, since coming to Jackson as pastor of Galloway Memorial Methodist Church two and one half years ago, I have been associated with him almost continually. It has never been my pleasure to be associated with a more modest, unselfish, more consistent, faithful, and efficient Christian gentleman than Brother Holt. He was truly a good man, an unselfish friend, a delightful neighbor, a self-sacrificing son and brother, and consistent member of the church.

Brother Holt never married. He was too busy looking after the comfort and happiness of others to think of himself. His whole magnificently beautiful life was devoted to the care of his widowed mother and other dependent loved ones. In this he not only discharged a duty, but took supreme delight. He filled his place so full in the life and work of the church that no one can take his place. He was always ready and eager to serve his Lord in any way possible. I do not recall a more satisfactory pastor's helper or a more faithful and devoted member of the church. He never had a pastor who loved his church more, served it more faithfully, or gave himself with more passionate abandon to its highest interests.

He suffered much during his long illness, but "The grace of his Lord whom he trusted was sufficient." As long as consciousness remained, he greeted the many visitors to his sickroom with a smile and cheerful words. In the hours of greatest suffering he was always considerate and sought to put those who waited upon him to as little trouble as possible. His last hours were beautiful, his faith was unclouded, his death was triumphant.

In the presence of a large concourse of friends and citizens, the funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. H. F. Tolle, Dr. J. M. Morse, his presiding elder and former pastor, and the writer, a former pastor and almost lifelong friend. We laid him to rest in Cedar Lawn Cemetery, Jackson, Miss., to await the resurrection morning.

INDIANOLA GIVES NEARLY $[illegible] TO SUPERANNUATE FUND.

Our church at Indianola has been greatly blessed by a visit from Rev. J. H. Bell, now in charge of the Superannuate Endowment Fund for the North Mississippi Conference.

In addition to giving our people the opportunity of contribution to the cause closest to their hearts, he fanned the feeble spiritual fires in many a breast into a flame. The two services were like an old-time revival in Holy Ghost power.

With many of our people away for the summer, still, with little effort on our part, people just fell over each other to give to a cause that touched their heart-strings. Nearly $4,000 was given and it will be nearer $10,000 than $5,000 when we get through here.

It will be criminal negligence on the part of the pastors if for any reason they fail to invite Brother Bell to their charge and give the people a chance. When they get the facts, they will open their treasures and lay them at the feet of the King.

We have had as many drives as any one, and then some, for on top of all the others we are after a new $75,000 church and have gotten $35,000 on it. But in none of these causes have our people responded so readily as to this. Brother Bell's presentation was unique and touched the hearts of all. It was a wonderful blessing to all who heard.

I have offered my services as volunteer sub-agent in the Winona District and will do all I can in my spare moments to further this great cause and help to make the Winona District lead all the others in an effort to make it $500,000 instead of $270,000. If the pastors get it on their hearts and in their prayers, it will be done. From the way our pastors are responding we will be able to report soon to the Advocate that every preacher in the district has given a part of his tithe to the fund. "Like preacher, like people;" we cannot expect them to do more for us than we are willing to do for ourselves, and this is our part.

Wouldn't it be great to report the bishops, all the presiding elders and all the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, had felt the call of this cause and given to it? We believe the fires of enthusiasm would spread to every heart in the church.

Yours in Christ,

CHAS. D. McGEHEE.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Elementary Superintendent visited the Schools at Yazoo City, Morton and Georgetown during July and found them all doing good work.

Sunday School Day is being observed over the Conference. The schools that have not observed the day are urged to do so during August.

Every mail brings to the office blanks filled with information. If you have not filled in your blank and returned it, do so to-day.

During August our Elementary workers are busy getting the work up for Promotion Day in the Beginners', Primary and Junior Departments or Classes. This day is observed the last Sunday in September or the first Sunday in October.

The memory work done during the Elementary years, the spiritual truths learned, the appreciation given the child of God's Word help in making a life fit for the service of the Master. The work of the Elementary teacher is a very difficult one, for she holds in her hands the power to-day to help those who live to-morrow.

Mrs. SUE STUART BRAME,
Elementary Superintendent.

Give Thanks.

"Oh! give thanks for the summer and winter;
Give thanks for the sunshine and rain;
For the flowers, the fruits and the grasses,
And the bountiful harvest of grain;
For the winds that sweep over our prairies,
Distributing vigor and health—
Oh! give thanks to our Heavenly Father
For nature's abundance of wealth."

—Golden Now.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Training School for teachers is under good headway this week. The earnest, consecrated women and men who have taken time to come together for study, for fellowship, and for prayer are going to make worthy history for our church. God bless every one of them with the fullness of his Spirit.

When you think that half the young people in the State of Mississippi are receiving no kind of definite religious instruction, and the half that are receiving such instruction only get about twenty-four hours a year, and the few hours thus spent are used in such a feeble way, it is high time we were waking up to the necessity of doing something for the children and young people worthy of them and of our Lord.

I desire to express my gratitude to all who have helped to make this school a success. The few kind words have cheered my burdened heart and helped me to press on against odds known only to the man on the job. More than anything else I am thankful for the prayers that have been answered in behalf of some to whom God opened the door to enter into this school of the teachers of religion.

An effort was made to have a Wesley Bible Class Federation during the session of the Training School, but we could not get the help needed for such an enterprise. Let us begin now to organize new classes and get ready to hold a Federation early in 1921. On Tuesday, the 10th of August, Hon. G. J. Leftwich, of Aberdeen, will make an address at Grenada on "The Wesley Bible Class as a Soul Nurturing Agency." You can hear this great layman if you will.

Next year we ought to have a Training School in each one of the eight districts in the Conference. Such schools will be worth more than anything else to make our Sunday schools what they ought to be. It will take a little co-operation to do this kind of work. Never forget it, the school makes progress as the teachers make progress. Another one, the teachers of the people make the people. One more, the church that teaches most and best now is, to be the church of the future. Do you believe it?

Never part without loving words to think of during your absence. It may be that you will not meet again in life. —Hurlstone.

As sometimes a flame is found
Clear-shining through the night,
So bright we do not see the lamp,
But only see the light—
So may I shine, His light the flame,
That men may glorify His name.

SOUTH IS TURNING AGAINST CALOMEL

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The Blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 50c per bottle.

THE JUNALUSKA BOYS' CAMP.

By E. R. Stanford, Director.

The Junaluska Boys' Camp, which has just closed a most successful two weeks' session, is the first Boys' Camp which has ever been projected by the Sunday School Board of the Southern Methodist Church. This Camp has been launched by the Department of Intermediate-Senior Work and has been carefully planned to meet a distinct need in our church.

Forty-one older boys and six group leaders were enrolled in this first Camp. They came from ten Southern States, reaching from Texas to the southern coast of Florida. Georgia led the list and South Carolina came second. North Carolina and Tennessee tied for third place.

In giving a brief account of the Camp, I am assuming that it is a permanent institution and not simply a camp which is now a matter of history. The purpose of this Camp is not primarily to give these boys a summer vacation and a good time, but to train them for Christian leadership.

It was a picked group of boys who assembled on the hills overlooking Lake Junaluska. Every boy had been recommended by his pastor or superintendent, and several came as the official representative of a Sunday school class.

These boys were given a definite course of training which would make them more effective workers and leaders in their own church at home. An earnest effort was made to put on a program for these outstanding boys which would secure their interest, hold their attention and meet their fourfold need, physical, social, mental and religious. The plan is to make this a Central Training Camp for the boys from ... to eighteen years of age, which ... a model for a series of ... the direction of ...

D. M. Ausmus, M. T. Haw, ... E. Pepper, and J. B. Ivey, were ... impressive.

The boys were divided into three ... and graded on everything ... during the day. The Tribes were, ... Cherokees and Seminoles.

The boys from North Carolina were ... Ivanhoe Clark, John Westbrook, E. S. ... and Binford Sloan. From South ... Lewie Mann, Fred Leitner, ... Cooper, Austin May and Gar... Vernon. Aberdeen, Nettleton, Houston, and Woodland sent delegates to the Aberdeen District meeting. Others expected to be present, but were kept away on account of the rain. All these societies had splendid reports. Woodland is new, having been organized this year, but it promises great things.

The weather was ideal for the Sardis District meeting, and we had Juniors by the dozens. The reports were all good, and practically every society increased its pledge. The delegate from Cockrum doubled last year's pledge. The indications are that Sardis District will soon be one of the leading Districts in Children's Work.

The Juniors of both Sardis and Aberdeen Districts promised to do organization work, and we expect to have many blue ribbon societies at Okolona next year.

The Byhalia Juniors gave a delightful program at the Holly Springs District meeting. We are indebted to Mrs. L. G. Fant for a splendid presentation of the Children's Work at that meeting.

There seems to be a revival of Bible study among the Juniors. Aberdeen has challenged the Adults to a Bible contest in the near future. Holcomb's new study book is "Thirty Studies About Jesus."

Lyon, a society only two months old, reports every child in the church a member of the missionary society, and the Y. C. W. in every home.

Grenada divided the society into Reds and Blues, and the side securing the greatest number of subscribers to the Y. C. W. was to entertain the other. About twenty-five subscribers were secured.

Louisville Juniors have been reorganized. They have 32 Juniors, and 10 Babies on the roll. This society promises to be one of the leading societies of the Durant District.

Amory has a wide awake society, which has the unique distinction of having all its officers boys. This society has challenged Holly Springs for the banner.

Shelby has two new life members, Jane Poitevent Shelby and Fred P. Shelby. Greenville District expects to lead in life members this year.

Nettleton Juniors are making a quilt for the Orphans' Home, and they are also planning a box for the Co-operative Home. They have six new names on the Baby Division Roll.

We are very sorry to know of the illness of Miss Kathryn Phillips, our student volunteer, and Leader for Shannon Juniors. Shannon Juniors have been doing splendid work under the combined leadership of Miss Phillips and Mrs. Collins.

The North Mississippi Conference is to lose one of its most faithful workers in the person of Mrs. W. L. Hill, of Houston. It was with profound regret that we learned of Mr. Hill's sudden death, and of the fact that Mrs. Hill will go to Meridian to live.

Mite Box Openings and Reports are the order of the day. Everybody get busy.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Question!

What have you done with your copy of the minutes of the 1920 session of the Conference, Woman's Missionary Society? Have you read it from cover to cover? If so, you have doubtless gained some useful information, and have also found something that was interesting. If you have read it, then put it in a safe place that you may have it ready for reference at a moment's notice.

Remember that it costs money to publish these little booklets. It also requires weeks of careful, tedious work, making the copy up for the publisher. Back of this compilation stands a year's endeavor by faithful and anxious conference and district officers. These women are busy people, like yourself, yet they found time to write innumerable letters of inquiry, of reminder, and encouragement, in order to secure information and reports of what each auxiliary has done during the year.

The most valuable thing about the minutes is that it tabulates the achievements of the individual societies of the whole State. If your officers had failed to report each quarter of last year the faithful work of your auxiliary, the totals in all the annual reports would have been smaller because of that omission. If you are an officer and have not access to a copy of the new minutes, you may secure one by writing Mrs. W. W. Dugan, of Crowley, our Conference distributor of literature; price, 5 cents per copy.

Surely no one who has received one of these booklets has cast it unopened into the waste basket!

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

New Organizations.

A new Y. P. society was organized at Brownsfield, Corinth District, May 9, with seven members. Miss Wardie Pernell is Superintendent.

On May 30, at Pleasant Valley, Corinth District, a Y. P. society with five members was organized. Miss Janie Watson of Guntown, R. F. D., is Superintendent.

On June 7, at Inverness, Winona District, a Y. P. society with 14 members was organized. Mrs. J. T. Duncan is Superintendent.

We note with great rejoicing the steady increase in interest in mission study. The quarterly reports from the different societies show a number of mission study classes among the adults, the young people and the juniors. This is very encouraging and the good work should continue until every society has a study class.

The Young People's society at Como has doubled its membership this year under the leadership of Mrs. R. P. Neblett.

Water Valley and Holcomb have doubled their membership this year.

THOUSANDS COMING INTO THE CHURCH.

I am out from Wonsan about fifty miles on a special evangelistic campaign. I have been out about fifteen days using the tent which Brother J. K. Kyser, of Burnt Corn, Ala., gave while on furlough. During the whole fifteen days we have had great crowds gathered around the tent almost every night. I have been almost astonished at the eagerness with which they listen to the preaching of the gospel. Thousands and thousands are coming into the church throughout the whole land. During the past fifteen days we have had over one hundred decisions, most of them young men. In one non-Christian village about fifty decided to become Christians, and began immediately collecting funds for a church building. We hope to build a church there in the fall, if they get sufficient funds. We are working on four new church buildings in the district—hope to have two finished by summer.

The Conference collections are practically all in, and the ministerial support has been pulled up to double what it was last year.

THE STANDING OF CONFERENCES ON TITHERS.

By Rev. J. J. Stowe, D.D.

Below will be found a list of the Conferences of our church, giving standing of each based on the number of tithing cards received in the Nashville office, percentage on which the order is arranged being the ratio of cards to number of church members in each Conference. This estimate does not include two thousand pledge cards received from colleges, as many of these did not furnish necessary information as to Conference, district and charge.

From information at hand, it is estimated that at least one-fourth of the tithing pledge cards that were signed failed from one cause or another to reach the general office. While this is to be regretted, it does not seriously affect the relative standing of the various Conferences in the list given. Generally speaking, this standing indicates the degree of earnestness with which the matter of stewardship and tithing has been presented and the efficiency of the work done on this line in each Conference, but in some cases this is not true, because of peculiar factors which have entered into the equation. Some Conferences that have done splendidly in all else, have done poorly in signing tithers. Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the fact that this work has only started, that wisely and prayerfully it must be pressed until our people accept and practice the principles of Christian stewardship. Pastors should write the Nashville office if leaflets on stewardship and tithing are wanted for free distribution among church members, and for tithing pledge cards if needed.

FROM BELLEFONTAINE, MISS.

The third protracted meeting on the Bellefontaine charge, North Mississippi Conference, was held last week at South Union church. Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, a Millsaps College student, did the preaching. He was liked very much by the people, and as a result of the preaching, six were taken into the church on profession of faith.

The other meeting which has not been previously mentioned was held at Bellefontaine. Rev. Ira A. Brumley, of Whitton, Arkansas, a real evangelistic preacher, did the preaching. A real good revival was the result. Many backsliders were reclaimed, a number of family altars were established, and there was a good number of conversions. There were ten taken into the church, eight of which were on profession of faith.

We have another meeting for next week, which we expect to be a real revival. Pray for us.

R. B. CRAIG, P. C.

A PRISON REVIVAL.

"But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel." Philippians 1:12.

I was in the bed in the hospital in Songdo, when the Korean Hospital preacher came in and told me that the Korean pastor at Chooncbun had been arresfed, and was in prison. I told him at once that that reminded me of an incident in the life of Bishop Pierce, that I had heard from the lips of Brother Walter Anthony. When Bishop Pierce's last hour was drawing near, weakened by the long illness, he turned to Bishop Haygood and said: "Atticus, the way looks dark, dark!" Bishop Haygood at once replied, "Don't worry over that, Bishop Pierce, the devil doesn't want you. You may rest assured of that fact."

"Why do you say that, Atticus?"

"Why, he knows that even if you should go to his place, you wouldn't be there fifteen minutes before you would have a camp-meeting started, and be calling sinners to the altar. He doesn't want your kind of men."

"I guess you are right, I guess you are right!" was the reply.

Day before yesterday, a Korean friend came to my door and told me that the Chooncbun pastor had been released, and was to arrive here yesterday at 2 o'clock. At three I went to his parsonage to see him. We never knock on a door in Korea. So I "knocked" in the good Korean way. "Hem! Ahem!" from me just outside the door, and the pastor scrambled to the door, opened it and grasped my hand. The confinement has left him very weak. He is a rather elderly man, and not very strong.

"You have had a hard time," I remarked.

"Cu-rut-che an-sim-ni-da!" (Nothing of the kind!) came the quick reply. Then he began. I shall, as near as possible, just tell you what he said to me.

"When I was first taken away, I said, 'Now if God wasn't going to use you there, he wouldn't let you go. Pray that a door may be opened for you to preach the Gospel.' So I prayed. I prayed that I might be placed with non-Christians. There were twelve of us in one room, and I was the only Christian. Before I left, I had led the other eleven to Christ and had read and explained the Gospel from Matthew right on through to Revelation, to them three times. They came the good way of genuine repentance and accepted God by faith. The only two things that really were a hardship, was the fact that my wife was not there with me, and that I didn't have some more non-Christians to lead to Christ. A hard time! Why it was just a steady revival all the time."

He was there a little over two months. Eleven souls in one prison room in two months!

A SPLENDID MEETING AT RICHTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On Wednesday night, July 21, we closed a week's meeting which, in many respects, was one of the best I have ever attended. The preaching was done by Rev. John Tillerry Lewis, of Charleston, Miss., and to say it was well done but expresses it very mildly indeed. Brother Lewis is a true man of God and it is an inspiration to any one to be in his presence as well as to listen to his preaching, which is thoroughly scriptural and convincing.

The attendance upon the services was unusually good, even the morning services held at 8:30. All the business houses closed up and the merchants and clerks attended these services, and expressed themselves as being greatly benefited by them. Two special children's services were very helpful indeed, and on Sunday afternoon a very inspiring service for men was held. This was the best men's service I have attended at any time. On Saturday evening a special service for the women and girls was held and was quite an inspiration to all who attended.

The visible results of these meetings may be summarized as follows: The spiritual life of the church-membership was quickened, and the general religious atmosphere of the community was wonderfully improved.

On Sunday following the meeting, it was my pleasure and privilege to receive a class of new members into the church, eleven in number, which included a father and mother and their child, a little boy; also a mother and her two children, a boy and girl.

One of the most beautiful and inspiring features of the meeting was the most helpful and cordial co-operation of Rev. J. L. Low, pastor of the Baptist church, who was a regular attendant until called away to a meeting of his own. We also received very helpful services from the membership of the Baptist church.

The people of Richton, regardless of their denominational affiliation, will ever be glad that Brother Lewis came to our town and will always give him a most cordial welcome at any time in the future should he come our way again. To any pastor who desires first-class help in revival meetings, no mistake will be made if the services of Rev. John Tillerry Lewis are secured. He is a safe man and his preaching is of that type which, under the Spirit of God, will convince the judgment, quicken the conscience, strengthen the faith, brighten the hopes, and move the will of the people.

We give God all the praise for the success of our meetings and look forward to the future with stronger faith and brighter hope and expectation of final victory in the name of our Christ.

Fraternally,

F. B. ORMOND, Pastor.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

FOOLISH SELF-CONFIDENCE.

We may know what we want, but we do not know that what we want is best for us. If all the requests of a child should be granted, the chances are that its life would be almost irreparably ruined before it reached maturity. The knowledge of the parents is necessary to direct properly and restrain the often impatient desires of the little one whom they love with all their hearts. So it is with us and God. We can have such foolish self-confidence in our own judgments as to imagine that we can make no mistakes; we need always to remember that there is One wiser than we are, better than we are, infinite in power, upon whom we may and should rely for wisdom in all the difficult ways of life. "Not my will, but thine," is the daily motto of the Christian.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

The Governor of Louisiana is quoted as saying in a recent public address: "All the gambling hells in New Orleans put together are not worth the life, reputation, and character of one young man who is led astray and goes wrong. * * * The change in conditions is here and now. The public will no longer stand for old methods, and awakened public conscience will assert itself in strong and unmistakable terms." We believe the Governor has correctly stated the determination that has taken possession of the minds of the law-abiding citizens, not only of Louisiana, but also of the country at large. The forces that prey on society must be destroyed, and an awakened public conscience is the means by which these evils are to be discovered, outlawed, and eliminated. Preachers and teachers and all good citizens generally have the opportunity, as they are under the obligation, of crying out mightily against all forms of social evil until they are done away with by the will of the people themselves. We know we are on the right track in trying to bring public sentiment to a realization of the menace of organized vice by the development of a public conscience that will not tolerate it; let us keep on it till we have reached our journey's end

OH, FOR A FIRST-BALE CROP!

The first bale of cotton for the 1920-21 season in Georgia sold for $1.30 a pound, according to a market report. We suggest that our Louisiana and Mississippi planters try to secure some of the seed of this first-bale variety. Just think how much it would add to their annual income!

UNUSED POWER.

We read this interesting story not long ago: A European who had been seized and imprisoned by an Abyssinian king was allowed to go at large, but a heavy iron fetter on each ankle kept him from making his escape. A European traveler saw and pitied him, but dared not openly help him, as he was watched by the king's officers. He was, however, allowed to give the captive a book. The poor prisoner was disappointed. He would have been much better pleased with a gift of food or clothing. The book was laid aside and forgotten. Three years afterward in an idle moment he examined the book. There was something hard in the back of it. He pulled it out, and, behold, it was a file! It was the thing of all others he most needed. He made his way to the woods, filed off his fetters, and in a few days had reached the coast and was free from pursuit. But he could not forgive himself for having endured those three years of slavery. If he had only looked in the book before, he might have been free." This simple story has many applications easy to make. One of them is that we have at our command unused power which would ennoble our lives and set us in large places for the exercise of our gifts. We need to discover that power.

PLAYING FAVORITES.

It is evidently impossible to pass a law that will adequately provide for all contingencies, especially when astute lawyers and selfish individuals conspire to evade its plain intent. According to a news item, a United States District Court has recently decided that no limit can be placed on the number of liquor prescriptions issued by a physician. We are glad to give expression to our conviction that the great majority of physicians in this country are reputable gentlemen who would not knowingly violate the law or any of the ethical standards of their profession But there are some, especially in our great cities, who seem to take as their motto, "Get money honestly if you can, but get money." If the prohibition law has been so drawn that the physicians seem to constitute a favored class in dispensing that which is so plainly forbidden to others, we hope the physicians themselves will take such steps as will put beyond the pale of respectability those of their number who trade upon the weakness of their fellow-men. They owe it to themselves as well as to the public which they so efficiently serve.

GETTNG READY FOR COLLEGE.

The summer is rapidly pas[illegible] Fall, with the opening of our schools and colleges, will soon be here. We hope our young men and young women are getting ready to take advantage of the opportunity to secure adequate educational preparation for life—an opportunity that, for them, cannot last forever. There may be exceptional cases where it is impossible for an eager student to complete his educational training in college, but they are so rare as to be not worth much thinking. A young man can do anything he wants to do within the range of reason, of course if he is willing to pay the price; and if there is a deep-seated determination to secure a college education, a way can be found It may take a good deal of grit—but what is that to a man whose soul is stirred by a mighty purpose! Dr. Sam Steel says he managed to stay in school by cutting cross-ties at night. Cross-ties are still needed; if necessary, cut a few.

NOT NEEDED IN NEW ORLEANS.

We notice from the press dispatches that the Senate of the Georgia Legislature has passed a bill making it mandatory for all banks chartered by the State to charge exchange on out-of-town checks. The banks of Georgia must be singularly lacking in business acumen and initiative, the New Orleans banks make the charge of their own free will and accord.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Many people like to enjoy privileges without bearing responsibilities. Sometimes this is possible in matters of small moment, but never can it be done in facing the fundamental issues of life. Our endowment with free moral agency puts upon us a burden that cannot be shifted without the loss of all that makes a free man the noblest creation of God. We must think for ourselves, choose for ourselves, act for ourselves when vital issues are before us for consideration. This does not mean that we are not to avail ourselves of all the help possible, human and divine, but it means that we ourselves must give account for the deeds done by us. It is not becoming for us to assume an attitude of antagonism toward what others would have us think and do; still less is it becoming for us to accept without question all that is told us by those who profess to be teachers. If we have no reason for the faith that is in us, the best we can ever do is to drift with the strongest current that sweeps by us; the strength that enables us to overcome odds is gained by thinking out for ourselves the great problems upon the right solution of which depends our acceptance with God.

The joy of winged things upon their flight;
The joy of noonday, and the tried,
True joyousness of eventide;
The joy of labor and of mirth;
And lavish gifts divine upon our way.
Whate'er there be of sorrow
The joy of air, and sea, and earth—
The countless joys that ever flow from him
Whose vast magnificence doth dim
The lustrous light of day,
And lavish gifts upon our way.
Whate'er there be of sorrow,
I'll put off till to-morrow,
And when to-morrow comes, why then

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE SACRAMENTS

Modes of Administration.

I believe thoroughly in the positions maintained in this series of articles as to the attitude and practice of the Apostolic Church in regard to baptism. And yet I am bound to confess that, in so far as the arguments relate to the mode of baptism, I do not regard them as possessing any importance except for the purpose of relieving the minds of those who have not yet been able to rid themselves of certain legalistic and sacerdotal notions which Protestanism has inherited from Judaism and from Rome. My own opinion in regard to the importance of the mere mode of administering the rite would not be changed in the least if I should discever that immersion was universally practiced in Apostolic times, because my objection to the contention that the salvation which is offered to us by Christ Jesus and the communion of saints to which he calls us depend upon any external rite, much less upon the mode of administering it, grows out of the profound conviction that it is out of harmony with the whole trend of the Lord's teaching and with the essential nature of the religion which he established and that it is contradicted by innumerable facts which it would be worse than absurd for us to ignore.

Two Enemies of Vital Religion.

Two great enemies of vital religion are legalism and sacerdotalism. The two are so close akin that it is often impossible to distinguish them. Both of them interpret salvation as escape from the penalties of sin and as resulting from compliance with certain arbitrary requirements. Sacerdotalism adds that these prescribed rites must be performed by a duly accredited agent, generally, though not always, called a priest, the priest being a kind of sacred magician and the rite a charm through which he works in the bestowment of spiritual gifts.

This entire legalistic and sacerdotal conception I believe to be utterly contrary to the whole spirit of the Christian religion. Indeed, the first great conflict in the church grew out of an effort on the part of Judaizing teachers to impose these outworn systems upon Christianity. It was this effort which called forth that magnificent defense of Christian liberty and that profound interpretation of the doctrine of justification by faith and of Christianity as a religion of the spirit found in the Epistle to the Galatians. The evident aim of the Apostle in that wonderful letter is to show that the New Covenant in Christ Jesus opens to every man the way of direct approach to God and enables him to appropriate for his cleansing and quickening the life of God. "It is no longer I that live," he says, "but Christ that liveth in me; and that life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith, the faith which is in the Son of God who loved me and gave himself up for me." This direct approach excludes the idea of any necessary intervening rite. "The righteous shall live by faith," and faith is a spiritual act and establishes an immediate personal relation, a mystical union with Christ. Herein lies at least a part of the meaning of the atonement. It is God's plan for overcoming our doubts and our fears, our willfulness and our stubbornness and winning us to trust and love and self-surrender. We see God in Christ, in his character, in his life of self-forgetting service, in his sacrificial death, and are encouraged to renounce our sins and our doubts and, like Thomas, to cry out with rapturous faith and adoring love, "My Lord and my God!" It is thus that we receive eternal life.

This direct union with God and the blessings that come of it are conditioned upon no external rite, and such rites as are prescribed in the New Testament are designed simply to help us to realize more clearly the meaning of the things for which the incarnation stands and so to maintain that vital union with Christ by which we live. They are valuable, therefore, just in proportion as they accomplish this purpose and the proper modes of administration for each individual are those which he finds most suggestive and helpful. In speaking of the Lord's Supper I showed that the manner of receiving it which was most helpful to one person might not be so to another, and that, because of change in social customs, the manner of receiving it which was common in the Apostolic Church would bo awkward and inconvenient for the church of the twentieth century. The same general facts hold good in regard to the mode of baptism. The right mode for any particular person is that which makes the strongest appeal to him and awakens in his consciousness the most vivid realization of the truths for which the ordinance stands. This means, of course, that the mode which was best for the people who lived in Palestine nineteen hundred years ago may not be so for those who live in America to-day and whose surroundings, modes of dress and general manner of life are radically different.

I have no quarrel with the man who finds a more vital spiritual appeal in immersion than in sprinkling or pouring and I am glad that our church provides that he shall receive the rite in the way that he finds most satisfying. But when such a person insists as a condition of fellowship with me that I shall adopt the mode which he finds most significant to him instead of that which I find most significant to me, then I feel in duty bound to take issue with him. For such a position not only contravenes the whole purpose for which the sacraments were ordained, but also the fundamental spirit of the Christian religion. It amounts to a denial of the doctrine of direct access to God through faith in Christ Jesus and a return to that bondage to external ordinances from which St. Paul sought to deliver us. For nothing is gained so far as principle is concerned by substituting immersion for circumcission as a condition of salvation and Christian fellowship.

An Appeal to Life.

No interpretation of the sacraments can stand which contradicts the facts of human experience. Any theory in regard to their meaning which cannot meet this test must be wrong. And the theory that makes baptism in some particular manner essential cannot meet it. The test of character offered by Jesus is, "By their fruits ye shall know them." And the simple undeniable fact is that, judging by this test, we are bound to conclude that there are millions of saved people who have never been immersed. They are devout, they are filled with love for God and man, they are Christ-like in character and for Christ's sake they are laying down their lives daily on the altar of service. To refuse to recognize such people as Christians is simply to trifle with words.

To affirm that the devoted men and women of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational Churches who in Christ's name have spent their lives in ministering to the physical and spiritual needs of the outcast and sinful and wretched in city slums and in far-away lands of pagan darkness are not real members of the body of Christ, is equivalent to maintaining that fellowship with Christ is not necessary to saintliness and to the highest attainments in character. And worse still, the whole tendency of such a position is to divert attention from the great central aim of Christianity, the making of Christlike men and women, and to fix it upon certain external ordinances which are simply designed to help in the accomplishment of this aim.

In Conclusion.

1. While Methodists are steadfastly to refuse to surrender their freedom in Christ Jesus from the bondage of external rites, it is their bounden duty as well as their high privilege to seek to live in peace and fellowship with their fellow Christians even though they may still remain under the spell of the immemorial influence of legalism and sacerdotalism. That this influence still persists throughout so large a part of the Christian world is exceedingly unfortunate, since, as has already been pointed out, it tends to divert the attention of men and women from the things that are vital and fundamental and fix it upon those that are merely incidental. There are millions of people who know nothing of the deep spiritual meanings of Christianity and who yet regard themselves as members of the body of Christ because they believe that they have received certain external rites at the hands of divinely accredited agents and in divinely prescribed ways.

This does not mean, however, that many of those who believe in the magical efficacy of rites and in the essential importance of certain modes of administering them are not true followers of Christ. Applying the test of life to which we have already referred, we are bound to conclude that there are multitudes even in those communions that go to the farthest extremes in ceremonialism and sacerdotalism who know Christ. They are like him in spirit, and there is no arguing against that. Therefore, we say to them as Jehu said to Jehonadab: "If thy heart is right as my heart is with thy heart, give me thy hand." And we seek to live in godly fellowship with them and to cooperate with them in building the Kingdom of God.

2. It is beyond dispute that the position of Methodism in regard to matters of rite and dogma often puts it at a distinct disadvantage in the mere matter of making proselytes. There are very many people who want a shibboleth which they must pronounce, or a set of cut and dried formulae which they must accept or a number of designated external acts which they must perform in order that they may become Christians. It is easy to pronounce a shibboleth or to accept a formula or to go through a routine of performances. And to make religion consist in such things gives it an appearance of definiteness and concreteness that appeals to the prosaic and unspiritual. But when you tell such people that Christianity is a great spiritual entity and not a collection of formulae, that it calls us to incorporate into our lives and express in our conduct certain great spiritual principles and not simply to observe a few ordinances and obey a few rules, and that they must enter the doorway which leads into the Kingdom of light and life and freedom, not by pronouncing a magical shibboleth or submitting to a magical rite, but by renouncing their sin, joining themselves to God in personal friendship through faith in Christ and laying down their lives on the altar of sacrificial service, they reply with the disciples of old, "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?"

Discovering this disadvantage our people sometimes attempt to overcome it by seeking to invent shibboleths for Methodism. But the effort is unavailing. It is contrary to the whole genius and spirit of Methodism as well as to its historic record. The wise plan for us is to stand by our own record and hold fast to the principles by which we have been guided from the beginning. And whatever may be our losses in membership as the result of such a course, they will be more than offset by the fact that we are privileged to hold a conspicuous and influential place among those who stand for that profound spiritual interpretation of Christianity which St. Paul so ardently defended. This is our providential mission, and our real success as a saving agency in the world will be in direct proportion to our fidelity to it.

3. The fact that we emphasize the spirit rather than the letter, the internal life rather than external rites, and that we proclaim the possibility of the direct access of every man to God through Christ and salvation for every man through faith alone, salvation not only in the negative sense of deliverance from the dominion of sin, but also in the positive sense of personal holiness and perfect love, does not mean that we do not need the help that is offered to us in the sacraments. The best and strongest of us still have our limitations and must live out our lives and work out our salvation in a world that is full of temptation. We need all the helps we can get to enable us to keep the faith and fight the good fight until the day of final triumph. It is therefore both our privilege and our duty reverently and gratefully to avail ourselves of whatever means of grace are offered us.

4. It will be of no avail for us to stand as the champions of the religion of the spirit if our lives are not in accord with our platform. And it is not a fit platform for sectarian narrowness, Pharisaic self-righteousness or Sadducean worldliness. I should like to see John Wesley's sermon on "The Catholic Spirit" printed in pamphlet form that all Methodists might study it. In it are set forth the vital principles upon which Methodism is founded and the spirit by which it ought to be pervaded. The way to make these principles real and vital to others is to incorporate them in our lives and express them in our conduct. "If we live by the Spirit, by the Spirit also let us walk. Let us not become vainglorious, provoking one another, envying one another." "For the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness self-control."

A SUPERANNUATE RUNNING AROUND.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Whew! Isn't it hot? It is near the 100 mark to-day. But the fine breeze tempers the heat. It is all good, the heat kills the boll weevil, and the breeze makes it possible for an old man like me to live. Good! Let the sun keep on flooding the earth with its hot rays; and let the breezes continue to fan us into comfort and restfulness. This is a mighty good world to live in. I am in no great hurry to leave it.

I am going to stop "running around" so much. It is getting next to me. There is such a thing as overdoing something that you enjoy. My wife has been giving me a lot of good advice lately. She tells me that old age has some strict limitations, and that I should be very careful. Whenever a man's wife calls him "old," he will do well to look for the danger signals.

During all my life as pastor and presiding elder I have stayed mighty close to my work. I never allowed anything to call me away from my people. This year has brought to me an unusual experience of freedom. I have been at liberty to go and come at pleasure. I have been very happy in the use of my freedom. Many times I have looked over the Advocate to see when and where district conferences would be held, with real desire to attend and enjoy them. But my own work has almost always been so compelling that I could not go. This year I was free. I went to three, and greatly enjoyed all of them. I missed my own (Brookhaven) conference, for the reason that I was very busy, playing presiding elder in Morse's stead. I was sorry to miss it, as it was held at Magnolia, when I was pastor 32 years ago. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Gray, my old district chum, invited me to bring my wife and spend the time at the parsonage. I enjoyed the invitation, and wife and I would have enjoyed every hour of the stay in that happy home. We will make the visit when it gets cooler.

Morse and Jno. R. Jones urgently invited me to attend their conferences. The other presiding elders never invited me. I am not at all sensitive, so my feelings were not hurt. I knew that they were anxious for me to come, but they were too busy to write me an invitation. Presiding elders are mighty busy men. Poor fellows! I am sorry for them. It was a burdensome office when I was in it. Since then the burdens have greatly increased. They are now required to direct and "boss over" every drive that is ordered. I am glad I am not one of them. If I were a rich man, I would buy every P. E. in our Conference the finest typewriter to be had, and hire an expert stenographer and typist for him. If the church continues to increase these burdens, the next General Confereuce will have to provide a "Junior" for the chief. I serve notice now that I am going to apply for the place—I am "in training" now, under Morse.

I am sorry I couln't be at Jones' conference at Vicksburg. It came at the wrong time for me. I love Jones and I love his preachers. It would have done me good to be with them. Since I have been put on the "honor roll," as old and worn-out, my love for preachers has become an obsession. I love to hear them sing and pray and preach. My heart grows warm, and I feel like patting them on the back, saying, "Go it, boys, that is the way I used to do, but I am too old now."

I attended the Jackson District Conference at D'Lo. It was a great occasion. There was not a dull hour in all the session. The spirit of the body was exceptionally good. To praise Morse's presidency would be a work of superogation. Nobody needs to be told about it. It was thoroughly all right. The sermons and speeches I heard were first-class. D'Lo's hospitality would be hard to beat. The music, under direction of Prof. Hamilton, of Millsaps College, and Mrs. H. F. Tolle, was the best I have ever heard on any such occasion. I spent two days at D'Lo, and was treated like a prince. They were all my friends, and I enjoyed to the fullest their gracious treatment of me—Yeager, Campbell, Strait, Foreman, King, Lane, Johnson and Evans—all fine fellows—were with me in district work when I was a presiding elder. I love every one of them, and they love me. By unanimous vote of the conference I was asked to address them. What do you think of that Henry? My principal talk of late has been against Woman's Suffrage and Unification. There were too many women in the crowd to talk against the Suffrage question, and I knew Morse didn't want me to discuss a question that was at that time before the General Conference at Des Moines; so I just kept a firm grip on myself, and steered clear of all dangerous ground. You'll have to ask Morse what I talked about; I don't remember.

I spent the morning hours of the closing session at the Hattiesburg Conference. Everybody was happy. W. B. Jones is a practiced hand in holding the reins at a district conference. Eight times has he performed in this capacity. As a presiding officer he is always quiet, painstaking and efficient. His men love him, and expressed themselves in suitable resolutions that sounded good to me. I was sorry that I couldn't get there sooner, and see more of the doings of the conference. What I saw and heard was mighty fine. I didn't have time to mingle [illegible] Jones was mighty nice [illegible] called on me for a spe[illegible] a speech. Jones said it w[illegible] don't know about that, but I [illegible] through with my speech we [illegible] a grand dinner in a room adj[illegible] Jones said the dinner w[illegible] If Jones was right, I know th[illegible] the dinner was superlatively good.

John N. Moore [illegible] I have always loved Moore. He [illegible] fellow. It is a bit [illegible] man. I have worked [illegible] been an unlovable man. [illegible] why some men I [illegible] loving-Moore, I [illegible] cess as a presiding elder. [illegible] him direct and control the [illegible] Besides, I wanted to let Moore [illegible] not mad at him for [illegible] will invite me next time. The [illegible] held at Walnut Grove, Leake County. It is a village about 22 miles [illegible] and near the village are [illegible] and prosperous citizens. [illegible] spirit. There is no [illegible] never discovered any [illegible] They are pure and [illegible] Good for them! If I were not [illegible] Moore to appoint me to Walnut Grove [illegible] I fell in love with everything [illegible] Tuscalometa swamp. It [illegible] saw or heard of in my life for [illegible] It has been told on Bishop [illegible] several years ago, that when he [illegible] Tuscalometa and recrossed it on his return, on reaching the first hill lifted his hat and said, "Thank God! I'll never cross it again until I [illegible] to meet the Judgment on the other side." I am going to take a trip to Walnut Grove when they get a railroad through that [illegible]. A funny incident transpired in connection with the transportation of four alien divines from the railroad point to Walnut Grove. To carry out Emory University, Millsaps College, the Orphanage Home and the Hospital was a pot-pourri undertaking. They procured at Forest a motor truck and began the "hegira." About half way out the truck bucked on the job. Ask Rev. R. Selby to tell you all about it.

The district conference was [illegible] good. The preachers were all hopeful and happy. The delegates, both women and [illegible] were present in large numbers, and they were full of enthusiasm and passionate zeal. I am convinced that more of our conferences ought to be held in country communities.

The entertainment was royal. Every door was wide-open. Dinner and supper were served on the grounds. It seemed to me that the [illegible] community had never heard any [illegible] "Conservation of food." If so, they [illegible] poor heed to what they heard. The [illegible] groaned under their burdens. I was [illegible] occupied with the chicken pies. I am sure I [illegible] so many in five years as I saw there [illegible] I tried to eat enough to satisfy the [illegible] time. There is no use to try to [illegible]. It cannot be worked. In [illegible] writing this, my mouth [illegible] pie.

Moore's work was [illegible] to make good in his high office [illegible]

John Chambers [illegible] Sunday school interests. He [illegible] instruction. The helpers were at [illegible] John C. Chambers is the right man for that important work. Every sermon and speech I [illegible] good. One thing I noticed was that the women in that conference took an [illegible] and aggressive part in the work of the conference. Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Hunter made very effective speeches. Hurrah for the women!

I was mighty glad to renew [illegible] with Galloway, Roberts, Pilcher, [illegible] Black, II. They are fine fellows and true. They were in my district years ago.

These district conferences were served, in secretaries, by S. F. Harkey, C. E. Downer, and J. A. Smith. Their work was done in fine style. They are real and efficient secretaries. It would be hard to find better.

Brookhaven, Miss.

WHERE IS METHODISM DRIFTING?

Reading the editorial comment in the Advocate of July 22, I cannot refrain from writing a few thoughts.

The article states that the prayer meeting is no longer the spiritual thermometer of the church. Let us look at a prayer meeting to-day. Out of a membership of several hundred you will count less than a dozen at prayer meeting. Is the Sunday school superintendent there? Are the stewards of the church there? An ordained minister filling some office in the church other than pastor—will he be found there? Sad to say, no. Then the church wonders why there are no young men knocking at the door of the Methodist Church for admission into the ministry. Some claim educated young men are barred from entering the ministry on account of the small salary. Is it possible a man truly called of God to preach would weigh the subject of how much money he would get out of it? What does our Lord say? "Every one that hath forsaken houses or lands for my name's sake shall receive an hundred fold and shall inherit everlasting life." Mat. 19:29.

Does the Methodist Church to-day hold real genuine revivals? It has been many a long day since the writer attended a protracted meeting in the Methodist Church where the sinner was called to the altar for prayer. If it is out of style for the sinner to get down on his knees at the altar, you cannot wonder that it is out of style for men to enter the ministry because they do not see as much money in it as they see in secular pursuits.

One of the rules of the Methodist Church prohibits "Taking such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus." I wonder how much the picture show of to-day is used in the name of the Lord Jesus? I listened once to a soul-stirring sermon from an ordained minister in which he stated the bars into God's church were let down too low—that the sinner in the pew could not see any difference between the church and the world, and there was no attraction in the church for the sin-sick soul. That same minister could be seen nearly every night at the picture show! Brother pastor, is the sin-sick soul being attracted to God by your picture show life? In time past the Methodist Church preached very strongly against theaters—will you tell me the difference between the theater and the picture show?

Look at the Sunday school a moment. How much real Bible are the young people learning to-day? We are stressing the social feature of the organized class. This writer was visiting in a small town and one night the "organized" Sunday school class was entertained at a home in the country. The town paper reported the affair, stating "after dancing" refreshments were served. There is something seriously wrong with the Methodist Church. Yes, the prayer meeting IS STILL the spiritual thermometer of the church, and shows the spiritual condition to-day at a VERY LOW EBB.

It behooves the church to get down on their knees in sack cloth and ashes and ask God to lead us back from whence we have fallen, that sinners may be converted to God.

SOUTH AMERICA: THE UNDEVELOPED CONTINENT.

Central Chile and a Wonderful Farm.

From Iquique our ship, the Nika, of the Hodge Ship Company, went direct to Valparaiso, and arriving on Good Friday found that according to custom no work would be done until Monday. As this insured a stay of a week in that harbor, I felt safe in making a long inland trip.

Going by a fine double-track railway up a fertile and verdant valley and through six tunnels and over the Cumbre at an elevation of 3000 feet, we came out into the central valley of Chile at the north end of which is the capital, Santiago, a city of some 400,000. It is on a level plain through which runs the Mapocho River between high walls, hills to the north, coastal mountains west, the snow-capped Andes east, and the open valley south. In its center is Santa Lucia, a four-hundred foot hill covering about six blocks, up which paths and a driveway run, on which are trees, vines, and statuary, and from which may be had a fine view of the city and country for a vast radius. Santiago is the national railroad center and has many small industries, and is the distributing point for all central Chile. Its homes are pretty and comfortable, its banks and business houses spacious, its Capitol and other public edifices imposing and ornate, and its streets level and paved. It has street cars with an upper deck in which the fare is half of that for the lower division. The conductors are plainly dressed matrons who are efficient and attend strictly to their business, auditors jumping on from time to time to collect the tickets. Automobiles abound and must be watched as in spite of ubiquitous policemen the traffic regulations are lax. There is an immense and beautifully improved park, the gift of Chile's wealthiest woman, and then the broad, shaded Alemeda and many pretty plazas, and a large and artistically arranged cemetery of many monuments and mausoleums. The National University with its thousands of students is scattered through the city so that it is hard to discover, but a wonderfully well kept experiment farm lies against the city for the use of the Agricultural School. The Normal Department is said to be popular and efficient. Many students are women and are reputed to be among the best. No provision is made for discipline or moral welfare, but a Y. M. C. A. secretary is inaugurating social and athletic activities, and the Methodists have opened a hall where women may find helpful surroundings. The Methodist Episcopal Church has Santiago College with good property, a fine faculty, and 320 students. Then the Presbyterians and the Methodists maintain together a Theological School and a Book Depository, and unite in publishing an excellent paper, while the Protestants of many denominations support a union church, of which a Canadian Presbyterian is the pastor. The leading secular daily, El Mercurio, with a Valparaiso edition, is a strong and influential paper.

In order to see the agricultural country, we made a trip to Angol about 300 miles southwest of Santiago, the extreme southern point of our journey. The railway runs through the middle of a great valley with low mountains on the west and the snowy Andes east from which the rivers flow across the valley into the ocean. These rivers, fed by rain in the winter and by melting snow in summer, supply abundance of water for irrigation, and the ditches are visible everywhere. Weeping willows and Lombardy poplars grow in double rows along the main ditches, and with green pastures, thick hedges, and tilled fields present a rich landscape. Quince thickets, great vineyards, small orchards, patches of melons, beans and tobacco, and rich pastures filled with cattle, horses and sheep all testify silently to the agricultural value of the land. Luscious fruits are offered in abundance at every station by women who wear numbered license buttons. Walls of stone and sun-dried brick separate the fields. The houses are of sun-dried brick and have red tiled roofs. Circular corrals of stone for protecting sheep are occasionally seen. Before Angol is reached the Bio-Bio River, very wide and shallow, is crossed, and then a valley almost equal to the Shenandoah in beauty and fertility appears.

At Angol we were conveyed in a coach to the finest farm in Chile, a place of 1000 acres improved almost to perfection by Senor Bunster, son of an English sailor, which last year was purchased for $400,000 by the Methodist Episcopal Church to be used as a school farm for the poor boys and girls of Chile. The superintendent, Dr. U. G. Leazenby, of Indiana, received and dined us and exibited the farm. It lies between two small deep-channeled rivers, and the soil is deep and amazingly rich. A great irrigation ditch furnishes abundant water for field and mill and bathhouse. The big feature is the nursery with hundreds of thousands of thrifty trees and shrubs of every variety from the ends of the earth. A Japanese gardener, living in a house of his own construction, tends a wonderful flower garden. The barns are filled with cases of apples ready for the market and with corn and beans and potatoes of fine quality. In the fields are immense cabbages and cauliflower and egg-plant, and big rows of strawberries still bearing after four months of constant production. Beans are being tramped out and the vines baled. Corn is being husked and scattered out to dry, as it does not mature on the stock before the winter rains begin. Oxen with great carts are drawing hay and fruits from the fields, and a few horse teams are plowing the mellow soil- the only horses plowing in Chile, as the natives prefer oxen because they are cheap, strong, easily kept, and at last can be killed for beef. On the hills wheat is grown to perfection without irrigation, as the winter rains are sufficient. Oranges flourish, and the eucalyptus and red-wood, since the climate is that of southern California, and the conformation of the hills protects from cold winds. Never on one farm, private or state, have I seen such variety and richness of vegetation. It cost the Methodist Church only $100 an acre including machinery and crops, and then one-fourth of the price was donated by the owner, and such land would sell for ten times that amount in California. It has been making a net profit of $40,000 a year, and is capable of producing far more when fully improved and worked to its limit. About 150 workmen are employed, and they are better paid and treated than such labor usually is in Chile. Here about 250 boys and girls may begin without training or money and work their way through to an ordinary practical education. It is exactly what the poor of Chile need, because no one cares for them or encourages them. It is the biggest denominational school-farm in the world, and promises large success. It will be for the poor of Chile, mostly Indians, what Tuskegee has been to the negroes of the South.

The trip to this marvelous farm took us to a point almost as far south of the equator as St. Louis is north. We would fain have gone further to see the forests and pastures and lakes of the South, but time forbade. On this trip I saw my first active volcano, Mt. Chillan, far to the east, with its puffs of smoke issuing every five or ten minutes. When it is smoking earthquakes are expected, and it is reported that one exhibited itself in Santiago while we were there, but being strangers we did not recognize it. While we were not able to reach Argentina, we probably saw peaks on the boundary and clouds floating over that country.

Returning to Valparaiso, we had time to see its places of note, and were particularly interested in its well-equipped Naval Academy beautifully located on a bluff far above the bay. The school has all modern conveniences and necessary appliances, and the students, who were seen at play, seem to be a fine body of youth. No nation would need to blush for such a school. Chile has a strong navy for a country with no more population than that of Missouri. There are in Valparaiso pretty plazas and good streets. The residence section, which lies on the hills, is reached by ascensors with cars drawn by steel cables on inclined planes. There are roads and sidewalks, but as the drives and walks are steep and circuitous and the fare on the ascensors is only ten centavos, equivalent to two-and-a-half American cents, most of the people prefer to use the ascensor. There is a Y. M. C. A. with nice rooms, an American secretary with native helpers, and 500 members. The city government has given them special privileges on the parks for athletics. A Y. W. C. A. secretary is on the ground and is preparing for organized work. The Pesbyterians have one large school and several small ones conveniently located for elementary work. They are all well patronized and expect to enlarge. The city forms an amphitheatre in a half-circle around the big bay, on the shore of which are many spacious warehouses and business houses. Valparaiso has a population of some 200,000 and is not only the great port of Chile but of the West Coast of South America. It has a deep and ample harbor, but as it lies open to the terrible north winds, it is dangerous at all times and particularly in the Southern winter. Several hulks are seen on the beach and the bottom is said to be paved with wrecks.

It is a very busy city, and the representatives of all nations may be found there. The trade of our country is desired and our ships are welcomed and now are often seen, where a few years ago they were rare. Chile is progressive and invites every effort to promote friendly relations with the United States In spite of past misunderstandings and the pro-German influence which for a time prevailed because of German capital and leadership In the army While there are many difficulties in the way of American commerce, they may be overcome. One of the most important steps that could be taken would be to provide for more instruction about South America in our schools, especially in our colleges and universities. Our interests and those of the Western republics are so interlocked that we must cultivate every opportunity to cement them with friendship. As Chile is the most progressive country on the West Coast, and the West Coast is nearer to the United States than it is to Europe, it is our duty to know Chile and enable Chile to know us.

STEWARDSHIP AND THE MINISTRY.

By Ralph S. Cushman.

Nine hundred and thirty-seven dollars is the average annual salary of the American minister. The college-trained preacher with $937 a year receives a smaller average earning than the uneducated worker in eight leading industries. For the average annual wages of the metal worker are calculated at $1,289; that of the cotton worker at $989.20; wool worker, $967.72; silk worker, $1,179.88; boots and shoes, $1,346.80; rubber, $1,526.20; chemical, $1,326.40; paper, $1,464.80.

Though ministers, as a rule, have received but small increase in pay, the workers in these Industries have been given, from September, 1914, to March, 1919, the following percentage of increase: Metal, 88 per cent; cotton, 71 per cent; wool, 62 per cent; paper, 76 per cent; rubber, 110 per cent; chemical, 104 per cent.

The income tax doesn't bother many preachers. Some have inherited money, and some have married rich wives, but of 170,000 ministers in the United States only 1,671, less than one per cent of the total number, paid a tax on incomes over $3,000 in 1918. It was found that 438 ministers had incomes of from $3,000 to $4,000; 104 enjoyed incomes of from $4,000 to $5,000; and 275 incomes of from $5,000 to $6,000; 162 possessed incomes of from $6,000 to $7,000, while 392 ministers received more than $7,000.

The Preacher in the Poorhouse.

These annual incomes did not necesarily mean only salaries. They represented a total of both private earnings and salaries.

No wonder, in these days of the high cost of living, that the ministers feel they are facing a serious problem! No wonder some of them have had to take jobs to make a living.

One preacher reports that he has taken to chicken raising as a side issue, and that doing the government poultry work for the State, he had made within ten weeks as much money as his church had paid him for the entire year. Chicken raising, he wrote, offered the solution to a problem which had been worrying him for a long time. On the small amount of money he was paid as a minister he had not been able to lay aside practically anything for old age. By learning poultry raising, when he is forced to retire, he feels that he will not be left without a money-making occupation.

The survey has shown that in one State there is a minister in every poorhouse in each county.

The objection that it is "good" for the preacher to talk or think about money has been met by a layman of the South who tells of an attempt to raise the salary of a certain pastor. This minister had been preaching fine sermons and the disgracefully low salary he received for doing so weighed heavily on the layman's conscience. He spoke of the situation to a fellow member who replied.

"That's all right. His sermons do well enough, but a pastor ought to be saving souls instead of thinking of money."

At this point the first man boiled over.

"A parson can't get souls," he retorted, "and if he could, it would take a great many of the size of some folks' souls to satisfy him."

Recently a letter was received from a preacher who stated that his church gave him $1,200 a year and the use of a parsonage. On this sum he was supporting a wife, four children, a mother-in-law, and an old lady who was one of his parishioners, and who, because of circumstances, had no one else to whom to turn. Two of the Boy Scouts In the church earned more each week than the minister did, all sources of income added together.

"The Lord will provide" seemed to be the theory on which the family lived. Once $200 in debt, with no possible relief in sight an understanding parishioner sent a check for $500. Again the minister could not afford to pay for fuel, so had been getting it from a church trustee.

Finally the trustee refused the minister credit and he had to purchase his coal in small amounts from another fuel dealer. No way out of the difficulty appeared clear until, as though in answer to prayer, the very trustee who had refused the minister credit sent him a personal check for $50.

Not On a Business Basis.

Failure to put the church on a business basis is one of the chief causes of meager ministerial pay. Not only does the church board refuse its pastor a salary enough to meet necessary living expenses, but as a rule, it takes into no consideration the living expenses every preacher must meet.

More than one minister has been obliged to pay church printing bills from his own pocket. The pastoral letter is believed to be one of the most effective means of reaching the member long absent from service Stationery, postage, printing—all of it comes out of the minister's lean pocketbook. To visit a country parishioner, the pastor is usually obliged to pay his own transportation.

The biblical interpretation of stewardship is that all that men possess belongs to God the earth and the fullness thereof. Men are his stewards and the acknowledgment of the fundamental principles of stewardship by all professed Christians is essential to the success of any plan adopted by the church. Moreover, stewardship offers the Christian a simple, practical method of proving his sincerity and of living the life of faith. Stewardship seeks, first, to Christianize the interpretation of money and the whole attitude of men and women everywhere toward wages and possessions; second, to inspire regular and adequate support, both spiritual and financial for the gigantic task of winning the world for Christ.

Stewardship means that God has entrusted man with the responsibility of money and life; that He is the Senior Partner in a great enterprise which is more than personal gain, an enterprise which is nothing less than the reconstruction of the world.

Understanding and accepting the title as the acknowledgment of God's ownership, has taken the place of the almost universal protests of a few months ago. The old history of church finances going on the rocks, of silly and ironical ways of carrying on the Lord's work, of haphazard means of providing for benevolences, has at last had its legitimate effect and brought Christian people to their senses. Strawberry festivals and rummage sales have had their day in church finance After a "tithing fund" is formed, troubles are found to be practically eliminated.

The Trend Away

"We are wondering about the trend away from the pastorate," writes a Massachusetts minister "But the cause is easily discovered. Thousands of men are working for the same old salary that had formerly obtained food, fuel and clothing now doubled in price. Our laymen have had increases ranging from 30 per cent to 100 per cent during the past four years, but the ministers, who are the key men, are compelled to meet the abnormal increases in the cost of living without one cent of additional salary. If our churches are not willing to treat their minister like other workers and give them a salary commensurate with their needs, we must expect to lose men who cannot support their families on the old salary. I have not been able to understand why we should discriminate against a man because he is a minister. The indifference of the average church to the financial needs of the pastor is an awful reflection upon Christianity."—In The Christian Advocate (New York).

NOTICE.

To the Methodists and Friends of the Methodist Church, at Covington, La., Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South.

The Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with headquarters at Louisville, Kentucky, hereby gives special permission to Rev. A. F. Vaughan, pastor of the Methodist church at Covington, Louisiana, to solicit donations or subscriptions for the purpose of rebuilding the Methodist church at that place, recently lost by fire.

It is clearly understood that this solicitation shall not extend beyond the borders of the Louisiana Conference, thereby avoiding confusion.

This letter is issued at the request of the presiding elder, Rev. J. G. Snelling.

Yours fraternally,

WILL WE FAIL HIM?

How bitterly must Peter, James and John have reproached themselves for sleeping during the time that Jesus suffered the agony in Gethsemane! What an honor it was, for them, to be chosen thus to watch with Him; how could they possibly have failed Him, we think? And yet, does He not say to us as He did to Peter: "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" when we fail to meet with Him at the prayer meeting, the church service or the Sabbath school.

If the disciples had stayed awake and stayed with Him, they might have been strengthened so that they would not have forsaken Him and fled. As we ponder on how they must have suffered on account of their failure, may it teach us to be more faithful. We must remember that they were worn out with sorrow and terror, so that there was some excuse for them, but we stay away for very trivial causes. A visitor calls and detains us, or we have a pressing invitation elsewhere, or maybe we are just tired out and feel sick, or the weather prevents.

Many are the excuses that keep us away, but the Savior is always there; and if our conscience is not deadened, we too may hear His voice saying sorrowfully: "Could'st not thou watch one hour?"

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Do you like ice cream, Carley? Then you should have been with me last week at Horn Lake, up in DeSoto County, Mississippi! Having some time to spare after attending a district conference near Memphis, I asked Brother Guerry if I might preach a week in the old church at Hines Chapel, where I was licensed to preach fifty-three years ago. He consented, and I do not remmeher when I have enjoyed a week more than this one spent amid the scenes of my hoyhood. It is the same old church, and the same clever people. Of course the generation of grown people whom I knew in my youth are all gone, and the children of that time all have what the Pelican P. E.'s say I have, the incurable disease of almanac-itis; but after a day or two things began to grow familiar. The roads have been graded down, and the woods cleared up, and many changes have been made; but I still can locate many memorable sites. I passed where the rally took place and a company of soldiers was raised; there was the panic at the station when the Yankees captured Memphis; yonder is the spot where the schoolhouse stood when the Yankees raided us, and scared us half to death; there I ran a hundred Yankees with a switch; yonder I outran a hundred of them and got away on my fleet horse, a feat I'll warrant Tom Holloman never performed! Right along that road I had a memorable ride with a lady—twenty miles in a headlong gallop on a hare-back horse! Carley, that makes an impression on a fellow. I had to sit on pillows for two weeks. But I rode with Miss Rie, and the Yankees didn't get us. That was enough! The house still stands where I went to school, sleeping on a straw pallet, cooking my rations under a tree, and keeping myself at school by cutting cross-ties in the woods at night.

I greatly enjoyed the hospitality of those good people, and am glad to see that the fine fraternal fellowship that existed between the Presbyterians and the Methodists when I was a boy in that community, still characterizes the people. I was also happy to find that a relative, Mrs. May Counts, keeps up the Steel tradition of useful service in that neighborhood. My father is buried at old Hines Chapel, and his memory is as ointment poured forth in that section. He lived his humble, but saintly life, among these kind people in such a way that everybody loved him. Miss Berry, the founder of the Berry Industrial School, over at Rome, Ga., was called "the angel of possum hollow," because of her friendship for the lowly poor around her home; and Mrs. Counts, from all that was told me of her unselfish devotion and service, might well be called "the angel of the bluff" for the same reason. I am proud to be kin to good folks. The only coat of arms I care for is a field azure, with a cross and a pair of sandals, the symbols of godly service to my fellow men.

I spoke of ice cream. Well, sir, such dinners! The woods up there are full of Marthas. I want to live, Carley, and I can't do it and eat what is set before me. I had to tell them to cut out big dinners for me, but incidentally remarked that I had to tumble to ice cream. And they served it! Sure enough ice cream, served it in big bowls, none of your little fairy sample saucers, and said there was plenty more. You must watch that fine youngster, Guerry. He's going to make a preacher if he keeps up the lick, and gets a few wrinkles on his horns. He must learn to make his laymen look after his "collections," which I exhorted them to do, and give him time to study. We can't hold our job as a church without big preachers, and we can't make big preachers out of financial agents. There is where the young preachers of my early day had an advantage over the present sprouts in the ministry. We didn't have to be everlastingly looking after collections. The business of the church has grown enormously in these recent times, and unless the laymen handle that part of the work, it will give us runts for the pulpit. I exhort all my young brethren to study oratory. A recent editorial in the Memphis Commercial Appeal emphasized its importance, and illustrated its value by the case of ex-Senator Bailey, of Texas. He was down and out politically in many ways; but the charm of his oratory is about to seat him in the Governor's chair at Austin. The pulpit is the throne of the highest eloquence on this earth, and it is a sad pity to substitute the silver trumpet of a heaven-inspired prophet with the jews-harp of a peddler of religious "economics."

If I had my way, I would put a young preacher like Brother Guerry as the assistant of a mature man for the first two or three years of his ministry, and train him under a man who had experience. I suppose we are too short of men for that; though it is funny, if we are short of men, that they turned me loose. Guerry is pure gold. Like most of our country churches, the Horn Lake circuit is working in the old ruts. One has to use care in getting a wagon out of the ruts, or there is danger of breaking the tongue. But one thing is certain, the church can't compete in an ox wagon with the auto and the airplane. I expect I shocked some of the pious saints at Hines Chapel when I told them that one of the first things I would want if I had charge of that work would he a swimming pool near the church. I never saw a finer looking class of young people than I saw at the services we held there. Boys and girls flock to a swimming pool like bees to clover blooms. It is asking, or at least expecting, too much to expect the young people of to-day to be attracted to the church that pays no attention to their recreational pleasures. I was told that Mr. Pepper has introduced a moving picture at the First Church, Memphis. This wise old scamp has bothered the devil a great deal in his day by out-doing him in providing for the young that which, while it entertains them, will also benefit them.

When I got through at old Hines Chapel, some young ladies handed me a purse of a hundred dollars "to help Mrs. Steel furnish her cottage." I told them I would suggest to Mrs. Steel to put it in something for the dining room, so that every time I sat at the table I could be reminded of the ice cream on which I had feasted. Good idea, ain't it, Carley? It is another evidence of the truth of the promise: "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."

BROTHER RAMSEY'S REJOINDER.

By Rev. J. M. Huggin.

Rev. John W. Ramsey's rejoinder is much longer than the article to which it is a reply.

I will begin this article with the statement that I am not a Calvinist. But my theology, whatever it may be called, is not the light by which interpretations of the Scriptures should be tested. I do not charge Brother Ramsey with being unfair in his interpretations, but what he says in his rejoinder about the Calvinists indicates the influence of creed. Would a man be accepted in a court of justice as a juror who had made up his mind so fully about the case? The late Pastor Russell said he never could see what good an eternal hell would do, and he could not find the doctrine of eternal punishment in the Scriptures.

Brother Ramsey is right in searching the Scriptures for himself. Every one should do this, and yet obtain all the help possible from others. Will Brother Ramsey show how, or in what respect, the dying grace theory is Calvinistic? It is logical to receive a theory, not unreasonable in itself, that reconciles known truths. Brother Ramsey asks, "Why the insistent mental and spiritual demand for satisfactory explanation?" Why the question so often asked, "Shall we know one another in Heaven," "Whom did Cain marry?" etc. As I said in my other article, revelations of God's will are not given to gratify curiosity.

Brother Ramsey indulged in some remarks on the difference between being converted and being regenerated. Does not Brother Ramsey believe that the Jews who said, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (Acts 2:37) had been converted? They had undergone a radical change. From proud persecutors of the apostles they had been changed to humble seekers of the way of life. They were certainly converted; yet, were they born of the Spirit until they followed Peter's instructions? Was not Saul of Tarsus converted when, on the road to Damascus, he asked the question, "What will thou have me to do?" (Acts 9:6); but was he born of the Spirit until three days later, when Ananias visited him? To be born of the Spirit is to be converted, but to be converted is not always to be born of the Spirit. Unless one can see the difference, and make the distinction between simple conversion and regeneration, I do not see how one can be a sound theologian.

Brother Ramsey directed me to study the second chapter of the Epistle to the Romans to learn how heathen people are saved; I have studied this chapter as closely as I am able to study it. It gives no information as to how the heathen people are saved. We learn from this chapter that heathen people have the law: "They show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another." (Romans 2:15). But does this law save them? Let St. Paul answer this question: "By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified in his sight." Paul, in speaking of both Jews and Gentiles, said, "There is none righteous, no, not one. There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way." (Romans 3: 10-12).

Is it not wonderful, if infants are born in such state as not to need regeneration except they be defiled by their own sins, that some people were not found that had escaped sin and the necessity of the new birth, and in consequence been considered righteous? "By one man's disobedience, many were made sinners." (Romans 5:19). Putting a literal construction on this question, we see why there was such universal corruption as Paul speaks of. (Romans 3:9-18). But then the theory is lugged in that regeneration does not free from depravity, or, in other words, that which fits us for the kingdom of heaven does not fit us for it. Let us see what God's Word says about the results of regeneration: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Old things are passed away, behold all things are become new." (2 Cor. 5:17).

I think I have shown by illustrations taken from the Scriptures that the word "convert" does not always mean regeneration, and that in Matt. 18:3 it does not mean regeneration, but such a change of attitude toward the gospel as to lead to a proper consideration of its claims, and also to a proper conception of one's own wicked condition. Thus he would be humbled—teachable as a little child. Every community affords examples of the necessity of such conversions in order to regeneration or entrance into the kingdom of Christ.

I heard Bishop Candler state to the Memphis Conference, in 1911, that he had been asked why Methodists were not so joyous as they had been in the past; his answer was, that the doctrine of depravity had not been preached much in recent years. He did not explain; I suppose the explanation would have been that as the doctrine of depravity was neglected or opposed, people who generally are inclined to think more highly of themselves than they ought to think, failed to see the necessity of the new birth, and so did not seek it, or have the glorious experience.

We are often troubled because even faith cannot draw Jesus' features, nor imagine how he appeared in the flesh when he went in and out among men; but we shall be satisfied. We shall see what attracted the twelve, gave Peter his boldness, drew forth John's love, excited the faith of sufferers, encouraged the timid and brought sinners to his feet. We shall see Jesus and realize what he was, and is, and ever shall be—the Son of man.—J. A. Hodge.

HOW TO FORGET.

If you were busy being kind,
Before you knew it you would find
You'd soon forget to think 'twas true
That some one was unkind to you.

If you were busy being glad,
And cheering people who were sad,
Although your heart might ache a bit,
You'd soon forget to notice it.

If you were busy being true
To what you know you ought to do,
You'd be so busy you'd forget
The blunders of the folks you've met.

If you were busy being right,
You'd find yourself too busy quite
To criticize your neighbor long,
Because he's busy being wrong.

BOB'S "WAIT A MINUTE."

"In a minute, muddy dear. Just one more spin."

Bob was kneeling on the ground near the open window, all unmindful of the peep-holes the plump knees were forcing in his stockings.

The red, white and blue stripes on the surface of the flat top kept winding themselves in and out of the center in such a fascinating way that he never tired of looking at them.

In a far-away corner of his curly head he was wondering why it was that big folks always called when a boy was having the most fun.

Another vigorous spin and his eyes danced with delight, but he kept one ear open for a second call.

His mother's first call was to Bob as the ringing of the first bell at school—only a warning that a second was to follow shortly.

He became so absorbed that he dropped himself to the ground, resting his head in his hand, was soon lost in wonder at the way the stripes in which the "Tireless Spinner" kept chasing each other over the edge, as the top slackened its speed and began to wobble.

Presently, kerflop came the evening paper against the house. It bounded back and knocked off his hat. Not until he heard the chuckle of the newspaper boy, as he passed up the street, did he understand what had happened. He looked around startled. Mother was still seated at the window, but the sewing had dropped into her lap.

Something about mother's face told him that she was not happy. He hesitated for just a moment, as he looked at his top; then tiptoed to his room to make himself clean for supper—clean even to ear-corners and finger nails. This gave him a more comfortable feeling. Then he decided to hurry downstairs and help set the table.

He found his mother still by the window. She had not stirred since he last looked at her. At the sound of his foot-steps she glanced up and cheerily suggested that there might be time for a story before supper.

"Once upon a time," she began in a low musical voice, as she returned his pat, "before our little boy had come to us—"

"Oh, yes, I know!" Bob interrupted excitedly, "that's what I like. When you went with father to Africa on the hunting trip. Whew! but I wish I'd come in time for that! May I go with you next time?"

"Very likely—if ever we go again." She squeezed him close to her and started over.

"One morning your father and I and the men we had with us had been tramping for hours; sometimes over footpaths, but more often through tangles and jungles which made our travel slow.

"We had not seen a ferocious animal for an hour—"

"No lions?" Bob's voice had in it a note of disappointment.

"Not this time, though father had shot one earlier in the day. Toward noon we halted in a quiet spot. I remember how tired I was when I dropped on a log and took off my hat to rest. I was very hungry, and looked back to see if our men were following with the lunch baskets. I discovered that they had stopped a few feet back and were standing motionless, with scared looks in their faces. Everything was so quiet that I could hear my heart beat. Suddenly your father snapped his fingers and looked steadily at me. I understood the signal. It meant danger, and to mind quickly. I dropped to the ground without a question, and with a moment's delay. I was trembling like an aspen leaf, for I had caught a glimpse of a monstrous serpent a few feet away, with half his length poised in air ready to strike at me with his deadly fangs.

"I shall never forget how frightened I was; but before I had caught my breath, I heard the bang of your father's gun, and after that a second shot, right over my head."

"But he didn't shoot you, did he?" Bob clutched his mother's arm in his eagerness to make sure that she was there and unharmed.

"No, dear; but he saved my life, for I dropped so quickly when I heard his fingers snap, that I was out of the way of the shot that had to come instantly to do any good."

Bob drew a deep breath. His face flushed. For a moment he hung his head. Then, with sudden resolution, he looked straight into his mother's eyes and gave her an extra hug. "My, but I'm glad father trained you to act quickly when you were snapped at, or where would my muddy be to-day? Guess I'll ask father to train me."—Sunday School Times.

TOTIN' THE LOAD.

"In the wilderness a man's pack is not estimated by its weight, but by the speed with which he can carry it," says Belmore Browne in Boys' Life for July. "At first glance this seems unfair, but when we study the matter we find that it insures perfect justice. Suppose that three men are starting on a hard back-packing trip into the mountains. One of them is an 'old timer,' fifty-five years of age; the next is a 'moose,' powerfully built and in his prime, and the third is a slim built lad unused to the hardships of packing. After eliminating every possible item from their outfit, they find that they have one hundred and fifty pounds to carry. The question now arises as to how the weight will be distributed. The 'moose,' looking his partners over, says, 'I'm huskier than you fellers, so I'll tote seventy pounds.' The 'old timer' looks the lad over, and says, 'I'm a tougher bird than the kid, so I'll strap my harness onto fifty pounds.' This leaves a thirty-pound pack for the lad, and, after arranging their loads, they tramp off towards the mountains. After an hour has passed the 'moose' begins to draw away from his companions. He tramps easily up hills that cause his two companions to grasp for breath. When they sink onto the moss for a hard-earned rest, he moves about eating blueberries and enjoying the scenery. After a particularly hard pull the 'old timer' says, 'We'll stop here awhile and whack up our loads.' 'How's that? I'm carryin' more than you fellers,' the 'moose' retorts. 'Why, it's this way,' the 'old timer' explains, 'the kid and me are workin' harder than you be, an' thet means that we're totin' heavier loads.'

"Wrong as it may seem, the old prospector is right: from the viewpoint of justice and efficiency the speed of a party is restricted to the speed of the weakest member, and the only way to reach the highest efficiency is to take weight from the slowest and add it to the fastest. The meat-eating Indians of the far northwest have worked out this plan to a very fine point, for they allow the old men, who know the wilderness like an open book, to go without packs so that they may be free to choose the best trails for the heavily loaded young men.

"This spirit of fair play and efficiency should be followed by every scout, for by increasing your own load you are helping some one and adding to your knowledge of weight carrying at the same time."

THE KINGDOM.

"Where is the Kingdom?" asked the pompous priest,
Weighted with lore, and spent with fast and feast,
The lowly Christ on his pretensions smiled,
And simply said, "In the heart of a little child."
—Thomas Curtis Clark.

Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

THE PREACHER'S OPPORTUNITY—THE SICK-ROOM.

The earnest preacher ordinarily has no better opportunity to perform a real act of ministry than is afforded by the sick-room. The patient himself is usually more susceptible then than at any other time to suggestions that have to do with his real welfare, and is more appreciative of tender sympathy than when well and strong. By necessity, the daily activities must be laid aside, and there is time for serious thought of life as it is, apart from the incidentals with which so many of us encumber ourselves. A preacher with a vision of eternal realities and a consciousness of a definite mission to the souls of men can, in such a time, do a work that is almost impossible under other circumstances.

It does not follow, of course, that every visit to a sick-room should be the occasion of a discourse upon the uncertainty of life, the need of preparation for death, and the supreme value of spiritual things. In fact, it may not be often that such suggestions are in order. The most helpful results are likely to follow from the general attitude of the preacher and the atmosphere he carries with him, than from any specific thing he says. The cheerful word, the manifest sympathy, the brotherly interest of one who seeks to help in a time of need will strike much deeper than any formal or conventional expression of solicitude. Men can easily remain unmoved by the mere form of godliness, but they find it hard to resist the impact of a loving heart.

Access to a whole household may often be had through the sick-room of a member of the family. Our very own are as dear as life itself to us—and we cannot be indifferent to those who really share our concern with us. Through his ministry in the sick-room, the preacher can easily become the best-loved man in the community; and the love thus gained will react in a wonderfully helpful way upon all the other work the preacher has to do.

DEATH OF REV. J. F. WYNN.

It is with great sorrow that we announce the passing of Rev. J. F. Wynn, one of the most highly honored superannuate members of the Louisiana Conference, on Wednesday, August 4, in New Orleans. We made mention last week of the fact that Brother Wynn was seriously ill at his home in Crowley, La. As a last resort, he was brought to New Orleans by his devoted son, Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church in Ruston, La., in the hope that a surgical operation would relieve his suffering and prolong his life. The operation was successfully performed, but the feeble body could not survive the additional strain put upon it for recuperation and the spirit took its flight to a land where suffering and death are no more.

We recognize our inability to pay adequate tribute to the memory of this deceased servant of God. He was admitted into full connection in the Louisiana Conference in 1859, and through all these years he served God and the church with unfailing devotion. His ministry was greatly blessed, and multitudes of good people throughout the State will revere his memory. In addition to his own work, he made a great contribution to the Methodism of Louisiana in the person of his honored son, Dr. R. H. Wynn, one of the leading members of the Louisiana Conference.

After a brief service at the undertaker's establishment, attended by all the Methodist ministers who were in the city, the body was taken to Crowley for interment on Thursday afternoon. We expect to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

CHURCH DEDICATION AT CROWLEY, LA.

Rev. R. W. Tucker, the pastor, requests us to announce that the church at Crowley will be dedicated by Bishop McMurry on the evening of August 22. All former pastors are cordially invited to be present, and the editor of the Advocate is honored with an invitation to attend this memorable service.

We congratulate Brother Tucker and his congregation on the faithful work that has made possible this dedicatory service at this time. As was recently stated in these columns, a large indebtedness has been lately liquidated, and one of the most attractive and commodious churches in the Louisiana Conference is free of all encumbrance. We greatly regret that we shall not have the privilege of being present to rejoice with the good people of Crowley over the completion of a great undertaking.

REBUILDING OUR CHURCH AT COVINGTON, LA.

In another column will be found a statement by Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, secretary of the Board of Church Extension, giving authority to Rev. A. F. Vaughan, the pastor, to solicit within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference contributions for the rebuilding of our church at Covington, La., which was recently destroyed by fire. While Methodism is numerically weak at Covington, that place is, in some respects, one of our most important appointments. We need a first-class building and equipment there, and it is to be earnestly hoped that the work of providing them can speedily be undertaken. The community itself has already responded liberally to the demands of the situation, and pastor and people are laboring zealously for the consummation of their plans. We simply want to call the attention of Louisiana Methodists to this opportunity of helping a good cause, and urge them to assist in carrying it forward in every way possible.

CONCERNING OBITUARIES.

We deem it necessary to call attention to the regulations governing the publication of obituaries. These regulations appear every week at the head of the column devoted to these tributes of respect and affection and are as follows:

"Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. This will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries."

It is much easier for the writer to condense his article to 200 words than it is for the editor to do it; however, the editor must do it unless the money for the excess accompanies the manuscript. Our friends will save the editor much unnecessary work, and themselves some disappointment and annoyance, perhaps, if they will observe these regulations.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, pastor of our church in Amite, La., recently called to see the Editor, but the Editor had left the city and missed seeing him.

Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans, has recently returned from Kentucky, where he spent the greater part of his five week's vacation.

The St. Helena Echo (La.), of recent date, notes the return of the Methodist pastor, Rev. L. E. Crooks, after an absence of some days, during which he attended Bluff Creek camp meeting.

In sending in several subscriptions to the Advocate together with his own renewal, Rev. H. A. Wood, our pastor at Quitman, Miss., reports that the charge under his care is in good condition.

A good meeting has recently been held at Jacob's chapel, Dumas charge, North Mississippi Conference, of which Rev. M. L. Ward is pastor. He was assisted in the meeting by Rev. R. T. Nolen.

Our church at Brookhaven recently lost one of its faithful official members in the death of Brother B. A. Comstock. His associates on the Board of Stewards were the pallbearers. The funeral was conducted by Rev. W. H. Lewis.

According to the daily paper Rev. A. Inman Townsley, pastor of Felicity Church, New Orleans, will go to Tokio, Japan, to the great Sunday School Convention to be held there. That will be a great trip for Brother Townsley.

Rev. C. W. Crisler, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., was the delegate of the Kiwanis Club, of Jackson, to the recent Kiwanis Convention in Portland, Oregon. He was accompanied by Mrs. Crisler. From Portland they went to San Francisco.

The work at Indian Bayou, La., is prospering under the pastorate of Rev. C. B. Powell. A new church has been built on the charge, and a parsonage is now in course of construction. Brother Powell is at the present time conducting a meeting at Indian Bayou, assisted by Rev. S. S. Holladay of Pelican, La.

Revival services of ten day's duration have just been closed in Parker Memorial Church, this city, of which Rev. F. M. Freeman is the pastor. Evangelist Forest did the preaching and a good interest was manifested in the services. We had not learned the exact results of the meeting at the time of our going to press.

Our pastor at Jackson, La., Rev. F. B. Hill, reports that successful and profitable revival services have just been held there. The preaching was done by Rev. Tom Norsworthy, of Meridian, Miss. Brother Hill writes that he has about completed the Orphanage campaign in his charge, and that the people have responded nobly.

Rev. John W. Ramsey has just closed a meeting, in which he assisted, the pastor, Rev. W. E. Dickens of Pachuta, Miss. The meeting was held at McGowan's chapel, and the people pronounced it the greatest meeting held there in years. There were eighteen accessions to the church, all of them upon profession of faith except two.

The Rev. Leon I. McCain being absent in revival work, the Hammond, La., pulpit was filled last Sunday by Dr. John T. Sawyer. He reports having had good congregations and close attention, and he says that everything indicated that Brother McCain is doing a splendid work in Hammond, a work in which he has the hearty co-operation of his people.

Rev. D. C. Bennett, who is serving as a supply on the Noble (La.) charge, has received thirty-seven into the church, twenty-six of whom were upon profession of faith. The Noble charge has recently sustained a heavy loss in the death of Brother James Wiley, a faithful layman who had been a member of the church at Bayou Sle since the age of fifteen.

Rev. E. J. Coker, pastor on the Coalville charge, Mississippi Conference, writes that their daughter is back from the Biloxi City Hospital, where she had to undergo an operation for appendicitis on the 6th of July. She has done nicely from the first, "thanks," says Brother Coker, "to the good Master, and doctors and nurses, also our friends." We rejoice with Brother Coker.

In sending in a subscription for the Advocate, Rev. Guy Burt, our pastor at Carrollton, Miss., writes that he was recently assisted in a fine revival at Colla, by Rev. Jesse Watson, of the Louisville circuit. There were good congregations at the evening services, the spiritual life of the membership was quickened, and six were added to the church upon profession of faith.

Rev. W. H. Lane, pastor of the Rankin Street charge, Jackson, Miss., writes that he has just closed a good meeting at the Richland church. The preaching was done by Rev. J. H. Forman, of Bolton, Miss. The church there was greatly blessed and seven were received into the membership, while two infants were baptized. Four subscriptions to the Advocate were secured.

Rev. J. D. Harper, our pastor at Opelousas, La., has announced protracted services there the early part of September. He will be assisted by Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Rayne, La., and one of our chaplains during the recent war. Opelousas is historic ground for Methodism, the Louisiana Conference having been organized there seventy-five years ago. The house in which the Bishop was entertained is still standing.

On July 17, Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, was in Rome, and we were glad to receive some interesting cards and a letter from him. He writes on one card, bearing a picture of "Tempio di Vesta," Rome, "Greetings from Rome, the 'Eternal City.' We visited this morning the Sistine Chapel, St. Peter's and the Vatican." We expect later to give more news of Dr. Cooper in his great trip over Europe. He expected to spend three days in Rome.

Sunday, August 1, Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, preached in the Brookhaven church. The Lincoln County Times speaks in high terms of the sermon. Its says: "He preached a sermon of remarkable depth and charity of vision, yet so plain that no hearer was in doubt as to any statement. His subject, "Man's Conscious Relationship with God," was profound and soul-stirring, and his deduction that only through revelation can the Almighty be known, was a satisfying conviction."

Rev. R. T. Nolen, pastor of the Vardaman charge, North Mississippi Conference, has recently held two meetings. He was assisted in his meeting at the Cross-roads church by Rev. E. M. Shaw, of Houston. Nine were received into the church as the result of the meeting. At Loyd Brother Nolen was assisted by Rev. B. F. M. Bullard. Twelve were received into the Methodist Church, and several united with the Baptist Church, and one with the Primitive Baptist as a result of the meeting there. Brother Nolen is now in the midst of a meeting at Derma, where he is being assisted by Rev. E. C. Driskoll.

A lover of children, who prefers that the name of the giver be not known, has recently presented a beautiful piano to the Primary Department of the Louisiana Avenue Church of this city. This congregation, under the able leadership of the pastor, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, has recently paid off amounts due on the parsonage and paving, clearing the church of all indebtedness. An interesting feature at this church is the work of the Italian congregation, which worships in the Louisiana Avenue building, under the direction of the Italian preacher of St. Mark's Church, Rev. G. V. Romano. The Italian congregation enjoyed a delightful social in the Louisiana Avenue Sunday school building last Monday night.

From Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, Montrose, Miss., comes the report of a gracious meeting in his charge. He writes, "We closed a victorious revival at Louin, Miss., on August 5. There were four accessions to the church, the spiritual life of the church was deepened, and many testified that the revival had been a great uplifting blessing to them. The preaching was done by the pastor-evangelist, Rev. Henry A. Wood, of Quitman, Miss. He is an untiring worker in God's harvest field. His sermons were shot through and through with divine love. He loves God and precious souls." Brother Westbrook will begin a meeting on the fourth Sunday in August in Montrose. Rev. James T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, will do the preaching.

Rev. O. E. Downer, Seminary, Miss., reports that good services were recently brought to a close at Sanford, Miss. Rev. T. B. Ormond did the preaching, the attendance was fine, and much good was done. Thursday of last week, Brother Downer closed a revival at Eminence church. This is an old established church, and the custom of having two services during the day, with "dinner on the ground," was observed. Rev. J. E. Williams, of Broad Street church, Hattiesburg, assisted the pastor. The music was in chargo of Mrs. Alex Newton, of Seminary. She was at the organ assisted by her daughter, Miss Susie, with the violin, and by her sons, George and Mackey, with cornet and violin. During the two last days of the meeting Dr. Oscar Conner did effective solo work. Rev. J. M. Lewis, of Collins, was present the last day of the meeting. The meeting resulted in a great blessing to the church and to the community life.

WHAT THE BAPTISTS AND METHODISTS ARE ABOUT TO DO.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Our Baptist brethren were wiser than we in that they combined their educational and hospital interests with their missionary interests in their "Seventy-five Million Dollar Campaign," perhaps learning from our Centenary Campaign both how to do a great thing and how to make it greater.

They have secured about $90,000,000, and their schools and hospitals will be greatly enlarged and improved along with the extension of their missionary work. Both their wisdom and liberality in this matter are worthy of all praise. When a church undertakes to build up its institutions, it must at the same time take steps to provide capable and qualified men to carry on its enterprises. Otherwise its investments will fall short of the largest and best effects. Enlarged missions call for equipped men.

It is sometimes said that money talks; but the statement is incorrect. Money is dumb and dead. It can do no more than support men who can talk. If our entire Centenary Fund for missions were sent to China without the subtraction of a penny from the total, it could become effective only when it is used to engage missionaries, and its effectiveness will be no greater than the effectiveness of the men engaged.

These obvious truths show clearly that the Centenary Campaign must be completed by the Educational Campaign. We need men for missionary work far more than we need money even, and we can secure competent men from no other source than our church schools. State schools produce few preachers and still fewer missionaries.

If our schools are not strengthened speedily, the force of our missionary appropriations will be diminished in exact proportion to our lack of prepared men to carry on our missionary enterprises. The work of education and the work of foreign missions go hand in hand.

In our Centenary Campaign we raised $53,000,000, and our Educational Campaign calls for $23,000,000. If we raise the $23,000,000 for our schools, the amount thus secured when added to the $53,000,000 raised by the Centenary Campaign will fall below what the Baptists have done by the sum of $14,000,000. To reach their figure of $90,000,000 we must get $37,000,000 in our Educational Campaign. That sum is not above our educational needs, and it does not exceed our financial ability. We are as able as the Baptists to raise $90,000,000 for missions and education.

There was one marked difference between the campaign of the Baptists and our Centenary Campaign, namely, that they secured more large contributions from their wealthiest men than did we. The gifts of several of their men of means ran far up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars; but our rich men did not give so generously to the Centenary Fund. Now is their opportunity to make up for their failure.

We ought to have a number of men who will give $500,000 each to the fund of $23,000,000 proposed as the minimum figure for the goal of the Educational Campaign.

Our Centenary Campaign inspired the Baptists to undertake their campaign to raise $75,000,000 for their missionary and educational enterprises. Now let their great success inspire us to go far beyond $23,000,000 in our Educational Campaign.

The poverty of the educational institutions of the South has long been most painful and humiliating. But the Southern Baptists and the Southern Methodists are now about to retrieve the situation. The former have raised the sum which they set out to secure, and have exceeded the amount by $15,000,000. If the Southern Methodists do as well, more than $50,000,000 will be invested in Southern educational enterprises by these two denominations alone during the next five years. The bare possibility of such a result is thrilling. It would change the currents of our national history, and its effects would be seen in other lands.

If the Methodists should fail to do their part, it would discredit and damage our church beyond the power of words to express.

Let the success of the Baptists provoke us to carry our Educational Campaign to the mark we have set—and far beyond that mark.

We can and we will. Let some man of large means sound the keynote of the campaign with a great gift, and let all our people follow with generous contributions, as the Lord has prospered them.

MRS. S. E. McRANEY was born in Covington County, Mississippi. She spent a part of her childhood in that County and a part in Arkansas. In early life she gave her heart to God and united with the Methodist Church and was a faithful member thereof till the day of her death. She did not seem to think that she was called upon in her home, community, or church to sound a loud trumpet of what she was doing; nevertheless, her influence in all the walks of life was felt and it was for good. One of the rules of her life and home was not to speak evil of any one. She had a living faith in Christ. She enjoyed the visits of her pastor, and was always delighted to have him have religious service in her home. She was the mother of seven girls, all of whom survive her and are members of the church. She had to make sacrifices to train them and send them to school, but she managed to give them a good education. Five of the seven attended Whitworth College and four of them hold diplomas from that school. Her light surely shone before the world, but its brightness increased as the end approached. Although she suffered intensely, she never forgot God. She did not seem to forget any duty unperformed. She thought of her promise to the Centenary cause, of her church dues, of a daughter whose birthday would come after she was gone. She provided for all these things; then she called for the mother of her only grandchild and reminded her of the trust and responsibility of a mother; then she just waited for the coming of her Lord and fell on sleep as gently as a babe would upon its mother's arms. She told her children not to weep for her and truly they have no reason to do so except for her absence. Her loved ones who are faithful will meet her again around the great white throne. Her pastor,

WALDO W. MOORE.

Bogue Chitto, Miss.

December 21, 1838, to July 3, 1920, marked the period of earthly life of Brother SARDINE G. RAMSAY, son of Daniel H. Ramsay. His entire life was spent in Jackson County, Miss., except four years spent in the Civil War. He was twice married; first, in 1868, to Miss Louisa V. Ellis. They settled three miles from Vancleave, Miss., where he spent the remainder of his life. To them were born three sons and three daughters, all still living. He was married the second time to Miss Lula B. Hill, who, with her three sons and two daughters, survives him. He joined the Methodist Church early in life, and was a consistent and faithful member, having served as steward and trustee for more than thirty years. Those who knew him best bear unanimous testimony to his honesty, truthfulness, and devotion to his family and their interests. He was a modest man, of retiring disposition. He served four years in the Civil War, but seldom spoke of it. A good man has gone from us. He has come to his grave in a full age, "like as a shock of grain cometh in its season." Peace to his ashes.

J. H. GRICE.

MRS. MARIA J. SANDERS GORDEN was born in Tennessee, November 6, 1836. She was converted and joined the church in early life. Her family moved to Marshall County, Mississippi, before the Civil War. She was twice married, first to Mr. H. M. Wall, in 1860; to this union two sons were born, J. Dave and H. Frank. She, like many of the noble souls in the dark days of civil strife, gave her brave young husband to the Confederacy; he was killed in the battle of Gettysburg on September 23, 1864. Four years later she was married to Alexander Miller Gorden, of Chullahoma, Marshall County, Mississippi, who died August 19, 1891, and was buried at Sardis, Miss. For a number of years she made her home at Sardis, where she was useful in the church and community. For the past eleven years she had made her home with her son, H. Frank Wall, who lived three miles west of Como, Panola County, Mississippi. She had been a shut-in for several years, having sustained a fall, breaking her hip. She never left the place, but was active about the house. Not until a few months ago did she seem to be seriously failing in health. Though in her eighty-fifth year, she insisted on being up in her room until within a few days of her death, which occurred on the afternoon of July 8, 1920. After funeral services conducted by the writer, we placed her frail body beside her husband, in the cemetery at Sardis, under the softening shades of the murmuring cedars, to await the resurrection of the just.

R. P. NEBLETT.

The happy, cheerful face of the child of God impresses the world with its need of a Savior. Graveyard religion has no place in service. Christ Jesus never came into the world to bring any such religion. His is a religion of joy, and happiness, and peace. God help the church to realize this great truth, that it may lay aside its graveclothes and put on the garments of life!—Len G. Broughton.

Doctor Cupid

That love sometimes cures disease is a fact that has been called to the attention of the public by a prominent physician. Love is not, however, the cure for all women. Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out for no reason that she can think of.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives new life and new strength to weak, worn-out, run-down women. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well. It is now sold by all druggists in the United States in tablets as well as liquid form.

SELMA, ALA.—"When one of my daughters was developing into womanhood, she suffered terribly at times. I was becoming quite worried about her when Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription was recommended to me. Two bottles of the 'Prescription' brought her through in very good condition and gave wonderful relief. I never hesitate to recommend this medicine to all girls who suffer, for it is splendid."—MRS. MONTEAGLE—MIDWEEK.

By Payton A. Sowell.

Midweek here seems half Sunday. New Orleans and Louisiana are much in evidenee. Among the entertainers on the platform, I call up: Rev. Dr. Frank Parker, Rev. Dr. R. H. Harper, Rev. Dr. Thos. Carter, Prof. Henry Carre, Rev. Dr. Summey, and, on Louisiana Day, the elder Mrs. Carre and Dr. McLod, are a part of the inteliectual program of the season. Rev. Dr. Harper, at the morning Bible hour, has discoursed on the "Messages of the Prophets." On Louisiana Day, he took the plaee of Rev. M. E. Dodd, who was absent, speaking on: "Lovely Louisiana." He has made a pleasant impression—a man of fine spirit and wido reading. All his illustrations are genuinely literary, rather than commonplace.

STANDING OF CONFERENCES ON FAMILY ALTARS.

By Rev. J. J. Stowe, D.D.

Brother S. A. Neblett, serving with the Centenary while home on furlough from his missionary work in Cuba, did a splendid work as secretary of the department of Spiritual Resources. In addition to eneouraging prayer on the part of the ehurch, an effort was made to induce families to erect the home altar and hold family prayer. Pledge cards were distributed to be signed and returned to this office. Literature setting forth the importanee of family worship, and other literature designed to assist those wishing to establish family prayer, was distributed throughout the ehureh. Of these leaflets we still have a supply and shall be glad to furnish them as needed to any pastor who will write us.

Upon Brother Neblett's return to his work in Cuba, his department was plaeed, temporarily at least, under my care. We have tabulated the returns of the Family Altar eards and give below the standing of the Conferenees, based upon the ratio of family altars to the membership of the Conferenee. Five Conferences, North Mississippi, Pacific, Western North Carolina, West Texas and Western Virginia, have sent no eards to this office, though we are sure there must have been signers within these Conferences. We are also sure that many eards were signed that have not been sent in. We trust that the pastors will press this important matter with all possible vigor and send to this office the pledge eards as they are signed. Few things will do more to develop and conserve religion than the family altar. To read God's Word day by day in the home and to pray with one's family is both a duty and a privilege. The influence of such family worship will deepen the spiritual life of parents and make an impression upon the hearts of children which will abide as a blessing for a lifetime. If it is difficult to collect the family for worship at other times, the Bible ean be read and family prayers held at the morning and evening meal.

In the rural seetions the revival season is now on. Let speeial emphasis be given to this vital matter and speeial effort be made to secure a family altar in every Methodist home. The standing of the Conferenees is given below, the Conference having the highest per eent being Illinois, and others being in order aceording to the number of family altar cards received:

1, Illinois; 2, Kentucky; 3, Tennessee; 4, Florida; 5, Denver; 6, South Georgia; 7, Central Texas; 8, Missouri; 9, Los Angeles; 10, Baltimore; 11, Upper South Carolina; 12, St. Louis; 13, Holston; 14, North Georgia; 15, New Mexico; 16, North Arkansas; 17, Little Rock; 18, Louisville; 19, Alabama; 20, Southwest Missouri; 21, West Oklahoma; 22, South Carolina; 23, North Carolina; 24, Texas; 25, Northwest Texas; 26, Northwest; 27, North Alabama; 28, North Texas; 29, Memphis; 30, Louisiana; 31, Mississippi; 32, East Oklahoma; 33, Virginia.

VICTORY MEDAL FOR EVERY SOLDIER OF WORLD WAR.

The War Department urges every former soldier of the World War to apply at onee for his Vietory Medal. The Depot Quartermaster at Philadelphia is prepared to send out 35,000 of these medals daily, though that number of applieations has never yet been received in a single day.

A commissioned officer and three field clerks have been sent from Washington for the sole purpose of handling the applieations of Louisiana men. The Amerlean Legion, the Red Cross and other agencies are working to bring this matter to the attention of every ex-soldier in the State. The medals are ready, the organization for distributing them is completo and in operation; all that is needed now is the application of the men themselves.

Making applieation is as easy as answering to roll call at revelile. Get a blank from your Amerlean Legion post; the local chapter of American Red Cross, or direct from the Army Recruiting Station, sign it twice in ink, pin your diseharge to it and mail to the Vietory Medal Officer, Custom House, New Orleans, La. He will do the rest. In about a week the discharge will be returned and a day or two later a little jewelry box will be waiting for you at the post office, with the handsome bronze medal inside.—Government Bulletin.

MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

COMPLIMENTS.

We all like to have pleasant things said to us, but we all know the excess of flattery that makes us heartily wish we were somewhere else. Dr. Johnson had a great, rough tongue, and when Hannah More was deluging him with soft phrases, he said to her, "Madam, before you flatter a man so grossly to his face, you should consider whether your flattery is worth his having."

One secret of compliments is to say neither too little nor too much. Pick out the right, the appropriate, thing, and do not congratulate a middle-aged lady on looking young, or an author on the book before the last one, or a politician on the campaign he is not proud of. If you really wish to praise any one, take a little pains about it and let your words be not only kind but fitting. There are people who make a business of compliments and whose compliments, therefore, cease to have any value. That was what Dr. Johnson had in mind, and no one knew better than he that a brief word of commendation from one like himself—one perfectly indifferent whom he pleases or displeases—goes further than long speeches from those who are thinking more of themselves than of the person addressed.

The deepest art and secret of compliment is entire sincerity, to make it evident that you are saying only what you really feel. It may be urged that on that basis compliments would be much scarcer in the world than they are now. Perhaps the world would be none the worse off for that. It is not of much use in the end to say pleasant things unless you really think pleasant things. And the point here is that it is easier to think pleasant things than some of us believe. All that is needed is a little attention and, as the French say, a little good-will. Human life is never so barren of good that we cannot find something to praise. And a kindly word, based on sympathetic observation, is worth far more, both to the speaker and to the object of it, than large phrases of conventional eulogy bestowed on those who, hear such matters every day, know their exact value, and are perfectly weary of them.—The Youth's Companion.

GIRLS! USE LEMONS FOR SUNBURN, TAN

Try it! Make this lemon-lotion to whiten your tanned or freckled skin.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion whitener, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands and see how quickly the freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

UNCHURCHED AND RECHURCHED.

I went to see a family that had taken a house near my own. Only the lady was at home. She said that I was the first preacher that had ever called upon them. I said, "Then you don't go to church and invite the preachers to call." She said, "No, we never go to church." I said, "I called because you were a new family coming in to our neighborhood, so you can count my call as neighborly, not pastoral," and I rose to go. She said, "Would you not pray for us?" I knelt and prayed. She was moved to tears. "I'd just as well tell it," she said. "My husband and I used to belong to the church. We were both raised Methodists, but we went to balls and theaters, and mother said it was all wrong; but we both thought we would have a good time, and one day I just took the Bible mother gave me and burned it up. D'you reckon I'll get forgiveness?" I said, "It was a very bad thing to do." But would she let the children go to Sunday school? She said she would, and I told her my wife would come and take them. The woman was so nervous and excited I almost feared her mind was unbalanced. Mrs. Godbey took the children to Sunday school. Soon the parents began to attend church. I called again; Mrs. Williams said, "We were so moved by the singing of 'Come ye disconsolate.' When we came home I and Mr. Williams tried to sing it, and we both cried." These people joined the church and made us good members. I often wondered how persons brought up in the church as they are, and so gentle of spirit, could have drifted away. But many young people who have been reared in Christian homes, when married board in hotels or at fashionable boarding houses, where nearly all their associates are of the worldly, pleasure-seeking class, and presently they are drifting with the tide, away from the sweet influences of home, away from the church and hope of heaven.—The Rev. J. E. Godbey.

OPPORTUNITY.

They do me wrong who say I come no more,
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.
Wail not for precious chances passed away;
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day;
At sunrise every soul is born again.
Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead;
But never bind a moment yet to come.
Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep;
I lend my arm to all who say, "I can."
No shame-faced outcast ever sank so deep,
But he might rise again and be a man. —Walter Malone.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

MOMENTS OF INSPIRATION.

There seem to be such moments, when the mind is remarkably quickened and its sensitiveness heightened to an extraordinary degree; when work becomes play and we really delight in our tasks; and the work we do at such times is noticeably ahead of our usual standard. That there are such times will be admitted by most men; that they are not common will be freely admitted, and it is wise not to wait for them.

As we said, there are such "moments of inspiration," but the great bulk of the world's work is not done during such moments. There may be intellectual mountain tops reached by a few men during a few brief moments, but the world's workers are not mainly geniuses, and the world's work is not chiefly mountain peaks. The mass of the workers consists of commonplace men, and the bulk of the work is commonplace work. The moments of inspiration no doubt have their place, but they were never meant to take the place of the hours and days and years of steady, hard work.

In fact, when we come to look into the matter more closely we begin to identify these "moments of inspiration" as really the blossoming of long periods of hard toil, and in most cases there would have been no "inspiration" whatever if there had not been the most faithful and unremitting toil. The inspiration of the Almighty never comes upon the idler and it does not rest upon the worker usually save as the result of his own careful preparation. The Pentecosts of the church are not arbitrary happenings, but are simply God's gift to a praying, toiling, self-sacrificing and believing church. "Waiting for God" is often the result of our failure to apprehend His will and obey it.

And if any of our readers are allowing days and months and even years to go by while they wait for moments of inspiration that shall enable them to accomplish something—say something, write something, or do something—which they have long hoped for, better get out your spade and hoe and get to work.—The Christian Guardian.

SWEET DREAMS "A GODSEND"

That's What a Big Banker Said About This Wonderful Mosquito Remedy.

We all know that bankers aren't given to idle talk and that their praises are few but forceful.

Pointing to a bottle of Sweet Dreams in a drug store at Montgomery, Ala., the president of one of the leading banks of that city said: "That mosquito remedy is a Godsend."

He knew for he had just returned from a vacation at a Gulf Coast resort where he had just given Sweet Dreams a most severe test.

And he said it was a "Godsend."

You can get a bottle just like the banker had.

WINNING A WELCOME.

"It certainly was a dull evening, wasn't it?" commented Roger disgustedly. Neal glanced at him in surprise.

"Why, no; I had a good time. I thought the old folks were very pleasant, and they seemed to enjoy our company by the way they invited us to come again."

Roger snorted.

"You can go, if you like. Me for some younger and livelier bunch, where a fellow can get a hearing on what interests him, once in a while, instead of sitting and listening all the evening to a couple of old folks talk about what interests them." He paused, and gave his cousin a quizzical smile. "I guess Uncle Ben and Aunt Martha extended that invitation for us to come again more in your honor than in mine. They found you a good listener; I could see that."

"I was really interested in their tales of life and times when they were younger," Neal insisted. "I like to hear what interests other folks—even though I have a few interests of my own," he added with a laugh.

Roger flushed. "I guess that's where you have it over me in making friends," he said frankly. "I like to talk about what interests me, and I hate to listen to the other fellow patter away about something I don't care for."

There is a good bit in the idea. Some one says that to have people smile when you come, and sigh when you go, you must interest yourself in what interests them more than you try to interest them in what interests you. It sounds a bit complicated, but it works out very simply. More than that, it gives the key not only to popularity, but to a good way of training in the best sort of sympathy; a sympathy that not only makes others love you, but that broadens and enriches your own life as well; a sympathy that takes you out of your own narrow little rut and sets you on the broad highways of life, where you can touch other lives for their good.—Onward.

EUROPEAN STUDENTS INTERESTED IN PROHIBITION.

The students of Europe are keenly interested in the problem of prohibition of the liquor traffic. At recent meetings at which Mr. Harry S. Warner, of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, has spoken in the universities of France and Switzerland, there has been marked interest. Hundreds have attended meetings which were little advertised, and in which the story was told of "Why and How Prohibition Came to America." Some of these meetings have had to be addressed by Mr. Warner and then by his interpreter. In spite of this handicap, discussion has been prolonged at the close of his address, and all were eager to learn of the results of the "great experiment" in America.

Sentiment on the part of some of the students and professors indicated that the former basis of abstinence organizations was no longer adequate, and that there should be some union of all such organizations on a basis of uniting all students to study the problem in its relation to all phases of national life. To show the students of Europe and all other countries how this was done in America by the students through the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, is the present task of that organization. The work is of tremendous promise, and student leaders in America are alive to the responsibility.—Bulletin.

BUILD YOURSELF UP SO AS TO FEEL BETTER

Eat and sleep better, as well as look better, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is an all-the-year-round medicine, good in all seasons.

It purifies, enriches and revitalizes the blood, creates an appetite, aids digestion, assists assimilation of the food you eat, and wonderfully builds up the whole system. In many cases it succeeds where other medicines fail to do any good.

If you need a mild effective cathartic, get Hood's Pills.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Mrs. W. L. Hill—An Appreciation.

The entire North Mississippi Woman's Missionary Society and especially Houston will greatly miss Mrs. W. L. Hill, who has recently gone to Meridian, Miss., to make her home. She is truly a useful woman, doing her "hit," and a big "hit" at that, in every department of church work—all Christian work, I might add, for she is truly a good Samaritan, helping wherever help is needed. To the needy and sick she is a benefactor; but where so many of us fail, she shines the brightest in that she is a friend to the friendless, giving them love, friendship and a helping hand, encouraging and lifting them to a higher and nobler life. Then her work among children is so sweet, sympathetic and ennobling. 'Tis no wonder her Sunday school class and Junior Missionary Society miss her. Mrs. Hill goes about doing good and the good work done by her in Houston will be continued in Meridian; so, while we condole with Houston and the North Mississippi Conference, we congratulate Meridian and the Mississippi Conference.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Baton Rouge District Meeting.

The district meeting was held at Franklinton on June 22, with the district secretary, Mrs. C. S. Stewart, in the chair. The opening service was conducted by Mrs. Babington, with prayer for more consecration by Mrs. Fulton. A noticeable advance along all lines was apparent in the reading of auxiliary reports. In summing up the work of the district, the secretary showed how splendidly the missionary work had increased in 1919, and exhorted the women to build even better in 1920.

Mrs. B. F. Key, Superintendent of Young People, was present, and was ready with helpful advice and directions for promoting the cause she represents; Mrs. Key spoke also on mission study and publicity.

Guests, who were heartily welcomed, were the pastor, and the presiding elder, Rev. A. S. Lutz.

The people of Franklinton were gratefully thanked for their generous hospitality and we left them with a prayer for God's blessings to be with them. (Miss) FANNYE REAMES,
Secretary.

A Letter From Rayville.

Dear Mrs. Snelling: As we are about to complete our program of mission study for the winter and spring, I want to let some of the readers of the Advocate know what we are doing, and what a live crowd of women we are. We have enjoyed two of the most interesting studies this season; the first was, "The Meaning of Prayer," and the one we are finishing now "The Meaning of Faith." These two books by Fosdick have brought new thoughts to us to enlarge our lives.

We have been holding our regular business meeting on the first Monday, and the other Mondays have been given over to the study. We have used printed programs, gotten up in a most attractive style, announcing the leaders and subjects for discussion, and have found ourselves looking forward to the next meeting. Most of the members get a book; in other words, we economize in some other way and think good literature a good investment. The last number given on these Monday afternoons is the one that brings the social touch, delicious refreshments and a chat with our neighbor.

At the conference held at Lake Charles last winter, our president could not lag behind, so she made our pledge $150; we are glad she did. Hoping I have not made this too lengthy, and wishing you much success,

Mrs. C. A. BLATCHFORD.

PRAYER REMINDERS.

PRAY for Miss Case, Administrative Secretary of Latin-American and African Fields, as she goes to Brazil, that she may be able to bring all the powers of mind and heart to bear on the great problems that confront the workers in that field; that she may be quick to understand and wise to counsel.

PRAY for the delegation of our church now in Europe that they may plan wisely and well as they lay the foundations of the work of Southern Methodism among the needy in the war-stricken territory.

PRAY for the newly appointed Commission on Race Relationships, that the women on this Commission may have vision and wisdom and courage for the delicate and yet stupendous tasks that lie before them.

OUR INDUSTRIAL EVANGELIST.

I am now making out the slate for Rev. George Tucker, our evangelist who will give the major part of his time to industrial centers, especially railroad centers. Brother Tucker is himself a member of The Brotherhood of Trainmen. Railroad people come in great numbers to hear him. Pastors who desire his services should write me some time in advance. His slate will be made out at least six months in advance; hence, those who wait until they are within a few weeks of their meetings and then wire for him will be disappointed. Brother Tucker has a message for laboring people. He preaches the same gospel, the same Christ that we all preach, but he preaches to these people in their own terminology. He is in great demand and those who desire his services for the fall or winter should write at once. O. E. GODDARD.

Cuts and Bruises,

burns, stings, sores, boils and the numerous other mishaps amount to little. If left alone, however, and if aided by the careless touch of a dirty hand, an ugly sore will result and frequently blood poison. It is dangerous. Don't trifle. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately. It will instantly soothe the wound, cleanse the sore, kill the germs and put it on a steady road to recovery. Keep it on your shelf for every emergency. Its constant use for a hundred years has made it a family word in every household. Ask your druggist. If he can't supply you send his name to W. F. END OF EIGHT YEARS MISERY

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Recovered.

Newark, N. J.—"The doctor said I had an organic trouble and treated me for several weeks. At times I could not walk at all and I suffered with my back and limbs so I often had to stay in bed. I suffered off and on for eight years. Finally I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was a good medicine and tried it with splendid effect. I can now do my housework and my washing. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound and your Blood Medicine and three of my friends are taking them to advantage. You can use my name for a testimonial."—Mrs. THERESA COVENTRY, 75 Burnett St., Newark, N. J.

A FALSE OPTIMISM.

There is a false optimism, a delusive security, an unwarranted cheerfulness! It is the optimism of the man who will only contemplate one set of facts, who deliberately turns a blind eye to the deadly dangers, the ghastly wrongs, the hideous miseries of life. It is written in this old Book concerning a certain king that he refused to allow any one clothed in sackcloth to come near his palace. He did not want to be reminded of sorrow and of death. By banishing the sight of mourning raiment he tried to persuade himself that the world in which he lived was altogether bright and gay. They played very much the same fool's game in Paris in the days before the Revolution broke out. When Marie Antoinette made her triumphal entry into Paris no beggar was allowed to be seen on the line of route. The authorities swept into the side streets all the wretched and poor of the capital. The eye of the young queen was not allowed a single glimpse of the seething misery of Paris. All was made to appear prosperous and fair. And so the young queen and her husband lived in a fool's paradise, until the fury of the Revolution wakened them up to the tragic reality! And there are people in the world who do for themselves what the authorities of Paris did for that ill-fated king and queen. They refused to contemplate the East-end of life. They live in Belgravia and ignore the squalor and poverty and filth and sin of Whitechapel and Bethnal Green. And by shutting their eyes to sin and sorrow, sickness and pain, poverty and death, they are able to prate jauntily about everything being as it should be in the best possible of words. I do not know whether this ought really to be called optimism at all. In many cases it is nothing but an affectation. It is a make-believe. The gayety is forced. The laughter is that laughter of fools which the wise man contemptuously compares to the crackling of thorns under a pot. And where it is not an affectation—it is the offspring of ignorance and selfishness. The pessimist who feels the world's misery and who fears the worst is infinitely nearer the truth than the shallow flippant optimist who refuses to see any misery at all.—J. D. Jones.

Your Greatest Problem—That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped, and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects. Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tennessee, today, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

DR. J. W. MALONE, President,
Cleveland, Tennessee.

"SOMETHING TO READ."

"Reading," said Lord Bacon, "maketh a full man." There are many vacant minds in society, waiting to be filled up in this sort of way. Often we hear the request made, "Give me something to read." In certain situations, when suffering from ennui, almost anything, even an advertisement, is welcome for the purpose of diversion. Children often beg their parents for reading matter, or at least picture books. It is on the whole a healthy sign when young people want "something to read."

The libraries are trying systematically and sympathetically to give the public, including the juvenile part of it, guidance in its reading. The churches of Christ may find along this line their opportunity and their urgent duty, not only to give counsel and direction to young people as to the selection and use of books and magazines that now exist, but also to provide a varied and attractive assortment of improving—because improved—publications, suited to all ages, tastes, and pocketbooks.

The church is probably not yet fully aroused to the splendid possibilities that lie in the extensive use of Christian literature, at home and abroad. Such literature needs to be well reasoned, carefully edited, suitably printed, and judiciously circulated. It ought to compete successfully with the best products of secular presses, as the literary genius of the best writers, both men and women, is consecrated to the high aims of spiritual impression and religious education, and it ought to be made to pay its own way, although the chief rewards of such publications are immaterial and eternal, not financial and temporal.

The membership of the churches ought to feel it a duty and a privilege loyally to support such literary ventures and products, not only by itself reading the best books and magazines, but also by helping widely and wisely to distribute distinctively religious publications throughout surrounding society. Such a broadened and intelligent use of the products of gifted and consecrated pens would do a vast deal to advance the cause of Christ and of Christian brotherhood in the world.

A great deal might and should be done to increase both the quality and the quantity of Christian publications, but this result can be accomplished not just by a few far-sighted and earnest individuals linotyping, editing, or book selling here and there, but by a general and united effort of all good people everywhere to provide the world with "something to read" which will arrest the consciences of men, stimulate their imaginations, nerve their wills, quicken their social interest, and, withal and above all, create in them a passionate and undying ardor for the person and work of Jesus Christ, who came that we might have life, and that we might have it abundantly.—Zion's Herald.

"This one thing I do," said Paul. He who wishes to fulfill his mission must be a man of one idea, that is, of one great overmastering purpose, overshadowing all his aims and guiding and controlling his entire life.—Hurlstone.

We cannot ask a better point of leverage from which to move our little fragment of the world toward truth and goodness than the point on which we have been placed. All that made saints and heroes of old strong and full of trust is as near to us as it was to them.—Hurlstone.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PRINCIPLES ARE PERMANENT.

Great principles, standards and ideals have a granite quality about them which defies the ravages of time. In speaking along this line a very brilliant orator, Hon. M. A. MacDonald of Vancouver, B. C., used a very striking Biblical figure to enforce the truth, as follows: "Leaders will pass away. Principles, if they are sound—never. When men follow leaders merely, factions develop; when they follow great principles, a public sentiment crystallizes, operative for good. Aaron dies, Moses passes, but the Ark of the Covenant remains, forever defying the elements of time."

LOADED DICE.

Mr. Emerson was not irreverent or flippant when he wrote: "The dice of God are always loaded." He meant that things will come out, by and by, according to the divine plan. And he meant that the sanctions of pain and punishment of the divine law are divinely ordained, and that we can not ignore in personal or public life the divine wisdom and escape. We should do well to think upon these things in the present disordered state of the world. War still across the sea which may yet bring on greater war, unsettled conditions here in our own land and a financial panic far from impossible in the near future, and many other things which might be named, may suggest to the thoughtful mind that we have somehow come into conflict with the divine will and the divine purposes.

A DIVIDED RESPONSIBILITY.

We often read and hear of the "curse of slavery" in the South and on the South. An article of recent date in a periodical of our church says: "Beneath the beautiful exterior agents of decay were busy at their work. * * * Back of it, deeper than all, causing all, was a canker eating at the very heart of this young, expensive civilization. Its name was Slavery." That is all quite true. We received, and we continue to receive, the "curse" of slavery, but we shall ever divide the responsibility of slavery with another section of the Union, which furnished the most fiery abolition orators, and for this reason—that it also, many years before the time of the orators, furnished the ships and the slave traders who brought the slaves to America, sold them to Southern planters, and pocketed the proceeds. In the liquor traffic opprobrium has been chiefly cast upon the men who sold the accursed stuff. In the slave traffic the curse has always been called down upon the heads of those who bought the slaves which others had stolen from their homes in Africa. It is not an "even-handed justice" that would award the whole of the curse to us, fond as some are of tracing its course over the South. We admit that we have suffered the most from the "curse" of slavery, but we insist upon dividing the responsibility for slavery with others.

THE HEIGHT OF THE ALPS.

When do you measure yourself, or when do you take stock? When all runs smooth and even, or when you have "the blues?" The height of the Alps is not determined by the foothills or the lowest summit, but by the highest peak. If a Conference memory is not at fault, the lamented Bishop Ward said something like this: "I sometimes have the blues. But don't you dare measure yourself by a day like that. We have the old figure about the chain being just as strong as its weakest link. But I prefer a different figure: the Alps are just as high as their highest peak."

NEEDED AT OTHER TIMES.

The corruption of public officials, the misuse of public funds and intolerable conditions that need to be done away are usually aired in the papers preceding an election. And certainly this needs to be done. But some of the papers would escape the appearance of insincerity—of having an axe to grind, and would accomplish greater good, and more lasting good, if they were continually set against public evils, as a fixed policy, and not because of the exigencies of a political situation.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO YOU.

One of the Gospel hymns is about "The Gospel According to You." How are men reading the Gospel according to you? We trust the majority of them have read the Gospel according to Matthew and the others; how are they learning it as it is lived by you? There is an Eye which is always upon you. But there are also human eyes which are always watching you and reading for good or evil. God help you to set a Christian man's example.

FLEEING FROM GOD.

It is said that "Jonah rose up to flee to Tarshish from the presence of the Lord, and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish: so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them to Tarshish from the presence of the Lord." Why Jonah thought the Lord did not also dwell in Tarshish we do not know. Why he thought he could escape from the Lord anywhere we can not tell. How futile for man to think he can escape from his God anywhere in the universe which God has made! How futile to dream that he can escape from God, or escape from himself—from his conscience and the duty he has despised! "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit?" asked the Psalmist, "or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there." But do we not, even though unconsciously, repeat the error of Jonah? It is a good thing to remember that the Eye which followed Jonah in his course over the sea, never slumbers nor sleeps, never closes on the deeds and thoughts of men—that "Thou, God, seest me."

LOOKING IN A GLASS.

The trouble with many a man is that he is too fond of looking in a mirror. He sees himself in everything. He is selfish. He may indeed behold his natural face in a glass and straightway forget the manner of his appearance, as James says, but he never forgets his own interests in every matter with which he has to do. Break your mirror, and see what the other fellow looks like, what his needs are, and how you may be of some service to him.

CHURCH AFFILIATIONS OF OUR PRESIDENTS.

As an item of interest, we give the following, taken from a daily newspaper, concerning the church affiliations of our Presidents: George Washington was an Episcopalian; John Adams, Unitarian; Thomas Jefferson, Liberal; James Madison, Episcopalian; James Monroe, Episcopalian; John Quincy Adams, Unitarian; Andrew Jackson, Presbyterian; Martin Van Buren, Reformed Dutch; William H. Harrison, Episcopalian; John Tyler, Episcopalian; James K. Polk, Methodist; Zachary Taylor, Episcopalian; Millard Fillmore, Unitarian; Franklin Pierce, Episcopalian; James Buchanan, Presbyterian; Abraham Lincoln, Presbyterian; Andrew Johnson, Methodist; U. S. Grant, Methodist; Rutherford B. Hayes, Methodist; James A. Garfield, Disciples; Chester A. Arthur, Episcopalian; Grover Cleveland, Presbyterian; Benjamin Harrison, Presbyterian; William McKinley, Methodist; Theodore Roosevelt, Reformed Dutch; William H. Taft, Unitarian; and Woodrow Wilson is a Presbyterian. This record shows that eight of our Presidents have been Episcopalians; six, Presbyterians; five, Methodists; four, Unitarians. According to a recent newspaper report, Senator Harding is a Baptist, and Governor Cox is a member of the United Brethren Church.

TOLERANCE THE TEST OF GREATNESS.

One of the most difficult achievements is to have deep and strong convictions and at the same time be gracious toward and tolerant of those who hold different or opposing views. Little but intense minds are irritated by contradiction. Bigotry is born of narrowness. In a true spiritual democracy, where charity is large-hearted and love masterful, the divisive spirit is impossible. Sectarianism originated in an unintelligent and mistaken loyalty to truth. Many men are orthodox in their intellectual conception of the person of Jesus, who utterly misrepresent his spirit. The original disciples, for example, urged Jesus to forbid certain men doing good works, because they did not follow them and think and work in their particular way. Instead of casting them out, Jesus rebuked the twelve themselves for their intolerance, and said, "He that is not against us is for us." The greatest of the apostles met this same narrowness in the schismatic spirit of many of his converts. Their devotion to a certain teacher or doctrine was so intense as to make them antagonists of every one who did not think and act under their leadership. This divisive tendency seemed to be in exact proportion to the immaturity and spiritual superficiality of these early Christians. As a result there came into existence the sect of Paul, the sect of Apollos, the sect of Cephas, the sect of Christ. Paul, like his divine Master, strenuously reproved this narrow intolerance, and pled for that breadth of spirit which would make union possible and permanent in spite of diversity.

Nothing in Christian history has been more pathetic, more fatal to truth, more fruitful of cruelty and crime than this un-Christian spirit on the part of so-called Christians. It instigated the Spanish inquisition, one of the most diabolical outrages in the history of man's inhumanity to man. It made the church itself bigoted, intolerant, autocratic, imperialistic. It was this spirit of intolerance that inspired Queen Elizabeth and her parliament to pass those great acts of uniformity and conformity, which sought to force every Christian in the realm to believe and worship in exactly the same way. It was an imperial attempt to put an end to all diversity of form and freedom of thought in religion. It made no allowance for the divinely-created differences in nature, temperament, disposition and taste. It attempted the impossible in forcing the human conscience against its choices and convictions. It sought to fashion all men in one mold, and make all tongues address their Maker in language prescribed by law.

The forms of worship may have been majestic and devout, and the language of the ritual thoroughly evangelical and full of sublime beauty, but the process was wrong and the attempt to compel conformity un-Christian and cruel. It was the spirit of the Roman inquisition reproduced in Protestant garb, and equally autocratic and contradictory of the spirit of the founder of the Christian faith.

To be spiritually vital and at the same time tolerant; to hold positive convictions and yet be charitable to those who differ in belief or statement of truth; to be loyal to Jesus and still keep in cordial relations and co-operate with those who have not yet been won to our experience or point of view—this is one of the greatest achievements in the Christian life, one of the sublimest tests of our faith, of our personal greatness and strength, and of the integrity of our spiritual life. Tolerance indicates also a serene trust in the ultimate supremacy of truth; restfulness in the sovereignity and power of God. It is the resultant of a peaceful heart and a poised mind. It is the calmness that comes over the spirit when we cease to feel that we are called to dictate terms to our fellowmen, and to worry lest the ark of God totter and fall without our personal supervision or the might of our outstretched, impatient, distrustful arm.

It does not signify loss of conviction, relaxation of effort or diminution of evangelistic zeal, but rather a profound assurance that we can afford to trust ourselves and our fellowmen, the church and all its high interests to the keeping of our wise and omnipotent Father.

On these high altitudes of faith we live in ceaseless fellowship with Jesus Christ, and are able to convince the world of the beauty, divinity and power of the Christian life.—Western Christian Advocate.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

Recently I have seen several articles on the midweek "prayer meeting," all of them leaning toward the opinion that this meeting of the church had served its purpose and should follow the fate of the class meeting and perish. With this opinion I heartily differ and in as brief way as possible I wish to set forth my views, gleaned from a pastoral experience of twenty yeais, with reference to this meeting.

The articles to which I refer have taken the position that church meetings have so multiplied that the need of this particular service is incidentally filled by others. I can not agree that there is a single meeting that fills the place of the prayer service. The others are meetings of various church groups made up of one class of people, like ladies' or young people's meetings, and are not such meetings where all classes of members may meet and receive the help that each group may receive from the other. The old folks need the fresh song of the young and the young folks need the testimony of the old in a way not supplied by any other meeting of the church. Besides, while prayer is a part of all of these meetings, none of them has prayer as its prime object, as does the prayer meeting. There should certainly be one meeting per week participated in by Christians of all ages and both sexes, gathering primarily to pray.

And, by the way, I think many of our prayer meetings have failed largely because this particular element has been discounted and its place taken by some more or less long talk by the leader. The prayer meeting should be a place of definite prayer, for the church, for individuals, and the definite answer to prayer in the church life should be the greatest encouragement for persevering in such a meeting. My feeling is that we should in the beginning take stock of the things for which the meeting should pray, and that we should ask for them together with a largeness of faith that one Christian inspires in another. To-night our Sunday school may hang heavily on our hearts and we unite in praying that its difficulties may be overcome, that its fruitage may be more manifest, its officers and teachers more faithful. Another night the general idea of bringing in the unconverted may be the conscious need and together we carry that theme to a throne of grace.

The prayer meeting as a mere formality, desultory, indefinite, full of platitudes, one of the habitual exercises of a week, is not worth while. But in doing away with it, let us put in its place a meeting, however small, of faithful people who know what they and the church need and who come together to ask for it. In all of this, of course, the pastor is leader, for going from house to house, watching the church in its varied activities, rejoicing in its victories, grieving over its defeats, he gets his heart full enough to call his people together often for prayer. Besides the need of the general church life, we will find at each meeting persons learning to bring (or send) their individual needs to a place where Christian people habitually meet to pray.

If prayer is to-day the great, crying need of the church's life, it is an unfortunate time to be eliminating the only church meeting that exists expressly for prayer. Another explanation of the failure of the prayer service lies in lack of preparation and the consequent falling into a rut that largely explains the monotony commonly attributed to such a meeting. I do not mean preparation for a long talk; however brilliant, by the leader. I mean the prayerful "thinking through" of a program for the entire meeting that will hitch it up to the needs of the church's life. Some of this I have already indicated.

To make the Bible study helpful should form a part of this plan. As rich as God's Book is, surely we could select each week a brief study on a theme greatly needed. The use of the Sunday school lesson has some benefits, but that is usually the lazy man's program, who has not thought out a theme for himself. Bible study just now is one of our great needs. If our people would bring their Bibles and read aloud references on some great theme, followed by a brief discussion, it would be better than the ordinary "talk," "address," "lecture," or old sermon warmed over. Where is there so fine an opportunity for a pastor to teach his people to study God's book? The greatest temptation in this is to let the meeting run too long. We cannot exhaust it all in one service. Leave some for next time. But if we can excite in people's hearts an appetite for such study, our prayer services will not greatly lack attendance.

If this meeting is the test of the church's spirituality (and it is partly), we need to test it. If it discourages, we need the discouragement and burden of heart it brings, because revivals have not come except to burdened pastors and people. It's a wise thing to keep a thermometer. We can't afford to fool ourselves even about a sub-normal temperature.

The third element in our failure in prayer meetings has already been hinted at here, namely, their sameness. The element of surprise is needed in everything. Between the sweetness of songs, new and old, prayer, silent, sentence, individual, the rich variety of history, gospel, epistle, promise, warning of God's Book, a church meeting should never lack in variety, if we will only think it out ahead.

I, for one, would register my appreciation of the prayer meeting and shall not dispense with it as long as "two or three" can be gathered together.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

When you get to be a Bishop, Carley, and the indicator of the Pelican tripod points in that direction, be a rural bishop. Get out in the sticks, where the people never saw a bishop. But for the reputation of your office, get you up a big sermon. Don't you make the mistake of thinking country people don't know a big sermon from a school-girl's composition on "how to make a cherry pie, charming Willie," especially in Mississippi, where Galloway set the notch of eloquence so high. I never heard you preach, and my advice may be superfluous, but study delivery, brother. I recently heard an able man make a speech. What he said was good, but, my, my, I had to almost pinch myself to keep from nodding. He was dull to the limit, dry as a powder horn, with a poor voice and awkward gestures. He simply killed his message. More and more I realize that what Demosthenes said is true. When asked what is the most important thing in oratory, he replied, "Action;" what is the second most important thing, "Action;" what is the third most important thing, "Action." By action he meant delivery. If he did not say it, he might have said it for it is true. But what is the use of my wasting my wisdom on you youngsters! You smile complacently at the superannuated conceit that Demosthenes or Cicero, Pitt or Webster, Munsey or Galloway, can teach this generation anything. All right. Have it your way, but I would go a long distance to hear a Kavanaugh climb above the stars, and leave flaming worlds whirling behind him in his flight to the realms of glory; or a Munsey lift an audience to its feet, as I have seen him do, and spin his way into the depths of space, until the axle of his chariot of imagination wore in two, and left you "where only God could find you!" Have we lost the moulds in which such men were cast?

I dropped in on Sharp, P. E. of the Memphis District. I heard Sam Jones call presiding elders "sliding elders," but Sharp don't "slide." He sits in his office on the fourth floor of a sky-scraper, and phones. The rascal licenses young men to preach, making them promise not to use tobacco, and has a quid of somebody's best in his mouth at the time. I hope enough of these younger men who have had to promise not to use tobacco will get to the General Conference to retaliate, and pass a law that no man who uses tobacco can hold any office in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. That will clean out the roost! The logic is simple. Major premise: No one who does wrong ought to be elected to an office in the church; minor premise: The General Conference says that the use of tobacco is wrong; conclusion: therefore, no one who uses tobacco shall be elected to an office in the church! If I were a member of the General Conference, I would offer an amendment that would include several hoary old sinners in that line: "elected or appointed!" Sharp is doing a great work, especially in connection with the Hospital the Methodists are building. He gave me some fine points, which I mean to work into my sermons: one that obedience to the second commandment is the final test of character as taught by Jesus in the great parable of the last judgment. I submitted to him my revision of the Apostle's Creed, which he thought is good, as did Dr. Spragins. When that Creed was framed the paramount issue before the church was the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ and the historical truth of his death and resurrection, and it says not one word about his human life, or his relation to the great questions of social development, which are the chief issues before us now. So I have revised the Creed as follows: "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth; and in Jesus Christ, His only begotten Son our Lord; who was conceived of the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, went about doing good, suffered under Pontius Pilate," and so on. By adding the clause, "went about doing good," we make the Creed express the fundamental truth of Christianity in its social program, and magnify the human side of our Lord's life. Chuck that away in a cerebral cell, Carley, and once and awhile meditate on it.

I wanted to see Meek, who "slides" around the Sardis District, to which the Horn Lake circuit belongs, but he turned me down for a dentist in New Orleans; but Nick Augustus came over from Hernando to one of our services. That brainy scamp has always been a puzzle to me. If you were to unreel the knowledge he has stored away in his cerebral cellars it would take a shelf to hold the books: but he has buried his talent in a sense. Marrying saved him. But for that he would have been mummy. If I had a million, Carley, I would kidnap Nick (no, I didn't call him "Old Nick," for that disreputable person hasn't a more determined enemy), I would kidnap Nick, and spirit him away, and drop him down in Boston, and laugh myself half to death at the antics he would perform among "the descendants of the Puritans!" He can't be anything but a gentleman, but the figure he would have to cut trying to be one with his ultra and unregenerate sentiments in the vicinity of Faneuil Hall would be a sight. If Unification had prevailed, Nick was going to set up a church of his own. Well, so was I, and about a million more. But I am away ahead of Nick in my liberal patriotism, and if New England ever threatens to secede again, as she did once, long before we did, I am in favor of whipping her back into the Union. I think Nick would delight to give her a kick, and say begone, and clear out of sight! Henry Ward Beecher is reported to have said once that he would be glad to sink the South to the bottom of the sea, and let the bones of the rebels become material for phosphate beds to fertilize the land for some future inhabitants of a new continent that might be heaved up from the deep! We all say mighty foolish things when we get mad. Sixty years have mollified my sentiments without changing my principles. Brethren, let us all pray that Nick may love his enemies. That's Nick's "pons asinorum." Now if Jim Hudson don't know what that means, let him ask Dr. Minor, and if he can't tell him, let me know. And yet Nick is a knightly antagonist, a chip off of the block of the old South.

They have the finest cotton in De Soto County I have seen, and no boll weevil to dread. I hope they will make a big crop and tote fair with God in the use of it. There is the trouble. The more He prospers us, the less we seem disposed to remember Him. But there are good people in that neighborhood, as fine a group of young married women as I have seen, and Guerry has a wide field. If they ever invite you out there, Carley, go, and you will enjoy the trip, especially if luck shall land you at Andy Nail's, or Jim Hudson's, or Dr. Minor's. But beware of the chigers in Hudson's pasture! The insect in the Pelican Pines is vicious enough, but I believe the Mississippi species has a still more irritating "pisen" in his stem.

WHY WE BAPTIZE BY AFFUSION.

By Rev. A. C. McCorkle.

Man is possessed of two natures—physical and spiritual, a body and a soul. Through the one he touches the physical world and communes with nature; with the other he touches the spirit realm and communes with God. Man is the greatest mystery of all creation, because in him alone matter and spirit meet and blend. Man is a spirit just as God is a Spirit, and has will, so far as it goes, just like God's will. The difference between man's will and God's will is not of quality but of quantity. Man is a free moral being, capable of sin and the only creature in the universe that can sin; and God is the only being against whom, strictly speaking, man can sin. Hence David said, "Against thee, thee only, have I sinned," and the Jews were justifiable in asking, "Who can forgive sins but God?" since God is the only being who has power to forgive sin. Sin is a spiritual act in violation of spiritual law instituted to maintain harmony between two spirit beings with equal right of free action. Sin is the soul of man out of harmony with God. And as it is the soul that sins and is thereby defiled, it is the soul that must be pardoned and cleansed; and this requires a spiritual act and the use of a spiritual element. To cleanse a physical object we use a physical element, but to cleanse a spiritual substance a spiritual element must be used.

This work of cleansing the soul is called baptism; and as it is God cleansing the soul through the influence of his Spirit, it is called the baptism of the Holy Spirit, not to distinguish it from some other baptism—for there is no other—but to express the mode of the Spirit's action upon the soul. This is the only real baptism spoken of in the Bible, and water baptism is its symbol and is never spoken of except in connection with Spirit baptism. The Holy Spirit has been dealing with the souls of men from the very beginning of man until now, but his action was not always called baptism, nor is it necessarily so designated now. Many words have been used to express his action, of which the five following are the most common—namely: "baptized," "filled," "anointed," "sealed," and "earnest." While each of these has a meaning of its own, they all unite in their testimony to the one great fact: The word "baptize" relates with peculiar emphasis to Pentecost, telling what should occur then, or, when used subsequently, points back to that time. The word was introduced by John the Baptist, and for the express purpose of explaining his official relation to Jesus and the work he was doing, and that of Him who was to succeed him. "I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost."

Water baptism and Spirit baptism go together, the one as symbol and the other as substance, just as a man's shadow goes with him. And where one is mentioned the other is included; just as "sprinkle with water" and "sprinkle with blood" were joined together in the Old Testament, "baptize with water" and "baptize with the Holy Ghost" are joined together in the New Testament. The word "baptize" belongs peculiarly to Pentecost, and its mode is plainly given. "coming upon" "fell upon," "poured forth," "filled," etc., with not a hint of immersion in the whole history.

Filled denotes the effect of baptism, and was evidence to the faithful that the Lord had kept his promise. It proved the mode to be pouring. No man would dip another man in a creek to fill him with water. That would do for filling a tin cup or a bucket, but hardly for a man, who slakes his thirst by pouring. Anointed relates to the anointing with oil in former days, and again proves the mode of the Spirit's work. Sealed marks our connection with Jesus, telling the world whose we are. Earnest is a pledge denoting a contract or covenant, and indicates more to follow.

These words express the work of the Holy Spirit upon the souls of men, and in every instance the mode is affusion, and not one of them can be symbolized by immersion. Every soul that was ever saved underwent this cleansing of the Holy Spirit, from Adam until now, and without it there is no salvation. "For all have sinned, and come short of (lost) the glory (character) of God" (Rom. iii, 23), and, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." For men are saved "by the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Tit. iii, 5). This, then, is the only baptism, for there is but one. "One Lord, one faith, one baptism" (Eph. iv, 5). "One body and one Spirit" (Eph. v, 4), and by that one "Spirit are we all baptized into one body" (1 Cor. xii, 13).

No Virtue in a Symbol.

Water baptism is only symbolic in meaning, and is, therefore, not real baptism. There is no virtue in a symbol. A ring on the finger of a young lady is a symbol. It speaks of the love and esteem of the young man who placed it there, and is a pledge of their betrothal. But there is no virtue in the ring. The kiss upon the lips of an infant is a symbol. It speaks of the mother's love who placed it there, but there is no virtue in the kiss. Bread and wine eaten in faithful memory of the broken body and shed blood of Jesus Christ are a symbol, but there is no virtue in bread and wine to forgive sins; and eaten without reference to, and faith in, the death of Christ, they have no meaning as eucharistic service. Bread and wine are not symbols of the body and blood of Christ, nor is water the symbol of the Holy Spirit, as many so often are wont to say; but, by the use of these elements in a proper manner and in a proper spirit, they become symbolic of the things for which they are used. Remember, it is the act that is symbolic, and not the element used.

A symbol derives all of its meaning, its nature, and its mode—when mode is involved—from its original. Separate them, and the symbol has no meaning. The ring lying in the bureau drawer means nothing so far as symbolizing anyone's love is concerned. Bread and wine in the cupboard or eaten for any other purpose means nothing so far as our Lord's death is concerned. So water applied in any other way or for any other purpose than to symbolize the work of the Holy Spirit is not Christian baptism, whatever else it may be. Why? Because the connection between the symbol and its original is broken and the symbol is destroyed.

Immersion Not Baptism.

Immersion, then, is not Christian baptism because: (1) It breaks the connection between the symbol and its source, and therefore destroys the symbol. What connection is there between immersion in water and the sprinkling of the blood of Christ upon the soul by the Holy Spirit? How can the one symbolize the other? And who ever heard of a person's being immersed to represent the sprinkling of the heart from an evil conscience? Who is so blind as not to see that nothing but sprinkling the body with water can represent the sprinkling of the blood of Christ upon the soul by the Holy Ghost? (2) Immersion is not Christian baptism because it makes baptism represent the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus, things it was never intended to represent, and, therefore, breaks the connection and destroys the symbol. (3) Immersion is not Christian baptism because it ignores the work of the Holy Spirit, makes baptism the sign of another thing, and, therefore, destroys the ordinance. For it is a noted fact that all who practice exclusive immersion deny the baptism of the Holy Ghost. (4) Immersion is not baptism because it supersedes the Spirit's work and claims to be the only baptism—for there is but one (Eph. iv, 5)—and thus contradicts all the Bible says about Spirit baptism and water as its sign. (5) Immersion is not baptism because in claiming to be the only baptism it involves the heresy of water salvation. That water saves us, either in fact or figure, is too plainly taught to be denied. Baptism puts all who are baptized "into Christ and into his death"; it puts all "into one body"; it puts off the body of sin. It is a baptism into a death unto sin, and enables man to walk in a new life; and no man was ever saved without baptism any more than without the atoning death of Christ. For the one procured salvation and the other applies it. If, therefore, immersion be the only baptism or even the mode of baptism, it can have no connection with the Spirit's work; it thereby stands as the only baptism, and water is the only saving element in the universe, its application the only saving process, and its administrator the only saving agent. And so Jesus and the Holy Ghost can both take a vacation. (6) Immersion is not baptism because "baptize" never meant to immerse since the world was made, nor does any lexicon on top of earth so define it. In Greek its meaning is always generic, with no reference to mode, and in the Bible its only meaning is purification from sins by "sprinkling." The word "immerse" is not used in the Bible in connection with baptism, nor are the words "immerse," "dip," "plunge," or "bury" in connection with the mode of baptism, either of water or Spirit baptism.

Baptism a Burial.

Real baptism is a "burial," so called by St. Paul (Rom. vi, Col. ii), but not because of its mode but its effect. And this effect, mark ye, was produced by the baptism of the Spirit, not by water baptism. It was performed "without hands," it put off the body of sin, it was a baptism "into Christ and into his death," it made all who experienced it "complete in him," and the whole effect was conditional upon the same faith and power that raised Christ from the dead. Whose faith and power was it that raised Christ from the dead—that of the Romans or his own? Let those answer who can.

Again, the word "buried" is not here used in the literal, but in the figurative sense. To express the Spirit's effect upon the soul, Paul calls it a "crucifixion," a "planting together," a "circumcision made without hands." And to refer any or all of these figures of speech to baptism by immersion is simply absurd.

Baptism a State.

Baptism is not only an act to be performed, but a state into which the act brings the individual baptized. When a man is once baptized he is always baptized, and can never be unbaptized. When a man is married he is always married, and can never be unmarried. If his wife should die, he is a widower; if he should die, his wife is a widow; and should they disagree and separate, he is called a "grass widower" and she a "grass widow." They can never be just as they were before marriage. Just so a man may violate his baptismal covenant and be guilty of spiritual adultery; but this will only leave him in a worse state than before his baptism, just as the violation of the marital vow leaves a man or woman worse than before.

Marriage transfers a man or woman from the single to the married state, and they can never return. Baptism transfers a person from an unbaptized to a baptized state, and he cannot return to it except at the expense of moral character. This is true whether of Spirit baptism or its symbol, water baptism. This is why Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized (for if he were ever baptized, he is yet) shall be saved." This is also why Paul said to the Romans: "For as many as were baptized are baptized. Therefore, we are baptized (not were), buried with him by baptism into death." Our baptism kills us to the former state, and places us in a new relationship with Christ. But baptism does not drown us; it crucifies us. There is quite a difference in being drowned in water and crucified on a cross.

Mode Not a Matter of Choice.

Some people claim that the mode of baptism is non-essential, that whatever mode satisfies the conscience of the subject is sufficient, and in support of this claim quote St. Peter's words: "Not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God" (I Peter iii, 21). Such construction of Scripture not only displays ignorance and loose thinking, but does Peter a gross injustice. What he means is the very opposite of such an idea. That is, as the conscience has been sprinkled from evil by the blood of Christ applied by the Holy Spirit, and, therefore, made good, void of offense toward God, water baptism symbolizes or answers to this fact. So, instead of leaving the mode optional, he directly and plainly affirms it to be sprinkling. For the mode of the Spirit being always affusion, water, to symbolize or answer to it, must also be applied by affusion. This, then, is why we baptize by affusion.

TRAINING SCHOOL AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

By Rev. E. S. Lewis.

We have just witnessed the closing exercises of the first Conference-wide Training School for our Sunday school teachers and workers. Eighty-three were enrolled and about sixty of them attended the classes. Forty-nine were awarded certificates for having completed the course of study. We all felt that a good beginning had been made. Our student body was a representative one. One fine girl of seventeen completed the course and one splendid matron of sixty-five. There were students present from every district in the Conference, and pastors from six districts out of the eight. Twenty different pastors came, some just to look in and pass on, but some to take the work offered. One great regret we had was that so few of our pastors and superintendents were present. The date of the school was not ideal but it was the best date we could make. We hope that we shall be able to hold the school next year in the early part of June.

Our faculty was superb. Mr. E. E. French, Superintendent of the McKendree Sunday School, Nashville, had a very large and popular class in Sunday School Organization and Administration. Some of the class were "jarred" at times by some things Mr. French said, but they were there the next time on the front seat. His work was fresh and vigorous and will be sure to help get some of us out of the ruts.

Mrs. W. B. Ferguson, of Oklahoma City, greatly pleased and inspired a large class in Primary Methods. Mrs. Clay Smith had a similar experience with a splendid class in Junior Methods.

Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, of Shelby, taught the class for the Adult Department, and she did it with great success.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, of New Albany, taught the class in Pupil Study. His work is of the highest order. This same Stephens is destined to be one of our leaders right away.

Rev. R. H. Ruff gave a popular course on "The Program of the Christian Religion." Brother Ruff is thoroughly educated, a Christian gentleman, and has a great future. He is a born teacher.

Besides this splendid bill of fare we had six fine lectures and two eloquent sermons. Daily vesper services were enjoyed and the recreation hour was wonderfully popular. Some of us were undecided as to whether the best ball was played by the dignified Grenada pastor, the Shelby pastor or the Clarksdale primary superintendent. The editor of the Advocate appeared on the scene during a very hot game. He was sent to the bat, but after one fly and some double-quick running around the diamond, he concluded he had better save what little energy he had left for the big sermon he was to preach the next day.

The atmosphere of the school was a tonic to the flabby faith some of us had. A course taken at a school such as we had is worth ten times more than the same course taken as an individual student at home. You miss the fellowship, the uplift that comes from contact with others.

Not the least agency for good among the various things we had were the two banquets, one given by the men and the other by the women. A fellow who would turn away from a wholesome entertainment like the two we had and seek the belated pleasures of the modern dance can never look himself in the face any more. If the church will do enough of this sort of work, and keep at it, the work of the devil will be much more difficult.

The school was domiciled in Grenada College, and our public exercises were held in the new chapel. What a magnificent dormitory Brother Countiss has erected out there! According to present prices the dormitory is easily worth a quarter of a million dollars. Brother Countiss has recently secured the promise of a $50,000 contribution to the College by one of our wealthy men, in the near future, though it is not available just at this time. Hurrah for Countiss and Brownlee!

The Sunday School Board expects to put a fine young woman in the field next year to give all her time to the promotion of our Elementary Department. In order to do that we must have an assessment of not less than $5,000 for the work. But it will be the best missionary money we ever spent.

We have already begun to think about our school for another year. Ringing resolutions were passed asking that the school be held again next year, and on a bigger scale. Our best endeavors shall be given to the carrying out of these resolutions.

HERE AND THERE THROUGH DIXIE.

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson of New York says the city pastor should be given a three months' vacation every year. No doubt this statement is true, especially as it applies to lengthy pastorates, and it is equally true that every evangelist should occasionally enjoy a period of absolute rest from his strenuous and exacting labor. But the fields everywhere are white unto the harvest, the laborers are few, the calls urgent, and the King's business requires haste.

Leaving Dallas, Texas, July 9, in company with my wife and children, we set out for Memphis, Tenn., which city we reached on schedule time. It would be difficult to give even a faint outline of the vast and varied regions that lay along our route. The more I travel, the more I am impressed with the unlimited resources which are found in every part of the South. Our mineral wealth has barely been touched, and we have yet to learn the possibilities of our Southern soil. The salubrious climate attracts thousands of tourists and health seekers from every section of the country. The Southern farmer wisely diversifies his crops, and is the most independent and prosperous man among us. Reaching Memphis, my family took the Southern train for Elkmont Springs, Tenn. Leaving Memphis over the I. C. system I proceeded to Hazlehurst, Miss., to fill an engagement. On every hand were signs of thrift and prosperity. The bending heavens smiled on the bounteous earth, reflecting, in some measure, the beauty and innocence of man's primeval home. As I passed through Jackson, the former home of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, my heart was thrilled with the memory of that eminent preacher and servant of God. Bishop Galloway was easily one of the most gifted orators our church has produced, and his memory is held sacred throughout the bounds of Southern Methodism. His widow still resides in Jackson, and his son also, who is said to be the best physician in the city.

Reaching Hazlehurst, I was greeted by the pastor, Brother W. W. Graves, who took me to the best room in the hotel. I was delighted to meet Brother J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder, and several pastors of the Brookhaven District. Dr. Leggett is closing his fourth year on the district. His labors have been abundant, and the church has prospered under his administration. Brother Graves is serving his second year, and spares no pains to make his ministry effective. The meeting was under headway when I arrived, and grew in interest and power till the last service. Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, favored us with his presence, and Governor Russell was present at one of our meetings. I found Brother Graves congenial, and helpful in every way. When it comes to real refinement, and orthodox Christian culture, the citizens of Hazlehurst stand in the forefront. I shall always remember and cherish the cordial and considerate treatment I received at their hands.

Monday after the meeting closed, I left for New Orleans, the Crescent City, and the leading metropolis of the South. There I was met by some good friends whom I had known in other years. I found lodgment in the Grunewald Hotel and remained there two days. It was a real joy to meet and commune with friends I had served thirteen years ago. I said while I was pastor there that I would be willing to spend the rest of my life in New Orleans and haven't changed my mind. During my stay I called at the Advocate office, and found Brother Henry T. Carley at his post. I enjoyed my intercourse with him. The New Orleans Advocate is ably edited, and should be widely circulated. My next stop was at Oakland, Miss., where I spent the night with my good friend, Mr. Jas. Moore, whose Christian hospitality and brotherly love I appreciated. The next day I went to Memphis, spent the night, then took the train for Decatur, Ala. On the train it was my good fortune to meet Bishop Mouzon and his accomplished wife and Dr. W. C. Watson, my former presiding elder, who were in route to Lake Junaluska. The Bishop appeared to be in good health, and is doing excellent work, not only in his episcopal district, but wherever occasion calls him. Changing cars at Decatur, I left for Elkmont Springs, and spent some time with my family. I then found my way to Birmingham, the home of my boyhood, and there spent a short time with relatives and friends. It always affords me much pleasure to visit the Magic City, and to note its rapid growth and great prosperity. Birmingham is a city of great churches, and the leading churches here are blest with eminent preachers. Our First Church, of which Dr. George Stuart is pastor, is one of the leading churches of Southern Methodism. I visited the office of the Alabama Christian Advocate, but the editor, Dr. L. C. Branscomb, was away. This paper is quite popular and deserves the extensive circulation it enjoys.

Leaving Birmingham over the Frisco, I returned to Dallas and from thence to Hereford, Texas, where ample preparations have been made for a union meeting, and where by the blessing of God we expect gratifying results.

By the way, Bishop W. F. McMurry holds this Conference this fall for the second time, to the great delight of the brethren.

When Xavier, the celebrated missionary of the Middle Ages, started on his extensive tour to the Orient, he passed near his ancestral home, and his companions asked him if he would not stop and greet his friends and kindred. With his heart burning with zeal for the perishing heathen, he replied, "No, I will defer that pleasure until I meet them in heaven." If such lofty zeal and consecration possessed Protestant preachers and people in America, we might reasonably look for the world to be evangelized in this generation.

Dallas, Texas.

A REPLY TO BROTHER HUGGIN.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

If it were not for the fact that Brother Huggin seems to want a reply, I would not deem it necessary to ask the editor for further space, because Brother Huggin, so far from touching the main points in my argument concerning the spiritual status of children, discussed only side issues such as the meaning of conversion and the salvation of the heathen, as if these matters, however interesting, had some connection with the topic under discussion; but if he wishes to argue such questions, I am at his service, so far as the editor will allow.

If I indulged in remarks on the difference between conversion and regeneration, it was because Brother Huggin had previously injected that subject into the controversy although foreign to it. Since he asks me the direct question if I believe the Jews who said, "Men and brethren, what shall we do," etc., had been converted, I shall have to answer, no; they were not converted—only under conviction for sin, but were doubtless converted later, and were among the three thousand who were saved. As for Saul of Tarsus, I shall have to reply that he was not only converted on the road to Damascus but, so far as I am able to discern, his conversion included his regeneration then and there. I am unable to find any evidence that he was converted on the way to the city and three days later regenerated, as Brother Huggin implies. Brother Huggin asseverates: "To be born of the Spirit is to be converted, but to be converted is not always to be born of the Spirit," and then adds, "Unless one can see the difference and make a distinction between conversion and regeneration, I do not see how one can be a sound theologian." Brother Huggin has undoubtedly made a distinction without a difference—the fatal blunder of many controversialists. Is he really anxious to know what conversion means? If so, I shall take pleasure in informing him. The term is derived from the Latin word conversio, and in theology signifies a spiritual and moral change attending a change of belief; a change of heart; a change of the ruling disposition of the soul, involving a transformation of the outward life. So says Mr. Webster, and if this definition does not involve regeneration, I do not know the meaning of words. The truth is, conversion includes in its theological content all those spiritual processes which have their inception in conviction for sin, ultimating in the blessed experience of regeneration.

It is not worth while to discuss the possible salvation of the heathen who have not the gospel except to say that it is beyond me to imagine one so obdurate of heart as to deny that God in his abundant goodness has made some provision for them, and I believe that the heathen who lives up to the light that he has will be saved. This is the teaching of the second chapter of Romans, which Brother Huggin admits his inability to see. True, as he quotes, St. Paul says, "By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified in his sight," but he is talking of those who have the gospel; hence, Brother Huggin's quotation misses the mark.

At last, however, Brother Huggin does approximate the subject of our controversy when he asks, "Is it not wonderful, if infants are born in such a state as not to need regeneration except as they be defiled by their own sins, that some people were not found that had escaped sin and the necessity of the new birth?" Yes, it would have been wonderful indeed, so I pause just long enough to cite Brother Huggin to one instance—John, the Baptist, of whom it is written that he was filled with the Holy Ghost from his mothers womb. As Jesus said to the people, so say I to Brother Huggin, "Search the Scriptures"—at least, let him read Luke 1:15 and Matt. 21:15, 16.

Brother Huggin asks me to show how the "dying grace" theory is Calvinistic, although I had, in my articles, shown clearly that very thing. But for his satisfaction, I will set it down again: A certain number of men were elected to be saved and a certain number to be lost. Non-elect infants, therefore, dying in infancy are lost. To escape this horrible conclusion, some theologians, who were not able to swing clear of such Calvinistic teaching, invented the "dying grace" theory for which there is not a scintilla of scripture. If so, let Brother Huggin produce it, giving book, chapter, and verse, and that will settle the controversy.

But to the point. If depravity excludes from the kingdom, then all children are excluded because all are born depraved; but if depravity excludes from the kingdom on earth, it will also exclude from the kingdom in heaven. Therefore, children dying in infancy are lost, and the teaching of the Primitive Baptist Church that "there are infants in hell a span long," is true. There is only one way to escape this logical conclusion and that is to invent a "dying grace" theory, as the theologians with Calvinistic tendencies have done; but such a theory has absolutely no scriptural basis. So certain am I of the accuracy of my statement that I challenge Brother Huggin to produce a single passage from the Bible in support of the "dying grace" theory—just one, if you please, from Holy Writ, fairly interperted, and I will admit that all my reasoning falls to pieces, world without end!

All children are born depraved. But the depravity does not exclude from the kingdom. Therefore, children are not excluded from the kingdom. Let Brother Huggin refute that.

If children are not excluded from the kingdom it follows, of course, that they are members of the kingdom; but membership in the kingdom is qualification for heaven at death. Therefore, children dying in infancy are qualified for heaven without the interposition of some mysterious operation of grace, as Calvinistic theologins have vainly imagined. What will Brother Huggin do with that?

Either children are born into the world inside of the kingdom or outside the kingdom. If the former be true, dying in infancy they go to heaven; if the latter be true, dying in infancy they go to hell. These conclusions are reasonable deductions of irresistible logic. Which horn of the dilemma does Brother Huggin prefer?

Every utterance of Christ concerning children is based upon the assumption—his assumption—that they are members of the kingdom. "Ye must be born again," was addressed primarily to Nicodemus; secondly, to those in like spiritual condition, and certainly this can not be said of children of whom Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, for such belong to the kingdom."

Brother Huggin quotes, "By one man's disobedience many were made sinners," but he conveniently omitted the latter part of the verse, "So by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." He also forgot to quote St. Paul's other words, "By the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life"—life to adults conditioned upon faith, life to all children unconditionally through the atonement of Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Brother Huggin can not baptize a baby without putting the stamp of his approval upon the fact that children are born into the world inside the kingdom, for the ritual for baptism of infants declares that "all men, though fallen in Adam, are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer." Now, will Brother Huggin show us the necessity of their regeneration as a prerequisite for their entrance into the kingdom if they are born into the world in Christ?

Now, so far as I am concerned, since Brother Huggin has not and can not answer my argument, and can not produce the scripture in substantiation of the "dying grace" theory, this ends the controversy.

WANTED—A VENTURESOME, RECKLESS FAITH.

By Rev. Trevor H. Davies, D.D., Pastor of the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, Canada.

"Action coarsens thought," declared Amiel in a characteristic passage. He desired to live in a dream-world too ethereal for the touch of concrete and practical duties. His ideas were to be guarded from expression. They would lose their beauty and refinement by entering the world of action.

Christianity has no such fear. It has a genius for the open. It is nothing if it is not practical. Its spirit is always aggressive. It can not live without expression. Its sublime ideas are to be clarified and tested by action. It will hold its own in the study and the lecture hall, and will welcome investigation everywhere, but its supreme justification is to be found in life and conduct. "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it is of God."

The peril of a church which is not evangelistic is that it should become heretical. The test of doctrine is to be found in experience. Some astronomers have asserted that our sun is a dark body radiating dark beams, but that those become luminous when they enter an atmosphere. The affirmations of the church have at times been obscured by her remoteness from the world. She would have been stronger in faith and more lustrous in hope had she been more evangelistic in temper.

Never was her opportunity fairer than to-day. A world striving to forget God is falling to pieces. The modern mind, thinking it has outsoared the New Testament, has gone mad. The attempt to weave a new ethic has deluged our world with barbarism and cruelty. A material philosophy has led the world to chaos; selfishness is sweeping the lands like a pestilence.

Christianity has its challenge, and it is one that goes down to the bedrock of civilization. Edward Carpenter has written a book entitled "Civilization—Its Cause and Cure." The title makes one pause. We were so proud of our civilization but a few years ago, and now there are none who pay it reverence. But can we find a cure? We need have no hesitation in replying that the remedy is in our Lord Jesus Christ. Christianity has no need of an apologist. It stands vindicated by the happenings of recent years and vindicated to an extent which almost entitles us to speak of it as a new revelation.

We are called in this critical hour to a new committal to the cause of Christ; to confront, in his name, non-Christian assumptions and principles with a calm but determined assertion of his supremacy; to awaken a new and passionate loyalty in the hearts of our young people to their Lord, so that his standard may be carried by their strong hands into every department of life—political, social, commercial, domestic. Action will justify its teaching. When we think of a world Christianized, we think of a world harmonized. Christ is strong enough to bear the government upon his shoulders, he and no other. We want a faith reckless in its daring, full of challenge and venture and enterprise. Our rallying cry is that of the warrior-monks of old, "Christus Imperator." It is most encouraging to our mission to look at it afresh from the standpoint of the present world's situation.

The Primacy of the Spiritual.

Visiting the great cathedrals of Europe, John Ruskin found some which had fallen before their time. It was not the sacrilegious hand of the robber or blasphemer or infidel which had pulled down the walls, leaving only a few silent arches or moldering ruins as pathetic memorials of their former glory. They had fallen because the builders had placed lying stones in the foundations and within the walls. And the years had discovered, as the years always do discover, "the refuge of lies."

We are standing amid the ruins of state systems and social systems in which men had thought to spend their days. It was not the war which caused their dissolution, though it may have accelerated the process of destruction. They carried destruction within themselves and nothing could avert those creeping movements of decay. They perished because materialism and force are insecure foundations. Men built in pride, and the structure fell because the foundations were rotten. Unless the bases of life lay hold upon realities, they are sure to collapse in the hour of pressure. The ultimate realities are spiritual.

Looking with sadness upon these shattered hopes, we hear the Master's word, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." These "square-hewn blocks of righteousness and cornerstones of faithfulness" are the only solid and substantial bases of human well-being. We remember that Christianity is essentially a spiritual religion. The religion of the Spirit is the only religion which can help us now.

The Sanity of Unselfishness.

The Christian law of service has been vindicated as the supremely sane and rational law of life. We are a little tired of hearing "practical men" talk of the Christian ethic as "beautiful" and "sublime." It is all that, of course, but what we claim now is that it is the only sensible and practical and useful way of living in this prosaic and matter-of-fact world. What has the much vaunted doctrine of "enlightened selfishness" done for us? It was propounded by men who declared the Christian ideal impracticable, and it has gone as far as it could go in the direction of smashing the whole social fabric which it was fashioned to sustain. We challenge it not merely because it is so stupid and irrational—of course, in the last resort a wrong principle is always a stupid one. The ingenious idea of adjusting our social affairs by "contracts" based on "enlightened selfishness" has been exploded before our eyes on a world scale. No sooner does one party to the contract obtain the advantage of power than it repudiates the contract and tears up the "scrap of paper."

The present conflict between classes is the last word in impotence and futility. As St. Paul suggests, nothing could be more irrational than for the brain to quarrel with the hand or the eye to have a personal controversy with the foot.

The Christian law of service is the only one which can redeem us from the folly of futility. For nineteen hundred years Christ has been preaching sanity to a race distraught by its passions.

Some people tell us we are standing at the crossroads. We left them long ago and have now completely lost our way. We find ourselves down some blind alley and can go no further, where we spend the weary days in glaring suspiciously and angrily into each other's faces. At the crossroads stands One who points to us the human way which is also the divine way, and, therefore, the only right way. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Edmund Burke said, "Law can not save human society by the little acts of great statesmen." We have learned it again and this time at tremendous cost. Human nature is capable of unselfishness.

The Gospel of Human Inadequacy.

That a sense of inadequacy has fallen upon the world must be evident to all. It would be easy to expound by the testimonies of statesmen, generals, leaders of commerce, industry and education the great words of St. Paul: "We have had the sentence of death in ourselves that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God who raiseth the dead."

We have, however, sometimes missed the evangel which is embedded in this chastened mood. It means that we were not intended to stand alone. It is a most surprising thought that life without God is without hope. If we find that human life is incomplete without him and lost apart from his guidance and fellowship, we may lift up our hearts with confidence.

There is the gospel of redemption for which the church should make no apology, but which she must proclaim with eager, thankful voice to nations and their leaders overwhelmed by the exigencies and responsibilities and perils of the world situation, to churches confronted by a task that is beyond all their human resources and to individuals burdened by "the weight of chance desires." We shall succeed just so far and so quickly as God is set free by our faith to do his own work in the realms of human life. "With God all things are possible," declared our Lord, meaning that it is not in man alone, nor yet in God alone, but in man with God, that the work is to be accomplished.

James Renwick, who died in the Grassmarket, Edinburgh, for Christ and his covenant, wrote to a friend of his: "The earth is round, and the heart of man three-nooked, and therefore this can not be filled by that." The nooks, the crevices remain unoccupied. Our discontent is an evidence of our birthright, our dependence a token of our sonship.

These are some of the thoughts which should sustain us and enhearten us at this time. The religion the world needs must be spiritual, it must bring to us a new ethic, and it must lead us to complete our incompleteness in God. In a word, the world through its need is crying out for Christ.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Some days since I addressed a letter to each pastor in the Port Gibson District about some help to relieve a certain situation in the bounds of our district, and some of the brethren have overlooked the matter.

Brethren, I know that you expect to look after this matter, and I hope you will do so in the near future, as this is an important case.

I am very thankful to those who have responded, and will say that I will be the same to those who will do so in the near future.

THE WAY TO TREAT A CHILD.

Sir William Napier once in his walks met with a little girl five years old sobbing over a pitcher she had broken. She, in her innocence, asked him to mend it. He told her that he could not mend it, but that he would meet her trouble by giving her six-pence to buy a new one, if she would meet him at the same hour the next evening, as he had no money in his purse that day. When he returned home he found that there was an invitation waiting for him, which he particularly wished to accept. But he could not then have met the little girl at the time stated, and he gave up the invitation, saying, "I could not disappoint her, she trusted in me so implicitly." That was the true Christian English gentleman and soldier.—A. P. Stanley.

The Home Circle

TAKING HOME ELIZA.

Larry and Max were a proud pair when their father said they might have the job of taking home Eliza, Uncle Alec's red heifer, which had strayed to their farm in the night. As he wanted to send along a sample of his good apples and turnips, he told the boys that they might as well go in the buggy. They could put the baskets in front, he said, and lead Eliza by a long rope.

The boys decided to take turns at driving and leading. As they moved slowly down the road behind old Ben, with Larry driving and Max holding the rope and Eliza following, they wished that they might meet some one whom they knew. The wish came true, for at the first turn in the road they met Clem Talley.

"Hello!" cried Max. "Want to get in?"

Clem looked surprised to see them driving alone, but all he said was that he had a new puzzle to show them, and did not mind if he did get in. Clem was a fat boy, and, to make room for him, Larry and Max had to get out and move the two baskets to the back of the buggy. The space behind was small, but by raising the lid and putting up the buggy top they were able to wedge the baskets in. Then they themselves climbed in again, and were soon busy with the puzzle.

It was such a wonderful puzzle that Larry and Max almost forgot to take turns at driving and they quite forgot to keep an eye on Eliza, as their father had charged them to do. Once Max remembered to look out of the little window at the back.

"Eliza's all right," he said. "I can see her tail switching at the flies."

Old Ben turned in at Uncle Alec's farm before any of them knew they were there. Uncle Alec himself came out to open the gate.

"Well, well!" he cried. "I didn't know you two fellows could manage Ben alone!"

"That's not all," said Max, with pride. "Look what's back behind the buggy."

Uncle Alec looked. "Why, if it isn't Eliza!" he said, in a pleased tone.

"There's something else back there for you, too," Larry added, as he started to let down Ben's check-rein.

"What else?" he asked; "I don't see anything but Eliza."

The boys laughed. Even Clem had to smile. "How about all that stuff in the baskets?" Larry said. But Uncle Alec declared that he did not see any "stuff."

Max and Larry hurried round to the back of the buggy, still laughing. But their laughter stopped when they looked into the baskets. Both were empty. Not a turnip or an apple was to be seen.

"Why, they couldn't have jostled out!" Larry gasped.

"And nobody took them," said Max. "We didn't meet a soul anywhere on the road."

"Did you keep a good watch behind you?" their uncle asked.

The boys did not understand. "Nobody crept up behind," Max insisted, "because we'd have seen him while we were watching Eliza." They all three seemed bewildered.

Uncle Alec was looking hard at the heifer. "So you watched Eliza, did you?" he asked.

Larry and Max grew slowly red in the face.

"I forgot to," Larry said, in a low voice.

"I saw her tail—once," faltered Max, redder than ever.

"How about her head?" asked Uncle Alec; "her mouth, for example?"

He turned away and began to pull burs out of the heifer's red side. All at once the boys understood.

Max spoke first. "But, Uncle Alec, could a little cow like that eat all those apples and turnips?"

"Pshaw! That was just a lunch for this cow," was Uncle Alec's reply. "But, never mind; maybe she needed it after going without her breakfast." He felt sorry for the boys, they looked so downcast.

"We'll have to tell father," Larry said bravely, and Max nodded. "He'll never let us drive again."

"Yes, he will," said Uncle Alex, "after I tell him you've been punished enough. But don't forget; next time you lead Eliza watch every inch of her. You hear?"—Nancy Byrd Turner, in Youth's Companion.

GRANDFATHER'S STORY.

Bobby rocked so hard that the big chair in which he was sitting went bump against the piazza rail.

Grandfather looked over the top of his newspaper just as Bobby knew he would. "What's the trouble, grandson?" he asked, just as Bobby knew he would.

"I've got to write a composition," answered Bobby, frowning at the sheet of white paper.

"Well, why don't you do it?" said grandfather, his eyes twinkling.

"Don't know what to write," answered Bobby.

"Suppose I tell you a story," said grandfather, after a moment.

Bobby scampered across the piazza. "Stories are lots nicer than compositions," said Bobby, snuggling close to grandfather.

"Before I begin," said grandfather, "perhaps you can tell what you hear whenever you go to the telegraph office."

"I hear the telegraph talking," answered Bobby promptly. "It says, 'Click, click, click.'"

"How long have you been hearing it say, 'Click, click, click'?" asked grandfather.

"Why, always," answered Bobby.

"Quite true," said grandfather, "and the reason you have always heard the telegraph talk, Bobby, is because a long time before you were born, a brave man had the idea that he could harness electricity and make it carry messages."

"Why do you call him a brave man, grandfather?" asked Bobby.

"That is the story," answered grandfather. "Once upon a time a baby boy was born in the town where Paul Revere waited to see the lights on the steeple of the Old North Church, the town of Charlestown, which is just across the Charles River from Boston. The baby boy's father, who was a minister, named his little son, Samuel. Now, Samuel from a tiny lad took great delight in looking at pictures, so it was no wonder that when he grew up he began to paint pictures himself. But while he was painting pictures he also became interested in electricity, and with that idea in his head of harnessing electricity and making it carry messages, he straightway set to work to see what he could do.

"Hardly any one believed in this idea of Samuel's, and for years he worked on, getting his living in the meanwhile by teaching a few pupils and painting a few pictures.

"At last Congress helped him try the experiment, and when the experiment proved to be a success and people found they could send messages quicker by wire than they could by messengers on horseback—for all this happened, Bobby, long before the age of the railroad—my! but everybody was in a hurry to send messages by wire. Now, Bobby, that is the story of brave Samuel F. B. Morse. Why was he brave? Because he kept on fighting till the victory was won."

Grandfather stopped speaking and looked down at Bobby, but Bobby was watching a brand-new yellow butterfly balancing itself on a brand-new yellow dandelion.

Suddenly Bobby looked up at grandfather.

"Grandfather!" said Bobby, "that composition is what I've got to fight!"

"So it is! So it is!" replied grandfather, "and, Bobby, always remember the name of brave Samuel Morse whenever you have a composition or any other problem to fight, and how he kept on fighting till the victory was won."—Gertrude Winham Fielder, in Zion's Herald.

THE USE OF ICE.

English men-of-war have no ice-making machines on board, as do our ships, and everybody knows how the English fail to understand us on the subject of the use of ice, especially in our drinks.

An English officer was aboard one of our ships of the Asiatic fleet, and, on being served with a nice drink, commented on the delights of having cool water aboard. The American officer responded with an offer of a small cake of ice, which was sent the following morning. Meeting the Englishman ashore a week later, the American asked him if he had enjoyed the ice.

"Enjoy it, old top? Why, do you know, that was the first cold bath I've had since I left England!"—Everybody's Magazine.

MEASURING THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM,

Let us, with Zechariah, measure the walls of Jerusalem, tell the resources and the possibilities of the kingdom of God, and take courage. The prophet Zechariah was associated with Haggai in the rebuilding of the temple, after the return of a remnant of the people from Babylonian captivity. It was the task of Zechariah to encourage the builders of the city and the temple, a work which was beset with many difficulties from within and from without. In a symbolism suggesting Ezekiel he set before his people the glories of the completed task and the glories of the future, when God should once more write his name in Jerusalem.

Let us consider one of his symbols as a thing of suggestive value for us in the work of the kingdom today. The prophet saw a young man with a measuring line in his hand. And the prophet said: "Whither goest thou?" And he replied: "To measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof." And the line of the young man was an ample one and the measure of the city was great. And the prophet was thus instructed that the Jerusalem of the future should not be a narrow, walled town, but a city vast and glorious.

When the stranger visited the ancient city of Sparta, and marveled that the city had no walls, such as all other cities had in that day, he was shown a host of Spartan warriors, like unto the handful which defended the pass of Thermopylae against the Persian hordes and perished to a man, and he was told that they were the walls of Sparta. But the young man with the measuring line told the prophet that God himself should be a wall of fire round the restored city of Jerusalem, and that God should be the glory in the midst of her. And we are bound to agree that this is a far more exalted idea of the strength of a city and a nation. The stability of the city and the state must finally depend, not upon walls and fortresses and fleets of steel, but upon the character of the citizens. And the character of the citizens must depend upon the presence and the blessing of God in the midst of them. For "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

Now, the Jerusalem of the prophet's vision is not today the Arab city of Palestine, which was dominated until recently by the degraded and cruel Turk, but it is the kingdom of God. The city of God is now no earthly locality, but it is represented by the visible Church of Christ. And may we, with the young man of Zechariah's vision, measure the city of God with an ample line? May we learn how really vast are the potential resources of the kingdom, how great are the possibilities for good—the magnitude of which shall be finally told only in eternity—how mighty is the task, and how certain the result and how glorious the consummation?

When the leaders of our church projected the great Centenary of Missions they used an ample line in measuring the resources and the boundaries of the kingdom of God. Great credit must ever be given them and our church for the use of such an ample line. For never before had the followers of Christ so large a vision of the possibilities of the kingdom. Never before had the raising of so vast a sum been attempted. The "sunset of life" gives "mystical lore," but it is often possible after the lapse of a shorter period than a lifetime to look upon things past with a greater knowledge and understanding. We see now that we did not use a line that was ample enough, ample though it was. We regret that we did not include in our askings the superannuates, education, orphanages and other things for which we are responsible, and of which the claim is so great. But it is too late to lengthen the line with which we measure our part of the kingdom.

The ample line of the young man the prophet saw in his vision had to include the men who were to build a city so great and glorious. The human wealth of the Centenary has not yet been sufficiently provided. Not enough young men and women have answered the calls to service which the Centenary has made possible. There was a time when there were more open doors than we could enter, because we had not the means to send the men who were ready to go. Now it seems we have more money than men. Have we learned to give money without giving ourselves? Have we learned to serve by proxy? Now to the task of transmuting the material wealth provided into gold of real service. Now for the consecrated young men and women of our church who will give themselves to this divine alchemy. It is significant that a young man measured the walls of a future and glorious Jerusalem with an ample line. And now is the time for the young people of our church to measure the kingdom with an ample line—to consider the claims of the ministry, of the deaconess, of the city mission worker and of the missionary in the foreign land—to answer with Isaiah: "Here am I. send me, send me."

DEATH OF REV. M. G. JENKINS.

A note from Dr. John T. Sawyer of this city informs us that he had just learned of the death of Rev. M. G. Jenkins through a letter from Brother Jenkins' daughter, Mrs. Lula M. Harris of San Antonio, Texas. She wrote as follows: "I am writing to tell you of father's death. He passed away at sunset, July 27. Pneumonia developed several days before his death and he was unconscious most of the time. We took the body to Mineola for burial. Our minister, Brother Ratieff, assisted by Brother Scott, conducted a service here, and a Masonic burial service was read in Mineola." Brother Jenkins had long been a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, having had to ask for the superannuate relation soon after he had been transferred to Louisiana. Brother Jenkins made his home in Texas, and his strength would not permit his attendance upon the sessions of the Conference where he retained his membership. We regret that we have not at this time more information concerning the life and labors of Brother Jenkins.

THE BIBLE AND THE ORATORS.

It is really a source of marvel that, while McDonogh's will—to the effect that the Bible should be read in the schools which should be founded with the proceeds of the legacy which he left to the city of New Orleans—is unblushingly not carried out, and while the Bible is not read in many of the schools of the land because of sectarian fears which are absolutely unfounded, few seem to realize that the fact that the Bible is a forbidden book in the schools takes away from the children and youth of the land the one greatest cultural and educational book in the world.

It is a surprise to find how much the orators prize it. It is a mistake to suppose that the preacher is the only man who "takes a text." A few days ago one of the "Ring" orators in New Orleans took a text about "whited sepulchres" and "dead men's bones" and proceeded to denounce one of the opposition. In a single address, the chief one before a great convention, a certain orator recently drew no less than three illustrations from the Bible. One was about the Ark of the Covenant. Another was about a "land flowing with milk and honey." The third was this, as he spoke of the more cordial relation which has come in time to exist between America and England: "As time went on the Sun of Sweet Content and Reconciliation arose with healing in its beams, so that to-day the greatest cordiality and good-will prevails." And it is significant that this same orator said, in discussing social problems of the present day: "You have to go to Holy Writ to find the fundamental principles on which the new social edifice must be upreared." Yet this Book, which is the inspiration of the poets, the artists and the orators, is a forbidden book in most of the schools of the land. And this Book, which contains "the fundamental principles on which the new social edifice must be upreared," is denied to those who are supposed to be in tutelage and training as the builders of the social edifice of the near future. Peculiar, isn't it? As difficult to understand (?), say, as the Irish Problem.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A note from Rev. W. J. Wood informs us that the work of the church is progressing satisfactorily at Duck Hill, Miss.

We have a card, under date of July 23, from Dr. Cooper in Venice. The view is of the "Canal Grande di Rialto dalla riva del vin."

Rev. J. Early Gray, our pastor at Magnolia, Miss., has recently been with Rev. R. A. Allums in a meeting at Pleasant Valley, Miss.

A pipe organ has just been installed in our church at Magnolia, Miss. It is a splendid instrument, proving to be satisfactory in every way.

President R. E. Bohbitt, of Mansfield Female College, Louisiana Conference, and his family are spending a part of the summer on the Assembly grounds, Monteagle, Tenn.

Rev. C. C. Miller, of Morgan City, La., recently assisted Rev. J. Early Gray in a fine meeting at Magnolia, Miss. There were twelve accessions to the church on profession of faith.

Rev. Bricoe Carter, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, attended the meeting of the Educational Commission at Blue Ridge, N. C., last week.

It was the editor's pleasure to meet for a few minutes Rev. W. Winans Drake, pastor of Neel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., at Lake Junaluska, N. C., last week.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, left on Monday of this week to attend a "set-up" meeting of the Educational Campaign Commission at Little Rock, Ark.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, our efficient pastor at Grenada, Miss., after attending the meeting of the Educational Commission at Blue Ridge, N. C., is spending his vacation at Lake Junaluska.

Our church at Kosciusko, Miss., has lost three of its members by death within the last three weeks—Miss Mitt Doty, Dillard Bell, and Mervin Smith. All three were splendid workers in the church.

Rev. W. H. Giles, our pastor at Donaldsonville, La., with his wife is visiting relatives at Primrose, Ga. Brother Giles is a Georgia product who is doing a fine work in the Louisiana Conference.

The American Bible Society is planning to bring its war work to completion by giving a copy of the Gospel of John, printed in raised letters, to every American soldier who was blinded in the world war.

Among the North Mississippi Conference preachers whose trails we came across last week at Lake Junaluska, were Rev. O. W. Bradley, of Corinth, Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, and Rev. B. P. Jaco, of Winona.

According to a newspaper announcement, William Edenborn, president of the Louisiana Railway and Navigation Company, has donated 160 acres of land to the Louisiana Children's Home Finding Society, to be utilized as a farm.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, preached on last Sunday at 11 a.m., at the Third Presbyterian Church, Dr. Summey, the pastor, being away. At the 8 p.m. service, Dr. J. T. Sawyer preached. Both sermons were well received.

A card from Sister T. S. Randle, Tyler, Texas, with instructions about the address of her Advocate, states that she is happy in the return of her grandson, with honorable discharge from the navy. Sister Randle is well known by our people in Louisiana.

Rev. J. D. Nesom, our pastor at Oak Grove, La., has recently returned from an extended visit to points in Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. He reports that Methodism is vigorous throughout that great territory, her pulpits being filled by strong men.

Nearly all the president of our educational institutions were in attendance at the meeting of the Educational Commission at Blue Ridge, N. C. Among them were Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Millsaps, Rev. J. R. Countiss, of Grenada, Dr. W. R. Bourne, of Centenary, and R. E. Bobbitt, of Mansfield.

One of the subscribers of the Advocate in Texas, addressed the Editor as Rev. "C. O." Carley—"Carley" being the name of the Editor, and "C. O." being the initials of the Publisher. We trust the combination represents in a way the united service Editor and Publisher are trying to give all our readers.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, the distinguished president of Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., with his family is taking a well-deserved vacation at Lake Junaluska, N. C. His indefatigable labors and great achievements in connection with the great school of which he is in charge justly entitle him to a longer rest than he is willing to take at this time.

Her Mississippi friends will learn with great sorrow of the death of Mrs. M. E. Baskin, at the home of her daughter in Conway, Ark., on July 9. She was the daughter of a Methodist preachor, Rev. T. C. Nelson. She leaves three sons, two of them ministers, and a daughter to mourn their loss. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the fifteenth wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Hogg, in the parlors of the Winfield Methodist Church, Little Rock, Ark., on Tuesday, August 24. Brother Hogg is known throughout the church as a preacher of unusual power. The Advocate extends best wishes to him and his good wife upon the happy event which they will soon celebrate.

Rev. Payton A. Sowell, one of the superannuates of the Tennessee Conference, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Williamson, of New Orleans, in her home for the summer at Montcagle, Tenn. Brother Sowell is well known to our Louisiana brethren, having supplied the Jeanerette charge. He also made his home with his daughter here in New Orleans for several years. But Brother Sowell is known to the whole church through his fine articles which appear in the church press.

We congratulate our readers upon the marked excellence of the editorial pages this week. With the exception of a few "personals," practically all the matter on these pages was prepared by Rev. R. H. Harper, the billiant pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city. His kindness in this connection made it possible for the editor to spend a few days at Grenada, Miss., Blue Ridge, Asheville, and Lake Junaluska, N. C., and Atlanta, Ga. The occasion of these visits will be dealt with in the next issue of the Advocate.

Our readers, especially those in Mississippi, will be pleased to learn that in the reorganization of the army under recent legislation, Chaplain John A. Randolph has been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and Chaplain John M. Moose has been promoted to the rank of Major. They are both members of the North Mississippi Conference, and have had many years of service at home and abroad. Chaplain Moose is the son-in-law of Dr. J. W. Boswell, who edited this paper so ably for a number of years.

Mr. Brunner M. Hunt, son of Dr. Rolfe Hunt, of Port Gibson, Miss., was licensed to preach last summer at the age of eighteen. He has been aiding some of the pastors while not engaged in his studies at Millsaps College. After a recent sermon by him at Port Gibson, his grandmother remarked that she had now heard four generations of Hunts preach. He is also of preaching stock on his mother's side, being descended from Rev. John H. Brunner, D.D., and Rev. John Key, of Tennessee. He will enter the senior class at Millsaps this fall.

Two meetings have recently been conducted, with good results, on the Magee charge, Mississippi Conference, of which Rev. S. W. Johnson is the pastor. Rev. W. H. Lane assisted in the meeting at Rial Creek. The most of the people in the neighborhood were already members of the church, so the chief result of the meeting was the quickening of the spiritual life of the membership. It was pronounced the best meeting this church had had in years. So acceptable were the services of Brother Lane that this was the second time he had assisted in a revival there, and he was given an invitation to come the third time. The other meeting was held at Sharon Grove church, where Rev. M. K. Miller of the Louise and Holly Bluff charge did the preaching. Brother Miller is a good singer as well as preacher. There were gracious results among the membership, while two were received into the church upon profession of faith. The meeting was fittingly closed with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. J. B. King, Benton, Miss., 2; Rev. Martin Hebert, New Iberia, La., 3; Mrs. J. W. Birch, Hammond, La., 2; Thos. W. Camp, Haynesville, La., 6; Rev. T. H. Porter, Victoria, Miss., 2; Rev. A. S. Brisco, Winona, Miss., 4; Rev. H. E. Raley, Matherville, Miss., 4; Rev. J. A. Wells, Gloster, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. Wood, Duck Hill, Miss., 6; Rev. W. H. Lane, Jackson, Miss., 4; Rev. H. A. Wood, Quitman, Miss., 4.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I am sure you will rejoice to know that our Conference is now in the twelfth place on the list, having moved from the twentieth place in the report for July. Now for another move toward the top during August.

I thank you for what you have made possible by your co-operation, and appeal to each of you to do your very best during this month, in order that we may continue to climb toward the top. You can help wondrously by seeing that your Church Cabinets are at work assisting the Treasurer to collect the money.

Be sure that the Treasurer deposits his collection in the bank to the credit of John E. Edgerton, Treasurer, and notifies W. D. Hawkins, Conference Centenary Treasurer, or sends it direct to the Treasurer, and that the Treasurer makes his reports to the Conference Treasurer every month. Also, that if the Treasurer has not already made a list of the subscribers in the "Eight Day Drive" with amount each subscribed, have him do so. If I can serve you, let me know. I am glad to represent the Centenary in your church either by an address, or give you the pictures of the wonderful work being done. I can put on the pictures with or without electric lights.

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS.
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

NOTICE.

Brother D. S. Harmon, of Meridian, who for the past two years has been Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, having moved out of the State, it becomes necessary for the Sunday School Board to elect a temporary successor. Rev. H. F. Tolle, of Jackson, Miss., has kindly agreed to act in this capacity until the ensuing session of the Mississippi Conference at Brookhaven, Miss., and we request all of our pastors and Sunday school superintendents to take notice and make their remittances to Brother Tolle at Jackson, Miss., and to communicate with him concerning such matters as pertain to the treasurer's office. B. F. LEWIS, Secretary.
Mississippi Conf. Sunday School Board.

A man when he is dead will ask the pastor to hold a whole service just for him. Yet the same man while he is still alive will ignore several thousand perfectly good services that others would be glad to share with him.—Dr. J. A. Holmes.

MRS. MARY ANN FERGUSON (nee Hutchins) was born in Lawrence County, Mississippi, February 13, 1845. She died in Baxterville, Miss., May 6, 1920. She was the wife of Mr. Albert J. Ferguson, of Beauregard, Miss., who died August 16, 1886. She was the mother of nine children, four sons and five daughters, all of whom were reared to mature manhood and womanhood. Three of these children, two daughters and one son, preceded her to the heavenly land. The above dates and facts make the principal epochs in a life. But it would be hard to write her biography. Those who knew her best refer to her as a noble and indulgent wife, a fond, self-sacrificing mother. For the past fifteen years it was the happy privilege of the writer not only to know her but to be regarded as one of her best personal friends, and I knew her to be a most devoted Christian. She was a Methodist of the old type. She believed in prayer, and by trusting in God, and by precept and example she was able, single-handed, to guide her large family of children toward God and heaven. The children are all grown up, and are now advancing toward middle life. A nobler family of men and women it has never been my privilege to know. One of her sons, the Rev. W. J. Ferguson, has been for thirty years a most useful member of the Mississippi Conference. She considered her preacher boy with the very highest regard, believing that God had not only saved him, but had called him to the ministry in answer to her prayers. For many years she lived with her three sons, J. D., George, and Albert. They were true, noble, devoted sons. Oh, how she prayed for their salvation! And God has answered mother's prayers; a little more than a year before her death Albert was called, and he was ready to go. He told her she would find him in heaven, and then in a few days a daughter was called. She was also ready. And I feel sure, as one by one the others are called, they will go home to mother. Oh, what a priceless treasure is the memory of a good Christian mother! And to live right and love God and meet mother should be the ambition and aspiration of us all. Her devoted friend,

J. E. WILLIAMS.

Hattiesburg, Miss.

ELBERT R. DAY was born, November 29, 1833, in Holmes County, Mississippi, and died at his home in Stoneville, Washington County, July 19, 1920. A good man has gone to his reward. Brother Day was a native Mississippian. He was married to Miss Martha Ratliff, of Holmes County, about fifty-five years ago. To this union were born eleven children; seven died young, three survive the father—a son, E. N. Day, Mrs. L. E. Johnson, and Mrs. D. E. Reinhold, and five grandchildren. He has been an active member of the Methodist Church at Leland for a long time, but of late years has shown an increased and growing interest in religion. The writer of this memoir has known him since last December, and his activity and spiritual growth seemed to become a real passion with him until he was stricken, I think, in February; then his resignation and patience under great suffering were so unusual that his many friends were greatly exercised and charmed by his spirit of faith, patience and full consciousness that life end was at hand. He was a spiritual uplift to all who visited him. His good wife preceded him about three years. She was born in the same year that he was, so they lived long together. When about 65 years old he was planting some big-shell pecans in each corner of the yard and his good wife said, "Mr. Day, what are you doing?" He said, "Planting pecans." "Don't you know they will do you no good?" He said, "I expect to live to climb the trees and frail off pecans for you to pick up." This actually took place. He died in his 87th year full of years and grace.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful (hot) (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea—1 glassful (cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

Mr. Dodson Warns Against Use of Treacherous, Dangerous Calomel.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

IN YE OLDEN TIME

Hoop skirts were worn by those who first asked the druggist for, and insisted on having, the genuine Golden Medical Discovery put up by Dr. Pierce over fifty years ago. Dress has changed very much since then! But Dr. Pierce's medicines contain the same dependable ingredients. They are standard today just as they were fifty years ago.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the stomach and blood cannot be surpassed by any remedy today.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak women has never been equalled for the distressing complaints incident to womanhood. What others say:

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"Ever since I can remember Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my family. When I was quite a young girl I had my first experience with them. I was in a miserable condition when my father gave me the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' but my cough soon stopped, and it completely restored my health. Then, when it came to the critical time of life I depended entirely on the 'Favorite Prescription and it brought me thru in remarkably good health."—MRS. CARRIE DIODENE, 1818 Baronne St.

BOYS' INSTITUTE IN HOUMA, LA.

An Institute week for boys was held at the MacDonnell Wesley House and School at Houma, La., under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Council during the last week of July, 1920. There were fifteen boys enrolled, three from Houma, one from Montegut, and eleven from Bayou Blue, all of whom belong either to our church or Sunday school. Mrs. Laura M. White and Miss Ella K. Hooper, who occupy and have charge of the MacDonnell Wesley House, were the promoters and supervisors of the work of the institute. Revs. E. V. Duplantis, Jas. A. Knight, and Edgar Dufrene, ministerial students of Centenary College, were requested to assist in the work and were appointed as leaders over the boys. And it would be a grave injustice not to mention the indispensable service of a good cook who entered heartily into the spirit of the institute and who faithfully did her part of the work of feeding the boys, because, as you know, it is some big job to feed boys. The foregoing details comprise the organization of the institute with which it operated.

The purpose of the institute was to teach the boys the fundamental principles of physical, intellectual, spiritual, and social development, based upon the fourfold development of our Lord's life as given in St. Luke 2:52. The physical, and intellectual training was given in the afternoon and the spiritual in the forenoon; the social training also was not overlooked in all the activities of the boys. The physical training consisted mostly of baseball and tennis games, the intellectual of classes in English, mathematics, spelling and penmanship, and the spiritual of morning and evening devotions and Bible and mission study classes conducted by Miss Ella K. Hooper and Mrs. Laura White.

A hike to Southern Plantation and dairy farm Thursday morning and a social given by the Christian Endeavor Society at the MacDonnell Wesley House on Friday evening were two interesting events of the week and both proved to be splendid sources of recreational and social enjoyments.

In all these activities there was perfect harmony and co-operation between the leaders and the boys. In fact, it would have been hard, if it could have been done at all, to find fifteen boys anywhere who would have behaved better than those fifteen boys. And not only did they behave well, but they also took great interest in their class work and showed remarkable aptitude for learning.

The concensus of opinion of the promoters and leaders of the institute is that it was a week of great achievement with respect to the fourfold purpose of the institute and that the boys are now better prepared to make themselves useful in God's Kingdom. Would to God that similar institutes may be held from year to year with an ever increasing number of boys attending them.

Secretary.

HOW IS CHRIST "UNVEILED" IN US?

What the Lord Jesus Christ would like, if he lived on earth to-day, the world should be able to tell by observing the everday conduct of his followers. Would a description of our daily doings turn one's thought instantly to the Master? That was the effect upon some Christians recently when a friend who had worked in China with Hudson Taylor told some intimate stories of the great missionary, how he went to every length in caring thoughtfully for the needs of others, never considering self; and, with all his greatness, he was so simple that an old-time friend naturally ended his relation of these incidents with the word: "He was truly the servant of all." One of the listeners observed: "He just reminds you of the Lord Jesus; and if we should have the Master come in and talk with us now, I believe one of the most surprising things to us would be his simplicity and naturalness." Christ's living in us is not a figure of speech, but a literal reality!—Sunday School Times.

Cato said: Wise men learn more from fools than fools from the wise; for the wise avoid the error of fools, while fools do not profit by the examples of the wise.—Selected.

God never does things by halves. He is always a bountiful giver—"wont to give more than either we desire or deserve." When he feeds a famishing multitude with bread and fish, there remain of fragments twelve baskets full. "Open thy mouth wide," says he to the petitioner who draws nigh to his throne of grace—bring me a large void to fill, and a large expectation of its being filled—"and I will fill it."—E. M. Goulburn.

Suffer, if you must; do not quarrel with the Lord's appointments for you. Only try, if you are to suffer, to do it splendidly. That's the only way to take up a pleasure or a pain.—Brooks

How Nuxated Iron Feeds The Blood

Helps Restore Wasted Tissues and Give Increased Strength, Power and Endurance

"Without iron there can be no strong, sturdy men, or healthy rosy-cheeked women," says Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author. Iron is red blood food, and when the iron in your blood runs low your red blood corpuscles die by millions, the strength goes from your body, the color from your face—that mirror of yourself—and your every action lacks in power.

Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill lack iron in their blood and that they are ill for no other reason than lack of iron. Iron deficiency paralyzes healthy, forceful action, pulls down the whole organism and weakens the entire system. A pale face, a nervous irritable disposition, a lack of strength and endurance and the inability to cope with the strong vigorous folks in the race of life—these are the sort of warning signals that Nature gives when the blood is getting thin, pale, watery and literally starving for want of iron.

THE TEST THAT TELLS—

If you are not sure of your condition, go to your doctor and have him take your blood count and see where you stand or else make the following test yourself: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

By enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells, Nuxated Iron strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and power into the whole system.

Unlike the older inorganic iron products Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Houston took the blue ribbon for attendance upon the Training School from a distance. Hurrah for Brother Shaw and his church! Four came from this church who did credit work. When Mrs. Alexander stood to receive her well earned certificate with her babe in her arms, she and the youngest attendant were greeted with a round of applause.

Grenada did the fine thing all the way through. Her hospitality was well expressed through Rev. J. R. Countiss, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Mr. H. H. Heath and others. Ten students, including two from the Presbyterian Church, did excellent work in the school besides looking after household affairs. Grenada is great.

Think of it, forty-nine students took credit work out of sixty who enrolled for study. First and last eighty-three enrolled as students and visitors. Eight signified their intention of becoming trained teachers subject to the call of the church. We count this as only the beginning of greater things to come. Mark it, this is a new day for the church in the North Mississippi Conference in learning how to teach religion.

Some remarks picked up at random: "I am getting more out of this school than I received at Junaluska." "Is this not an ideal place for our school?" "I have found out that I know nothing about Sunday school work; I am going to continue my study until I receive my complete diploma." "How I wish our superintendents would come here and get the vision." "We are truly upon the mount of transfiguration." "This is a great revival and it is the happiest week of my life." "Oh, how grateful I am for such privilege as this, my dream is realized." "I am going to bring all my teachers here next year or have a big row with them." "I never knew before that grown people could have such a good time." And so on.

The lectures by Dr. Hume were classics: Dr. Milden warmed our hearts as he gave an exposition of the supremacy of Christ; Mr. Leftwich, the lawyer-prophet, spoke of the value of the organized Bible class; Rev. John Chambers gave a witty and wise message on the necessity of food for the soul; Brother Carley delighted us with his message on ideas and ideals; Rev. Carroll Varner gave a helpful sermon on faith.

Among the teachers, French stirred not only his class, but put the entire school to discussing the amusement question; Mrs. Wyatt magnified her office as teacher of Adult Methods; Mrs. Smith's brightness scintillated; Mrs. Ferguson made the impression upon her class that she had learned a lesson from the angels; Ruff and Stephens made a big place for themselves as teachers of marked ability. All in all, it was a great school. Don't you wish you had been there?

JEFFERSON STREET, NATCHEZ.

The work of Jefferson Street Church is holding a fairly good average during the summer. During part of July, all of August, and part of September, the Presbyterians, Baptists and the Methodists have been, and will, hold union services on the Bluff, and thus far the results have been very gratifying.

In the early part of June the pastor had the pleasure of spending a week with Brother Chas. Downer and his good people at Seminary. All who know Charley need not be told that he is one of the best-hearted men in the Mississippi Conference, and is a faithful pastor, a good and growing preacher, and is winning his way into the hearts of his flock.

I had the pleasure of spending a good part of the time in the home of Brother Conner and his delightful family, who know how to make a preacher feel at home. In fact, every home I went into was abounding in hospitality, and I shall never forget that delightful week. Especially was I pleased to be associated with Brother Ellis, one of the saintly superannuates of the Conference, and I enjoyed the hours I spent with him and his faithful companion.

Over at Hickory, with Brother Blackwell and his delightful people, I spent a week, and we had a real good meeting, and I feel the church was built up in faithfulness and some in membership also. To speak of all the homes into which I was delighted to be is beyond the space of a letter like this, but it was as cordial as hospitality could be, and made us feel we were appreciated beyond our merits.

Brother Blackwell knows how to make a fellow feel at home, and make him feel glad that he had been there after he is back in his own charge. Brother Blackwell is a faithful, preaching pastor, and is doing a good work at Hickory, and the people love him and are standing by him.

The week following the fourth Sunday in July I was with Brother McKeown at Learned, and had a most delightful week. The people attended the preaching of the Word, and a very gratifying interest was shown by our people and by all the denominations in the village. The people were abounding in their hospitality, and have a high appreciation of the church and its place in the life of a community. The pastor has a good hold on the situation, and is surely making good in the charge.

Of course, Brother McKeown is one of the pastors in the Conference holding over the fifth year in this pastorate, and I can say that it will not be necessary to move him at the end of this year, as his popularity is not failing, but growing, and the people are very fond of him and brag on his delightful preaching and his work in general.

It is always a treat to me to be associated with the preachers and do all I can for the cause of the Master.

MEDICINAL ROOTS, HERBS, BARKS AND BERRIES

And other alteratives, tonics and health-giving ingredients that are recommended in the best medical books, are combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla. It builds up the blood, improves the appetite, invigorates the digestion, tones the stomach and gives nerve strength so as to promote permanent good health. Has merited and held the praise of three generations. You should give it a trial.

As a gentle thorough cathartic many recommend Hood's Pills.

Hangs Crepe on Mosquito Net

User of Sweet Dreams Pays Final Tribute to Once Useful Commodity.

"Once useful but now forever laid aside," reads, in part, the obituary.

With fitting ceremony, a druggist at Montgomery, Ala., placed in his window a mosquito net drawn aside and tied with crepe.

In this window were also placed a few bottles of Sweet Dreams.

And clearly he showed to his trade that mosquito nets had become things of yesterday—that Sweet Dreams had taken their places.

Thousands are learning the same lesson daily, for Sweet Dreams is the greatest mosquito remedy ever made.

Sold by all druggists, everywhere. Liberal bottles, 35c.—Adv.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231g Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

MR. THOMAS JEFFERSON SCOTT.

Thomas Jefferson Scott, son of William J. Scott and Elizabeth Meredith, was born near Meadville in Franklin County, Mississippi, December 28th, 1870. Concerning his childhood and youth the writer is not informed.

He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a revival meeting in Magnolia, Miss., conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, in 1897, and he endeavored ever after to conform his life to the will of God, as expressed in the pattern set by Christ Jesus, and to be loyal and faithful to his church.

On April 15, 1900, he and Miss Edna Johnson were most happily united in wedlock at the home of the bride's parents, near McComb City, Miss.

On the morning of April 15, 1920—the twentieth anniversary of his wedding day!—after long illness, heroic struggle, great suffering, but beautiful resignation, he closed his eyes on this world to open them on the glories ineffable.

But the above meager outlines reveal little of the real worth of our translated brother. That was found in the noble qualities of his quiet, consistent Christian life, known so well to all his many friends. He had been long confined to his bed when I visited him first and, during my many after visits as his pastor, I came to know him well and appreciate his many fine qualities.

His faith in God was unwavering and implicit. There was no questioning the Heavenly Father's loving-kindness and no complaint of His mysterious providences. He trusted Christ, committing all to Him, and left Him to say whether he should go or stay. God loved him, and God knew best.

He was a man of deep sincerity. Truth and candor were native to him. Deceit and pretense he despised. The soul of honor himself, he could not understand the lack of it in others.

Brother Scott was a modest, gentle man, ever courteous and considerate. He thought well before he spoke. His views and statements did not run to extremes, but took the sane and safe position. His judgments of his fellows, when expressed at all, were lenient and charitable.

He was a true and loyal friend, and therefore he had not failed to make many and strong friendships. I was often struck with the fact that of the many persons who spoke to me of him all expressed themselves in terms of high appreciation. His unassuming, straightforward, Christian life, his sympathy and charity for all, won for him a place in the hearts of his fellows.

No words can express the beautiful devotion between himself and his faithful wife. Several times he spoke to me most feelingly of what she had been to him, and how harmoniously the years had been spent by them. Her presence in his sickroom, her voice, her touch meant everything to him. And certainly no wife could have been more tenderly attentive, more heroically faithful. The twenty years of pilgrimage together thus must have stored up many blessed memories to cheer her future.

And then the twentieth anniversary of their marriage dawns. How better could be celebrated it than by stepping out of that diseased and wasted shell of mortality, that had tortured him so long, and sweeping into the raptures eternal, that Jesus his Savior had gone to prepare? The wife, the mother and dear ones would be lonely, 'tis true, but he was leaving them the assurance of a glad reunion in the city that hath foundations, whose maker and builder is God—where all tears are wiped away, and where there is no death.

RESOLUTIONS.

In the sudden death of Miss MITTIE DOTY in the early hours of Saturday, July 24, 1920, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Kosciusko Methodist Church has lost one of its most devoted, helpful and earnest members. It is with sorrowing hearts that we record the death of this valued member of our organization, as she has been so intimately associated with this society from its beginning, serving for years as agent of our magazine, The Missionary Voice, and at all times one of our most faithful workers.

We desire to express our love and esteem for a friend and associate whom we shall hold in affectionate remembrance; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in her death our society and church have lost one of our most loyal and consecrated members; that our entire community has lost a friend whose life was a real inspiration, whose deep love and sympathy for humanity fairly shone in her serene, sweet countenance. She was truly one of the world's quiet, refined gentlewomen, for whose life the home and community are better.

Resolved also, That we extend our sympathy to her relatives and friends, trusting that they may find comfort in the sweet assurance, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Resolved also, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our society, and a copy be sent to our town paper, and one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one to the Missionary Voice.

IN MEMORIAM.

"God's finger touched her and she slept." At the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. N. James, at Boyce, La., MRS. EMILY MARSTON, aged seventy-eight years, nine months, and twenty-six days. Hers was a well spent life, endeared to all alike, the rich and poor and the humble. Her memory will long be cherished by those who knew her. She also leaves two sons, Messrs. Henry and John Marston, twelve grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren; her son-in-law and two daughters-in-law she regarded as her very own. Her faithful daughter with whom she was when the message came, was a part of her life, and it was to her she gave the words, "I am ready to go." To her bereaved children no sweeter consolation than this can be offered; it prepares them to receive the solace which faith and divine love will bring at last. Her remains were brought to Coushatta and, just at twilight, interred by the side of her husband in Springville Cemetery. Her grave was lined with flowers, placed there by loving hands, and many were the tears shed when the impressive service of the Methodist Church, of which she was a member for the past 40 years, was conducted by Rev. J. W. Lee, of Natchitoches, and Rev. J. C. Price, her pastor.

"I do not know where the country lies,
The place where our dear ones stay,
But this I know, as the swift days go,
It is not very far away."

MISSED BLESSINGS.

What various forms of good come to us from our fellow creatures brought in contact with us! What happiness flows from their connection with us! This we are aware of as a familiar truth. How much of this we may have lost by our willfulness, negligence, indifference, by not caring enough about our neighbor, by selfish habits! We cannot tell how many blessings may have been breaking upon us, ready to give a happy turn to our lives; but we ourselves have stopped the kindly hand that would have turned the stream upon us. It is impossible we can know how often we have intercepted blessings. I am far from saying that mankind is governed mainly under this dispensation of temporal rewards and punishments; but yet it is evident that these do enter into the system of our government here, and that we thwart, by negligence, bad temper, indolence, insolence, the intentions of God's natural providence for us. We go along with the stream; we follow our humor; we take no pains with our conduct. Doubtless, did we know our history, which is largely hidden from us, we should find this to be the case to an extent we were not prepared for. The secret causes that have been about our path had a variety of blessings within their compass, if we had only helped them in their operations, or rather, if we had not placed gratuitous obstructions in their way. You did not indeed see this at the time. You went on unconsciously, simply looking to your own convenience for the moment. But though you were unconscious of it, still the exclusion from blessings was going on.—J. B. Mozley.

There are people who use their friends as dumping grounds, and unload on them any choice bits of scandal they may chance to pick up, as though they were conferring a favor. As long as human nature is what it is, there will be plenty of such unloading to be done; but what noble mind wishes to be put to such ignoble uses, and to have made in any part of his spiritual domain a scavenger heap?—Christian Age.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

LOST!

LOST—A young girl between the age of sixteen and twenty. Left home in small town to find work in city, after searching for place to live, found room where she had no home protection or influence, remuneration for work insufficient for natural needs. Missing, one day, lost! May not be found!

This is a real life story being enacted in many cities at this time. It is to prevent such loss that missionary women are turning their thoughts toward Co-operative Home enterprises for working girls. We read with interest of two such homes in the making: one in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, and the second in Washington, D. C. In cities of all sizes there should be these life preserving stations, the church-women must be busy about this matter, the times demand it.

COUNCIL BULLETIN.

The Vashti Industrial School has recently become the beneficiary of a donation or $1,571.84 from a very unique source. Some fifty years ago Maj. Remir Young, a man of large means and great benevolences, bequeathed by his will the sum of $40,000 to female education in Thomas County, Georgia. The money was invested hy the trustees in a school for the education of girls. This institution, after many vicissitudes, was sold a short while since, and after all debts were paid the remaining amount, by a special act of the legislature of Georgia, was directed to be given to the Vashti Industrial School, that institution being the only one in Thomas County, Georgia, distinctly devoted to the education of females.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Biloxi Wesley House.

Did you ever visit the Wesley House at Biloxi, Mississippi? Well, be sure to treat yourself to a nice visit the very next time you have the chance. Surrounded hy giant oaks, with their festoons of waving moss, and looking out at the vast waters of the sea, the Wesley House stands like a sentinel for the King's army, and as a lighthouse for those who are tossed on the treacherous sea of life; here the sallor may find a welcome, and oftimes haven of rest.

The institutional work reaches many, here in the Gym the boys enjoy their daily bath, with all of the accompanying fun. Here the girls also have their baths and sports. Here, in fine weather, the outdoor playgrounds are thronged with happy rollicking, youngsters, who enjoy the swings and see-saws and shoot-the-shoots, provided hy some kind-hearted tourists, while visiting Biloxi. Of the 3,200 educable children of the city of Biloxi, the Wesley House reaches and blesses more than 500; or about one-sixth.

There are about 75 per cent of foreign-horn parentage and are composed of Austrians, Poles, Russians, Spanish, Mexicans, Cubans, Italians, and French. And yet they work and play and worship together in harmony, for they are all the Master's little ones and His Spirit has made them ONE in heart and purpose.

The sewing school, the cooking classes, the day nursery, the club for boys and girls are well attended. But the most successful work of the Wesley House is the worship hour, the Sunday school, and the prayer meeting—did I say "prayer meeting?" Yes, I mean that very thing, what do you think of the attendance of 109 on a hot July night, at the Wednesday night prayer meeting? Well, that's the number we had, and listen, the service lasted from 7 to 8:40 p. m. But enough of this, let me mention the workers and let you go. Miss Lois Tinsley, Deaconess, Miss Mary Chapman, Community Visitor, Miss L. Freeland, Nurse Deaconess, and the other workers are skilled laborers in the Master's vineyard.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

St. Mark's Hall News.
New Orleans, La.
June, 1920.

Be strong and of a good courage.—Joshua 1:6.

A few words of explanation seem to be necessary. This unassuming sheet has a new editor, Miss Berta Ellison. who was appointed to St. Mark's Hall at the last Council meeting. Miss Gibson was transferred to Chattanooga, Tenn. It is rather difficult to introduce one's self on paper but by beginning an acquaintance in this way we soon can become friends.

In assuming the responsibility of the work I realize my predecessor was a strong, capable, faithful leader. She is also a personal friend and the quotation ahove seems appropriate for several reasons. A crisis had been reached in the history of the children of Israel. The promised land stretched out before them ready to be possessed, grave difficulties even giants were in the way, the leader was new and untried so it took an unusual amount of courage to go forward but Jehovah made some wonderful promises and He also commanded them to GO, it was not left optional with them. Surely this field is "white unto the harvest," the land is here for us to possess, it will not be given to us without effort on our part; certainly there are difficulties in the way, and the leader is new at this time, but if we muster courage and go forward at His command this promise is ours, "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee; I will not leave thee nor forsake thee."

At present we are trying to "spy out the land" by finishing the Interchurch Survey begun a few months ago. One block recently canvassed contained three white Protestants. One of them confessed she had not been to church for more than a year and a half, the other two kept quiet. In this same block were found French, Spanish, Irish, Italian and negroes.

The three prayer meeting groups of St. Mark's church, English, Spanish and Italian, have been consolidated for the summer. Last Wednesday night there was an attendance of forty.

Miss Byerly's Missionary Club gave a splendid program at their mite box opening last week. The boxes were found to contain $6. The prize went to a little girl who had $3 in her box.

Miss Breeden's boys are spending much time taking shower baths these hot days. Camping trips are being planned for the boy scouts and campfire girls.

Miss Rickie is spending her vacation at home, Gihbon, Minn. Miss Laura Farley is substitute nurse in her absence.

Donations from out of the city came from Mansfield, Kentwood, Shreveport and Felicity Auxiliary in the city. Thanks.

A TIDE THAT LIFTS EVERY BOAT.

In the past there have not been wanting those who opposed any special missionary effort on the ground that more for missions would mean less for pastoral support and other local causes. This, of course, was a very short-sighted view, but nevertheless there were many who held it. In the light of the Centenary results, it must be abandoned utterly and forever. Here was an outpouring of missions without a parallel even in our wildest thinking—five times as much as we had ever before attempted. Surely here was a supreme test of the effects of missionary giving upon local support. What have been the results?

They are not all in yet. They never will be, for they will go on and on. But enough has been seen to prove a thousand times the statement that "the missionary tide lifts every boat." This was evident in the Centenary financial drive itself, which in many cases resulted not only in the over-subscription of the Centenary allotment, but in the clearing away of long-standing church debts, the launching of new building enterprises, and the like. At the Annual Conference it was found that many pastoral salaries had been increased—a general promotion of the general increase that was to follow.

At the beginning of the new conference year the full effect began to be felt. From every quarter come reports that pastoral salaries have been greatly increased. One district reports aggregate increases amounting to more than $14,000.

In addition, the Centenary at the beginning of the new year distributed to the several annual conferences $395,000 to be used in supplementing the salaries of underpaid preachers. Thus it appears that, for the first time in our history, we are in the way of paying our preachers a living wage, largely as a by-product of the great missionary tide that has swept over the church, raising its whole status, financial and spiritual, to a higher level.

The spiritual results, of course, cannot be tabulated, though they have been clearly and increasingly evident throughout the entire Centenary period. Spiritual growth, deeper consecration, a fuller sense of stewardship, increased activity in religious work—by far the most general in our history—and we confidently look for glorious results, immediately and for all the future.—Missionary Voice.

Mrs. Hill Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Removed The Cause.

Knoxville, Tenn.—"My back hurt me all the time, I was all run down, could not eat and my head bothered me, all caused by female trouble. I was three years with these troubles and doctors did me no good. Your medicine helped my sister so she advised me to take it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and now I am well, can eat heartily and work. I give you my thanks for your great medicines. You may publish my letter and I will tell everyone what your medicines did for me."—Mrs. PEARL HILL, 418 Jacksboro St., Knoxville, Tennessee.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

THE HOME AND THE MINISTRY.

There is a good deal said in these days about the dearth of ministers. It is well for us to remember that the best recruiting station for this work is an earnest Christian home. Some men have gone into the ministry who never knew the joy of a prayerful home until they had one of their own, but the majority of those who obey the call have come from homes of piety and prayer. Many a bright young man has had his heavenly vision at the family altar.

Sometimes it seems as if some of our good people were going at this question from the wrong end. Brighten up the altar fires and young men will see the opportunity to help save the world by preaching. It would be a wise investment to make the effort to bring the best ministers as guests in the homes, that boys and young men may see the naturalness and strength of their lives.

After all, it is heroism that makes the great appeal, and there's a deal of heroism in the ministry in these days and when seen it makes its impression in character and devotion. Better pastoral work would make the ministry more attractive, and a warmer welcome for the ministerial guest would have its influence in the life work of the young people in the home.—Zion's Herald.

What of Your Boy?

His education and training, and the development of his mind, body, and character depends on you, his parent. It is a grave responsibility, for there are so many antagonistic influences that come into play in a boy's life. As every boy looks back over his education and training he can always point out some one influence, some one life that has had a more profound influence. To thousands of boys this influence has been the guiding spirit, the personal association and the inspiring character of Mr. Robert K. Morgan, principal of Morgan School for twenty-five years. He knows boy nature. The close personal associations which he has fostered between his boy students and himself, his carefully chosen faculty, his careful attention to the boy's work, his thoughts, his talents, and his special needs, have given great prominence to his school and have characterized the success that he has merited in successfully shaping the lives of thousands of youths at the shaping age.

A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., will bring you a catalogue and full information about this school.

NO ROOT IN THEMSELVES.

In the parable of the sower, as explained by Christ, reference is made to the hearers who receive the Word on stony ground, with a seeming gladness, and show of sensibility, who nevertheless soon wither away, the reason being that they have "no root in themselves." This appears to be surprising, and yet it is not. Why should that which has no root in itself be expected to amount to anything? A rootage is necessary, for, as is asked in the Book of Job, can the rush grow up without mire? But where must the root be found? When we ask that question of infinite beings there is only one answer—in the Divine. The plant strikes down into the friendly and favoring soil. Its rootage is not in itself but in a suitable element which will afford it nourishment, and assist it to growth. Only he who is rooted and grounded in Christ and His Word will endure when the sun of a scorching worldliness is risen but a little way. There need be no confusion of thought or camouflage of doctrine along this line. Those pretentious substitutes for Christianity which exist today, spreading themselves like a green bay tree, are not green bay trees, but mushroom growths, having no root in themselves—nor anywhere else. Perversions of pure gospel teaching, which delude many, change their form year by year, even day by day, being soon succeeded, one after another, by heterodoxies that have in their loins no power of reproduction. We know that thistles will continue to spring up, but we are not interested in briars and brambles, but in cedars of Lebanon. Fads and fancies flourish—for a time only. There are things that abide, but they are the verities of God's Word, and the experiences of a vital Christian faith. Christ's words shall not pass away, for they are rooted in eternal reality. Let us, then, get back to God, up to God, down to God. God is everywhere about us, and we must catch hold of His mighty power and redemptive grace if our higher life is to emerge and to endure. Let each soul ask itself, in the first quiet hour it can secure, Is my apparent "root" in my own morality, pride of opinion, or set of habits, or is my life impulse and inspiration derived from the Christ of God, and the powers of an endless life? There are many questions in life which men are asking, but this is the only one that needs answering.—Zion's Herald.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A NEW ERA.

With the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment to the National Constitution by the Legislature of the State of Tennessee, thus making the Amendment effective, a new era dawns in American political life. Whether a majority of them wanted it or not, approximately twenty-five million women have the right to express their opinions concerning men and measures that are asking for public approval, in a way will be highly effective. Women now have the ballot upon exactly the same conditions that men have it; henceforth, in a sense never realized before, ours is a government by all the people who care to have a part in it.

It is impossible to estimate at this time the influence the emancipation of this host of citizens will have upon public affairs, but no one can doubt that it will be immediate and far-reaching. Thousands of women will not, of course, avail themselves of their new privileges; but thousands of others, some with eagerness, some with trepidation, will be found at the polls in approaching elections prepared to register their views upon questions that hitherto have been left to men to settle. Already the national political parties have taken into account this tremendous accession to the ranks of the voters, and almost feverish activity is being shown by campaign organizations to enlist this new force in their behalf. It is confidently predicted by each of the great political parties that it will receive the bulk of the new votes thus to be released in November—displaying an amount of assurance that is at least refreshing to those who have thought it a hopeless task to predict with any degree of certainty which way the feminine mind would turn when great issues are at stake.

Since the right of suffrage has been conferred upon the women, it is to be hoped that they will take it seriously, and that they will at once begin to prepare themselves—if such preparation is necessary—for the proper discharge of the heavy responsibilities that are now resting upon them. The duties of citizenship are too sacred to be regarded lightly, and the opportunity of rendering distinguished service to the political welfare of the nation is too magnificent to be tossed aside. The reproach has been cast—and too often upon good grounds—that otherwise estimable men have been content to allow the disreputable elements of a community to control its political life; we cannot believe that the same reproach will lie against the women. We earnestly hope that they will not throw themselves without restraint into the turmoil of political fights, but we do hope they will take advantage of the opportunity, now that it is unquestionably theirs, to inject into our political life a stream of pure patriotism, high moral purpose, and invincible determination to uphold the right that will purify the whole current of political thinking and acting. In this new era the welfare of the nation is very largely dependent upon what our good women do with the ballot.

THE MAKING OF CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

The goal of individual growth in the religious life, is the development of Christian character. While "character" is one of the words that are almost indefinable, it is sufficiently explained for all practical purposes by the statement that it "represents what one actually is, instead of what one seems." Christian character, therefore, means the incarnation of the essential teachings of Christ in the person of an individual man or woman.

Christian character is the goal of religious development because it determines the destiny of the individual. Apart from the teachings of revelation concerning the subject, it is perfectly reasonable to suppose that the type of life lived in this world will give color to the life in the world to come. Sin, which produces unhappiness here, certainly cannot be supposed to eventuate in Heaven hereafter. "As the tree falls, so shall it lie."

Since destiny depends upon character, it is of the utmost importance that every person who is desirous of attaining the full fruition of his divinely-inspired longings for eternal bliss, should know what are the influences that enter into the making of Christian character, in order that he may "go on to perfection" himself, and in order that he help others in their struggles in the upward way. Christian character does not come by chance; it is the result of a definite determination to comply with all the conditions that insure its development. Without hoping to do more than merely suggest a profitable line of thought, we call attention to some of the forces that must be taken into account as we undertake to make our lives what they really ought to be.

It is a well-known fact that physical and intellectual characteristics are transmitted from parent to child. It is not an unusual thing for a child to be recognized by a person who has never seen it before, by its resemblance to its father or mother; children often show, in a marked degree, the same intellectual bent that has enabled a parent to achieve distinction in a chosen field of activity. Since this is true, it is no more than a reasonable presumption that spiritual characteristics are transmitted as well as physical and intellectual—and this presumption becomes a practical certainty upon investigation. Heredity, then—"the law through which the child receives from his parents, by birth, his chief vital forces and tendencies, his physical and spiritual capital"—is one of the forces that must be reckoned with in the development of Christian character. It is true that we cannot determine what we shall receive from our parents—but we can determine what we shall hand down to our children. In a very real sense, we can make our children what we want them to be.

More powerful, however, than the law of heredity, is the influence of environment—"the sum of the influences that affect an organism from without." In spite of a heritage that may tend to weaken the spiritual nature, it is possible so to offset that force by influences from without as to overcome altogether the downward tendencies and enable the developing life to realize its highest possibilities in the spiritual realm. Strongest among these influences are the home, the school, and the social habits of the community. This suggestion opens a line of thought that carries us to the very center of our religious problems to-day.

More powerful, though, than heredity and environment combined, is the will. No mean monarch, this, that governs the activities of life. In spite of inherited tendencies and unfavorable surroundings, this imperial power can triumph over all the forces that fight against it, and in the end, win a triumphant victory that will establish unmistakably its supremacy in all the realms of life. The man who really wills to do it, can overcome completely the world, the flesh, and the devil. He who will not, cannot.

Add to these—heredity, environment, the will—the grace of God, and we have, in brief review, the chief forces that enter into the making of Christian character. In their operation, as they are brought to bear upon the individual life, we may see all the phenomena of conversion, and in their culmination we behold the perfected product of the gospel of Christ. In the development of a social order that will be synonomous with the Kingdom of God, we need to bequeath to the world a heritage of pure living, to labor with all our might for the establishment and maintenance of right conditions, to arouse the will-power of those who have felt themselves all but helpless, and to rely at all times and under all circumstances upon the grace of God, administered to men in multitudinous ways through the compulsion of infinite love.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.

If the Lord is my Shepherd, then I am his sheep,
O! the thought fills my soul with delight,
For we pasture together by still waters deep
And we shelter together by night.

Yes, the Lord is my Shepherd and I am his sheep,
O! my cup runneth over the brim,
For I'm persuaded he's able to keep
That which I have committed to him.

I was once a lost sinner (and sadly it's told),
I rejected his infinite grace,
But he bought me and sought me and brought me to fold,
Safe enwrapped in his loving embrace.

I'm the very same sheep that went very far wrong
In that beautiful story of old,
He's the very same Shepherd that sought me so long,
Ere he carried me back to the fold.

And through my whole life my good Shepherd he's been,
And his constant protection he gives.
He has loved me and saved me in spite of my sin;
And will do it as long as he lives!

Yes, the Lord is my Shepherd, and I am his sheep.
O! the thought fills my soul with delight,
For we pasture together by still waters deep,
And we shelter together by night.

—Charles D. Meigs.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINDINGS, ADOPTED AT THE FIRST SET-UP MEETING OF THE EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN, HELD AT BLUE RIDGE, N. C., AUGUST 10-12, 1920.

Who thinks at all must be acutely aware that we have come to an historic hour in the life of the South, the nation, and the world. Even a partial understanding of the moral and spiritual wreckage that the experiences of these recent years have wrought, of the dimmed ideals and lowered standards that give such a depressing sense of loss, and of the confusion and uncertainty with which thoughtful men and women are looking into the future, must make us realize that our world is immeasurably in need of something that will enlighten, steady, and lead it into security, and hope, and happiness, and along the road of a worth-while progress.

From the cries that come out of the day's tragic chaos it is wholly clear that this something which the world needs is, not so much new systems of political, financial, industrial, and social organization as it is a more real, a more complete, a more vital application of the ancient spiritualities of the Christian Gospel,—its faith, its sense of justice, righteousness, sacrifice, service. Into the most agonizing, the most appalling school of experience into which the Master of the ages has ever put mankind the world has entered, and, it seems, providentially, in order to learn in the bitterness of suffering that the whole structure of human life must at last be built upon no other foundation than that which is laid in Christ Jesus. All else is shifting sand, and this only is the rock of permanence and security.

This has been the faith of the church in all ages—that the spirit of Jesus and the principles of His Kingdom must finally be the world's only resource, and that one day this spirit and these principles will be practically applied as the governing forces in all that men think and do, individually and collectively. To bring precisely this thing about has been, is, and always will be the one business of the Christian church. It can have none other if it is loyal to its Master, understands His teachings, and is obedient to His commands.

And the church never had such a time as now to show its understanding and to express in a conquering way its loyalty and obedience. With the bruised heart of the world, heavy with sorrow and rent with hate, and distrust, and suspicion, and prejudice, and needing supremely to be cleansed and healed, with the mind of the world bereft of the ancient convictions that have steadied its thinking, and of the faiths that have stabilized its processes, sorely confused and baffled and not knowing whither to turn, the church must surely be overwhelmingly conscious that all life is calling to it as with one voice of universal human need.

If its ears are open, it must therefore recognize that this, above all other days, is its great day of opportunity, of privilege, of duty, and in this recognition it must search itself on its knees in order to take the measure of its faith, its resources, spiritual and material, its understanding, the reality and vitality of its consecration, and its power practically to deliver itself in such a way as to accomplish effectively the ends of its mission to the world. In this conception, we believe that the first measure of its understanding of present conditions and their needs is to be found in its realization that nothing is now more important than to transform the whole process of human training through the spirit of Jesus and to conform its motives with the essential principles of his kingdom, and that, therefore, the world we need to reconstruct can only be reconstructed by taking life at its source and training it all along the way in this spirit and according to these principles.

Holding to this as fundamental in our thinking, we cannot avoid the conviction that the General Conference, meeting in Atlanta, in May, 1918, sensed with something like prophetic insight and understanding the needs of the hour to which we have come when it ordered a great church-wide intensive campaign for our schools, colleges and universities in the second half of the quadrennium. This is our conviction because:

1. The body of the church has never before been in a position where it could better understand the meaning and supreme importance of Christian education, and never was there such an opportunity offered for making its meaning clear and its importance of the nature of a real necessity—a necessity to the whole system of education and to the church itself in the matter of training and developing its own leadership. He must be blind indeed who does not now see that unless the religious motive and the Christian ideal become the controlling factors in education, we can face the future with but small hope, and that unless the church provides adequate training in a congenial atmosphere for its own youth and its own leadership, it cannot quite fulfill its mission nor meet the duties of its day of opportunity.

2. We believe that the General Conference was prophetically wise in isolating the Educational Campaign from all others, because it thereby furnished the occasion to bring before the whole church, as could not have otherwise been done, the meaning of Christian education, the need for it, the history and service of our institutions in the past, and the necessary part they are to play in the life of the church in the future. By thus ordering this campaign, we are enabled to do in a large, church-wide way what has not only not been done before, but what must be done if the church is ever to meet its full obligations, not so much to the institutions themselves as to the church and the world they are established and maintained to serve.

3. It is further our judgment that the revelations of the Centenary also justify the action of the General Conference. (a) If the Centenary has emphasized anything for us, it is that, while we may have everything else—the great purpose, the ideas, the plans, the money—we are halted and hampered if we have not the men and the women to carry them out. Without a supply of these trained men and women we get nowhere, and this supply the church, if it ever gets it, must secure chiefly from its own institutions of learning.

(b) The Centenary again revealed to the church in unblurred clearness that there must be co-ordination of the forces of the church to continue certain great essentials of permanent and effective progress—the intercessory purpose, the stewardship of wealth, the stewardship of life, the special training for special service. If these essentials are to be made practically available and kept so, it can only be done by co-operation of the Centenary forces and all the educational agencies and activities of the church—the home, the Sunday school, the pulpit, the church press, the school, college, the university.

(c) Finally, the Centenary revealed in nothing less than a spectacular way the capacity of the church to respond to a great conception of its duty when properly presented and its generous willingness to respond financially when it was brought to see what was needed in terms of money. We are heartened to believe that the same church which responded to the call of the Centenary will make even a larger response to the call of the Educational Campaign if its leadership will only exert themselves to the extent of enlightening the intelligence of our people as to the significance of the task we have in hand and of placing upon their consciences the unavoidable nature of the obligations which the task imposes.

4. It is our conviction, moreover, that never before were our people in a position to understand, not only the service which all our institutions, schools, colleges, and universities, can and must render at this time, but also the relation between the quality and extent of this service and adequate material, equipment and resources. They have only to look around at the institutions of the state and to what is required from the treasury of the state for the on-going to realize that the sums asked for their own institutions, while they may appear large in the aggregate, are still, as a matter of fact, not sufficient for the supreme business in which they are engaged. They must be, therefore, and they can be, brought to understand how dollars invested in instructors, buildings, libraries, laboratories, endowments mean only increased service to the church and to the world it is set to minister to.

In view of these considerations, considerations that reveal the essential needs of the world and the nature of the church's privilege and duty, we call upon all our people, preachers and laymen, men and women, upon every organization, board and interest, connectional and local, to join together in a whole-hearted, undivided effort to carry through this great task which the General Conference has placed in our hands. We make this call in the faith that the whole church will see as we see and believe as we believe, and that each Annual Conference will not only loyally accept its allotment but will generously add the suggested increase in the askings of each institution and thus meet the demands of greater needs and greater service.

Further, we would urge with all emphasis that, in view of the supreme importance of the enterprise we are projecting and in view of the fact of the explicit orders of the General Conference, this campaign is entitled everywhere to an unobstructed right of way and neither directly nor indirectly may any other interest divert the thought and efforts of the church from now on to the end of the quadrennium. To succeed in what we are undertaking it is necessary that we loyally keep faith with what the General Conference has commanded us to do.

THE MISSING $7,000,000.

By Bishop James Cannou, Jr.

Very interesting are the figures of the report of the treasurer of the Centenary Fund up to June 30. These figures show that of $14,800,000 due on June 30, $7,341,500, not quite one-half, had been paid. The $14,800,000 is the record of the impression made by the Centenary appeal upon the subscribers when the appeal was made. The amount paid is somewhat of an indication of the permanent effect made by the appeal. But the figures are not as discouraging as they may seem to some to be at first thought, for there are so many of our church people who are still in the habit of paying their special church obligations about the time of the meeting of the Annual Conferences. A fair estimate of the situation can be made when the fall Conferences have all met and the reports are given out.

In the meanwhile it is important for the church to realize what the Centenary offerings mean to our Mission Fields, and how serious it is for the treasury of the Board of Missions to be short $7,000,000 included in its estimates and needed to carry out our great program in all our fields.

First hand information is always interesting and certainly the facts concerning the meaning of the Centenary to Mexico will cause every Centenary subscriber to realize that his offering is marking a new era for our work among the Mexicans, who have for three hundred years been under the blighting idolatrous teaching of the worst form of Romanism.

Pumping The Life Blood.

The treasury of the Board of Missions is like a great heart pumping a stream of blood into every part of the body that it may properly perform its functions, and do the work set for it. So our workers among the Mexicans have been given new life and power to do their work in this fruitful field by money which has been made available by the Centenary offerings to the Mission Board treasury. At conferences held by the writer the middle of July with the presiding elders of the Mexico Conference and of the Western Mexican Mission, and by personal inspection of many of the places where the work is being done, some estimate of the value of the Centenary to the Mexican people can be made.

A large, finely-built house with ample grounds and in the best part of the city of Chihuahua has been purchased at a cost of $25,000, of which the citizens of Chihuahua have given $5,000, and will be opened as a hospital, as soon as a good Christian physician and surgeon can be secured; $10,000 additional will be spent in equipment and additions. A lot and building has been purchased for $12,000 in which will be opened our Book and Tract Depository, and to which will be removed our printing plant which is now in the basement of the Boys' Dormitory. This building is near the center of the business life of the city on the same broad Avenue Independencia on which our handsome church is located, and only a stone's throw from El Centro Cristiano (our social settlement work). The Centenary money has enabled us to establish and strengthen all the branches of service at Chihuahua-Palmore College with separate dormitories for boys and girls, book store and printing plant for propaganda work, the hospital and the Centro Cristiano for social betterment, and a strong, well-organized Sunday school and church, paying all its expenses, and showing its vitality by nearly one hundred professions of faith during the year.

In Saltillo, a large lot covering practically a whole square facing the principal park of the city has been purchased and on it will be erected the new buildings of Collegion Ingles at a total cost of about $250,000. At Monterey a new boys' dormitory for Institution Laurens to cost about $30,000 is made necessary by the increased boarding patronage which has overflowed the present buildings, although all girl students have been transferred to the new school for girls which was opened last fall, and which has had a most successful first session. The Monterey Hospital has been reopened and refitted and under the management of Dr. Hugh White seems to be entering upon a new era of its successful career. The Mexican congregation here and the one at Saltillo also are both self-supporting, and services are also held for Americans every Sunday.

Church buildings are being planned or are under construction for Allende (Coahuila) to cost $12,000, to which the local church contributed $6,000, and also supports its pastor; at Torran, where its congregation also will pay a large proportion of its cost and one-half of the support of its pastor, and at Villadama; school-chapels for Herreras, Ramos, Arizpe, Lampacitas, Monclova, three for Sabinas and the neighboring mines; a school teacher for grade schools at these school-chapels, and also at San Jose, Llamo, and San Pedro. The settlement work including clinic and dispensary are in successful operation at Piedras Negras, and, more important, about ten new workers have already gone to Mexico to "intervene" in the only helpful way—namely by giving living demonstration of real desire to serve these revolution-torn, uneducated, untrained, but most interesting and responsive people.

In the Western Mexican work, good parsonages have been bought at Phoenix and Roswell, a lot and house at Tucumcari and plans adopted for buildings at Marfa, Alpine, and Toyah. An unusually good purchase has been made at Magdalena and Miss Jessie Burford will open a day school there this fall. The money has been appropriated for purchase of suitable property at Juarez, Cannanaea, and Pitiquito. At El Paso the work has been remarkably strengthened. A well-located house has been purchased in East El Paso and regular Sunday school and church services established with social features of various kinds. The large colored school building, located in the heart of the Mexican population, within two squares of Lydia Patterson Institute, has been purchased from the city and will be remodeled and organized to do the work of a model institutional church. New buildings have been bought in a good residential section for the Effie Eddington School for Girls and finally for El Paso the contract has been let for the Mitchell Annex to Lydia Patterson Institute to cost about $110,000, including furnishings.

In the Texas Mexican work, $12,000 has been spent for a church in Fort Worth, $12,500 has been appropriated for a church in Houston, and work has begun on the new $35,000 church and Sunday school building for our active congregation at San Antonio, and a chapel will be built in another part of the city. The work at Los Angeles cannot be handled in its present buildings, and a new building for church and settlement work is a necessity.

And it is exceedingly encouraging to report that six young men have gone out from Lydia Patterson Inst into the evangelistic work this summer, of which number three will remain in the work, and the others return to school.

Surely this a record of work made possible by the Centenary, which must convince every subscriber that he has not given or subscribed in vain.

But this great work in Mexico and the other Mission Fields is dependent for its completion and its performance upon the meeting of all pledges made by the Centenary subscribers. The plans are made, the program is outlined and the work will go steadily forward if the subscriptions are paid regularly to the treasury of the Board of Missions. There are $7,000,000 now due. Will not the lay leaders, pastors and presiding elders bring these facts to the attention of our Centenary subscribers that the missing $7,000,000 may reach the treasury of the Board of Missions at an early date?

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Tired, worn, weary. Two days [illegible], and the rush, clash and crush of the city. Sweating, sweltering, hurrying crowds, noise and rattle of cars, trucks, buses, wagons, push and pain on [illegible] and get accentuated by fur[illegible] heat brews on [illegible] and [illegible] never quit until death. The [illegible] days [illegible] upon them. Call it a narrow dog [illegible] you may, yet I hold it true. God never made [illegible] Country preacher-[illegible] behind the times. I know it and I want [illegible] be real. Men and women [illegible] need their love and [illegible] money and [illegible] time. [illegible] until many [illegible] broken, bartered and [illegible]. No wonder the world is [illegible], or it's dog days. Satan may have an evil influence, but I think the world, the flesh, and the devil have this star of evil potent hand-[illegible].

But in the country side, the meadows are waving grassy slopes of verdant splendor, the forests with beckoning leafy branches are calling to the [illegible] rush of crystal brooks over shining beds of pebbles, fields and orchards laden with fruitage, flowers are laughing to earth and sky—all the wealth of summer crowns the land. But you must know it to love it. Your civilian, the real city bred, I fear, hasn't the vision—and more is the pity. Yet he may learn how good old Mother Nature can lay a hand of healing on fevered pulse and brow, if he is young enough and not set in his ways

My banker friend judged that I showed some business acumen. He remarked, "You should be a business man, not a preacher." I replied, "My business is so far ahead of yours that the two are not to be compared." When God calls a man to preach, His gospel he is highly honored. There is no vocation open to the young men of this time that offers greater rewards in the real things of life. If we measure life by opportunity for doing real and lasting good, surely this is his; if great privileges are asked for study for intellectual and social prestige—a wider field one would scarcely care to enter. To join hand in hand with every movement for a larger and broader vision of civic progress, and to use every effort to forward these, are his by virtue of his recognized office as leader and shepherd of his people.

No life investment pays a more remunerative salary in the end or during the years when the shadows lengthen and the evening twilight falls. My millionaire friend died the other day. His house of clay and marble no man envies. He was not a miser, he did some good things with his money as he passed this way. God trusted him with much money but He entrusted the dawny-faced youth with his Word—the royal treasure of his kingdom—and made him ambassador to the entire world. Wherein doth true greatness lie? Quit your everlasting whining about the old preacher. He is rich in the best things of life. Farms, stocks, bonds, trusts, and all the babble of the market-place are strange tongues to him, yet in his declining years food, raiment, and shelter are his. To these are added love, respect, and honor from the best people of the land.

And now the Spirit of Wisdom led me to the pathless woods. Great trees stood like sentinels, towering above brake and brush, so stationed by Him who created the majesty of forest depths. The magic of Nature's virginal, fashioning hand, tender in its touch, mighty in its power, was there, on fern and flower, in grassy glades and amber shimmering branches, which mellowed and softened the flood of light from above. The wealth of summer's tide of fulsome life was all about. Shy rabbits, busy squirrels, flitting birds, whirring, droning bees and beetles, all the busy, restless movement of forest life, and the din of call and answer from bird and beast rang in discordant cries, or glad notes of tender music. It was a revelry of sound. an orchestra in which nature, mighty musician. was sweeping all her lute strings.

A swift shadow, glancing through the interlacing boughs above, swept onward. and a shrill, piercing shriek sounded high above the babel of other voices of the woodland. It was an eagle's call for prey. and at its cry a hush fell. Wisdom, with eyes serene and fair, met my look of wonder, with a smile and spoke:

"So it is among the sons of men when the King commands. There are ten thousand dissonant, wild. discordant voices, until he speaks."

"And who, pray, is this King? Can he still a tempest, or bid the haunting spectres flee?"

"Yes, and more, for he is God's witness on earth. His name is Truth."

And then I knew that he alone could heal the hurt and save the souls of all the race. who were crying like lost children in the greater woodland.

S. J. HIGH, Treasurer.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

While I was at Hines Chapel I went into Memphis, and went to the First Baptist Church, where a man named Collins was pretending to carry on a "divine healing" work. He did not impress me favorably. All the effects which I saw, and heard described during the meeting, could be explained by natural causes, and were largely hypnotic. This, of course, does not mean that they were not "divine," for hynotism is only a part of natnre, which is all divine. But to claim such results as miracles like those Jesus wrought, and special answers to prayer, will not bear investigation. Broadly speaking, religion would cure many ailments if we were only really religious. As far as this man is doing real work, and I don't deny that many persons were benefited by his rather sensational methods, it was because he was able to get them to "believe." Blessed is he who can get another really to believe something. My attitude to all such work as this is the attitude of Gamaliel to the Apostles in Jerusalem: Let it alone. If it is of God, you can't stop it; if it is of man, it will fail. The pastor, Dr. Cox, was fully endorsing it, which a little surprised me.

Another thing surprised me, and that is that Horn Lake Circuit has to receive an appropriation of $200 from the Conference fund. When I was a member there fifty years ago it was wholly self-supporting, and was one of the most desirable circuits in the Conference. Land sold when I was a boy around there for $25. Now it is held at from $100 to $200 an acre. So while material values have increased many-fold, and the people are better off in this world's goods, the church is poorer. Something is wrong. Those brethren there ought not to allow that state to continue. From all prospects they are going to make a bumper cotton crop this year. It would be a fine thing if they would raise that extra $200, and let the Conference know that they can take care of themselves. Why, Jim Hudson's pigs could pull them out. Such rooters as he has! Polands with pedigrees longer than their curling tails. And they are the Lord's pigs, too, for he gave me one, and that will be a starter for my smokehouse. If those big-hearted Methodists, who were so clever to me, would give the Lord every tenth row of cotton, and every tenth pig, and every tenth cow's produce, Guerry would not know what to do with the revenue! My, what cotton Andy Nail has near his house! Up to a man's shoulders in July, and fruiting heavily, with no danger of boll weevil. It was a great pleasure to take Mr. Nail's hand at the closing service in pledge of a better life, henceforth to be lived with Christ as the guide. God bless him! His father frequently came down into the swamp where we lived, and borrowed my dogs for a bear hunt, and would leave a leg of venison as they returned from the hunt for our table. By the way, speaking of dogs, Mr. Nail has a little dog that interested me. Maybe it was because the little fellow took up with me so promptly and seemed so friendly that he won me. They had to shut him up to keep him from going to hear me preach. Smart! He would delight a naturalist as a subject for the study of animal intelligence. I am not much on dogs, but I took to Sport, and while I was at Mr. Nail's we formed a sort of mutual admiration society.

After my week at old Hines Chapel, reviving the memories of my boyhood, I ran up to Monteagle, the noted summer resort on the Cumberland Mountain, about halfway between Nashville and Chattanooga. I was one of the pioneers of Monteagle, one of the first speakers on its now famous Assembly platform. Soon after it was opened, and while the roads and walks were as yet mere trails through the woods, a young man from New Orleans came up there to see his sweetheart. She was at a cottage over on the grounds. He stopped at the hotel near the station, fixed himself up primped and put on his best. As he followed the path over to the grounds, he saw a pretty little spotted animal in the path before him. It was so pretty, and seemed so gentle, he thought it would be a nice pet to give his sweetheart. But when he stooped to pick it up, it let him have it straight in the face, as it bounded away in the bushes. The poor fellow fainted, and finally getting on his feet, he returned to the hotel, vomiting all along the way. As he entered the hotel, everything fled from him holding their noses. He started to the barber shop, and the barber broke and ran. The doctor backed away, holding his nose, but finally, out of compassion, disinfected him, fumigated him, and by degrees brought him back to normal. He had to shave his head and burn his clothes and bathe repeatedly before he could rid himself of the odor of the pretty little pet! As soon as he could travel he returned to the city, satisfied that skunks are not exactly what they seem.

Monteagle is now a little city in the woods, and this year it has a very large attendance, more people than have been there for some years past. It is an earthly paradise for ladies and children, especially old ladies. There are so many white-haired dames there this season, that some ungallant man who looked over the audience in the big auditorium said it reminded him of a cotton field white unto the harvest, just ready to pick! But the mountain air for the body, and the moral and intellectual atmosphere for the soul, make it a delightful place at which to spend a vacation. I had only a day or two to spend there, but thoroughly enjoyed the brief stay, for it was there that I found Sister Steel! I was pastor of McKendree Church in Nashville, and she was a "Co-ed" in Vanderbilt University, before that institution fell from grace. So all the crags and cliffs of Monteagle, beautiful in themselves, are mantled with romantic associations for me. Yonder is where I first saw her; there is the path where we took our first walk together; there is the spot where she let me tie her shoe; yonder is Sunset Rock where we sat together—and so on all around the mountain! She evaded my address, said she did not want to get married, wanted to go to Germany and study and then write a book! I won, and after some years of happy wedded life, I said one day: "Dear, what ever became of your idea of writing a book?" "I wrote it," she quietly replied. I was surprised, and said, "What have you done with it?" "There it is," she said as she pointed to our noble boy, now a soldier in Germany and a fine Christian man. She has written five volumes, and I am proud of my wife as an authoress. Didn't Paul say of his work: "Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men * * * written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart?"

Carley, I am gathering the fruit of a long life of honest effort to be a good man. From the Potomac to the Rio Grande, from the Nebraska to the Peedee, wherever I ramble now, I meet the smiling goddess, Mnemosyne, and pluck the flowers of memory that bloom profusely all along the way; and every spray of mountain laurel, and every wild rose in the glen, reminds me of the modest maiden I met on the heights.

I heard some fine speaking at Monteagle. Just as I was leaving President Bobbitt and family arrived from Mansfield. If you need fresh ideas, steal Bobbitt's notebook when he comes home. He isn't going to loaf up there; and if he talks, as he likely will at their conferences, somebody else will do well to have a notebook handy, for he says things worth remembering. I am spending a week at Winchester, near Monteagle; giving a course of lectures on the Bible. Mrs. Steel writes me that she has moved into our little "Bide-a-wee Cottage," the home given to us by the kind people of Mansfield, and I am anxious to get back to the Pelican Pines and enjoy it with her.

FROM "A MISSISSIPPI METHODIST."

It is with a feeling of trepidation that I undertake to answer Rev. T. W. Adams's article, criticising an article written by me and signed "A Mississippi Methodist," because I recognize his superiority in years, intellect and spirituality.

I appreciate the kindly part of his criticism and if what I wrote was "unfair to those who are criticised," I most humbly beg their pardon, but I fear my apology is very much like one a little boy made to his grandmother. He had called her a fool, and when his mother heard of it she scolded him and told him to go right over and apologize which he immediately did, in these words: "Grandma, I is sorry you is a fool."

Doubtless those who use the term, "old, worn-out preachers," think it sounds all right, and if you dear superannuates like it and find in it "a suggestion of deepest veneration and love," I would by no means deprive you of the epithet, but my feelings about the matter remain the same.

I agree with all that Brother Adams says about the duties of the Conference toward its old preachers and those who are threatened with a breakdown, and I do hope they may be successful in raising a large endowment fund to provide for them.

But on one thing we do not agree. However it is just a difference of opinion. A lady of my acquaintance once said to her sister, "Why, Sis, if every one thought as I do, every one" (meaning all the ladies) "would want John." Now as far as her neighbors were concerned, I am sure she was welcome to "John." So the superannuates are welcome to be called "old, worn-out preachers." But I do not like it.

"Convince a woman against her will,
She's of the same opinion still."

THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE CAMPAIGN.

Quite a number of our friends are asking about the final result of our campaign for funds and have requested that I publish a statement regarding same. I beg to state that the campaign has not yet been concluded; owing to the summer months, when most people of means are away from home, but little is being done just at this time. Quite a number of places, however, have done splendidly, and we feel very confident when we have completed our work we will have secured the full amount we have asked for. We hope to complete the effort early in the fall or winter. Owing to the fact that work is incomplete in many localities, we have not received reports so that we can make a detailed report at the present time, but as soon we receive the final reports from the communities that have already made their effort we will report on these.

We would ask that all monies that have been raised for the Orphanage should be sent in to the Orphanage at Ruston, and made payable to the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

Thanking our friends for their help, and trusting we may be able to make a most encouraging report in a few weeks, I am, Cordially,

ROB'T W. VAUGHAN.
Supt. Louisiana Methodist Orphanage

PROGRESS AT CENTENARY COLLEGE.

To the Board of Trustees of Centenary College.

As Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College I desire to submit for your information the following facts, which I trust will be gratifying and satisfactory.

Our two new buildings on Centenary campus, costing about ninety thousand dollars, are about finished and ready for occupancy.

The necessary equipment for the laboratories and class rooms, the necessary furnishings for the class rooms and dormatories have been authorized and much of it ordered, and we hope to have it all in and ready for the opening of school.

A complete faculty for the College and for the Academy has been secured and contracted with.

Certain repairs on the old building have been ordered which are needed to put the same in first-class condition and make it adaptable for the requirements of the enlarged programme which has been put under way.

In order to pay for these additional demands it was necessary to have additional money immediately, and I have in my possession a subscription list amounting to $19,000, with more in sight if needed, payable on demand, which was secured this week by members of the Board, the major part of the work being done by Dr. Geo. S. Sexton and Mr. E. A. Frost, both members of our Board. It may be interesting to know that this list contained one subscription of $5,000, and only one as small as $500.

I am giving you this information in order that you may know that we are in dead earnest in our determination to make of Centenary an A-grade College, and to solicit your cordial assistance, your sympathy in the undertaking and your confidence in our integrity.

Respectfully yours,
JOHN L. SCALES.
Chairman Board of Trustees.

THE BEAUTIFUL LIFE.

"Tell me about the beautiful life," said a Japanese to Dr. Leighton Parks.

"Do you want to talk about religion?" said the preacher.

"No," answered the Oriental, "I want to know about the beautiful life."

"Have you read the Bible?" continued the preacher still more interested.

The enquirer said, "I have read the Bible, but do not like it; I do not care for the church. I do not want your religion. I want what I call the Beautiful Life. I saw a man in a boarding-house in San Francisco—a poor man, not an educated man like myself—a carpenter, but he had what all my life I have wanted. I have thought it might be in the world, but I have never seen it in my own country. I call it the Beautiful Life. How can I find it? The old man went about helping everybody; he was always happy; he never thought about himself."

Dr. Parks read the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians and asked, "Is that it?" The man replied, "It is like it; how can I get it?" Then Dr. Parks told him the wonderful story of Jesus, told him to follow the one beautiful life. He gave him the New Testament.

A year or two later Dr. Parks had a sudden visit. The man burst into the room very abruptly, saying, "My train leaves at two o'clock. I must take the train to catch the steamer at San Francisco to go back to my country. I have something to tell you." But his story was written on his face. He proceeded: "Sir, I have found the Beautiful Life. I have found Jesus." Then he went away almost as suddenly as he had come. He went back to pagan Japan with the consciousness that across the waste of the centuries one life walked that was filled with the beauty of God.

THE SECRET OF A STRONG PERSONALITY.

By the Rev. James L. Gordon, D.D., Pastor First Congregational Church, San Francisco.

There are many echoes, but few voices; many islands, but few continents; many mountain ranges, but few great, towering mountain peaks; many parties, but few leaders; many captains, but few generals; many politicians, but few statesmen; and millions of people, but few strong, outstanding personalities.

What Personality Is Not.

1. Personality is not the measure of a man's social standing or the reflection of any honorable position, social, political, or ecclesiastical. When George IV sat on the throne of England, Sir Walter Scott reigned in the hearts of the British people. Who was the monarch? Who was the sovereign? Who was the king? Which of the two possessed personality? The most unsatisfactory member of the race is the man who possesses social position and yet lacks personality.

2. A strong personality does not depend on material prosperity or commercial success. Job reached the highest point in personality when his money had disappeared, when his property had been swept away, when his children had died, when his wife had lost all hope for him, and when his neighbors were convinced that he was a hypocrite—then he rose superior to "fate," and circumstances. Listen to his words: "I have no hope, nevertheless I will maintain my ways before Him."

3. A strong personality is not the result of fame, notoriety, or popular reputation. A person may be "noted" without being notable. A newspaper reporter said to "Sam" Jones: "Mr. Jones, you ought to treat us reporters well—you owe a good deal to the newspapers—the newspapers made you." The Southern evangelist replied, with a knowing twinkle in his eye: "If the newspapers made me, tell them to go ahead and make another 'Sam' Jones just like me." In the last analysis no newspaper can write a man "up" or write a man "down." If a man is right, the newspapers can't keep him down, and if a man is wrong, all the newspapers in Christendom can't hold him up. Character will out.

4 Personality is not a matter of health or splendid physical proportions. Robert Murray McCheyne used to thrill Scotland with his eloquence when he had hardly physical strength sufficient to stand up in the pulpit. God very often puts big brains into a slender skull. There are frail men who think in every joint and inch of their anatomy. Men must be weighed as well as counted, and the part that must be weighed resides just over the eyes and between the ears. Give me a pair of brain scales, and I will tell you who the strong men are. There are physical heavyweights who never suffered from mental nervousness. The mind is the measure of the man. The man who can put two thoughts together and produce an intellectual sulphur point sufficient to strike a flame into the fuel of circumstances is the child of genius we are looking for.

5. Personality is not merely a pleasing face and an attractive smile. A certain American college professor, of international reputation, has said that "the world will never be saved by tact." Why should we aim to be popular? There are a score of things better than popularity. Stanley the explorer was never popular with his men. Grant was not popular as a general. Wellington was never a "hail fellow well met." Popularity is a good dessert but a poor article of diet as a steady staple. To the ash can with vain longings for the approving smile of an unthinking world!

What Personality Is.

1. Personality is a superabundance of intellectual life. We live in our heads, not in our heels. We live in the spirit, not in the flesh. Life is personality. Personality is life. William the Conqueror, even in his dying hour, is feared by his servants. Even up to the moment when the scepter falls from his dead hand they have a healthy dread of his power. But mark the moment when the scepter drops—then his servants begin to rob his person and empty his treasury. A strong personality indicates a superabundant life. Charles Lamb wrote to the poet Wordsworth, saying: "Coleridge lives about four miles from here, and the presence of such a man is equal to the influence of fifty persons of ordinary culture and ability." A living man standing before living men will always be mightier, for an immediate effect, than black ink on white paper.

The Ladder of St. Augustine is the ladder of personality: "I am. I know. I can. I ought. I will." This is the ladder of personality: "I am"—Consciousness. "I know"—Intellect. "I can"—The will. "I ought"—The moral sense. "I will"—Decision of character. St. Augustine climbed that ladder. So may we.

2. There has never been a man of strong personality without intense convictions. A conviction is a belief which grips the reason, crystallizes the will, and fires the heart. A man's convictions are of small value unless they are intense. The man of strong convictions is possessed by real love and real hate. In the soul of this man the light is bright and the shadows are dark. Good does not merge into evil or right shade into wrong. The psalmist was possessed of convictions which were clear, distinct, and deep-rooted when he declared, "Ye that love the Lord hate evil."

You may criticize a man for being too positive, but it is only the positive man who wins.

Most successful men, in their immature years, were charged with being conceited. Conceit is not a bad characteristic. We may have too much of it or too little, but time will grind down your organ of conceit if it should be too conspicuous amid the phrenological hilltops. Better a bump on your head than a hole in your skull. Better too much self-reliance than too little. Have an idea or two of your own. Drive the nails deep into the platform of your creed. Don't be afraid to make good use of the personal pronoun. Remember you have many noble examples. Paul, for instance: "I know whom I have believed."

3. The man of strong personality is always characterized by feelings which are deep and emotions which are profound. The difference between man and man is very largely a matter of feeling. A man's feelings are more intense than his neighbor's, therefore he is more plain, explicit, and outspoken.

Dwight L. Moody once said to a friend of mine: "James, did you ever feel, when listening to a sermon, that you could rise, enter the pulpit, and do the thing better yourself?" My friend confessed that he had never felt the pressure of an inward conviction strong enough to make him wish that he could exchange places with a dry-as-dust theological expert occupying the pulpit, but evidently Mr. Moody had felt that he would like to exchange places with the sleeping pulpiteer on more than one occasion. Perhaps it was that sensation of a divine dissatisfaction which crowded young Moody out into the highways and hedges in order to reach the unsaved. Moody was the greatest illustration of pent-up enthusiasm which the world has seen in two hundred years.

Thomas Carlyle once remarked: "Had I but two shillings in the world and one great idea, I should regard it as my duty to part with one shilling for paper and ink, and live on the other shilling until I had expressed that idea." Only a man possessed of strong personality could speak that way. Depth of feeling and strong personality go together. It is the touch of life—we call it "depths of feeling."

4. The man of strong personality, if he would bide the test of time, must be clear in his thinking. The greatest creative force is thought. One great idea in the soul of one great man means a new era for the race. You can carry a small, fine-print New Testament in your vest-pocket, but the original ideas which it contains have revolutionized the world. Jesus is supreme to-day not because men have claimed that he was this or that, but because his thoughts, ideas, and convictions have revolutionized the thinking of the race.

5. There has never been a commanding personality who was lacking in decision of character. Melancthon said concerning Martin Luther: "In the midst of uncertainties he alone knew just what should be done." The lawyer who can find as many reasons against his client as he can in his favor had better not enter the courtroom. An "open mind" may be a good thing in a philosopher, but it is a poor thing in a judge, for the business of a judge is to reach a decision. They told General U. S. Grant that he could not advance on the enemy and at the same time hold his base of supplies. Grant replied that if the enemy advanced on him and routed his men, there would not be much need for "a base of supplies." They also charged Grant with sacrificing his men by his aggressive war measures, but Grant told his critics that men did not engage in war to "save lives," and proved that in the inaction of a sluggish campaign more lives were sacrificed through disease than by bloodshed.

7. A powerful personality, in order to be broad in its sweep, should be permeated with sympathies which are world-wide and universal. Why should we be strong for ourselves? Why should we build a pyramid to the memory of our selfishness and then be buried in the heart of it? Why should we gather bonds and notes, gold and silver, diamonds and pearls, and then leave them to mark the place of our departure? Why not be strong for some divine purpose? Brain without blood and intellect without love—how cold; Charles Kingsley's words are sweet and sympathetic, "I love the world, I love it now, and I shall love it always." When the Apostle exhorts, "Love not the world, neither the things which are in the world," he is not trying to curb our love and affection for poor, wayward, sin-stricken humanity. The world needs our love. The men who have moved the world have been the men who have wept over it.

Personality is the great driving force. It is the throb in the pulse, the fire in the eye, the blood in the vein, the quicksilver in the brain, the lightning in the nerve, the electricity in the touch, the transfiguration in the face, the motion in the limb—the soul in action. How shall we develop personality? What is the secret of its power? Where shall we kindle its fires? What are the sources of its strength? Where are the unseen rivers of its supply? Personality is life, heart, mind, soul, spirit—God.

Do you not feel the thrill and throb of a divine pulsation in your own soul? Personality? You have it! Personality? You possess it. The driving force is within you. Are you not conscious of it? Disraeli makes one of his literary characters say (what doubtless he must have said of himself): "It seemed that I felt within me a power by which I could influence mankind!" And Margaret Fuller was striking the same note of universal experience when she cried out: "I feel within myself an immense force—oh, that I could express it!"

There is a driving force which is human and there is a driving force which is divine. We should consecrate one and ask for the other.

Mark this: The greatest driving force is transmitted force. The greatest thing in prayer is not to get God to do something for you which you can not do for yourself. The greatest achievement is to live so that God can work through you—to be the channel for the transmission of spiritual power. That's better than asking God for health, or friends, or increased compensation, or a better house to live in, or material prosperity for your children. Ask God for whatever you feel you need—but, believe me, I am about through asking God for things. If I can get the highest blessing, even harmony with the Most High, I shall have everything below the highest. If I seek the first and the highest, I shall certainly possess the last and the lowest. I wonder sometimes if God does not grow tired of our cry, "Give! Give! Give!" especially when we ask for small things and things which we desire for ourselves and our children. Why not ask for the all-inclusive first thing. Would you know the secret of power, "be strong in the Lord and the power of his might." Would you be strong in the Lord and the power of his might, "seek first the kingdom of God." The greatest achievement is to live so that God can work through you.—Western Christian Advocate.

The Home Circle

A PHANTASY.

By Willie Conger Page.

Children, do you know where the fairies sleep?
Lend me your ear and I will whisper low:
On the ferny cliffs; on the dream-stair steep,
Where the moonbeams sift and the soft winds blow;
Curled in the depth of the lily's heart;
By the rill in the meadow; in the daffodil's cup;
In the spray of the fountain where the gold-fish dart;
In a baby's pink palm when 'tis fast closed up;
Under the dewy rose-petals they drowse and nod,
Till the robins wake them as they sing to God.

ROVER.

"I guess he'll have to be shot, Sid. He isn't fit to have around in that shape any longer"

"But—father—"

"I know you think the world of him, my boy. He's been a good, kind playmate for you, but he's gone blind, or good as blind, gets under our feet and runs into things and smashes them. His hair comes out all the time, and he isn't pleasant to smell, and your mother's tired of having him around under foot, and—the fact is, he's had his day, and I think you'd better take your gun and shoot him. Do it to-day, Sid. It's a holiday and you can take him off into the woods, where nobody will see you. Remember, now, I expect you to do it to-day."

Big, fourteen-year-old Sidney Marsh, who an hour before would not have believed it possible that he could cry like a girl, hid his face against the wall as his father went out, and sobbed as if his heart would break. Kill Rover!—dear, loving old Rover! And his hand, of all the hands in the world, to do the dreadful deed. It all seemed like a frightful dream—that stern, unexpected order of his father's that had come upon him like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky.

As he stood, shaken with sobs, something moist and cold was pushed into his hand, and, looking down through the blur of tears, he saw Rover's dim eyes raised to his, and heard the dog's tail heavily thumping the floor.

"Oh, Rover! Poor, poor old fellow!" cried the boy, falling on his knees and clasping his arms about the old dog's neck. "You little know what's got to be done to-day. Oh, but I can't, I can't!"

The old dog licked his master's streaming face and whined softly. He did not quite know what the matter was, but he realized that Sidney was in trouble, and his faithful dog-heart was distressed.

"Yes, I know you'd like to help, Rover, you good fellow," sobbed Sidney. "But there's nothing you can do, poor Rover—just nothing."

The boy rose and walked unsteadily to the hat-rack, half-blinded by tears, and took down his cap.

"Come—old fellow!" he choked. "We will go out—and have one more look around the place, anyway. We won't go off into the woods until afternoon—not, not till 'most night this time, Rover boy."

Sidney's little sister, Lucy, was playing in the summer house as he and Rover went out. She had all her dolls around her—such a collection of them, of all colors, sizes and shapes! Sidney almost smiled through his tears as he looked in and saw that curious house party. They were all grouped around in a minature kitchen—a playhouse within a playhouse—and in this three-walled kitchen was the cunningest little range, with tea-kettle, frying pan, and even a set of tiny flatirons. The sunny-haired child seemed so happy among her dolls, it would be too bad, Sidney thought, to say anything to her about the tragedy that had just come into his life. Besides, she wouldn't understand—not as he understood.

Sidney and Rover passed on and went into the garden. There was a big sage bed Sidney had been raising that to pay the cost of Rover's license. It was doing finely, but the boy turned away with a lump in his throat. What difference did it make now whether the sage thrived or not?

Suddenly old Rover raised his head and sniffed the air. For a moment he stood irresolute and dimly comprehending. Then he bounded heavily away toward the summer house, crashing through slender trellises and trampling flower-beds. In vain Sidney shouted after him to stop him. The old dog for once paid no heed to his master's voice. Then, all at once, a gleam of understanding came to Sidney, and he dashed after the dog.

He could see it now—a little thin veil of smoke floating out of the summer house! Rover's keen sense of smell, that even age had not dulled, had detected it while it was still but a puff, a pale little ghost of the fire, and had distinguished its odor from the familiar smell of burning wood.

Just as Sidney started to run, he heard Rover crash blindly against the side of the summer house; but he did not see the old dog pick himself up, smell for the doorway, and stumble in.

Not until that moment did a child's scream ring out on the air. The fire Lucy had been lighting and playing with at that instant ceased to be a wonder and beauty for her, and became pain. It had spread from the little range and the scattered paper and the doll's dresses to her own light frock, and, quick as a serpent's strike, had stung her!

Sidney slipped off his coat as he ran. There was a piece of burlap lying across the top of a barrel in his path, and he snatched that, too. He saw his mother rushing from the house, but he was nearer than she, and was the first to burst into the summer house.

Lucy lay on the floor, where the leap of the old dog had upset her. Only a small part of the front of her dress was burned—merely a charred strip under Rover's body, as he lay across her legs. Sidney lifted the dog off, and saw that his sister was safe. Then he threw the burlap over the burning dolls, and smothered the flame. The whole thing was over in a minute, and mother and son carried the sobbing child into the house. Rover following behind, with a strong smell of singed hair about him, and his tongue lolling out of his mouth.

When Mr. Marsh returned from his office in the evening and heard what happened, he caught up little Lucy and strained her to his bosom for a long time. Then he went over to where old Rover was lying on the rug, stooped down and patted the grizzled head.

"If anyone ever harms a hair of that dog," he said, "I'll—I'll—" Then he broke down.

And Sidney stole out into the shed and hugged himself for joy.—James Buckham, in Boys and Girls.

DAVE'S AWAKENING.

Some years ago, in a poor schoolhouse in a back district, a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word which had passed down the entire class.

"Go to the head of the class," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can, if you work hard."

The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one; Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every word.

"Dave, how do you get your lessons so well now?" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson, and get my mother to hear me at night; then I go over them in the morning before I come to school; and I go over them in my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave," said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way, and you'll do."

Dave is to-day the manager of a large company, and he attributes his start to the words: "Go up to the head, and see that you stay there. You can, if you work hard."—Presbyterian Advance.

He is all truth in his words, and justice in his actions, and if the whole world should disbelieve his integrity, dispute his character, and question his happiness, he would neither take it ill in the least, nor turn aside from that path that leads to the aim of life, toward which he must move, pure, calm, well prepared, and with perfect resignation to his fate.—Marcus Aurelius.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

AN EDITOR'S VACATION.

Recalling a recent bit of advice to such of our readers as might need it—"Take a vacation, or go to work"—we took the matter so seriously to heart that we decided to follow it ourselves in a kind of compound fashion—taking the vacation with work.

At Grenada, Miss.

An invitation to preach at Grenada, Miss., on Sunday morning, August 8, during the session of the North Mississippi Conference Training School, was the occasion of a delightful visit to that delightful college town. Upon arrival, about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, we were met by President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, who took us, bag and baggage, to his home on the college campus, where we were the recipients of as delightful hospitality as can be imagined by the most fastidious itinerant. As fellow-guests we had Rev. E. S. Lewis, Rev. R. H. Ruff, Rev. R. P. Neblett, Hon. G. J. Leftwich; Mr. E. E. French, and several others, with whom association was as delightful as it was profitable.

The Training School we found in full blast, doing a work that will mean much for increased efficiency in the Sunday school activities of the North Mississippi Conference. It was an auspicious beginning of what we confidently predict will become one of the great annual gatherings of that section of the church. No one could visit the classes in session and listen to the enthusiastic presentation of methods of church work by thoroughly equipped teachers, without feeling that the earnest students gathered there were receiving such inspiration as would make them increasingly efficient as they went back to their various fields of activity. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, has a vision of his field of labor that is inspiring him to the most devoted and unselfish efforts to establish the highest possible standards in the religious training of our youth. In the work of the school he was assisted by as able corps of assistants as it has been our good fotune to run across in any undertaking.

In spite of a steady rain, we had the privilege of facing a splendid congregation at the Methodist church on Sunday morning—a congregation which greatly pleased the preacher by its close attention to the message he tried, with indifferent success, to deliver. Even so good a preacher as Rev. W. W. Woollard, the pastor, must feel the inspiration that comes from such a devout and cultured people as he ministers to them Sunday by Sunday.

At the evening hour it was our privilege to listen to a helpful and inspiring message delivered by Rev. Carroll Varner, our gifted pastor at West Point, Miss.

We cannot pass from our visit to Grenada without making mention of the magnificent new Administration Building of the College, just completed. We wish every Methodist in North Mississippi could see it, in order that his just pride in that fine institution of learning might be intensified, and that his faith in the purpose of the church to meet every educational requirement might be strengthened. If there is another such building in the State, we do not know where it is—and we have not found a finer one for its purposes in any State. It is literally "a thing of beauty," and so substantially is it constructed of vitrified brick and stone that it will be "a joy forever." President Countiss and Commissioner Brownlee, with the help of the friends of Christian education, have wrought an achievement that is as remarkable in its physical aspects as it is significant of the new conception of education into which we have entered.

Blue Ridge, N. C.

On Monday afternoon, in compapny with Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Countiss and their fine young sons, John and Eugene, and Rev. W. W. Woollard, we left Grenada for Blue Ridge, N. C., to attend the first "set-up" meeting of the Educational Commission. We had to change trains at Grand Junction, Tenn., and at Morristown, Tenn. That Grand Junction is a junction, we could easily see; but its grandeur did not impress itself upon us during the two or three hours we had to wait for our train. We did get a good supper there for seventy-five cents, though—an item worth mentioning, perhaps, in these times of "get-while-the-getting-is-good." We proffer this small flower of appreciation to the unknown proprietor of the restaurant where we appeased our appetite. We could wish that the gentlemen who fix the prices in the dining cars might be trained in the school of this Grand Junction restaurateur.

At Morristown we had time enough between trains to have seen a little of the beauties of the place, but an incessant drizzle kept us close to the railroad station. We did notice that Brother Woollard managed to get far enough away to find a shop where he could purchase a box-lunch—the wisdom of which we keenly perceived some hours later; when noon came, it was just twelve o'clock for the rest of us, but it was mealtime for him. He did generously propose to divide—but "what is one box-lunch among a man?" Upon our arrival at Asheville, somewhat delayed, we quickly made amends for our egregious blunder at Morristown.

It would take a poet, with plenty of time, to describe that trip along the French Broad River into Asheville; being neither the one, nor having the other, we shall content ourselves with saying that he who has not yet taken it still has something worth while to look forward to in the way of scenery that beggars description. The only fault we had to find was the fact that heavy rains had made the water very muddy—and an angler's heart has a tendency to grow heavy at such a sight.

Blue Ridge is an institution developed and owned by a board of trustees, under the title, The Blue Ridge Association, for holding conferences of Christian workers under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Missionary Education Movement, and such other gatherings of similar character as may be found practicable. The property embraces 1,191 acres, which, with the buildings, is valued at more than $200,000. Its situation in the Blue Ridge Mountains is surpassingly beautiful. Such views, experienced travelers have said, are not to be found elsewhere this side of Switzerland. The same limitations that prevented our attempting to describe the French Broad trip prevent our trying to describe the views that greeted our eyes from the porch of Robert E. Lee Hall at Blue Ridge.

The Educational Conference.

The report of the Committee on Findings, which we print this week on another page, will give our readers a comprehensive knowledge of the aims and purposes that lay back of this great gathering of the educators of our church in preparation for the campaign to raise a sufficient amount of money to provide adequately for the pressing needs of our educational institutions. We hope it will be read carefully. Bishops, secretaries, connectional officers, directors, college presidents and professors, pastors—and editors—were there in large numbers, and the whole educational situation was gone into thoroughly. There was no disposition to ignore the difficulties in the way of a great financial campaign at this time, but so urgent are the needs revealed and so tragic is the danger of delay, that there was unanimous agreement that our people, when the facts are made known to them, will enter into the campaign with enthusiasm. Our own feeling, after listening to the presentation of the case from beginning to end, is that we are entering upon a movement so momentous in its consequences that failure is not even to be thought of. We confidently expect the church at large to be brought to a keener realization of its responsibilities and opportunities in connection with this movement than it was even in the Centenary; and we are as fully confident that the results will exceed even the most optimistic expectations. We cannot but feel that whatever opposition may have existed in the minds of some of our people to this campaign at the present time, will be swept away when all the facts in the case become fully known.

The Southern Methodist Press Association.

Practically all the editors of our church periodicals were in attendance at this meeting, and the opportunity was taken advantage of, through the courtesy of the Educational Commission, to hold a meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association, organized at Birmingham, Ala., last year. Dr. J. H. Reynolds, the director of the Educational Campaign, and Drs. Clark and Chadwick, the directors of publicity, met with the Association, and discussed fully the use of the church press in connection with the approaching campaign. It is significant that there was, on all sides, emphatic recognition of the fact that the church papers are indispensable in carrying out any great program in the church, either at large or in restricted areas. In some way or other, provision must be made for the maintenance of the church press upon a basis that will enable it to function efficiently in carrying forward the work in which it has such a large part.

Lake Junaluska, N. C.

Through Dr. L. C. Branscomb, editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, who is also serving as director of the program at the Southern Assembly, the Assembly extended to the editors a cordial invitation to visit the grounds while so near. Several of them accepted the invitation, among them ourselves, and it is a pleasure to express appreciation of the many courtesies received at the hands of Dr. Banscomb, Mr. A. E. Wells, manager of the Terrace Hotel, Mr. W. H. Stockham, who is putting thousands of dollars and untiring energy into the development of the Assembly, and others who joined in making our brief stay thoroughly delightful. Our pleasure was greatly heightened by our meeting there several friends and acquaintances of other days and places—Mr. and Mrs. Buie and Mrs. Green, of Jackson, Miss., and Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Gaddis, of Belton, Miss., come immediately to mind. Lake Junaluska has already become one of the great gathering places of Methodist people; it is destined to become even greater as its charms and attractions become better known.

Asheville, N. C.

We had planned to spend three or four hours in seeing the sights of Asheville—but alas, the rain! We walked around the Square, went on a street car to see a famous inn which bears the name of a well-known medicine for chills—ugh!—rode through the village of Biltmore, where we had the good fortune to run across our good friend, Rev. R. P. Fikes, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but now pastor at Biltmore, whose hospitality and that of his good wife we enjoyed for a half-hour or so, and then, in company with Brother Fikes, rode back to the Square and walked around to the beautiful First Methodist Church, where the General Conference was held some years ago. It was a part of our plan to eat supper in Asheville, but a glance at our watch showed that we had just enough time to reach the station in time to take the train for Atlanta. We fondly hoped that we could get something to eat on the train, but inquiry of the porter revealed the fact that that particular train carried no dining car—so supperless to bed we went. We cannot refrain from commending the example of Brother Woollard to all travelers—have a box-lunch handy in case of emergencies.

Atlanta and Emory University.

Since it is only a night's run from Asheville to Atlanta, Ga., we took advantage of the opportunity to visit that second city of the South in size, with the special object in view of seeing Emory University. The train schedules enabled us to arrive at 5:30 a.m., and leave at 6:40 p.m.—an ideal arrangement for the traveler who is limited as to time—and money. Of course we called at the office of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, where we were so fortunate as to meet its distinguished editor, Dr. W. C. Lovett, and an honored member of the North Georgia Conference who dropped in for a little visit at the same time, Rev. W. G. Crawley. We are under special obligation to Dr. Crawley for seeing that we got safely on the street car that would take us to Emory University.

We were prepared to see a great institution when we reached Emory—but the reality was beyond our dreams. It still has the air of newness, but it is easy to see that here is the beginning of one of the great American universities if the plans of its founders can be carried out. And they will be carried out, for the more than two millions of Southern Methodists will see to it that the money is forthcoming for all its present and future needs. The buildings that have already been erected—a noble group of them—would adorn any campus in the world; and they are only a token of what is to be.

It was a keen disappointment that we did not get to see Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, a North Mississippian who is rendering distinguished service as a member of the faculty and as pastor of the University Church. We did meet, however, Rev. J. B. Cain, a member of the Mississippi Conference, who showed us appreciated courtesies. We had the privilege, too, of meeting Dr. Boyd, of the faculty, of whom we had pleasant recollections from Vanderbilt days.

Back to town, to the train, and off for New Orleans! Thus endeth our vacation—but not our work.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A note from the secretary, Brother C. M. Moody, of Waynesboro, Miss., informs us that the Frost Bridge Holiness Association will hold its twenty-fourth annual camp meeting, August 20-29.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., after spending part of his vacation in the mountains of North Carolina, is visiting friends and relatives in New York.

We greatly appreciated a call by Mr. R. C. Forman, a member of First Church, Alexandria, La., on Thursday of last week, in company with Rev. F. M. Freeman, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, this city.

It was the editor's privilege to preach last Sunday, morning and evening, to splendid congregations at our First Church, Baton Rouge. The popular pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, is enjoying a short stay at Blue Ridge, N. C.

Rev. M. R. Jones informs us that two more Mississippi Conference preachers have made contributions to help rebuild the church at Rose Hill, Miss.—Rev. M. M. Black and Rev. A. A. Simms. He is greatly appreciative of their assistance.

Rev. Geo. A. Baker, North Mississippi Conference evangelist, informs us that, owing to a cancelled engagement, he has an open date for the first week in September. Any brother who desires his help at that time may address him at Myrtle, Miss.

We learn from a press dispatch that the meeting under the auspices of the Hennington Camp Ground Association, Crystal Springs, Miss., conducted by Rev. George Tucker, the Industrial evangelist of our church, resulted in 49 conversions and additions to the church.

The Senior Epworth League at First Church, Baton Rouge, La., under the presidency of Mr. A. R. Wallis, is a thoroughly live and aggressive organization. The quota of that church for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage—$1,000 has been more than subscribed through the activity of the League.

A note from Rev. A. C. McCorkle, presiding elder of the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference, informs us that Rev. J. C. McElroy, pastor of Chester circuit, is seriously ill in the hospital at Memphis, Tenn. We are sure that many prayers will ascend in behalf of this faithful servant of the church.

A post card from Dr. I. W. Cooper, dated Paris, France, August 6, informs us that he had completed his visit to Italy, Switzerland, and France, and was leaving that day for a tour of Belgium, Holland, England, and Scotland. He expects to be at his post of duty at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., about September 10.

Rev. Jno. L. Sutton recently held a fine meeting at Bethel Church, near Minden, La., in which there were 16 additions to the church. There were some remarkable conversions during the meeting, and the whole community was greatly blessed. This is the second meeting Brother Sutton has held at that church within two years—and he is invited to return for a third meeting.

At the recent meeting of the Commission on General Conference Entertainment, invitations were extended from Asheville and Lake Junaluska, N. C., Houston, Texas, and Hot Springs, Ark. In view of the difficulty of making satisfactory arrangements two years in advance on account of unsettled conditions, it was decided to postpone the selection of the place until next June.

It is with great sorrow that we learn of the death of Mrs. W. J. Hutchinson, of Caspiana, La., at the home of her son, Mr. Trigg S. Hutchinson, in Shreveport, La., on Wednesday afternoon, August 18. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Jno. F. Foster, of Franklin, La., a long-time friend of the deceased. A truly great and good woman has gone from us, but her memory is as ointment poured out. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family.

Port Gibson Female College, at Port Gibson, Miss., will open on September 8. The opening address will be delivered that morning at 10 o'clock by Miss Nell Drake, missionary to China. Miss Drake is a native of Port Gibson and an alumna of the College. It will be a great privilege to the old friends, as well as to the students, to hear her. Students should arrive in ample time for the address. Two of the students of the College are preparing for foreign work. The indications are that the attendance the approaching session will be larger than usual.

One of the largest and most aggressive Sunday school classes of this city is the Wesleyan Bible Class for Young People of our First Methodist Church. Mr. L. A. Hines, 421 Whitney Central Bank Building, is president of the class, and Mr. C. F. Niebergall, vice president of the Canal-Commercial Bank, is teacher. If our pastors and friends throughout the church would send the names of young people who are coming to New Orleans as students or to enter employment, to either of the addresses above, it would enable the class to get into touch with them and help make their stay in the city both pleasant and profitable. The class itself would appreciate the opportunity of rendering all possible service of this kind.

A recent number of the Oxford Eagle, Oxford, Miss., contained a full account of the forty-eighth camp meeting held at the Old Oxford Camp Ground, written by Mrs. A. F. Galloway. The preaching was done principally by Rev. L. M. Lipscomb and Rev. T. J. Hopper. Rev. L. P. Wasson also assisted in the services. There were present during the meeting eleven people who attended the first meeting held, in 1872, five of whom have been present at every meeting during the forty-eight years of the camp ground's history. Plans have been made to repair and beautify the grounds and buildings before the next annual meeting.

With the development of Lake Junaluska, N. C., into a great church assembly ground, the feeling has grown that there should be a similar place west of the Mississippi River. Recently a group of Western people at Lake Junaluska discussed the matter, and took steps to initiate a movement looking to the establishment of such an assembly to serve the church especially in Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas. Drs. H. A. Boaz and A. J. Weeks, of Texas, Dr. Forney Hutchinson, of Oklahoma, Dr. R. L. Russell, of Missouri, Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, of Louisiana, and Dr. A. C. Millar, of Arkansas, were asked to present the matter to their respective Annual Conferences and request each to appoint a preacher and a layman as commissioners to consider the whole subject and to endeavor to find a suitable location. It will probably take several years to work the plan out fully.

JOHN JOHNSON GRICE was born January 25, 1848, and departed this life November 3, 1919. He was old enough to serve but a short while in the Army of the Confederacy, but as soon as he became of military age he enlisted and saw some active service. Returning soon after the struggle was over he became the bread-winner for his mother's widowed family, and well discharged those responsible duties. In the early seventies he loved and married Miss Elizabeth Virginia Knight. Their union was blessed with nine children—eight of whom, together with their great mother, "Aunt Bettie" as she is popularly known, still survive. John Grice was never a member of the church—due to peculiar circumstances. His people were all Baptists. His wife's people were all Methodists, and being an exceptionally conscientious man, he could never quite subscribe fully to the doctrines and usages of either. His religious life, however, was, with that exception, most beautiful. The poor of the community were his beneficiaries. I testify emphatically that I have never known a man to do more according to his resources for the poor than did he. Also he had a knowledge of God in that vital sense which gives peace. More times than I can recount have I heard his voice in family prayer. With the hearty co-operation of his dear wife he was able to rear his children in the nurture of the Lord and rejoiced as one by one he saw the last one received into the Methodist Church, and two of his noble boys became members of the Mississippi Conference—Revs. J. H. and R. H. Grice. Besides, he contributed no little of wholesome influence over this scribe. There existed a peculiar tie between him and me almost as vital as between father and son. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of friends and loved ones, and after a most beautiful address by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, we tenderly laid his body to rest in the cemetery at old Bahala Chapel, where his wife and all the children were converted and joined the church. Surely a good man is gone and many "rise up now and call him blessed." Some day in a better world we expect to see him. Amen!

J. EARLY GRAY.

VIOLA MAY HILTON, daughter of Brother and Sister Drury Hilton, was born April 26, 1917, and went home to her Heavenly Father June 30, 1920, after a very short but severe illness. She went out to the field with her father Tuesday morning, following him until he sent her to the house to stay until dinner time, when she would come back, as was her custom, to ride the pony to the house. She started to the house, but fainted before she had hardly gone half way, lying there in the sun for nearly two hours before her father found her. She told her father that she would be all right soon, and never spoke any more. She went home to be with Jesus early the next morning, where she awaits the coming of her loved ones. The remains were laid away in the Rexford Cemetery, Simpson County, the services being conducted by the Rev. J. L. Smith, of Mendenhall, assisted by the writer. May God comfort and keep her loved ones until the family is reunited with Him, never to be broken again.

Harrisville, Miss., Aug. 10.

Brother ELEAZAR HOFFMAN, of Pineville, La., died, Sunday, August 8, and was buried on the 9th inst., leaving two brothers, two sons, and several grandchildren to mourn their loss. He was blessed with the ripe old age of 87 years. Under the preaching of a Catholic priest, Pat Galvin, brought from New Orleans by Rev. Christian Keener in 1885 to the Pineville Methodist Church, he joined the Methodist Church. During the thirty-five years since, he has always held his membership in the same church. His death was sudden. We are hopeful he has gone to rest. Rev. Jackson Vallery officiated at the funeral.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, the hand of death has entered our midst and removed our much esteemed and greatly beloved Mrs. T. M. Kimbrough; therefore be it resolved:

That the members of the Woman's Missionary Society at Union, Miss., do hereby extend to her bereaved husband, daughters and sons, our deepest sympathy and love in this hour of sorrow.

That while we must bow to the will of our Heavenly Father, at all times acknowledging His supreme power and wisdom, our beloved sister will be greatly missed from among us.

That we pray that this sorrow may only sweeten and mellow the hearts of those left behind, and that her consecrated Christian life be the biggest monument erected to her memory.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mr. T. M. Kimbrough, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be entered on the minutes of our society.

DEPENDED UPON IT 20 YEARS

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been This Woman's Safeguard All That Time.

Omaha, Nebr.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for over twenty years for female troubles and it has helped me very much. I have also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash with good results. I always have a bottle of Vegetable Compound in the house as it is a good remedy in time of need. You can publish my testimonial as every statement I have made is perfectly true."—Mrs. J. O. ELMQUIST, 2421 S. 20th Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

To know whether Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, try it! For advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

A woman's fondest hope is to stay young. She often resorts to paints, powders and cosmetics to hide her years. Some women pay large sums to so-called "Beauty Doctors" in the belief that money will buy youth. Others wear girlish dresses, thinking they can fool the world about their age. But no one is deceived. The more you try to hide your age, the more it shows.

There is but one thing that holds old age back, and that is health. Sickness and weakness bring old age early in life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a building-up medicine for women. It makes them healthy and strong when they suffer from women's troubles. It keeps them looking young by keeping them well. It is a woman's tonic for the frail, the delicate and those who are nervous, dizzy and who have backache and dragging pains. Favorite Prescription is altogether vegetable and without a particle of alcohol. It is safe to take. Try it now. In tablet or liquid form at all druggists, or send 10c for trial package of the tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

ANOTHER SUNDAY AT MONT. EAGLE.

By Rev. Payton A. Sowell.

Between Sundays the past week, the "god" of clouds and flood has had unhindered reign on the mountain. Sunday brought a rift in the clouds and a bit of sunshine.

Another Louisianian stood in the pulpit in the vast auditorium in the presence of a large audience. Personally, my pleasure was enriched in hearing Dr. J. C. Barr because years ago, when he was a student in Southwestern University, Clarksville, Tennessee, I was pastor of Madison Street Methodist Church, and I knew him personally.

At the evening hour, after he had been obedient to a rule of the university in attending worship at the Presbyterian Church, he frequently came to our church. A number of times in Louisiana and again to-day I received compound interest for the sermons he came to hear them.

As a Methodist it is not difficult to be reminded of Bishop McTyeire, by the splendid physical form, and even in the facial outlines, and in the "two-story" head. As a Methodist, I must admit that, even as a Presbyterian, he has come to be an effective and versatile preacher. I nevertheless fancy, if he had had an itinerant experience on a Methodist circuit and district, and the free air of a camp meeting, he, too, might have been, as McTyeire, a bishop. From Isaiah xxvi:3—"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee: because he trusteth in Thee," his sermon was refreshing in its doctrine, in its simplicity of utterance, and clear as the waters of a mountain stream in the time of long absence of rain, in its meaning.

While the assembly has drawn largely, no disappointment has occurred, even when they appeared seemingly incidentally, for Dr. S. A. Steel sustained his wide reputation on an appearance of that kind.

Drs. Summey and Carre are yet to come.

FROM THE MAGEE CHARGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: I think we pastors should make mention of our country work on our respective charges more than we do. I have had my memory jogged by several of my country members. They say they have never been interested in the Advocate because there is scarcely anything said about the work and progress of a country church. For this reason I am giving you a word concerning two meetings held in two of my country churches on the Magee charge.

We had our meeting at Rial Creek the fourth Sunday in July, Rev. W. H. Lane doing the preaching. This meeting was said to be the best meeting the church has had in several years. Practically everybody belonged to some church. Brother Lane preached to the church. The people were revived. This was the second year for Brother Lane in a meeting at this place, and at the close of the meeting the church extended an invitation to him to assist in the meeting another year. Brother Lane is a plain Gospel preacher, easy to work with and agreeable to all.

The other meeting was at Sharon Grove church, Rev. M. K. Miller, from Louise and Holly Bluff charge, doing the preaching. Brother Miller is a good singer and preacher, he too being very adaptable to general conditions in small country churches. The results of this meeting were that we had a revival in the church with two additions to the church, one on profession of faith and another coming from the Baptist Church, who was received by vows of our church. We closed this meeting out by celebrating the Lord's Supper. I feel that the Lord has wonderfully blessed us on this work this year, and the outlook already is very promising for another year.

May God bless all the country churches, for God is depending on them to go forward in the same measure as he depends on the town churches. Yours in His work,

S. W. JOHNSON, Pastor.

THE PRAYER MEETING AT AMITE, LA.

After reading different ideas about the prayer meeting, I wish to say that we think we have solved the problem.

We have a laymen's prayer meeting, and we have so many volunteers for conducting that we have a male conductor one Wednesday and a lady member the next.

We have grown in this way from 6 or 8 to 68 at the last meeting.

We are interested in our prayer meeting and have an interesting meeting.

If the prayer meeting is the index to the church, then we have a live church.

Let some of the lame meetings try this plan and be astonished at the growth. Fraternally,

C. S. STEWART.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT VAIDEN, MISS.

On Wednesday night, July 28, we closed a ten-days' meeting which was one of the greatest revivals I have ever attended. Evangelist W. M. McIntosh and his singer, Mr. R. L. Cooper, led in this great meeting, and surely they were led of God. The old-time power came upon the people and strong men, women, boys and girls wept, repented, believed, and were saved. Christians rejoiced in hope of the glory of God. All denominations attended the meeting and many were greatly blessed of God. As to the results of the revival, 28 joined the Methodist Church, 5 joined the Baptist Church, and 3 joined the Presbyterian Church. Great crowds of people came for miles from the country, and the attendance was good. The spiritual life of the community has been quickened very greatly, and we have a much better religious atmosphere. All praise belongs to Him who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE CRACK O' DOOM FOR NASTY CALOMEL

Folks Abandoning Old Drug for "Dodson's Liver Tone," Here in South.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you lose a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, breaking it up. Then is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish, if liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it can not salivate or make you sick.

666 quickly relieves Constipation, Biliousness, Loss of Appetite and Headaches, due to Torpid Liver.—Adv.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The reports of Sunday School Day have been very gratifying. We trust that many of the schools that have not reported will do so. The Brandon charge was the first to report an offering from each church.

Are you planning for Promotion Day? The programs are ready. Be sure to get your order in in ample time. Prepare for the biggest day you have ever had. If you have any items of interest, let us know them; and if we can help you in any way, let us know.

We spent five days at Mt. Olive, devoting the entire time to the work of instruction. We feel that the time was well spent and that good will come of the work done. Our next visit was to Howison. We feel that the school at Howison will reorganize, beginning with a better basis and strive to do efficient work. While at Howison we had the pleasure of baptizing five babies and receiving one young woman into the church by baptism. They promised to hold Sunday School Day and organize a Worker's Council, pledged to support the Orphan's Home and reorganize their Cradle Roll. This is a fine, loyal school. People from McHenry and Saucier were present and perhaps some influence of the meeting will be felt in these schools.

We also had the pleasure of spending one day at the Standard Training School of the North Mississippi Conference, held at Grenada, Miss. This was a great school and will be felt in the life of the North Mississippi Conference for days to come. I trust that we will be enabled to have a Standard Training School at Jackson next year for the whole Conference. We could hold it in the Millsaps College buildings and there is no reason why we could not have one hundred picked Sunday school workers from the Conference to spend six days here, studying, praying and working over their problems to together.

We had the privilege of being with Rev. R. H. Barr at Sandy Hook. This is a one-half Methodist school. They are doing fine work. We had the pleasure while there of baptizing four babies and receiving four into the church on profession of faith. While this is a small church, it is a most loyal and thrifty one.

So far as our record goes, the following charges have sent in an offering from each Sunday school on the charge: Camden, Meadville, Fayette, Brandon, and Benton.

The following charges have sent in amounts from the charge. We do not know if it means each Sunday school in the charge or not: Adams, Purvis, Mathersville, Nebo, and Van Cleave.

I trust that the brethren will pray for me and the work.

Yours in Him,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

We are pleased to announce that the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board has added a new member to its staff of workers. The elementary department is most vital in our educational activities, and for this reason the first department to have a Conference Superintendent for full-time service is this division. Miss Caroline Hess, of Sikeston, Mo., will fill this position with credit and efficiency. Miss Hess will be glad to serve any of our schools by writing and, where possible, by making a visit. Write her at 306-15th Street, Alexandria. You will find Miss Hess fully equipped for Sunday school work; make use of her to build up your school and especially your school below the Intermediate grades.

We are making ready now for our annual Sunday school reports and are going to send you blanks to fill and when they come to your school please make a full report in the space left blank. We will appreciate this very much as we desire to have the best report for the Annual Conference.

It is pleasing to note the interest in our denominational Sunday school work. It takes a Methodist Sunday school to make a Methodist church and we must be making more Methodist Sunday schools.

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.

Sometimes there will dawn a joyous day, when the fragile body, reunited with the glorified spirit, will be triumphant over sickness and death. For one of the promises of the risen life is that there will be no more pain. But now, here upon earth, suffering is a stepping-stone in the upward march of the spirit.—Selected.

Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists, price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Druggists also sell larger "Bayer packages." Aspirin is trade mark Bayer Manufacture Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

GIRLS! USE LEMONS FOR SUNBURN, TAN

Try it! Make this lemon lotion to whiten your tanned or freckled skin.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion whitener, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands and see how quickly the freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

FROM CHULAHOMA CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed one of the greatest revivals this country has known for many years. For some time the different congregations had been having special prayer for the coming meeting. Three congregations, consolidated in purpose, and concentrated in effort, met together "of one accord" to tarry till the power came; and according to His promise Jesus was there to own and bless. The big tent made by the loving hands of those cumbered by the cares of staying by the stuff, was provided with electric and gas lights, plenty of seats, cool water, and music well arranged for, which bespoke the earnestness of the people. From first to the very last service we had a feast of good things.

Rev. L. W. Cain came to us Monday night and preached the gospel of Christ, in that original way peculiar unto himself, with such power and directness that every one guilty of sin felt that "Thou art the man," and the angels were caused to rejoice when sinners repented.

The climax came Thursday when Rev. J. J. Brooks, pastor of this congregation half century ago, came to us with the assurance of the conquering power of Jesus as he sees it when nearing the summit of the mount where he will get his last earthly vision before he is taken from us.

At last our eyes have seen and our souls feasted on a sure-enough revival, the greatness of which eternity alone can reveal.

H. H. WALLACE, P. C.

FROM HOLLANDALE AND ARCOLA CHARGE.

Dear Advocate: will you please publish the fact that Brother A. S. Raper, of Coldwater, Miss., assisted me in a revival at Murphy, Miss., an appointment on my charge, the Hollandale and Arcola charge, recently, in which we had a great outgrowing of the Holy Spirit? The Christians were helped and there were 17 additions to the church—14 by profession of faith and 3 by letter. We went into all the homes and had family prayer. Brother Raper is fine and has a pleasing personality. He preaches with unction and power. He lives close to God. He is one of the coming young men of our Conference in my mind. Everybody fell in love with him.

As I have stated before, I am serving one of the very best charges in the North Mississippi Conference. I love the people better every day. If it is possible. The charge is in good condition. We have had in all 54 additions to the church this year—39 by profession of faith and 15 by church certificate. Fraternally,

J. A. GEORGE, P. C.

MOTHER'S ALLY.

There is always one good remedy on the family medicine shelf that mother can use in all accidents and mishaps to the members of the family. Burns, bruises, cuts, stings, boils, sores and various forms of skin eruption are quickly soothed and steadily healed with Gray's Ointment. Its constant use for a hundred years has made it a family word in every household. You should keep a box of it on your shelf for emergencies. If your druggist cannot supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be immediately sent you free.—Adv.

Rub-My-Tism is a powerful antiseptic; it kills the poison caused from infected cuts, cures old sores, tetter, etc. —Adv.

FROM MONTGOMERY, LA.

Rev. J. O. Bennett, assisted by Mrs. F. G. Wardlow, has just closed a revival meeting here that excelled any that we have had for many years. He decided to use some talent and secured the help of Sister Lula Wardlow of this place. They fixed the date to begin and organized the laity into a working force and we went to work talking and praying for a revival. When the time came for the meeting, it had behind it a consecrated pulpit and pew, and it was not long until the prophecy of Joel was fulfilled—Joel 2: 28-29—and indeed the Holy Spirit was poured out, and the sons and daughters began to prophecy to the extent that the message was taken from the preacher, and delivered to the congregation by the laymen. This demonstration of God's power was not confined to one service, so Brother Bennett and Sister Wardlow, being thus inspired, did some of their best preaching, and the great congregation that gathered at each service listened with undivided attention not unmixed with tears of penitence by even stalwart men and tears of joy by believers.

The best order and interest prevailed from first to last, and at times the stillness, even in a crowded house, could almost be felt. Nine were added to the church and a good many indifferent members of the church were reclaimed and others converted, who will, no doubt, connect themselves with some other church.

There is no doubt but prayers that were made years ago were answered in this meeting in the conversion of children in Christian homes.

At the beginning of the meeting, the departure of Rev. Jno. F. Wynn from this life, was announced and the pastor, Brother Bennett, Sister Wardlow, and some laymen paid beautiful tribute to the memory of that dear man of God, all of whom, with others present, knew him personally. Brother Wynn served this circuit, at intervals, three full terms and condolences were extended to the members of his family with such affectionate terms.

Yours truly,

JNO. I. McCAIN

THE CHRISTIAN SECRET OF A HAPPY LIFE.

By George W. Ridout, D. D.

Where can happiness be found? Money answers, "It is not in me." Art says, "It is not in me." Fame testifies, "It is not in me." An ancient emperor said once, "You gaze on my purple robe and golden crown; but did you know what cares are under it, you would not pick it up from the ground to have it."

Charles Wesley sings:

"Happy the man who finds the grace,
The blessing of God's chosen race,
The wisdom coming from above,
The faith that sweetly works by love."

And again he sings:

"How happy are they who their Savior obey,
And have laid up their treasure above!
Tongue can not express the sweet comfort and peace
Of a soul in its earliest love!"

The happiness of the Christian is due to his relationship to Christ. He is born again into a new life and this life is:

1. A life of assurance. "My beloved is mine and I am his" is the language of the soul. Like Thomas, the soul exclaims, "My Lord and my God." Doubting has ceased. The night of suspense has ended. Fear changes to faith. Faith brings joy. Assurance brings courage. Bishop Latimer said, "When I have the assurance of faith I am bold as a lion. I can laugh at trouble." The soul can say in the joy of assurance:

"Not a cloud doth arise to darken my skies
Or hide for a moment my Lord from my eyes;
In Him I am blest; I lean on His breast.
And lo! In His love I continue to rest."

2. A life of fellowship. Fellowship with God! What a glorious privilege! It means walking with God. "Enoch walked with God." It was fellowship the two disciples on the way to Emmaus had when they walked and talked with Jesus and their hearts did burn within them as they conversed. A life of fellowship with Jesus means walking with Him, leaning upon Him, keeping in sweet communion with Him, doing His will, pleasing Him in all things, making Him "All in all." Fellowship with Christ implies as one has put it, "A state of settled and complete satisfaction in God; a state of rest from the former servitude of doubts, fears and inbred sin." It is a state of rest in which the tumult of the heart has been hushed into calmness, and fear and discord give place to quietness and assurance; a state of deep and permanent quietude; a "state of sweet rest from all conflicts between the will and the conscience."

3. A life of love. What expressions of love are found in this song of Solomon! "Behold thou art fair, my love." "His banner over me was love." "It is the voice of my beloved." "I am my beloved's." The religion of Jesus is a religion of love. The greatest commandment is to love. The highest attainable grace this side of glory is "perfect love." We may be perfect in love, thank God, though imperfect in all else. Imperfect in body and mind and conduct, but the believer may be perfected in love. Nothing higher, nothing deeper does our Lord require than our soul's deepest and fullest love. The life of love is the life that glorifies him best.

"This is the rest, the life, the peace
Which all thy people prove;
Love is the bond of perfectness,
And all their soul is love."

—Central Christian Advocate.

Men who are content to be mere negatives in a world of action sin against the light. * * * Men glory in difficulties that test their strength in the affairs of everyday work; why run away from like difficulties in work for God? It all resolves itself into the question whether a man is dead in earnest.—Charles Fiske.

BRING US THE LIGHT.

By John Oxenham.

I hear a clear voice calling, calling,
Calling out of the night;
O, you who live in the Light of Life,
Bring us the Light!

We are bound in the chains of darkness,
Our eyes receive no sight.
O, you who have never been bond or blind,
Bring us the Light!

We live amid turmoil and horror,
Where might is the only right,
O, you to whom life is liberty,
Bring us the Light!

We stand in the ashes of ruins,
We are ready to fight the night,
O, you whose feet are firm on the Rock,
Bring us the Light!

You cannot—you shall not forget us,
Out here in the darkest night,
We are drowning men, we are dying men,
Bring, O bring us the Light!

COUNCIL BULLETIN NOTES.

McTyeire Fete Rouses Shanghai.

All Shanghai has taken notice of the fete held by the Sorority of McTyeire School May 21, .22. The sororlty, which is composed of former students of McTyeire, secured the former German Club buildlng on the Bund and drew thousands to a celebration that included more specialized methods of making money than have been seen in Shanghai for many a day. Just what the attendance was, or what the final profit, has not yet been disclosed, but it seems that the goal set, 12,000 taels for the building fund of the school, will be more than surpassed.

The fete was remarkable as showing the place which McTyiere has won in the Shanghai community. Not only were there many forelgners present, but in wandering through the halls one might bump into Sun Yatsen one moment, turn around to face Tong Shao-yi, and in the next room encounter C. T. Wang. Prominent merchants not only donated freely many of the articles that were for sale, but bought them.—China Christian Advocate.

An Incident From the Homer Toberman Clinic.

Maria Duenos has been with the mission from the beglnning, ten years ago. She makes her living by washing. Every Sunday she gives twenty cents to the church. For eight days' work at one time during the Centenary Drive she received $4. Of this amount, she gave half to the Centenary. For two years she was buying three chairs on the installment plan. One day she called in Miss Alfter, our worker in charge of the mission, and presented her with these chairs for use in the Sunday school. The missionary, knowing her financial condition, refused to take the chairs, feeling that it would not be right to deprive her of the only chairs in her poor little house. Maria was sorely hurt. "Take them," she said, "please do. I knew you needed them so bad, and it has been such a joy to me to save the pennies and buy them for you little by little, knowing how surprised you'd be. I do not need them. See here, this board stretched across this plank makes a perfectly good seat for me. Then, if you do not take them now, when I am dead somebody might get them, somebody that I do not care to have them, and I have really been buying them as a gift to the Lord. It is so little that I can do for him." Do you wonder that the missionary took them?

Third Annual Meeting of the China Mission Conference.

The third annual meeting of the China Mission Conference, Woman's Missionary Society, was held in Sungkiang, April 21-25. Eleven Conference officers and sixty-four delegates were in attendance. The total number of auxiliaries in the Conference was forty-one, and thirty-five of these had delegates at the annual meeting. Besides the delegates, there were forty-five visitors attending the Conference, who came at their own expense for the privilege of attending the Conference to listen and learn.

The disbursements from April, 1919, to April, 1920, were as follows:

To Yunnan Mission	$ 768.25
To Woman's Missionary Council for Africa	109.76
Administration, travel, and literature	309.86
Self-support of Chinese Church (Centenary)	11.00
Total.....	$1,198.87

Mrs. Maude Henderson, of the North Alabama Conference, was an honored guest at the meeting. A fitting tribute was paid her by the Chinese officers, who raised the money and made her a life member of their society. Miss Frances Burkhead was also made a life member.

CLIPPINGS FROM CENTENARY BULLETINS.

Cuban Woman Has Big Gift For Centenary.

Senora Maria Luisa Sosa, a member of our Central Church at Havana, Cuba, recently made one of the most notable Centenary offerings in the history of the campaign which is now progressing in that mission field. The offering was $200 in cash.

This lady, who is in very moderate circumstances, some time ago informed her pastor, Rev. Luis Alonzo that when she realized on a piece of property she desired to give $200 to the Centenary cause.

When the sale was made the $200 was forthcoming in cash. The letter to the church which accompanied the check read as follows:

"My Dear Brethren: This is for the purpose of saying, let us be more faithful to our Lord Jesus Christ today. Every day I am more and more at his service. I am not what I used to be, for I am in my Lord's service."

SPECIALS.

According to Miss Porter and Mr. Shipley, the church grows more enthusiastic daily over the educational and financial value of the specials idea.

"Our special is the biggest, broadest thing we have ever had a part in, and strange to say, it hasn't in any way interfered with our regular missionary contribution through the church—one is an obligation, the special is a privilege," says Mrs. Clara Hamrick, of Staunton, Va.

Mrs. J. W. Robinson, of Roanoke, Va., declares: "We find our Sunday school missionary collections are going over our pledge for specials and feel that we can assume another one. Will you please let me know as soon as possible what you have left? We will be able to raise $100 additional if we keep on as we are going now?"

FROM COALVILLE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: In review of the months of this year's work, will say that the Coalville charge has made some progress. Our Sunday school at Coalville has developed into a real live Sunday school, also the one at Cedar Lake. Both observed Sunday School Day with splendid success. The Ladies' Aid has done splendid work, and we are praying that before the year closes we will have organized into a missionary society.

In March we organized a splendid Epworth League at Coalville and a finer crowd of young people cannot be found anywhere. They are willing to help in every way they can for the betterment of church, parsonage, sick and strangers, in any way assisting the pastor. They are determined to bring up every department. To show that they are wide-awake, they sent two delegates, also the pastor and his wife, to the Epworth League Conference in June.

On the third Sunday in July Brother J. E. Williams, of Broad Street, Hattiesburg, came down and assisted in a few days' meeting; also, the valuable assistance of our superannuated preacher, Brother G. W. Huff, was with us. In spite of the daily showers, we had a splendid meeting, and only time can prove the good done. Brother Williams has certainly helped us in many respects. He is a pastor's friend, fearless in his denunciation of the many evils of the day.

Brother W. M. Sullivan assisted us in a few days' meeting at Cedar Lake in May. A finer series of services we have never listened to. Large crowds were at every service. This mill town is developing fast now, as Mr. Dantzler encourages his people in church and school problems. As yet we have not held revival meetings at the other churches. We hope to have a good camp meeting at Palmer in September, led by Brother J. V. Bennett. Pray for us that the last of the month may be the best in our lives.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. E. J. COKER.

FROM BAY SPRINGS CIRCUIT.

Rev. W. D. Bass, the well known evangelist of Corinth, Miss., came to me on July 26 and went out in the country to Holder's church and spent a few days with me in a meeting. The church was unusually dead. Brother Bass's long experience was effectually drawn from after he quickly diagnosed the case, and the results were: a quickened church, the reclaiming of backsliders, and several additions to the church.

From this church we came into Bay Springs and began a meeting, August 1, closing August 9. A man of ordinary evangelistic ability would have likely failed, but Brother Bass, as Jacob of old, would not let the Spirit go until He blessed us. Brother Bass lays a solid foundation upon which to build a meeting that will last. It is my candid opinion that Brother Bass, with a half showing, can have a great meeting. I can not give the condition my church was in, only to say it was in a cold state and untrained in spiritual religion. There are no better people anywhere. The strangers who move to this place say it is the best place they ever lived. However slow a people may be to respond to personal work in revival, Brother Bass will finally put them to work. Brother Bass's Bible messages, always full of the Holy Spirit, convict in the "old-timey" way; and when he invited penitents to the old mourners' bench, and solicitations to sinners were made by Christians, there were always some who came for prayer, and then the real Christians knelt around them and prayed for them and talked to them. Many have said here that they never saw such before. Such an evangelist leaves us with 11 members, nearly all on profession of faith. Many are now praying and testifying to God before men.

Those who want their church revived, and conversions will do well to secure the services of Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss.

REVIVAL ON BELLEFONTAINE CHARGE.

The Holy Ghost descended with old-time power last week in our revival services at Lebanon, Bellefontaine charge, North Mississippi Conference. Brother B. F. M. Bullard, of Houlka, Miss., did the preaching, which was stirring, forceful and full of the redeeming love of Jesus Christ.

Baptists joined Methodists in shouting and singing the praises of their Master in the old-time way. Although there were only six additions to the church, there were quite a number of backsliders reclaimed, also several family altars established. We feel that great good has been done, such as only eternity can tell the value of.

THE HOGG MEETING AT RULEVILLE, MISS.

My Dear Brother Carley: We have recently closed one of the most interesting meeting here in the history of the town. Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Winfield Memorial Church, Little Rock, Ark., did the preaching, and although he did not remain with us on Sundays he found a great congregation waiting for him on his return Monday night. He filled his own pulpit on Sundays. Not only the town, but also the surrounding country and other towns felt the uplifting influence of this most remarkable meeting. Banks and all business places closed for services and great crowds came out to hear the Gospel preached by one whom every one seemed to like.

Forty members were added to the Methodist Church and quite a number to the Baptist Church. Brother Hogg is a very attractive and convincing preacher, and he knows how to put the Gospel where the masses see and feel its power. He made many lasting personal friends while here, and had many invitations to come again. One wealthy planter wanted to give him some Delta land and get him to live with us; but this Hogg is in great demand and can't settle down, and I doubt if he stays in the pastorate long. Indeed, I am of the opinion that one endowed with the evangelistic gifts that he has, will accomplish more for his Master holding protracted meetings than in the settled pastorate; in fact, you can't keep him there, so "loose him and let go" where he can do most.

W. S. SHIPMAN,
Pastor.

REVIVALS ON THE GLOSTER CHARGE.

Having a break in my revival campaign, I will take advantage of it and send a few lines to your columns.

We began the campaign on this charge the first Sunday in July. We have now held meetings at Woodland, Mt. Vernon, Mt. Carmel, and Liberty. I had intended to begin at Mt. Olive August 15, but sickness in the family broke into the plans. I had been asked to hold all the meetings on the circuit, but by the time I got to Liberty I saw I was needing some help, so secured Rev. F. B. Gray, a local preacher of the Meridian District, a railroad engineer, who came to my assistance, preaching once a day for me, and helping much in personal work, song and prayer. He is pure gold, wonderful help, and ought to be kept busy in the work all the time. The Lord has unusually blessed and answered prayer in these meetings, and let me see the brightest, most definite, and clearest conversions I have seen in at least ten years. Oh! how I do thank Him for the blessed manifestation of His mighty power in the genuine conversion of precious souls! During these meetings we have had thirty-three accessions—sixteen by profession of faith, three by restoration, and fourteen by certificate. Most of these additions were at Mt. Carmel and Liberty. All the additions by certificate, and eight on profession of faith, were at Liberty. We found some good, solid, substantial people who had moved down South from the North some years ago and brought their church letters with them and had kept them in the trunk, but they brought their letters and came in with us at Liberty and we gave them a hearty reception.

We want to hold the meeting at Mt. Olive the week following the fourth Sunday in August, and we are to begin at Gloster the fifth Sunday, running through the first Sunday in September. This will wind up our campaign on my immediate work, but want to help on the other part of the circuit as time and opportunity afford.

Our third quarterly conference convened at Mt. Vernon the last day of the meeting there. We had a bright conversion in the morning service at the conclusion of Brother Jones' good sermon, and a large crowd at conference in the afternoon. Finances for presiding elder and pastor were up to date, but the other finances were not up to where they should be; however, they are gradually being paid and would have been up to date if it had not been not for the multifarious other duties the pastor has had that have made it impossible to look after this end of the work as it should be. I feel very sure they will all be paid finally, but it would be so much better for all concerned if they were paid as they came due.

Brothers Hastings and Stokes are faithfully doing what they were asked to do in the beginning of the year. We three pastors have under our charge 22 monthly appointments. I am due to preach 14 times a month besides my revival work. You see we have plenty to do. And, thank God, I love my job!

J. A. WELLS.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

Greatly appreciating and rejoicing in the success of the training school for Sunday school leaders, now being conducted at Grenada College, and realizing the growing need of the work being done, therefore be it resolved:

First—That we do hereby request the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference to make provision for the continuance of this training school next year; and,

Second—That we request the Conference, through the Sunday School Board, to make larger financial appropriation for its maintenance, and that an open field be given the Secretary and officers of the Board to carry out the plans and program now before the church.

Signed by: Miss Ellie Willingham, R. P. Neblett.

Not Equipment Butthe Man Makes the Difference.

Every great school, college or university has been built around the personality of some one man. The educated men of America who have accomplished great things and who stand well in professions look back on their college training and attribute much of their accomplishments to the dominating personality of the school in which they were educated. The dominating personality of Morgan School is that of Professor R. K. Morgan. His influence for good and better things does much toward the moulding of morals and stimulating of broader ideals in the students who are so fortunate as to attend Morgan School. Mr. Morgan has devoted his life to the training of boys.

The thoughtful, considerate parent feels that the school to which he sends his son must be equipped and its faculty chosen with the primary end of training the boy to become a man—to teach true Christian faith, to develop manly independence and self-confidence, to inspire high ideals of life and service, to strengthen and develop mind and body alike.

Such an institution is the Morgan School, which has been built up around the Christian character and wholesome, inspiring personality of Robert G. Morgan, who has been principal for 26 years.

A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., will bring you a catalog and full information about this school.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has never undertaken a more important task than that of raising, in round numbers, $33,000,000 for the cause of Christian Education within the next five years. At last it has come to a realization of the fact that Christian education is the foundation upon which must rest all permanent progress in the development of Christian civilization, and it has set to work to provide a system of schools, colleges, and universities, properly endowed and equipped, that will meet the most pressing need of this and succeeding generations.

As we enter into this movement, we should have a clear understanding of what Christian education means. Before we can gain that, however, we must know what education means. Education is not an acquirement, but a process. It is such training of the mind as will enable it to grasp facts, assimilate knowledge, co-ordinate values, solve problems, establish ideals, and proceed to the orderly and symmetrical development of all the powers of life. It is not the successful completion of the courses of study of an educational institution that gives a man an education; it is the acquirement of a method of work, of the ability to think into and through a subject, of a sane outlook upon life, of a purpose to achieve and to become, that differentiates the educated man from the uneducated.

Christian education means all this, and more. It means that all the processes employed in training the mind are processes that grow out of the full acceptance of the fundamental fact that God is, and that he rules the universe; that these processes are employed by teachers—men and women—who, themselves, have come to know God through the perfect revelation of himself in Christ, and who are faithful proponents of the Christian ideals in conduct and character. It means that Christian doctrine and Christian experience are emphasized as essential facts in every fully developed life, and that Christ himself is the supreme fact in human history.

The mere fact of church ownership does not make a college a Christian institution of learning. If we have not learned this truth, as a church we are absolutely without justification in undertaking to establish an educational system. The State has resources upon which to draw for the support of its institutions that make it folly for the church to undertake to compete with it unless it offers something that the State cannot offer. This something that the Christian college offers is an atmosphere favorable to the development of Christian character, a positive influence in favor of the Christian life, and a definite purpose to make operative Christian principles in all the activities in which men engage.

For such institutions as these, Southern Methodism can well afford to invest many times the $33,000,000 that it is asking for in the present epochal movement.

OBLIGATIONS OF CITIZENSHIP.

In a sense it is true that the people have as good government as they deserve, since it is in their power to make such changes in office as will insure the carrying out of their will. It is a strange thing that any public official should ever come to think of himself in any other light than as a servant of the people, whose instructions he is under obligation to carry out. Even when those instructions are not specifically issued, they are easily ascertainable from the public sentiment prevailing in a given community, and are as binding as though laid down in black and white, assuming, of course, that they are in keeping with the law.

Public office is a public trust—a statement so true that it has almost lost its force in the saying—yet it is no unusual thing to find those who have been honored by their fellow-citizens by election to important positions so puffed-up by their delegated authority as to arrogate to themselves powers that are altogether out of keeping with the restrictions placed upon them by the terms of their election, and the promises they themselves made when they were seeking preferment. Their own welfare is the highest consideration in deciding their course of action, and the normal order of things is reversed—the public has become the servant of the office-holder.

Under our form of government, the people themselves are the ultimate source of authority. Since this is true, it is the duty of every citizen not only to keep himself informed as to the conditions of public welfare, but also to take such an active part in the administration of affairs as will insure the election to office of those who will have regard for the real interests of the community. The citizen who persistently refuses to vote has very little ground upon which to base a criticism of the government under which he lives. The obligations of citizenship are both heavy and sacred.

IT HAS NOT PERISHED.

The following incident may prove cheering to some who have begun to feel that the practice of unaffected kindliness is almost a lost art in these times of the inevitable quid pro quo:

By rare good fortune, we had got off for a day's fishing in a stream not far from New Orleans. The weather was fine, the water was in perfect condition, and the bass were in a striking humor. After several hours of exhilirating sport, a part of which was the cooking of some of the fish in a primitive but most appetizing way, we returned to a near-by village, where we had to spend the night in order to take an early morning train back to the city. We had some fish that we wanted to take home, and knowing that they would not keep unless we could put them on ice, we went to the ice-house and asked the proprietor to allow us to leave them there during the night. He readily consented, but when we told him that we wanted to get them in time for the early train, he said that the house would not be open at that hour. However, he immediately said that he would give us his keys and we could get them as early as we pleased, his only request being that we leave the keys in a designated place. In addition, he told us to take as much ice as would be necessary to keep the fish in good condition until we got home. When we asked him how much we owed him, he said, "Not a cent—I'm glad to be able to accommodate you."

We had never seen each other before—and we may never see each other again—but we gratefully record this simple act of kindness by way of tribute to an unknown friend who mightily cheered the heart of a stranger in a strange land. Unaffected kindliness has not yet perished from the earth.

LUCK.

It is not unusual for some shallow-minded individual to attribute the success of an acquaintance to a combination of luck and "pull." The pernicious idea that the Fates—themselves relics of a superstitious age—dispose of the fortunes of men and women to-day by a system which takes no account of deserts, strangely persists. The error of this idea has been pointed out again and again, but it seems to be too deep-rooted to be destroyed altogether. Some time, however, it will be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned that luck is four-fifths pluck, and that about the only "pull" that is worth while is that which a man gets when he ties himself to a big idea.

WHEN WE CROSS THE TIDE.

By Willie Conger Page.

Will the deep water engulf as it rushes onward,
And carry us away to some fathomless deep?
Tell me, my soul, will thou fear to go forward,
Across the ebbing tide where the dark billows sweep?
No, for there is a Friend on that dim, distant shore,
That will send a beaconlight to guide me safely o'er.

Will the friends we love bid us adieu forever?
Are faith and hope dreams, empty and vain?
No, God teaches that death will only sever
The soul from its clay—we will all live again.
Be glad, rejoice, O soul, soar away to thy haven,
For only to thee, is the gift of immortality given.

SEED SOWING.

By Wm. C. Allen.

A farmer-friend of mine in Australia, a few months since, showed me some splendid wheat and spoke of its ancestry. The first year he planted 64 grains, which yielded 1 pound and 13 ounces. The second year he had 43 pounds; the third year 15 bushels; the fourth year 280 bushels; the fifth year over 2,000 bushels. Then I had a vision of how our Lord wants us to sow the wheat of His Kingdom. If we would sow and harvest it with equivalent earnestness, there would be a mighty fruitage to His praise and to the joy of His workers. Why do we fail—what is His seed?

There are many kinds of seeds in the world—but whatever their exteriors may indicate, all possess one vital quality; they carry the life—they are the life!

In the glowing pages of the Psalms we read. "A seed shall serve Him." How true has this been in all the ages! How full is the promise! This spiritual seed of the Kingdom has been manifested in every generation. God committed the custody of it into the hands and hearts of faithful Abraham and his descendants. Many of them proved totally inadequate to their trusteeship, but there were always a loyal few, who, amidst afflictions and persecutions, bore witness to God. The passionate words of the prophets burned like fire. They spake and sang of the coming of an Anointed One—of His redemptive love—then Jesus came!

Jesus taught us more about this seed. He told us that it is the Word of God. He likened the smallest seed to the fadeless Kingdom of Heaven. From the mysterious germ, which the human intellect cannot duplicate or create, springs forth beauty, strength, life. Even so is the hidden operation of the Spirit of God on the reason and affections of men. When this little seed has been planted in the soul—and all have some of it—there is given us a sacred treasure which, if cultivated, will develop into a more precious harvest than the finest wheat. Are we fostering this spiritual life within us? Do we pray that showers of blessings may descend upon it? Do we ask that the overflowing waters of divine love may be poured over it, that it may germinate and yield bloom and fruit to Jesus' praise?

Our Lord requires more than this. He desires us to carry joy to every race and clime. He wants us to become distributors of this seed—to tell others of the pardon there is with Him and of the love ineffable that hung upon the Cross. He wants us to tell of the gracious Comforter whom men and women need so much to-day. Are we ready to do this? Is not arable soil all around us, and is not the sweet-scented seed within our grasp? Shall we be prompt to sow by all waters, as the prophet bids? Shall we cast abroad the fluttering, falling seed into the fragrant fields, as the Teacher taught?

Let us commence to-day!

IS THE EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT TIMELY?

By Bishop H. M. Du Bose, D.D.

Urgency in the higher concerns of men increases with the increase of general enlightenment. Opportunity impinges upon opportunity, and action overruns action, in proportion as life is quickened and its vision widened. The leisurely movements of the old ages were the correlate of their backwardness and dearth. Time is an element whose significance is in proportion to its present value and use. In turn, the timeliness of any transaction is to be determined by its general or particular importance, and by the logic of its relations to a present need. The Educational Movement now on in the church bears all the signs of a prophecy of urgency, all the tokens of a call of necessity. It is a transaction whose appositeness is beyond cavil or question. The very terms of its statement carry conviction; but I have accepted the agreeable task of setting forth the arguments which lead to this conclusion.

And, first, education is a paramount concern of the church. In the command, "Go, teach all nations," the church has received a commission in terms, and one in the discharge of which it cannot delimit, in which it dare not attempt to delimit, the sphere of the intellectual. The Spirit has fixed no releasing boundaries between the culture of the soul and the culture of the mind, and the church dare not do so. Upon these deductions rests the church's charter to educate, and from these deductions comes the urgent call to present action. In the truest sense, education is ethical and spiritual. The church must live by that doctrine, or perish in rejecting it. That being true, has not the set time come for putting the church's educational program in the way of a large carrying out? Is not this the acceptable year; the one in which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall undertake to meet its self-worthy and heaven-imposed obligation to education? Time was long ago, but was permitted to go by unimproved. The reflection is, however, unprofitable, except as a rebuke. Providence and history alike must work regardless of the past. The present alone indicates the engagements between God and men. This is provocative of a reminiscence which becomes a warning.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has barely missed a calamity in its educational record. The pall of lack in educational equipment has impinged its life with fearful threatenings. Continued escape has been only one of the many miracles of its story. But Methodism cannot risk the future on the educational bottom which has brought it to the present. The future which is at hand is making a large demand! It cannot be denied; it cannot be exchanged for a time more propitious. Our educational need is expressed in one tremendous word—NOW. All questionings, all reasonings, all devisings must begin there. What is otherwise taken is of misdirection. It is lack of faith and courage.

The Educational Movement not only represents a present necessity, it also stands for a great churchly aspiration, the effort to realize our hitherto unrealized ideals of Christian culture. The people are able to give what is asked, though the giving may involve sacrifice, which has a value of its own. Moreover, the people have found out that they can give, and will listen to instruction and exhortation. These premises constitute a syllogism whose conclusion should be no less than success. Only now is needed leadership and faith.

But, in addition to the considerations above submitted, there are others which should be exhibited for their value and as a means of completing the case in hand. They appreciably increase the validity of the argument for the pertinency and timeliness of this movement.

The Educational Campaign was endorsed and ordered by the General Conference of 1918, the session whose acts are at present fully in force. The time and the manner of prosecuting the campaign thus became the subject of a judgment rendered by the church as a whole, a mandate of its supreme legislative council. So far as the legal and canonical aspects of the case are concerned, they are settled in the letter of this action. Report No. 5 of the Committee on Education (which was adopted), page 284, Journal General Conference, 1918, contains the following:

"That a church-wide educational campaign to raise thirteen million dollars (augmented by ten millions for the two church universities) for our schools and colleges—is hereby approved and endorsed."

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Campaigns, Journal, page 288, directs "that the right of way be given to the Centenary Movement during the first two years and to the Educational Campaign during the second two years of the quadrennium."

Thus was it written; and the writing constitutes the conditions not only of a supreme obligation but also of an alluring opportunity.

The alternative course may be studied to instruction. Sharply defined, it would amount to the abandonment of a trust on the part of the educational officials. To take such a decision would be to assume a responsibility larger than that of putting the campaign on in the face of obvious difficulties. The Educational Department could hardly feel that it is sufficient to annul the action of the General Conference or adjudge the call of providence as having lapsed. Furthermore, the real educational constituency of the church would offer irreconcilable objection to such a course. This objection must be anticipated.

An educational leader of the church, one whose name is synonymous with success, writes: "Should the Educational Commission presume to set aside the action of the General Conference and postpone the campaign to the next quadrennium, at once there would be begun seventy-five individual college campaigns throughout the church, instead of the one general campaign ordered." This would bring confusion, and would make unworkable for decades to come the very fine plans which have been devised. Worse still, it would demoralize the splendid liberality engendered by the world war period, as also the active grace which came of the Centenary; and would discount that order of church life which works in harmony with divine suggestions. This is a statement of the case which cannot fail to appeal to those to whom our educational ideals have become either a vision or a consciousness of great need.

A consideration which should stir the church's sense of justice, and widely provoke the spirit of sacrifice, lives in the fact of the attitude of waiting and self-renunciation accepted by the cause of education in deference to other interests. That the Centenary might have the field uncontested, the schools and colleges did not enter upon the work of solicitation at a time when it was easiest to get money; and thus, while the purchasing power of money has decreased one-half, the endowment and income of these schools remain the same, if indeed serious inroads have not been made upon their capital funds. But little discernment is needed to read out the consequences to these institutions, if they be not now given the relief provided in the action of the General Conference. Many will be seriously embarrassed; not a few may become bankrupt.

The aftermath of the war, and the new times which have come with it, have increased the responsibility of our schools without correspondingly adding to their resources and efficiency. What has appeared to be prosperity has added to their distress. Patronage has increased until their capacities are over-taxed, and their teaching forces are over-worked. Many applicants for matriculation are being turned away, which fact, even if the institutions were coining money, clamors for enlargement and advance. The quickened life and higher ideals of the times demand a higher standard of teaching. But the schools are confronted with the facts already adverted to, namely, static endowments, if any at all, and incomes which, notwithstanding increased demands upon them, yield scarcely more than fifty per cent on the dollar of a former basis. More than appears on the surface is written in this record. Our soldiery fought a war for mankind, and won a great victory for civilization; but our schools and our school-teachers are contributing a monumental sacrifice to preserve that civilization and to make its larger promise effective. That sacrifice is expressed not alone in insufficient salaries, but also in the scant means supplied the teacher for doing his work. To the conscientious teacher this last is the bitterest of his sacrifices, because it is demanded of his work rather than of his comfort. The time has come for the church to do its part in relieving the acuteness of this sacrifice by distributing its burden to all its members.

It is a fact that the church's missionary program, and its need of a trained ministry, have far outgrown the possibility of supply offered by our schools and colleges; and it is from this fact that the challenge and reflections indulged in near the opening of this paper get their significance. Having escaped, in our middle history, the so great peril which threatened us through lack of the means of education, shall we now, through misdirected counsels of delay, drift backward to fall upon the rocks we have escaped? We cannot much longer suffer the need now being suffered for more and efficient workers on the foreign field; nor can we much longer go forward with our present means of producing and educating a ministry from our pulpits. The endowment of our schools and colleges is the only answer we can make to the voice of this juncture. And the answer must come now and in the way appointed by constituted authority.

Epictetus, in his day, desired to see a city full of wise men. For my own part, and for Methodism, I pray for a church full of wise and sacrificing men and women to offer tribute to the cause of education.

A rather common, if not so serious, objection to an early putting on of this campaign, is that the people have already given in the Centenary, and therefore will be slow to respond to this call. There are three very direct answers to this objection, which objection in itself underrates both the willingness and ability of the church's membership. First, there are thousands who gave to the Centenary with the intelligent understanding that this campaign was coming on in its order, and therefore, in giving to the former cause, they made mental provision for this. Second, as short as the time has been since the Centenary drive it has been sufficiently long to have developed many incipient fortunes in the South and West. The fabulous prices received for cotton and other plantation and farm products, and the prosperity of those manufacturers peculiar to these regions, have developed many new holdings and produced many new balances since the height of the Centenary call. To be added to this class of accessible givers is the new contingent of the ever increasing army of tithers. Then, finally, there is the goodly fellowship of those to whom education has its peculiar appeal; and that sentiment, in a way, extends to the father and mother of every home. Thousands of small gifts should come of this parental interest, where large gifts are an impossibility. But it is only a reasonable venture that the average gift to this campaign will be larger than to the Centenary; and that some gifts will become conspicuous because of their generous figures. Even some are reported as having reserved all their benefaction for this cause. It is easy to believe that each school of those in the askings will have certain friends to whom its cause comes home in a way that the general call of the Centenary did not and could not.

Will my church compatriots listen also to this? The effect of a reversal of the order of the General Conference in fixing the date and details of this campaign would be to depress all the activities of the church. It would decrease its morale and lessen its faith in its own enterprises. When these are diminished, courage sinks; and when courage and optimism decline, the dead level appears. Is Methodism prepared to mix the two splendid years of Centenary activity with two years of inertia? The output will be like the years of the locusts. But one says, "The Centenary is at stake." Truly; but the way to put the Centenary into assignment is to fall down on Education. We may already count ourselves experts at falling down. Let us now try the grace of standing.

I have met a cavil inspired by the experience of the Interchurch World Movement. The cases are as dissimilar as two evangelical enterprises could possibly be. One was organized and conducted without the lines of church administration: the other is within the church's border and under the letter of the church's administration. One was general and, more or less, indefinite in its call; the other is clear-cut and homely fashioned, as to the use of its asking. In the case of the Interchurch Movement, the whole organization failed with the failure of its financial plan. With us, in this campaign, the amount of money to be raised is not the paramount consideration. Of course, that is important, and is an integer of success; but the larger advantage will be the church's self-testing process, and the new educational spirit to be awakened. Failure on the financial side is not thinkable; but I dare affirm that failure with honest and spirited effort would be far preferable to failure through doubt and inaction. The cause is worth all risk, all effort, all sacrifice.

REV. M. G. JENKINS.

By Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer, D.D.

Rev. M. G. Jenkins was born in Atlanta, Ga., July 7, 1838; and on July 27, 1920, he passed to his heavenly home, thus ending an earthly career of 82 years and 20 days. He joined the Georgia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, at Rome, Ga., in December, 1859. He was ordained a deacon in 1861, and an elder in 1870. His first year's service was on the Eatanham and Calhoun charge, beginning there his long, self-sacrificing and fruitful ministerial life. Afterwards he served the Calhoun circuit and was pastor at Isabella. Then he was transferred to Texas by Bishop Kavanaugh and stationed at Navasota. Afterwards he served in succession Texareana, Leesburg, Weiner, Huntsville, Colorado City, Mineola, Gatesville and Detroit. In December, 1893, he was transferred to the Louisiana Conference and appointed to Calhoun for 1894. He served Bastrop the two following years—1895-96—and was pastor at Calhoun the second time in 1897. Subsequently, his charges were Covington, Logansport, Mooringsport and Plain Dealing. Brother Jenkins at one time served the church in California, but we have no account of his labors there.

On December 18, 1902, at the Conference held in Alexandria, La., Brother Jenkins became a superannuate and made his residence in Dallas, always afterwards living in Texas. Rev. J. D. Scott, assisting at his funeral service, read the following: "Brother Jenkins was fortunately and happily married to Miss Susan Monroe, of Thomasville, Ga., in 1865. She was of the best and highest type of Christian womanhood and a true helpmeet on all the ground, but she preceded her husband a few years to the glory land. There were born to this union two daughters and one son. Miss Mabel and William lived to be grown, but each passed away in the prime of early life. Mrs. Lula Harris, the elder daughter, with her sons, Marshall, Lawrence, and Thomas, lives at 519 W. Georgia Avenue, San Antonio, Texas. The oldest grandson, Alexander M. Harris, is married, and, with his wife and little Mary Virginia, the only great-grandchild, resides in Fort Worth. Brother Jenkins, like a well ripened shock, was seasoned in character and ready to be garnered. He lived and went away in the consciousness of a rich and full inheritance through Christ, and so expressed himself a short time ago when, together with a friend, we worshiped at his bedside. The last audible words he spoke in bidding good bye to loved ones were these:

'Bright angels are from glory come,
They are around my bed, they are in my room.
They have come to waft my spirit home.
All is well! All is well!'

"I commend to the bereaved family and all, the exemplary life and character of our friend and brother."

I was intimately associated with Brother Jenkins during the years he labored for the Master in the Louisiana Conference. I was his presiding elder, and often with him in religious efforts, and we became close friends and brethren beloved. He ranked among the best as a pulpit man and diligent pastor, and was blessed of God in his winning for the Savior very many precious souls. Of strong and brilliant mind, cultivated and refined, with a loving heart that sought to help and save the lost and comfort the troubled and afflicted, he was a true soldier of Jesus Christ and was careful to preach only the Gospel of the Son of God. Throughout the years of his residence in Texas we have been correspondents, much to the delight and profit of each of us. He has gone home; and, having been "faithful unto death," he wears the "crown of life" in the perfect bliss and fadeless glory of the better world.

"TIME TO LAY BY THE CROPS."

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

A paragraph in the Advocate, of late date, referring to this writer, used the above familiar phrase. Now, only the farmer's boy fully understands its significance. February 15, when the plowing begins, to August 15, when the last "lay by" furrow is run, marks a six-months designated by our forebears as from "kin to can't," which meant from earliest dawn to hoot of the owls, and "how long seemed the days and how weary our feet," wondering if the sun would never set (Sam and Bunk both know—unless!)

Some years before his death, Bishop Galloway said to me, "Tom, what are you planning to do when superannuating time comes?" "Why, settle down on the old farm, raise cotton, breed fine stock and drive fast horses," and then he quoted what some town gay said about getting the country out of a man. Well, I confess it's still there, however not such as I had in mind when I replied to the Bishop.

There have been changes—radical changes—wrought in Southern farm life since Appomattox. It's no longer, "Come, and he cometh, go, and he goeth." Again I would warn those who dream of flowery beds of ease on the old plantation that those are "dies non" now. When I returned to the old home, by the way an inheritance from my maternal grandfather who died before I was born and who, with his family, lies in the cemetery near by, an old friend said, "Certainly you have a good bank account after so many years of preaching." "Yes, my bank book shows deposits of $255." "That won't go far in running a plantation;" and verily too soon I found the correctness of that statement.

Those money lenders who enjoined the farm loan banks broke my "sugar dish all to smash;" so, on the first of August, I announced to the people of Lake City that as all first-class appointments give their pastors a vacation, I'd take mine

now. So, while Sam goes up and down the country delivering his lecture on Dixie, and Bunk attends district conferences and writes up in glowing terms and complimentary phrases their personals and doings, this superannuate is vacationing by repairing houses, upsetting fences, opening ditches and doing his bit, hoping to make two blades of grass grow where only one has hitherto found place. Yes, the crop's laid by and I'm taking—vacation.

Yes, the country is in me by a large majority and the good Bishop was right in his diagnosis, but the big crops of cotton, and the thoroughbreds are a long way in the future unless business picks up mightily.

I defy Sam and Bunk to get more out of their superannuation than I; truth is, Henry, I didn't ask for the honor; my request was for honorable location, but the boys said "No," so here I am trying to play pastor on vacation and farmer laying by the crop at the same time. When I read of Bishop McMurry's afflictions, I sent him a letter of condolence and at the same time advised him that Long Beach was not on the way from St. Louis to Brookhaven, to which he charged me with lack of sympathy, adding a threat as to what he might do with me if it were not for the fact that I am beyond his jurisdiction. For once I felt like patting myself on the back that I could dare to sauce back at the biggest bishop in the connection. The boys at McComb had no thought of bestowing such power upon me. Well, the Bishop so construes, and it is my privilege to say to my two old chums, or you can do it, too—whoop'em up, boys!

Doubtless when your readers see this, if at all, my vacation will have ended and the laid-by crops will be in process of gathering. Good bye till—well, when I get another half-holiday.

A DEFINITE PROPOSITION CONCERNING SUPPORT OF THE MINISTRY.

Dear Brother Carley: As Conference Lay Leader and Conference Chairman of Minute Men, I am urging our District Lay Leaders and District Minute Men and our presiding elders to make a great big effort to secure a living wage for our ministry in Louisiana.

The inadequacy of the salaries paid our preachers is known to all. We are actually starving them and their families. Dozens of them are working on the side to get enough to feed and clothe their families, and for this they are criticised.

Much has been said and written concerning a fair wage for school teachers, for mechanics, for labor of all kinds, for janitors. Nearly all have obtained large increases. The wage of an unskilled workman is far more than that of the preacher. Have we a right to expect God to call men into the ministry if the church membership is too stingy or too busy to see that they have bread and clothing? Are not their wives entitled to something besides drudgery? Are not their children entitled to an education and to a fair chance to live a normal life? Aro they not entitled to buy and read a book sometimes if we expect of them all that we do expect and demand?

Are there not members in nearly every church living smugly in plenty and luxury while their ministers are in want? If all our members gave one-tenth of a tenth to the support of the ministry, and another one-tenth of a tenth to Conference claims, and another similar amount to religious education, and another to special matters, wouldn't it give us far more for all of these purposes than we get and still leave us with six-tenths of our tithe?

Consider the following: Seventeen charges in the Alexandria District last year (omitting Alexandria) paid their preachers an average of $978.50, about $5 per member. The lowest amount in a well-to-do sawmill circuit, with three big mills, was $394.

The Ruston District, including Ruston and Minden, which paid a bare living wage, paid an average of $1143 per charge. This was a little over $3 per member.

The Baton Rouge District gave for all church purposes, including the Centenary, Sunday schools, buildings, insurance, everything, a little less than $10.12 per member. Draw your own conclusions! Take out the city churches and the extra Centenary effort, and the average is much lower.

Can't it be put upon the hearts of our people to raise the salaries of our preachers? A very small increase has come to them to meet H. C. L. I want to propose that the boards of stewards of the Louisiana Conference make for next year a minimum salary of $1800 on every charge in the Conference. Let's remove the disgrace that attaches to this deplorable condition. When we do, God will bless us.

SOME MORE FUN.

By Rev. Ben P. Jaco.

It has been told that a fellow remarked to his companion that a certain lady smiled at him, whereupon the companion remarked that that was nothing, "for," said he, "I laughed out aloud when I first saw you." Well, that reminds me. When I read in the report from our Conference Centenary Treasurer that Cunningham and Carlisle had raised and paid in $5,210.30 on a pledge of $11,500 I smiled big. Then ran my eye along the lines and found New Albany had rounded up Stephens and Rodgers to the amount of $6,681.44 on $14,000 pledges. Then I laughed out loud when I saw that Richard Townes had taken a Caln to his folks and got $4,477.51 on $7,125 pledges.

But when I saw that that young preacher, Daniel Babh, on the Prairie and Strongs charge had sent in $2,271.90 on pledges for $2750 I just had to take off my hat and shout. I was not surprised to see that Ed Wilburn and Mounger had let Lexington pay $2,765.36 on $7,142, about what is due on two installments; also, Wasson had sent over two-fifths from Glen Allen. I shall always expect those good people to do the very best things. They can afford to feel grateful. I only stayed two years when I might have been there longer. Tupelo is also close to two-fifths. When those people are Pound-ed some more, no telling how much will be paid in. Durant, Amory and Nettleton, Houston, Shannon charge, Artesia, Brooksville, Starkville, West Point, Guntown and Baldwyn, Iuka, Ripley, Acona, Pickens, Vaiden and West, Benoit and Beulah, Clarksdale, Coahoma and Lyon, Greenville, Gunnison, Leland, Merigold and Aligator, Shelby, Abbeville circuit, Byhalia circuit, Olive Branch circuit, Potts Camp, Water Valley, Como, Crenshaw and Sledge, Sardis, Drew, Isola, Sunflower, Winona, have sent in one-fifth or more. What do you think about Red Banks charge that has paid $1,139 on $1,000 pledged!

That beats everyhody. Brother Porter may be asked how to do this good collecting. All who are getting along slowly, write him and I'll furnish the stamps for reply.

But Greenwood is in the front rank. Tucker has let them pay in one-half. If he would just get out of the way and let those folks go, they would pay all their pledges this year. But look at my good friend, Brown, at Lula and Dundee. He looks innocent, but he has sneaked around quietly and has sent in more than one-half of his pledges.

I want to laugh again in two weeks. So let every pastor audit all the Treasurer's records and report to me on the blanks I sent. I can't cry or cuss about it if you do not. I intend to have a laugh.

WILL OUR CHURCH DO ITS PART, OR LAG BEHIND?

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

For a time it seemed that secular education might overcome, and exclude from our country, religious education.

Very large and wealthy institutions, enriched by the gifts of men who had little interest in religion and controlled by Boards of Trustees who were not responsible to church or State, became far stronger than any college or university belonging to a Christian denomination in America. At the same time the universities of some of the States became very rich and powerful.

All these institutions continue to hold their wealth and position, but the colleges and universities of some of the churches in the United States will not long lag behind them. These denominational schools are being greatly enriched by wisely directed policies of the churches to which they belong.

The Northern Methodists have, through their "Educational Jubilee," added many millions to the possessions of their colleges and universities. The Southern Baptists will increase their educational properties during the next few years by more than $20,000,000, this sum having already been subscribed, and much of it paid during their campaign for their Seventy-five Million Dollar Fund. The Northern Baptists have done nearly, or quite, as much, for their institutions of learning. Of course, the Roman Catholics have added many millions to the equipment and endowment of their educational enterprises; and they will add many millions more.

The churches named, to say nothing of the Presbyterians and Episcopalians, will invest no less than $125,000,000 in Christian education during the next few years. At least $50,000,000 of this amount has been collected and invested already.

In view of all these facts, it is evident that Christian education is not going to porish from our land; hut it is not so evident that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is going to do its part of this great work. The Educational Campaign, into which our church is about to enter, will reveal the mind of our people on the subject. If we do not then strengthen our educational institutions by at least $25,000,000, we will fall far behind other denominations, and we will lose our educational opportunity. The issue before us is clear and urgent.

We must cease to talk vaguely of our colleges and universities becoming great "in time." They must be made great very soon. There is nothing in the mere flowing of the tide of time to enrich an institution. Colleges and universities may be

Your Boy or Girl Can Settle With the World on their Own Terms....

Young men and young women can lay down their own proposition to the modern world—and the modern world will accept.

How?

By getting the thing that the world most needs and has the least of.

That thing is Education. The supreme need of the world—and the scarcest element—is College trained men qualified for leadership. Church and State, industry and government, business and the professions, all clamor for them.

Only 1 per cent of the American population are College graduates. Yet from that 1 per cent come 59 per cent of the leaders in all sections of our national life. And 14 per cent of the others are College men, but not graduates.

The 99 per cent of untrained people supply only 27 per cent of the Nation's leaders.

Study the lists of leading men and women---the Presidents, the Governors, the Senators, the Congressmen, the Inventors, the Authors, the great Business Men, those prominent everywhere.

College men all—very few exceptions.

College attendance fell off 25 per cent during the war. It is still nearly 18,000 short of normal, but rapidly increasing. In four years America alone lost 100,000 years of College attendance. And when we consider the whole world, the supply of educated men is 75 per cent below the normal.

College training, then, is the thing that the world needs most and has the least of. See that your sons and daughters get it. Then let them dictate terms to the world.

But there is Education and Education. Some forms of training are unmoral and Godless. Some polish the intellect and deaden the spiritual sense. The last state is then worse than the first.

The M. E. Church, South, maintains schools and Colleges which are thoroughly Christian. They believe that the Soul of Education is the Education of the Soul.

The emphasis is on the Christian note. Moral character, spiritual insight, Christian integrity—these are the supreme values which the Christian College—and no other---adds to the curriculum. Thus they produce the people best fitted to shoulder the world's responsibilities.

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-FIVE YOUNGER BROTHERS.

By Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

The time of refreshing has come in Japan. It is a deep religious awakening, and bids fair to spread in a healthful and permanent way. It began where we desired it to begin—among the students of our Kobe College. Our missionaries and Japanese have been praying for a deepening work of grace and expected large things. God always honors us when we honor him. The earnest study of his Word never fails to yield results. Brother W. A. Davis, who gives an account of the revival, has, himself, been most devoted and painstaking in his efforts to get the students in his classes to give themselves to diligent searching of the Scriptures. His efforts have been rewarded.

"One hundred and sixty-five younger brothers!" What a unique plan to introduce the younger students to the older as such! Who but a Japanese would have thought of it? But it worked, and worked well. The awakened sense of brotherhood and responsibility brought the two classes face to face in a new relationship, and led, under the Spirit of God, to a heart-searching, and a new experience. The man who did it was Professor Y. Tanaka, one of the soundest, sanest men we have. He was one of our early converts, is one of our most reliable administrators, and has for years been a tower of strength to the mission and the church. What follows is an extract from a personal letter from Brother Davis:

"There is a great awakening in our Academy, and I trust it is the beginning of a great revival in our school. It began on the practical side, but with a tone that indicates a deep spiritual awakening.

"I fully believe it has its roots in the study of the Bible which was introduced four years ago. It is difficult to trace all the causes of a religious movement. In this, as in all, the personal element cannot be disregarded. One of these is the new principal, Brother Y. Tanaka. He is more a pastor than an educator, but he is putting elements into the school that we have needed some one to put in. When the new class entered, he lined them up, and introduced them to their 'elder brothers.' He had them bow to the older students, and then said to the older students, 'You have now 165 younger brotbers; it is your duty to lead tbem in the right way.'

"They took him at his word, and proceeded to call a meeting of the new students and gave them earnest talks as to what this school stands for. They began to realize that in order to measure up to the high ideals they had presented they needed to reform themselves; so they had a class-meeting to consider their own condition. One after another got up with tears in his eyes and told of his shortcomings and sins, and a determination to live a better life. They passed a resolution that they would do their best in their school work, and would consider the hour of prayer the most important hour of the day. The teachers hearing of this meeting, decided to have a meeting with the students and give them an opportunity to express themselves freely. This the students did, and told the teachers that since they were resolved to do their utmost, they would like for the teachers to do their best to give them the best teaching they could.

"Among other specific requests, they said that they would like for the teachers to regard the hour of prayer as seriously as the students had resolved to do. They said they had noticed some of the teachers loitering around the grounds at that time. This brought one of the teachers to his feet, first with a confession that he was the man who had done it; then, with an explanation, he promised to respond to their challenge. His talk was pathetic and inspiring. He said, 'I am not a Christian, and in my school-boy days, had no such privileges as you enjoy, and do not know how to enjoy this hour of prayer as you do, but since I have come to this Christian school I have realized more and more my sinful condition. When I stand before the first-year students, as I do daily, and look into their innocent faces, I feel unworthy of being their teacher. After teaching them an hour, the hour of prayer comes and my heart is too full of sadness and contrition to be with others in worship, so I go away and spend the hour in humble meditation.' He then told of the sad condition that existed in the home of his boyhood. He spoke fluently, but almost choked with emotion. He said, 'I am with you in all that is best in your new movement, and in the spirit of the school.'

"Another teacher got up and said that he had come to this school with the hope that he would get help in his spiritual life, and that he had not been disappointed. He had thought that he could never do without his sakl, but that he had come to the place where he did not have the slightest desire for it. This he attributed to the Christian influence.

"We are organizing and conserving and directing these influences to the best of our ability. The systematic Bible study which we organized five years ago gives us a fine opportunity to develop the religious life of the students and to take advantage of this rather unusual condition to direct our students to Christ."

SOUTH AMERICA: THE UNDEVELOPED CONTINENT.

Panama: The Cross Roads of the West.

While Panama is now considered a country of Central America, it was, as a part of Colombia, formerly included in South America. It now has the distinction of connecting the North and South Americas and by its Canal it also connects the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It is cut in twain by the Canal Zone, which is a part of the United States, and as Panama City and Colon are in the Canal Zone, Panama's capital and its second city are inside United States territory. These anomalies are due to the fact that the Republic virtually came into existence because its people wanted the Canal, and then they adapted their conditions to the requirements of the Canal.

It is a little country, its area being about that of South Carolina and its population less than that of St. Louis. Its importance grows out of the fact that, with the exception of Nicaragua, it has the lowest and narrowest land in the Continental Divide, and hence is the natural cross roads for the Western Hemisphere. It was one of the first lands discovered, having been visited by Columbus himself, and yet it is the youngest of American republics. It is, outside of the Canal Zone, one of the least developed, and yet in the Canal it has the latest and greatest engineering achievement of the ages. Once its chief cities were among the pest holes of the world, now they are among the health resorts. Its people speak Spanish, yet desire to know English. Its common currency is United States money. Its principal source of public revenue is the ten millions paid by the United States for the possession of the Canal Zone and $250,000 paid annually as rental. It has only a few miles of railroad, and yet in the Panama Railway, operated by the Canal Zone authorites, it has one of the best. It has few good roads, but in the macadam road from Panama City to Colon, it has one of the finest in the world. While its own people grow bananas in the most primitive way, the United Fruit Company in its big plantations has the finest banana properties in all the world. Without protection its government would be almost helpless; backed by the United States it is the most stable of Latin-American republics. It is a place of paradoxes. It is a land of possibilities.

Its unique location and its relation to our own country make it the intermediary between the English-speaking and the Spanish-speaking Americas. Here is a fertile field for the cultivation of a better understanding between these two civilizations—civilizations which must act and react upon each other, and through which the future of humanity is to be greatly influenced. Panama is the opportunity of our civilization, by fair dealing and helpfulness, to impress itself favorably upon all Latin America.

As we sailed through the Canal on our outward voyage, we were made to realize its intrinsic magnitude. On our return, after visiting the best ports of the Pacific Coast, we were able to appreciate not only its magnitude, but, by comparison, its modernness and advantages. At every South American port there were numberless annoying delays. In the Canal Zone there was promptitude and absence of red-tape. In their harbors were no appreciable conveniences for loading and unloading and taking water and coal. At the Canal ports the latest and best machinery ministered quickly to every need. The deep water at the docks, the breakwaters protecting the harbors, the lights and buoys for guidance, the marvelous machinery of the coaling docks, the provision for ship supplies and repairs, the absolute cleanliness of the cities, the hotels, the hospitals, the Y. M. C. A. for army and navy, the perfect policing, the model barracks—all speak in language understood by all without words. These things tell the great nations that send out their ships on every sea, as well as the little nations of Latin America, what the United States has done and is capable of doing. The Canal and everything connected therewith stand out as object lessons.

To be sure, the Canal was constructed primarily because the United States desired to strengthen her defenses by shortening the distance for battleships from one coast to the other; but in constructing and now in operating the Canal, our country has demonstrated practically many things worth while and heretofore only imagined. Every ship that passes through pays not merely its toll for the service rendered, but pays a tribute of admiration and respect to the country that could so mightily achieve.

The Canal itself has been so often described that its dimensions and devices are known to every school child, and yet they must be seen to be fully appreciated. The extensive breakwaters, the fine harbors, the deep channel the immense steel gates at the locks opening as easily as a closet door, the prodigious cuts, the gigantic dam, the extent of the artificial lake, the water power and electricity generated—all combine in their magnitude and perfection to overwhelm with wonder and admiration the most thoughtful reader about these things. They also provoke the suggestion, if we can do these things in a foreign land for mere commercial advantage and protection from a possible foe, why can we not do even better for ourselves at home?

It would almost pay our government to send down every year a group of leaders so that they might return filled with new ideas and fired with greater ambitions for civic progress. Patriots should organize pilgrimages to Panama. If to see the Canal Zone is not a liberal education, it is at least a liberalizing experience, and will send each observant visitor home a wiser and more progressive patriot. Quickened by contact with the Canal, which by dividing the land unites the peoples, let us cultivate a closer acquaintance with Latin-America, and combine our resources and influences for the betterment of humanity. The three Americas, unlike in many particulars, but alike in forms of government and new-world ideals, need each and all the others, and are under the highest obligations to cultivate closer relations for mutual happiness and progress. Every reader is urged to become a student of Latin-America. It is an enlarging and helpful process.

Let us not forget that the driving impulse of the gospel of evangelism is the discovery of a faith that there is sufficient evidence that repentance is possible at the last hour and that conversion is frequently instantaneous. If a man refuses to accept these two elements of the Christian faith, he can never win men to Christ.—Western Christian Advocate.

The Home Circle

AT SLEEPY TIME.

"Oh, dear!" the little Tin Soldier cried,
"I've marched this whole day long,
Though my gun is heavy and hard to hold,
And my legs are far from strong.

"And now I should like to take some rest;
It certainly can't be right
To expect a veteran like myself
To stand on guard all night."

The little Toy Horse, in great distress,
Called: "Who will attend to me?
I want to be in my nice neat stall,
And be given some oats for tea.

"I've been to the market-town and back
To-day at my fastest trot;
And now I am lying upside down
With my harness tied in a knot."

Cried Jack-in-a-box, "I've jumped and bounced
Till I'm quite worn out to-night;
Will somebody please shut up my house,
And fasten the roof down tight?"

"I'm hoarse as a crow!" said the Barking Dog;
"I'm tired!" sighed the Woolly Sheep;
"We are all of us that," cried Jumping Jack,
"And we need some rest and sleep.

"We should like to go to our beds at once,
And shut up our eyes quite tight.
Will our dear little Master please to come
And settle us all for the night?"

But Mother it was who put them up
In a row on the nursery shelf;
For never a word the Master heard—
He was fast asleep himself!

THE MOUSE TRAP.

The day after she became one of the stenographers at Wilkins & Arnold's, Janet Weatherby pinned up a little card in the front of her desk. It was rather a custom of Wilkins & Arnold's stenographers to pin something up in the desks. Estelle Morey had the photograph of a popular actress in hers; Emma Frailey had a fancy head; Bess Jamerson, a row of postals, most of them supposed to be comic. Janet's card contained merely a familiar quotation from Emerson:

"If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, the world will make a beaten path to his door."

Estelle, strolling across to read it, began to laugh.

"Nothing nervy about that!" she remarked.

"Which are you planning to be," Bess asked, reading it over Estelle's shoulder, "an author or a preacher."

"You couldn't get W. & A. to try your new mouse trap if you invented it," Emma contributed. "They're fifty years behind the times, and always will be."

"Let us know when the world begins to come your way," a fourth cynical voice remarked. "It will be interesting to watch. Maybe you'd give us reserved seats."

"Certainly I will," Janet retorted good-naturedly. Her color had risen a little under the teasing, but she did not take down her motto.

One morning Billy stopped at her desk. Billy was the office boy, and the two were often the first ones there—Billy by urgent request, and Janet by free will.

"Say," he demanded, "do you believe that?"

"Certainly, sure," Janet answered very promptly

"Aw, I don't. Ain't any chance for a feller jest opening doors."

"I don't know why not. I'd open doors so that people would like to have me do it for them. I'd do it so that W. & A. would think you the best office boy they ever had."

"Guess you'd like to try it a while," Billy grumbled.

Janet picked up a letter she had just copied.

"Isn't that a pretty piece of work?" she asked. "There isn't a correction, not even a comma; and look at that margin!"

"Nobody'll know the diff," Billy declared.

"I shall know the difference. Whom do you suppose I'm doing this for? W. & A.? No, sir. First of all, I'm doing it for Janet Weatherby, and she's a very exacting chief."

"Aw, stuff!" said Billy.

A month later Janet received a promotion. It was Mr. Arnold who explained it. There was a pleasant twinkle in his eyes.

"We like your motto," he said. "Still better, we like the way you are living up to it. Our attention was called to it by a young man by the name of Perry."

"Billy!" Janet exclaimed.

"A young man of discernment, Miss Weatherby. Also he bids fair to make a really satisfactory office boy. A motto that will react upon an office boy is a valuable asset."

"But I never thought of Billy; I meant it only for myself," Janet protested.

The smile in Mr. Arnold's eyes deepened. "Precisely, Miss Weatherby," he replied.—The Youth's Companion.

WHAT BERT'S HIDING COST HIM.

By Anna D. Walker.

"Bert! Bert!" called a piping voice. And after a pause the call was repeated. No answer came.

It was in a village, and the call came from Bert's playmate, Billy. Billy was in hiding in the barn. He did not want to answer, did not want to see Billy that morning nor try to entertain him. He had been greatly disappointed. His father had expected to take him to the big city, and now had found it best to go off without him, and the boy chose to brood and grieve rather than to come forth and amuse Billy and himself in pleasant games.

After repeated efforts at gaining a hearing, Billy went home, saying as he turned to leave, "I wanted Bert for something awful nice." When Bert came out from his hiding place he muttered "Something nice, eh. Billy need not think he can do anything to make up for my disappointment. He just wants to play little baby games that I don't care for. He's a little fellow."

Bert went around mournfully, and spent a lonely day, not pleased with anything or any person. He was still moping when Billy, with bright eyes and rosy cheeks, came running to him. "Bert, Bert," he cried, "where were you this morning? I did want you so much." "And what did you want me for, kid?" cried Bert, patronizingly. "Anything in particular?"

"I guess it was something particular. You know I'm ten years old today,—"

"And I'm past 'leven," interrupted the other.

Billy did not reply to the interruption, but went on to tell his story. "Papa was too busy to help me celebrate my birthday, but Uncle came with his auto and said he would take me to Central Park, and I could take one of the boys with me, and I tried to find you, so I could take you."

"Oh, oh," exclaimed Bert, "and did you go?"

"Yes, indeed, and we went to the Zoo and saw all the animals, and we got ice cream and other things to eat at a hotel, and it is too bad you didn't go. I'm so sorry," and Billy's looks showed regret.

"You needn't feel sorry for me," answered Bert. "I wouldn't come out nor answer you just because I was fretting,—because I was fretting over papa's not being able to take me to the city with him. I am just served right." And then the two went at a game with a zest.—The Intelligencer.

INDIANS AND FRYING-PANS.

Some years ago the Government furnished to the Sioux Indians on the Rosebud Reservation, Montana, supplies to carry them through the winter. Among the cooking utensils were many frying-pans with four-foot handles, made of solid iron. When it came to giving out the frying-pans, the Indians grunted and would have none of them—all but one or two members of the tribe. A little while later, one Indian came back to the agency and asked for a frying-pan. Then came another Indian asking for a frying-pan, and in an hour the last frying-pan was gone. The agent, curious about the sudden demand for frying-pans, went over to the wigwam settlement, but not an Indian could he find. Following a trail which led to a hillside still covered with snow, he found every Indian and every frying-pan. Seated in the frying-pans, with the long handles between their feet, all the Indians were gayly coasting down hill. To be sure the frying-pans spun round and round in their descent, and many a coaster landed wrong side up in a snowdrift, but all seemed to enjoy the sport. It is always interesting to find a perfectly new and exciting use for a humdrum article.—The Christian Register.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4 Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

WORKING OUT AN INVESTMENT—A THREE-MINUTE TALK.

We recently read this true story: An Alahama man, very poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith and zeal for the cause of the church, made to the Centenary a subscription of $3,000. This amount seemed to the friends of the man to be so out of proportion to his income that its payment would he an impossibility, and many urged him to reduce the subscription or to cancel it altogether. His pastor gave this advice; and his hanker, who, perhaps, knew more of the man's financial circumstances than any other person, made a special effort to dissuade him from making a promise which apparently he would be entirely unahle to keep. To all these dissuading voices the man had hut one reply: "I am doing this on my faith alone. I have the utmost confidence that if I attempt this sacrifice for the cause of missions, and am steadfast in prayer and consecration to God, He will enable me to meet the ohligation which I have incurred." Having thus faith in the work of the church and in God's promises to sustain those who put their trust in Him, this man went to work with all his might to redeem the pledge he had made. In a remarkable way his business ventures were successful, and, month by month, he is paying his Centenary subscription in full.

We do not call attention to this story to commend or encourage a reckless assumption that God will honor a blind faith that takes no account of the reasonahle conditions upon which men are to base their actions; hut we mention it to emphasize the great truth that through prayer and consecration to God we may lay hold of the infinite resources of Heaven in carrying forward the work of the Kingdom of God on earth when we really invest our money and our energies in so glorious an enterprise. The performance of an outwardly religious act for the sake of material henefits we hope to receive, is a species of hypocrisy that cannot he too strongly condemned; hut the unselfish consecration of oneself and of all one's possessions to the task of saving the world will hring hlessings in return that will far exceed our expectations. When we invest our all in the work of the Kingdom, we may be sure that we shall receive rich returns in the things we have need of—both temporal and spiritual.

PREACHERS' SALARIES.

We desire to call special attention to the article in this week's issue of the Advocate by Mr. T. Wynn Holloman, Louisiana Conferenco Lay Leader and Chairman of the Louisiana Conference Minute Men, concerning the urgent necessity, as he sees it, of increasing preachers' salaries for next year to a minimum of $1800. It is a clear, forcible statement of a situation that must he remedied before the church can hope to reach the highest degree of efficiency in any department of its work.

We agree with Mr. Holloman that the time has come for the laymen of the church, as represented hy the official hoards, to take such steps as will remove the reproach that has too long held against the church with reference to the support of its ministers. In pioneer days, when the membership of the church was much smaller than it is now, and when living conditions were altogether different from what they are in these times, there may have heen some excuse for the meager provision that was made for the support of those who dedicated their lives to the service of the church; hut no such excuse is valid now. The work has developed, our people, as a rule, are prosperous, and the congregations that are actually unahle to support their preachers adequately are few and far between.

If we may he allowed to look at the situation purely from the standpoint of the husiness man, we would say that no church has a right to expect a higher grade of service than it is willing to pay for. No reputahle business organization expects to hold a $5000 a year man at an $800 salary. In commercial life, the monetary value of a loyal, well-equipped, efficient manager of an enterprise is so well recognized that there is a constant willingness to make the position as attractive as possible on the salary side; and, to a large extent, the measure of success of a husiness concern is determined by the grade of men it is ahle to attract to its service.

In answer to this, the coldly selfish business man in the church might say, "Give us the right kind of preacher, and we will give him an adequate salary." This might be a good answer were it not for two facts: In the first place, the facts show that comparatively few charges do pay an adequate salary, no matter how well-equipped and efficient the preacher is; and, in the second place, the logic of such answer is faulty in that it assumes that the church has a supply of high-grade preachers in reserve, to he let to the highest hidder. It is very much as if a hanker should say to a poor young man just beginning business, "If you will put up $10,000 of your own money, I will lend you $1000." The young man might thank him for the offer, but he could not comply with its conditions.

Continuing our view from the standpoint of the business man, we must face the fact that the ministry is not attracting to its ranks to-day the necessary number of men of ability to carry on the work of the church with the largest success. Many things may enter into the explanation of this fact, hut certainly one of them is the less-than-living wage that the ministry offers in comparison with other lines of activity that appeal to the young man of gifts. We are not among those who hold that this fact constitutes a flaw in the integrity of young men who would otherwise think favorably of the ministry as a life-time calling; it is a reflection, rather, upon the church which has denied the fundamental law that "the lahorer is worthy of his hire." We helieve we may say, with all reverence, that God will not call men in any large number in this age to a form of service in hehalf of their fellow-men the very nature of which requires a degree of self-sacrifice that is altogether unnecessary. As it appears to us, men are not refusing to ohey the call to preach hecause they want more money than they are likely to get if they do ohey, but God is not calling men to the ministry because He will not honor a people who are too selfish, or stingy, or thoughtless, or indifferent to take care of His servants. He may "wink at"—overlook—times of ignorance and poverty, hut in these days of plenty and knowledge His demands are inexorahle.

But we do not like the purely husiness way of looking at the work of the ministry; we like to think of it from the standpoint of privilege and opportunity. When a man has dedicated his whole life, with all the powers he possesses, to the service of God and humanity, where is the congregation that would he willing to profit by his labors for less than a living wage? It is an exalted privilege to be co-lahorors with God in saving the world—and we can lahor with our money as well as with our hearts and hands. We earnestly hope that Mr. Holloman's appeal for a minimum salary of $1800 for preachers will be responded to, not only by the official boards of the Louisiana Conference, hut also throughout the church. It is both economically and morally sound.

DEATH OF DR. T. C. WIER.

Press dispatches on Monday of this week announced the death of Dr. T. C. Wier, an honored supernannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, on Saturday, August 28, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. E. Bonnei, in Muskogee, Oklahoma. This announcement will bring great sorrow to the many friends of the deceased in Mississippi and throughout the church. Dr. Wier was in his ninety-third year, and was the oldest member, in years of service, of the North Mississippi Conference, having been admitted to membership in 1854. He had served as presiding elder, and had filled some of the most important pastorates in the Conference.

According to the press dispatches, the funeral services were held at the Methodist Church at Starkville, Miss., on Tuesday morning, being conducted by Rev. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the Columbus District, assisted by Rev. J. T. McCafferty, the pastor.

It was not our privilege to have a personal acquaintance with Dr. Wier, but from many sources we have learned of his great ability, his noble life, and his conspicuous service to the church. We join with relatives and friends in sorrow at his passing. We shall expect a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Paul H. Grice, of Meadville, Miss., writes that the prospects on his charge indicate a successful wind-up of the year's work.

Rev. B. E. Miegs, our pastor at Picayune, Miss., spent a recent Sunday in New Orleans, worshiping at the Felicity Methodist Church.

Rev. T. M. Brownlee, commissioner of Grenada College, recently assisted the pastor, Rev. F. H. McGehee, in a good meeting at Tyro, Miss.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Como, Miss., recently assisted Rev. W. O. Hunt, of the Crowder and Darling charge, in a good meeting at Bethel.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, assisted Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook in a meeting at Montrose, Miss., last week.

Dr. R. S. Satterfield, assistant editor of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), was in a railroad wreck recently, in which he received painful, though not serious, injuries.

Rev. H. J. Maddox, our pastor at Silver Creek, Miss., reports that he has held four of his revival meetings and that they have resulted in the accomplishment of much good.

Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor of Felicity Methodist Church, this city, is assisting Rev. L. A. Darsey in a meeting at the Wesley Memorial Church, Biloxi, Miss., this week.

Mrs. Ida B. Foster, of Eastland, Texas, has recently become matron of the Memorial Home, this city, a position for which she is splendidly qualified by training and religious experience.

Mrs. Laura M. White, connected with the work of the MacDonell Wesley House, Houma, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. She is spending several days in the city for medical treatment.

The Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church has recently fixed the salary of bishops at $6000, with $1500 for house rent and $1000 for secretarial help.

Rev. C. C. Wier, the faithful pastor of our Algiers church, this city, returned recently from a visit of two weeks to his mother and other members of his family in Houston, Texas.

A personal note from Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, Mississippi Conference, gives us the good news that the work moves along well. There have been gracious revivals in most of the charges in the district.

Rev. E. J. Coker requests us to announce that the Palmer Creek Camp Meeting will be held, September 12-19, and a cordial invitation is extended to the public generally to attend. The preaching will be done by Rev. J. V. Bennett.

We regret to learn that the little daughter of Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, has been seriously ill in the hospital at Winona. We earnestly hope that she is on the road to recovery.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer preached at 11 a.m., last Sunday, at the M. E. Church, South, in Algiers. He reports a large and attentive congregation present. He learned that the building of their forty thousand dollar new church will begin in the near future.

We announce with sorrow the death, on August 23, of Mr. E. C. Rook, a twin brother of Rev. E. H. Rook, a supernumerary member of the North Mississippi Conference living near Como, Miss. Brother Rook passed away suddenly at his home in Lonsdale, Ark.

Our First Church at Corinth, Miss., has enjoyed a year of great prosperity. There have been forty-eight additions to the membership thus far, and congregations are large. The board of stewards has recently increased the pastor's salary to $3000. Rev. O. W. Bradley efficiently serves this fine charge.

We learn from the secular press that Rev. Robt. Selby, Conference Secretary of Education, has been chosen to direct the work of the Christian Education Movement in the Mississippi Conference. If Christian education has a more ardent advocate in the church than Brother Selby, we do not know where he is to be found.

The "Millsaps Preachers' League Quartet," consisting of Revs. E. A. King, M. L. McCormick, R. T. Hollingsworth, and C. W. Alford, will conduct a revival meeting at Anding, Miss., beginning Sunday, September 5. Rev. E. A. King will do the preaching. They request the interest, prayers, and presence of all good people to help make the meeting a success.

We regret to learn that Rev. H. M. Ellis, our vigorous and efficient pastor at Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., has been laid up for nearly a month with a sore foot, resulting from a slight operation followed by infection and blood poisoning. He has had to preach the last two Sundays while sitting. In spite of his affliction, the work is moving along splendidly.

A personal note from Rev. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, informs us that the affairs of the district are in good shape. Finances are well up to date in most of the charges, and there has been a gratifying number of additions to the church on profession of faith, with a good many meetings still to be heard from.

Sister T. S. Randle has recently attended a good meeting at Indian Village, where, she writes, the pastor, Rev. W. W. Lantrip, did some soul-stirring preaching. Old-time shouts were heard, and sinners were converted at the mourners' bench. Sister Randle, as usual, spoke a good word for the Advocate and secured a goodly number of subscriptions, for which she has our thanks.

We extend our thanks to Mr. J. B. Holland, of Meridian, Miss., for a copy of a song recently composed by him and set to music by Mr. August Halter—"Will You Love Me in The Wintertime of Life?" An appealing sentiment runs through the song, and so far as we are able to judge, the melody is altogether pleasing. Brother Holland is one of our most active and useful laymen in the Mississippi Conference.

The fifteenth international congress against alcoholism will convene in Washington, D. C., from September 21 to 26, inclusive. It meets in this country at the invitation of the Government, issued by the Department of State, this being the first meeting of the congress held outside of Europe in a life of more than thirty-five years. It is a governmental, scientific body for the discussion of alcoholism as a disease, and is without prejudice for or against any particular method of dealing with the problem.

Rev. A. W. Langley, our pastor at Cedar Bluff, North Mississippi Conference, is now in the fiftieth year of his itinerant ministry. He has done a splendid work on his present charge and is greatly beloved by his people. He has announced his purpose to retire from the active ranks at the approaching session of the Annual Conference. We think it is not out of place to say that the Conference has not a purer or better man, or a more faithful pastor than is Brother Langley. What a noble record he has made!

The people of Amory, Miss., enjoyed an unusual musical treat on Sunday, August 22. Mr. Alvin Roper, the distinguished pianist who has delighted music lovers around the world with his playing, made a visit to his long-time friend, Rev. E. R. Smoot, with whom he had been associated in religious work in former years, and lent his talent to the church at both the morning and the evening services. The evening service was a musical recital, in which Mr. Roper was assisted by Brother Smoot. The Amory newspaper, from which we glean this information, speaks in highest terms of this occasion. From other sources, we learn that our church at Amory is doing a great work under the leadership of Brother Smoot. There have been 116 additions to the membership thus far, with more to follow.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

O no, no, no! Carley. I wrote that Sister Steel was a "Coo-ed" of Vanderbilt University when I met her on Monteagle heights, not a "Co-ed," as you printed it. Will I never get you editors to understand that I take pains with what I write for the papers? There is nothing to a "Co-ed," but my, my, a "Coo-ed!" I'm sorry for you, Carley, if you made that change, for it means that the sentiment is all dead in your soul, and your wife need expect no more flowers or candy from you. Maybe you were away on that vacation, and left some dry-as-dust substitute on the tripod, who either cannot appreciate humor, or thinks it is out of keeping with the dignity of the Advocate. Just so. Ahem.

You are not the only fellow that attempts to improve my scrawl. I wrote for Brother Weeks' paper that our great Southern scientist, Commodore Maurry, when Lincoln invaded the South, was offered by the Tzar of all the Russia's a "palace" on the Neva and unlimited resources for carrying on his scientific work, and it came out "a place" on the Neva!

But you are a clever scamp to print what I write, if you do change a charming "Coo-ed" into a plain matter-of-fact "Co-ed."

Mansfield, La.

JUST LOOK.

If it's been "raining rain" for you
Just look up through the mist,
And see if yonder mountains blue
Are not by sunbeams kissed.
For always when it thunders loud,
Somewhere the sun is shining,
And many times the darkest cloud
Will have the brightest lining.

WILL OUR CHURCH DO ITS PART, OR LAG BEHIND?

endowed "in time;" but somebody has to do the endowing. Time, alone, endows nothing. A running stream may go on forever without turning a wheel or grinding an ounce of grist, and so may time flow on without improving our educational conditions, unless human hands and hearts devise and execute plans for our schools.

Many of our people have been intending to do something for education "sooner or later;" and in that case they always do it later. The postponement of the discharge of any obligation to an indefinite future amounts to the repudiation of the obligation.

The hour has struck when we must postpone this matter no longer. It is not the private and personal interest of the individuals to whom we have committed the management of these institutions—it is the interest of the whole church and involves the welfare of the church and the welfare of the country. Our people must come to realize that this obligation is upon them, and that its discharge or neglect will involve their well-being, and the well-being of their children for generations.

It is to be feared that most of our preachers have not had any deep conviction upon the subject of Christian education. They have been zealous for missions and other enterprises of the church; but most of them have been quite indifferent to the educational work of the church. They have regarded a member of an Annual Conference who was appointed to service as the president or as a professor in one of our colleges, as if he had retired from the itinerancy.

Our people will wake up to the importance of this great interest when our preachers are aroused on the subject; for, in the end, our people do what their preachers impress upon them should be done.

The question now for our preachers and people to decide is, "Will our church do its part in the work of Christian education for our country, or will it lag behind all other denominations, and thereby discredit itself in the present and defeat itself in the future?"

MRS. H. H. THACKER (nee Miss Catherine O. Vance), was born in Iuka, Miss., in 1834, and died in Meridian, Miss., at the advanced age of 86. She was converted at the age of 16 and united with the church at that time. She was married to the Rev. H. H. Thacker, September 4, 1865. From that time on, for 21 years, she shared with her husband the joys and trials of an itinerant life in the North Mississippi Conference. During these years, eight children came to them, six of whom are still living. Then her husband was promoted from earth to glory. Rallying from the heart-breaking blow, she addressed herself to the task of caring for herself and children. Her faith in God was strong, and the way opened. She was a devout handmaiden of the Lord and often rejoiced aloud as she thought on the goodness of God. In recent years, she was much afflicted in body, but serene in faith and happy on the way. She was fortunate in having the care of her younger daughter, who lovingly ministered to her during her last illness. Sustained by an unshakable faith and rejoicing in an all-sufficient Savior, she passed from this earth to the better world, July 15, 1920. She lived long and well and her works do follow her.

A FRIEND.

MRS. EMMA HALTON NORMAN, daughter of the late Alfred and Margaret Haltom, of Tyro, Miss., and wife of J. M. Norman, now of Memphis, Tenn., was born in February, 1851, at Tyro, Miss., and died at Memphis, Tenn., May 21, 1920. She lived the greater part of her married life at Red Banks, Marshall County, Miss. She was of a modest, retiring disposition, and those who knew her best, loved and appreciated her most. Hence, her true womanly virtues and her Christian character impressed themselves the most upon her family, her neighbors and her intimate friends. Her husband and their three sons and one daughter survive her. Of these, John and Fred Norman and Mrs. Hope, with their father, reside in Memphis, Tenn., and Mal Norman, in San Antonio, Texas.

Her pastor,

LYNCH PEYTON COCHRAN, son of Mr. W. O. and Mrs. S. J. Cochran, was born November 5, 1847, and died February 19, 1920. He spent his entire life, from his birth until his death, near Holly Springs, Miss. He married Miss Mollie McWilliams, Feb. 22, 1877. To them were born four children—Leon R. Cochran, Andrew Cochran, and Mrs. C. A. Sigman, of Holly Springs, Miss., and Clifton R. Cochran, of Memphis, Tenn., all of whom, with their mother, survive him. Brother Cochran joined the M. E. Church, South, in early manhood and lived a consistent member of the same until death. He was a public man the greater part of his life and knew almost everybody in Marshall County. He had a genial disposition and carried sunshine with him wherever he went. He was a good and true man and everybody loved him who knew him.

A GOOD MEETING AT PLEASANT RIDGE, MISS.

On the second Sunday in August our meeting at Pleasant Ridge commenced. Brother H. J. Moore, our pastor at Ellisville, was with us. Brother C. E. Downer, the pastor, had engaged Brother Moore to do the preaching. The congregations were large and the interest good. Nineteen were received into the church, and the members greatly revived. The preaching was excellent. Brother Downer, the pastor, is in the work with all his heart. We love him.

DEATH RATTLE OF CALOMEL IN SOUTH

Dodson is Destroying Sale of Dangerous Drug with His "Liver Tone."

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's Dodson's guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate so let them eat anything afterwards.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea—1 (hot)	cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea—1 (cold)	glassful (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1	drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

SPIRITUAL AND MATERIAL GROWTH IN THE TEXAS MEXICAN MISSION.

By Rev. F. S. Onderdonk.

In June we had an "Upper Room" meeting with all our workers and for a week we talked about the Holy Spirit and prayed for His power and presence and He came upon us afresh. It was a wonderful season of refreshing. Men and women wept for joy and returned to their fields with new determination and power. As a result of these meetings some fine revivals have been held in different parts of our Mexican field and many souls are being saved and brought into the church.

We are in the midst of a building program which is to mean much for the future of the work among the Mexican people. Our new church and parsonage in San Antonio will be under construction within thirty days. The new girls' school for our young women in the Lower Rio Grande Valley will soon be a reality. We are starting several day schools. The assessments for the Conference year, from present indications, will be paid in full. The second year's Centenary collections are coming in right along. We feel confident that the coming year in our Wesleyan Institute, our training school for preachers and general educational institution for Mexican boys, will be full to overflowing when we open on September 1. We are short of workers, but the Lord will supply this need.

HOME MISSIONS AT YBOR CITY, TAMPA, FLA.

By Rev. R. L. Russell.

On my recent visit to Ybor City, I found a most interesting work going on among the Italians. Mr. Picone, the pastor, has organized a new Sunday school. They now have a Sunday school in the morning and one in the afternoon. He is also conducting a day school during vacation. Two rooms of their parsonage have been turned over to this Sunday school and day school.

One evening I attended a lawn fete, which consisted of a program prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Picone. At least five hundred Italians were present and a splendid program was rendered in English.

Mr. Picone has received a large number of adults into the church this year. Bids are now being received on the $15,000 church for these congregations. Miss Lorraine Bisplinghoff, of Bismark, Missouri, has been sent down as his assistant. We expect to have another young woman there within the next few weeks.

One of the most interesting things I found in Ybor City was a day nursery, which Rev. J. D. Lewis took over from a city organization some months ago. The building has been deeded to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the day nursery is now being run by an old Cuban gentleman and his wife and his sister. He teaches them history of Methodism, reads the Bible to them, has prayers with them every day and directs them to the Cuban Sunday school on Sunday evenings. I do not know of anything in a small way which is doing so large a service for the Kinkdom. This day nursery now becomes a part of the Home Department of the Board of Missions. There is nothing I am prouder of than the work down there.

A $15,000 church will also be built for the West Tampa Cuban congregations. This contract will also be let within the next few weeks.

THE HENNINGTON CAMP MEETING.

Dear Brother Carley: The Hennington Camp Meeting closed on the 16th of August very successfully as far as large crowds and attention to the preached Word were concerned. Rev. George Tucker, of Jackson, Tenn., did the preaching, with C. B. Wiatt, of Barlow, Ky., as singer. Brother Tucker is a God-called man, and preaches with power and eloquence, though very direct and pointed in his denunciations of present-day evils of conditions.

The meeting was held in the town of Crystal Springs, and not at the Camp Ground, as has been the custom. This closed the 48th session of the camp meeting, and will be the last, as plans are under way to sell the camp ground, tabernacle, etc. Many regret to see the property pass from the church, but conditions seem to indicate that it has served its usefulness and must pass on.

Facts for Sick Women

Reliable Information

All American women know of the great success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in restoring to health women who suffered from ailments peculiar to their sex, yet there are some who are skeptical and do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true—if they did, our laboratory would not be half large enough to supply the demand, though today it is the largest in the country used for the manufacture of one particular medicine.

The Facts contained in the following two letters should prove of benefit to many women:

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I suffered with organic inflammation and displacement. When lifting I had such pain and bearing down that I was not able to stand up, and it hurt me to walk or go up or down stairs. I was going to a doctor without any results and he said the safest thing would be to have an operation. I met a lady who told me she had three operations and was not well until she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

I felt relief after taking two bottles of Vegetable Compound and I kept on with it until I was cured. I always use Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and they are fine. Everything used to turn sour on my stomach and the Liver Pills relieved that."—Mrs. A. Rogers, 593 Fargo Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sacramento, Calif.—"I had organic trouble and had such terrible pain and swelling in the lower part of my side that I could not stand on my feet or even let the bed clothes touch my side. I gave up my work thinking I would not be able to go back for months. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had saved her life at one time, and it put me in a wonderful condition in a couple of weeks, so I can keep on working. I work in a department store and have to stand on my feet all day and I do not have any more pains. I surely recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Bertha J. Parker, 3320 M St., Sacramento, Calif.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Byhalia Circuit leads the Conference in Sunday School Day offering so far. Brother Floyd sent in a check for $60 recently. It is not too late to observe the day. You can combine the Rally Day program and accomplish a double purpose. The main thing is to want to do the work.

Promotion Day will be more generally observed this year than at any time in the past. That is a good sign of progress. Order your programs of Smith & Lamar at once and make the day one of profit to your entire school.

Miss Ione Mansker, of Holly Springs, has been accepted by the Board to help do institute work. We are fortunate in securing the services of this excellent young woman, who has had experience and fine training in religious education.

Our next step to promote religious education will be to get volunteers among the preachers, and those who have had training at Lake Junaluska and Grenada Training Schools, to teach a class for one week, giving two lessons a day until twelve lessons have been learned. If we can secure fifty such teachers, we ought to be able to have at least two hundred and fifty students to do credit work by the first of January. Who will be the first to volunteer to do this most important work?

Recently I had the pleasure of spending a week with Rev. J. M. Guinn, at Sledge and Crenshaw. The teachers of Crenshaw met with the teachers of Sledge two afternoons and the teachers of the latter place met with those of the former to the profit of both schools. We got them fairly organized and enlisted and supplied with books and several of the best helps. The two groups of teachers have challenged each other in a contest as to which school will make the greater progress by the first of January. Their aim is to put the beginners, primaries, juniors, and intermediates in the third rank standard. Under the leadership of Brother Guinn, we expect to see some excellent work done in these two schools. By the way, the parsonage lot in Crenshaw is the prettiest spot in the town.

Hens Lay While Moulting

First to lay is first to pay. "I used 'More Eggs' Tonic, and for the first time my hens laid through the moulting season," writes Mrs. C. Luginbuhl, of Norwood, Ohio. E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. Letters from many users tell how they actually got eggs during moulting! You, too, can make your hens moult fast, get eggs sooner and more eggs all fall and winter. This scientific tonic has been tried, tested and proven by over 400,000 chicken raisers. Try Reefer's "More Eggs" on his iron clad money-back guarantee of satisfaction.

If you wish to try this great profit-maker, simply write a postcard or letter to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 8259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and ask for his special free package $1.00 offer. Don't send any money. Mr. Reefer will send you two $1.00 packages of "More Eggs." You pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the price of just one package, the other package being free. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned at any time within 30 days, on request. So there is no risk. Write to-day for this special free package offer. Profit by the experience of man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

We are proud of the confidence doctors, druggists and the public have in 666 Chill and Fever Tonic.—Adv.

TO THE OFFICIALS OF THE DURANT DISTRICT.

Did you know that we are now entering upon the fourth round for this Conference year?

Therefore I am prompted to write this letter for the betterment of the work as well as the encouragement to you for bigger things. The third round was far better than the third round last year in almost all of the charges; however, we have much to do yet before we can make a report that will do our district credit, and your elder is expecting you to see that the work on your charge is carried on to the extent that your report at the fourth quarterly conference is equal to the best. Will you do it?.

No district has a more loyal set of layman than the Durant District; therefore I know that I can depend on you, with the help of your pastor, to have every thing in full. in order for us or you to be able to make this kind of a report, you will have to begin now and work hard until the task is done, and, after all, nothing short of this kind of endeavor is worthy of the name of Christ.

I shall not only ask you to see that your pastor's salary is paid in full, but lend all the help that you can for the payment of the benevolences in full, as your record will be all that I have to go by or to stand up on in securing you a pastor this fall; and no charge or pastor can expect a better pastor or a better place until the one in hand is made better. It can be done and it must be dono in the name of Christ. We should never forget that all we have is the gift of Almighty God and belongs to him; therefore, we should give to the church the very best that is within us.

I insist that at the fourth quarterly conference every official be present, so that we may have a face-to-face talk as to our work for another year, and may I ask you to be ready to report in full at this quarter as we will not have time for a fifth stewards' meeting; in fact, to me this idea is a mistaken one of no use.

I request that each pastor read this letter from his pulpit in order that the officials may be sure to get it, as I am quite sure, if they do so, they will be sure to make things come to pass as never before in this district.

I will state further that our district is second to none in the Conference, and is fast coming to the front and will be classed, in the near future, with the best in the whole church. Can your elder depend on each official's helping to make this record true this fall?

Last but not least, don't forget your Centenary and Hospital, as both are very important and demand our consideration. A. C. McCORKLE, P. E.

REV. J. H. BELL AT DODDSVILLE, MISS.

My Dear Brother Carley: Since sending you an account of the great meeting at Ruleville, in which I was so ably assisted by Chaplain Hogg, Brother Bell has been with me at Doddsville in a meeting of unusual interest; out of our hearts we thank Brother Bell for the great uplift and spiritual impetus he gave us with the help of the Holy Spirit.

Brother Bell is, as I suppose most of your readers now know, the field man of the North Mississippi Conference to raise two hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars for our superannuates, the first fifteen thousand to be used to meet the immediate needs of the these claimants, the other two hundred and fifty thousand to become a loan fund, the interest only to be used in helping these dear old folks in being comfortable the remaining days of their lives. Do they not deserve it? If any one can discover one who is not worthy, the Board of Finance will appreciate it if you will furnish the evidence. During the meeting Brother Bell gave this matter consideration, and got in subscription and cash three thousand, two hundred and sixty-five dollars.

My dear brethren, will you not give Brother Bell a chance? Just let him in and he will do the rest. The thoughtful laymen believe in this fund; they know who made this country fit, and are astonished at the little interest some of the pastors are taking in this good and worthy work.

Brother Bell believes the Lord will help him to raise five hundred thousand; God grand, that he may, and that the boldness of his faith may not be discouraged. Very cordially,

W. S. SHIPMAN, P. C.

REVIVALS ON THE NEBO CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: I wish to occupy just a little space in the Advocate, to tell of our revivals which have been held on the Nebo circuit.

We began at Nebo on the third Sunday in July with Rev. H. A. Gatlin doing the preaching. The preaching was well done, as all who know Brother Gatlin and have heard him preach can testify. We closed our meeting on Thursday evening with two accessions on profession of faith, and the church greatly revived. It was the best meeting that the church has had in ten years. After we closed, I went into the dining room and found the table loaded with all sorts of provisions for the pastor and his family.

Our next meeting was held at Cool Springs, beginning the second Sunday in August, with Brother P. H. Grice doing the preaching for us, and it was well done. The visible results of this meeting were 11 members received by profession of faith and 3 by certificate, and the church members greatly revived.

Our next was held at Oak Grove, beginning the fourth Sunday in August, the pastor doing his own preaching on Sunday, Brother W. H. Saunders coming to us on Monday and remaining until Thursday evening. In spite of the rain that continued all the week, the attendance was good. People would come to church in the morning that lived only a mile away and in the evening they would get to the creek and have to turn back and head the stream in order to get home; but they would be back the next day only to have the thing repeated that day. But the best of all was, God, the Father of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, came to us in the person of the Holy Spirit, and the visible results of this meeting were 10 members by profession of faith, and two by vows. To God be all the glory.

We have organized one teachers' training class with about 12 or 14 members at Nebo and they love the work. Brethren, pray for us.

C. H. HERRING, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS.

Memorial resolutions passed by the Methodist Missionary Society of Fayette, Miss.

Whereas It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from our midst one of our most faithful co-workers, Mrs. J. H. McBride, we, the members of this Society, wish to express our love and appreciation of the life of service of our dear friend whom we will greatly miss; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That as a Society we know we have lost one of our best members. We shall miss her words of encouragement and ready sympathy.

2. That we, her friends, extend to her sorrowing family our unbounded sympathy and trust that the knowledge of her long and useful life of service will alleviate the grief with which their hearts are filled.

3. That these resolutions be published in the Fayette Chronicle and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, a copy sent to the family, and that they be placed on the records of our Society.

Signed by: Mrs. W. H. Lewis, Mrs. M. A. Coffey, Mrs. N. A. Killingsworth.

Fenelon says that "pure religion resides in the will alone." As the will is the governing power in the man's nature, if the will is set right, all the rest of the nature must come into harmony. By the will I do not mean the wish of the man, or even his purpose, but the deliberate choice, the deciding power, the King, to which all that is in man must yield obedience.—Selected.

50 Eggs a Day

"More Eggs" Tonic is a Godsend," writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky. She adds, "I was only getting 12 eggs a day, and now I get 50." Give YOUR hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," the wonderful egg producer, and you will be amazed and delighted with results.

Eggs While Moulting

While moulting your hens will need "More Eggs" to hasten the moult, revitalize their organs and put them in fine laying condition. Letters from many users tell how they actually GOT EGGS WHILE MOULTING.

If you wish to try this great profit maker, simply write a posteard or letter to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 7259 Reefer Bldg, Kansas City, Mo., and ask for his special free package $1.00 offer. Don't send any money. Mr. Reefer will send you two $1.00 packages of "More Eggs." You pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the price of just one package, the other package being free. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned at any time within 30 days on request. So there is no risk. Write to-day for this special free package offer.—Adv.

All Need Treatment.

The blood, the nerves and the liver—there are cases in which they all need treatment at the same time, the blood being impure and deficient in iron, the nerves weak and unsteady, and the liver torpid and sluggish. In these cases such a combination of medicines as Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, Peptiron, a real iron blood and nerve tonic, and Hood's Pills, the gentle yet thorough cathartic, is of signal service.

The many effective and highly approved ingredients of these three successful medicines cannot all be included in one medicine because of incompatibility, but they are practically combined by taking the medicines in conjunction—Hood's Sarsaparilla before eating, Peptiron after eating, and Hood's Pills as needed. It was a happy thought of Mr. Hood's to suggest that they be so combined in the treatment of such cases as are referred to here, which nowadays seem to become much more common. —Adv.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Shreveport District Secretary Tells This Interesting Story of the Half Year's Work:

First of all, we are glad to report three new adult auxiliaries organized during the second quarter, and we are very proud of them. At the district meeting we had a pressing invitation from the pastor and one of the delegates of Cedar Grove charge to visit their "Ladies' Aid" the following Tuesday. We were there on time and were delighted to find 30 energetic women, who were anxious to learn of the aims and obligations of the Woman's Missionary Society. After a brief talk giving, without detail, the general scope of the work, there were 20 names enrolled as charter members of Cedar Grove Missionary Society. There were some subscriptions to the Voice, and a number of babies' names given for the Baby Division. The corresponding secretary of this new society sent in her report on July 1.

The members of Belcher Ladies' Aid, through interest created at the district meeting, decided among themselves to bring their organization into the ranks of the Woman's Missionary Society. They started with a membership of 19. Their corresponding secretary also sent in a report at the end of the second quarter.

Queensborough is the last of the trio. By invitation some of the members of Shreveport First Church auxiliary met with the Aid, and a transformation was effected. We know that the officers of Queensborough have entered whole-heartedly into their new work, for we have had several letters from them showing their interest. Number of members, 18.

One day, early in May, four of the women of Keithville auxiliary accompanied the district secretary on a visit to the regular meeting of the Bossier City society. We found a goodly number already gathered at the church and received a hearty welcome. The Voice program for the month was presented by the visitors, and at the close of the service there followed a pleasant social hour. The Bossier City auxiliary had a 100 per cent increase in membership this year, and is interested in both Bible and mission study classes.

In May, several of my friends went with me to Greenwood to attend a social meeting of their auxiliary. This was held at the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. Scott. A literary program was rendered by the Greenwood ladies. Social fellowship and delicious refreshments made us forget, for the time being, the 28 mile ride between us and home. The Greenwood society has a large membership which comes out in full force. They support a special and have a flourishing Junior Department.

First Church, Shreveport, society, late in June, shared with the auxiliary of Noel Memorial a most interesting and inspiring program. Mrs. Stockwell's talk of her work in Africa, and exhibition of curios from that country, furnished the central feature of the afternoon. Four of us from Keithville availed ourselves of this opportunity to hear Mrs. Stockwell, and counted ourselves most fortunate that we had been invited. After the program we repaired to the church parlor for a social time. Dainty refreshments were served to all present.

Two of my co-workers enjoyed with me a visit to one of the regular meetings of Stonewall this quarter. We arrived after the program was over, but as that society had sent a representative to the district meeting, she could give them a report of the womens' conference. We had also an informal presentation of the 1920 standard of excellence, and plans were made for their mission study class.

During May we had the pleasure of being present at a meeting of the Texas Avenue (Shreveport) auxiliary. After the Bible lesson, a beautiful program on Child Welfare was given. Many of us might profitably meet as does the Texas Avenue society. Four Tuesdays out of each month finds them with a meeting at the church—first Tuesday for business and Voice, second and fourth Tuesdays for Bible study, and third Tuesday for Mission Study. This arrangement leaves no room for any one to get mixed on what is the date of the society meeting. During the first week in July, Texas Avenue effected an organization of the young people. We are very happy over this news.

A forty-four mile drive carried two of us recently on a visit to Pelican. We talked with several of the officers of their former missionary society, and are daily listening to hear of a re-organization there.

Flournoy auxiliary has a distinction rivalled by no other society in this district. They report every member a subscriber to the Missionary Voice. It is needless to state that the result is a progressive auxiliary, interested in all departments of the work.

I believe we have quite a number of societies from this district on the honor roll. If I am not mistaken, Oakdale Juniors will have some rivals from this part of the State for that cup when Junior credits are counted up at the end of 1920.

While vacation time is here the Junior superintendents have had a golden opportunity of organizing Junior divisions. Those who have a Junior division and a Baby Roll should inspire the Juniors to organize one, also to increase the subscription list for the Young Christian Worker, while the price is still 25c.

Mrs. O'Pry, of Longstreet, is doing good work with the children.

Last Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Klingman, of Keithville, and the district secretary entertained the three societies of this charge. We had an attendance of 50 or more. For the program, seven 5-minute talks about our 7 foreign fields were given, as told in the Mission Study book just out. For review of home work, we had prepared maps of every State where we have institutions, giving the REVIVAL MEETINGS ON THE CARTHAGE CHARGE.

We are now in the midst of our revival meetings, and would be glad for you to make mention of them.

The first Sunday in August, we held our Conway meeting. We had with us the Rev. J. S. Purcell, of Crystal Springs, part of the time, long enough to preach five most excellent sermons. We had a very successful meeting and received 4 members on profession of faith.

The second Sunday in August we held our Simpson meeting, assisted by Rev. H. R. McKee, Homewood, Miss. We had a good meeting. The spiritual life of the church was greatly quickened and we received one on profession of faith. McKee did some fine soul-searching that pleased the people very much, who said to the pastor that after this they were willing to leave in his hand the right to select the helper. We closed the meeting in a most unusual way, the pastor being made glad by a splendid "pounding." As we stood at the altar, just before the final benediction, the church, led by Luther McKee, placed around our feet some $15 or more worth of nice and good things to eat, for which we were indeed grateful to them and to God.

The third Sunday in August we opened with Mt. Horeb church, assisted by Rev. C. A. Schultz, of Gallman, Miss. Brother Schultz, too, did some real Gospel preaching of the old type. He endeared himself to the hearts of our people and many testified to having received the greatest blessing they ever experienced in any meeting. We received 3 on profession of faith, and the church was greatly revived. Here again we had another very unusual experience. Just before we were dismissed, after everything had been said and a liberal offering had been made to Brother Schultz, he stood before the congregation and announced that as we sang our last hymn if any one wanted to make a free-will offering to the Lord, for them to bring it to the table, and some $15 or $20 worth of groceries and nice things to eat, that had been brought by the people, were deposited on the table, and the pastor was asked to be the recipient. We praise God for these men, these meetings and for what the people did.

name of city or place where located, and name of institution. Each map was cut into many pieces and sealed in an envelope, with small United States flags stuck in the corners. One puzzle was given to every two guests; when they had pieced it out, each read aloud the name of her findings. After this we enjoyed a social hour, including refreshments.

In addition to holding the quarterly rally, we have written 85 letters and 30 postcards, have attended 3 auxiliary meetings, and visited several officers in their homes at different towns.

An Explanation.

Dear Mrs. Snelling: Your letter of 18th to hand. The apparent discrepancy in the report comes from the fact that my totals give the net gain. Every quarter we have some auxiliaries that are lost to us temporarily, and are reported by the secretaries as disbanded. I have always held that we ought to count an auxiliary for a year after organization. The new societies feel that if they have not a big membership and a good attendance at all meetings that the effort at organization has failed in its purpose. "Despise not the day of small things." Some woman in an auxiliary in the making, will write, "we have no society now," while the real fact is that for the lack of one woman, the key woman, activities are held up for a while after an organization has been in existence, been at work, and has sent money to the Treasurer. I have no alternative but to drop the one that the secretary says drop, as she has to drop the auxiliary where the corresponding secrerary, or some one else writes, "we have no organization now."

I have just had a letter from Miss Iles on board the Aquitania, in which she says that they are having a delightful voyage, not a one of the party at all sea sick. They hope to reach Southhampton August 26, will stay in London a couple of weeks, then go to Belgium where they will stay until October before they can get a boat. They are planning to study French and Batetela and get a good start while there. Her address for a while will be 75 Houndsditch & Bishopsgate, London, England. Mail will later be forwarded from there as they will have the Belgium address.

With my love,

BERTHA G. HOLT.

A GOOD MEETING AT HOLLY SPRINGS, LA.

Rev. J. C. Price has just closed a splendid revival at Holly Springs, La. There were 55 additions to the church, one by letter, one by vows, and the remainder by profession of faith, and also a number of testimonies that the meeting had been a great blessing. He was assisted part of the time by Brother J. L. Lay, of Calhoun, whose preaching was very helpful to the community. C. L. KENNINGTON.

FROM FRANKLINTON, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We just closed a great meeting at Fisher church, Franklinton circuit. Rev. R. A. Bozeman did the preaching and Mr. Paul Templeton the singing. Many were strengthened in their spiritual life, several family altars erected, and 35 received on profession of faith. The most of this class were young men. It was the best meeting that has ever been held at that church. To God be all the praise. We begin at Franklinton, the 26th inst. Pray for us. F. N. SWEENEY, P. C.

METHODIST BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION—ITS PLAN OF WORK.

In spite of the fact that the Methodist Benevolent Association has been in active operation for more than seventeen years, its increasing business brings constantly new inquiries about this agency, which is operated solely for the members of the Southern Methodist Church. We deem it proper, therefore, to take this method of outlining in a very brief way the general purpose of the work.

The Methodist Church in its doctrines and polity stands for taking care of the sick and poor and dependents of its household of faith. The Methodist Benevolent Association makes its strongest appeal on the basis of pure religion, which is to "visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions."

The Association began its work seventeen years ago on a plan, in the main, which the Board of Finance is authorized to adopt for the same purpose. The Board of Finance has investigated the policy of the Association and declares its attitude toward the Association to be one of considerate friendliness and such cooperation as it may be able to give.

Three important conditions and facts inhere in the foundation and success of the Association—namely, a great need, an adequate plan, and good management.

1. The need is shown by the constant and bitter cry of the multitudes of worn-out preachers and suffering and dependent widows and orphans of our household of faith.

2. The plan is one of self-help and is the steady growth of seventeen years. Constant investigations and direct application have resulted in the unique and practical plan of giving safe life insurance at actual cost to all who are eligible for membership.

3. Its good management, carefully and conscientiously adhering to safe and sound business rules, is attested by an appreciative and satisfied membership and by its grateful beneficiaries.

What more is necessary? Can our ministry and other benefactors of our church render a greater service than to create an estate or its equivalent adequate to take care of our afflicted and otherwise comfortless loved ones? This, in simple, is the work of the Methodist Benevolent Association. As it labors for the welfare of the church, it bespeaks the support of every loyal Southern Methodist.

J. H. SHUMAKER,
General Secretary.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

NO ESCAPE FOR THE SINNER.

A news item the other day told of the troubles of a man who had been haled before the court on the charge of vagrancy and fined twenty-five dollars; he protested that he was unjustly dealt with—that he was engaged in the legitimate occupation of driving a taxicab. Investigation showed that he was doing this without a license, and he was promptly fined twenty-five dollars for his failure to comply with the law in that respect. He had simply accomplished the uncomfortable feat of "jumping from the frying pan into the fire." The sinner will find, when he comes to judgment, that his excuses and explanations will avail him naught; and the more he tries to escape the penalty of his sins, the more likely is he to realize that exact justice is being meted out to him.

THE LAW AND LYNCHING.

Recent occurrences in various parts of the country have again called attention to the fact that a spirit of lawlessness is abroad in this land which is directly threatening the safety of our most highly cherished institutions. Lynching is not a sectional evil, directed against a particular race, but it is a widespread infection that breaks out in violent acts wherever the passions of a mob happen to be aroused. It is a denial of the elemental rights of unconvicted prisoners, and a direct threat against the life of law-abiding citizens. It is an evil that must be sternly dealt with if we are to establish and maintain a Christian civilization. We can understand how the feeling of a community can be wrought into a frenzy by an atrocious crime; but we cannot understand how good men can sit complacently by and allow that feeling to vent itself in unrestrained acts of criminality. If lynch law is to supplant the orderly processes of the courts, we have little to boast of and very much of which to be ashamed and afraid. All honor to those communities whose citizens have determined that those who inflict punishment without the law shall be made to suffer by the law!

POOR TEACHERS.

It is amusing, rather than exasperating, that the American Dancing Masters' Association should undertake to instruct the Methodist Church in a matter of morals. A simple comparison of the products of the two organizations will satisfy even the morally indifferent that the dancing masters are trying to teach what they have not yet learned.

LABOR DAY.

Last Monday was observed as Labor Day throughout the nation. While there may be some slight question as to the propriety of stopping the wheels of industry for a whole day to pay tribute to organized labor as a factor in our national greatness, there can be no question as to the right of labor to receive the recognition to which it is entitled as the fundamental agency in promoting industrial prosperity. It is work that makes the world a habitable place, and it is the workers who furnish the products upon which the welfare of the people depends. As is well known, organized labor to-day enjoys privileges that have long been fought for—the right to determine almost absolutely the hours of work, the rate of pay, and the conditions under which it shall operate. Especially is it true in the cities and in great industrial centers that labor organizations are in control of the machinery of production. We can find no fault with this state of affairs if, at the same time, organized labor will recognize the responsibilities that rest upon it, and respond with a conscientious determination to follow the principles of justice in making its demands and carrying out its program. Unscrupulous capitalists have brought upon themselves the execration of the world by their conscienceless profiteering in the face of appalling need; if the workingmen yield to the influence of radical agitators, they will find themselves without the sympathy of the masses which they may now so easily secure by straightforward dealing. It is a time for sober reflection and sane action.

EDUCATION ITS OWN REWARD.

We have already heard a great deal, and we shall hear a great deal more, to the effect that education pays because it enables a man to earn more, to hold positions of responsibility, to assume places of leadership, to receive a larger share of the good things of life. All this is true, and it is a valid argument in favor of strengthening our educational institutions and inducing our young people to attend them. But we should never forget that education, in a very real sense, is its own reward. It does enable a man to get, but—what is infinitely more important—it enables him to be. It gives him a sense of comradeship with all the great spirits that have gone before; it gives him the capacity to enjoy things that are meaningless to the uneducated—art, literature, music; it opens to him realms of thought and feeling that are inaccessible to the ignorant and untrained; it enlarges his soul and quickens his mind, so that he can utterly enjoy the things of the spirit. The educated man may have to labor with his hands to earn a livelihood; even so, he is vastly better off than the man who can only labor with his hands.

BEAUTY IS NOT THE TEST.

We recently had occasion to make a trip through a section of Louisiana where many of the streams, bayous, and canals are covered with a solid mass of water hyacinths in full bloom—a sight that, to the passer-by, is beautiful beyond description. From bank to bank, and as far as the eye could see, the lustrous green leaves shining through the spikes of bell-shaped flowers made a picture that one could scarcely believe to be real. Yet we learned that this luxuriant growth, instead of being regarded as a thing of beauty by those who live in that section, is looked upon as a pest to be got rid of at all costs, because it impedes navigation and interferes with commerce. It is hard to realize that so beautiful a thing can be a curse—yet such is the case. So it is too often in the moral realm. That which from outward appearance is altogether desirable, has within it the germs of destruction. In "thinking God's thoughts after him," we do well to remember that while "man looketh on the outward appearance, the Lord looketh on the heart."

HUNGER STRIKES.

World-wide attention is centered just at present on unhappy Ireland. The reports that come to us from that distracted country are so conflicting that it is impossible for us, at this distance, to form any very clear idea of the actual situation. One incident, however, in connection with the attempt to bring about a settlement of the trouble—the hunger strike of the Lord Mayor of Cork, thrown into prison by the English authorities for violation of the law—has been brought so prominently before the public as to make it almost the occasion of international complications. If it were not for the tragic consequences involved in the probable death of the misguided patriot, we should be inclined to pass it by as the insane attempt of a fanatical man to overthrow the orderly processes of government by a childish act—an act deserving contempt rather than pity. If the principle should be established that a refusal to take nourishment on the part of a prisoner is sufficient cause to secure his release, all prisons throughout the world would soon be emptied, and justice would be cheated in numberless cases where guilt was beyond question. It is a tragedy that a man should deliberately sacrifice his life in protest against constituted authority, but it is an absurdity to suppose that voluntary starvation constitutes an indictment against the administration of justice. If men who can eat, will not—well, they have become their own executioners.

THE ETERNAL TABERNACLES.

By William J. Hart, D.D.

Some of the changes made in the Revised Version of the Bible immediately arrest attention as they are first noticed, and occasionally one captivates the imagination. Very beautiful is the rendering in Luke 16:9, where we find the translation as given at the head of this article—"the eternal tabernacles." The still more correct rendering, according to Dr. David Smith, is "the eternal tents." He remarks that "it is an eloquent contradiction in terms. A tent is a frail and unenduring thing, pitched by the traveler at nightfall and struck at break of morn when he fares onward. And when our Lord speaks of heaven as the eternal tents, he means that the eternal life will be at once a perfect rest and an endless progress. The soul will be satisfied, but it will discover ever more of the glory of the Lord and drink ever deeper of his inexhaustible grace."

A somewhat similar suggestion is found in the hymn of James Montgomery where he sings:

Here in the body pent,
Absent from Him I roam,
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent
A day's march nearer home.

My Father's house on high,
Home of my soul! how near,
At times, to faith's foreseeing eye,
Thy golden gates appear.

Lying on his deathbed, calmly awaiting the summons into the rewards of the other life, was one of saintly character whose days had been earnestly devoted to good works. His son, whose churches were twenty miles away, was somewhat reluctant to leave his father for his preaching appointments when Saturday came. The venerable minister thereupon said: "My son, I feel a little stronger, and you had better return and fill your appointment to-morrow. If, while you are away, John, I should happen to slip off, you know where to find me." The good man was assured of a residence in the eternal tabernacles, and he was ready, with hope and confidence, to move skyward.

A devoted Sunday school worker and helpful writer, William H. Ridgway, once remarked that he went to see many dying folks. "When they are Christians," he said, "it is no greater job than stopping in to see a friend just before bedtime. The smile, the shake, the word, and 'Good-night, old fellow.' The last thing Jack Bastian said to me was, 'If I'm not here when you come again, you'll know where I am. * * * Give my love to the other Iron Rose boys, and tell them to be comin' along, for I'll be expectin' them.' * * * To the friends of Christ, death is only saying, 'Good morning' in heaven." Thus serenely does the soul pass into the eternal tabernacles.

Tennyson used a different figure for the translation of the soul, and spoke of the time when he should "put out to sea." In like manner has Nancy Byrd Turner spoken in "The Last Voyage:"

Some silver night this barque, my soul,
Will spread a sudden sail,
When the worn anchor gives at last
And the old moorings fail;

Without a word, without a cry,
Wide-winged, elate and free,
No doubt or fear for fright, or pain,
Will put to open sea.

I shall not mind me if my prow
Be pointed north or south,
So there are wild winds on my brow
And salt spray on my mouth.

I shall not reckon how the miles
Go flinging down my wake,
If, brittle on my questing brow,
The pungent brine shall break.

So shall I sail and sail and sail,
Till, in the whistling foam,
The sea's God and my soul's shall say,
"Good mariner, put home!"

Then, through the gate of some gold dawn,
Strong helmed and straightly driven,
My ship shall make that ancient port,
The happiness of heaven!

The eternal tabernacles lie on the other side of the narrow sea of death. A minister preached on a certain Sunday, though he was not feeling well. Holding the Bible in his hands he said: "Closing up life's work is like closing this book. There can be no fear." He closed the Bible, and the following Sunday he joined the church triumphant. The Rev. W. C. Bitting once stated at Chautauqua Assembly that President W. R. Harper said to him shortly before his death, "The God about whose business I have tried to be busy will not forget to look after mine in any other world to which I may go." That great scholar also told his wife that he felt less anxiety in going out into the great beyond than he felt when he was leaving Yale to assume the presidency of the University of Chicago. These men were simply leaving this earthly house for the eternal tabernacles.

"God and I have been like Father and daughter in this world," said a trained nurse, "and we cannot be less closely related in any other." That is a fine statement of the relation of the Christian to God both in this life and in that which is to come.

Comfort comes to the bereaved as they feel assured that their departed ones are dwelling in the eternal tabernacles. The house they now inhabit is one not made with hands, but it is eternal in the heavens. Three children were taken in one week from one home by diphtheria. Only the little three-year-old escaped. Margaret Slattery, who knew the family and who has related the incident, tells us that when Easter came the parents and their little child were at church. The mother taught her class of girls that day; and the father went to the superintendent's desk, led the school in worship and read the Easter story with only a break now and then in his fine voice. "Amid the faces lined by suffering, rebellion, and despair, amid the badges of sorrow and mourning and the silent voices of the Easter congregation, they had seemed a miracle. 'How can they?' men said to each other as they left the church.

"A fifteen-year-old boy, walking home with his father from the Sunday school hour, said hesitatingly—for he did not talk much with his father—'Dad, I guess Mr. and Mrs. L. really believe it, don't they?' 'Believe what?' asked the father, for he thought slowly. 'The whole big thing, all of it, Easter, you know.' 'Of course,' answered the father, 'all Christians believe it.' 'Not that way,' replied the boy, who began to whistle lest his father should say more."

One who hesitatingly believes that those who have gone from us are forever with the Lord whom they here served speaks thus to those who have "loved and lost." "The bereaved heart can never quite cease to ache for and yearn after the vanished till it follows them through the * * * gates of death. But let us never lose them. Let us seek to trim our love for them so that it may not wane. * * * We should make them our joy and pride. They should link those of us whom they have left as we were never linked before. So by-and-by we shall be able to look on the old familiar faces with eyes purged and know our dear ones for what they were and are."

Several persons said to one who had been bereaved, "You have lost your brother." The answer, however, which was invariably given was: "Oh, no, he is not lost; only departed from us for a little while." He felt that we do not lose that which we are going to have again. And in the family of God we are going to have again, in richer, dearer measure than we have ever yet known, those who for the present are taken from us by the agency of death. Emily Dickinson has a suggestion for us in her lines:

If tolling bell I ask the cause,
"A soul has gone to God,"
I'm answered in a lonesome tone;
Is heaven, then, so sad?

That bells should joyful ring to tell
A soul has gone to heaven,
Would seem to me the proper way
A good news should be given.

A SUPERANNUATE AT CAMP MEETINGS.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

I have been attending camp meetings, off and on, for 65 years. They still remain occasions of great interest to me. I have just returned home from the meeting at Shiloh, Rankin County. Almost continuous rains greatly interfered with the attendance; but in spite of this, the crowds were good, and the meeting was fine. The greater part of the preaching was done by Rev. J. A. Smith, the greatly-loved pastor of our church at Philadelphia. I had heard that Smith was a good preacher; now that I have heard him, I am free to say the half had never been told me. He is a very fine preacher. In several points his pulpit work is not excelled in my knowledge of preachers. I am mighty sorry he is going to leave us for California. We need him.

I went to the meeting at Shiloh last year. The first day at supper, I got choked—wasn't that a foolish thing for an old preacher to do? Chicken bone? No, it was a piece of steak. It was from lack of sufficient mastication. My theory is that teeth are not needed for chewing meats—cut small pieces and swallow whole, and the digestive organs will do the necessary work. I have been practicing on that line for about three years. It has worked well; but I can't prevent getting choked once in a while. It was five miles to a physician. When he came, he said the thing had gone down. He left me, after getting five dollars, to grunt and gasp for life all night long. I knew he was wrong. A fellow who is choked is a mighty big fool not to know he is choked. Next morning I hurried to Jackson as fast as the train could carry me, and Dr. Atkins took an instrument that looked like a ram-rod, and drove it clean down into my stomach. It removed all the impedimenta, and I was once more able to swallow things. If you were ever choked, Henry, you know how good I felt. I spent a good part of the remainder of the day drinking water and sweet milk. I am never going to get choked again if I can help it.

I was delighted with the Shiloh situation. Every tenter is a member of the Shiloh church. They are a fine class of people, and a hustling and prosperous set of farmers. With a citizenship of this type the country will be safe.

Thinking of camp meetings calls up the first I ever attended. The grounds were located in the northern part of Madison County, about twenty miles from Canton. I was about five years of age. My father tented with his family. Only two happenings of the occasion remain in my memory. I remember that I hustled myself running over the hills and hollows near the grounds hunting gooseberries. I am sure I have never since eaten any berries comparable to them. Why are not berries good now as they were when I was a boy? Echo answers, "Why?"

The other matter is the inglorious part I played in one of the night services. I got very drowsy under the lengthy sermon (they didn't deliver sermonettes then, but preached sermons) and dropped down on some hay. I was soon unconscious in the embrace of "tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep." When my parents returned to their tent, they discovered that they had lost their promising (?) little son. They sent out searchers who soon found me cuddled up on some straw, sound asleep. That pretty well cured me of sleeping at church. It is mighty ugly to sleep under a sermon. The people who see you do so, laugh at you, and it almost takes the life out of the poor preacher. Don't let's do it any more.

Thirty years ago I attended a camp meeting at Salem, Jackson County. I was invited by the association to come and share with the presiding elder in the preaching at the 11 o'clock and night services of the meeting. There was no "pep" in it. Enthusiasm was lacking. Not a soul had been converted up to and including Saturday night and the meeting was to close Sunday night. It was to some of us a painful and humiliating situation. Are we going to lose out, and confess defeat? All of our hopes of victory centered in the work of Sunday. That was our last day. The three services during the day were without power. The pulpit entertained the crowds, but did not grip a soul. No tears of penitence were shed; no confessions of sin were made; no hearts were moved by the power of the truth. It looked as if we were doomed to go down in defeat. I have never forgotten the anguish that filled my soul—it was indescribable. I hope I may never have another such experience.

When the preacher for the night service announced his text, it was easy to see that he was greatly burdened and there were a goodly number in the immense congregation in sympathetic touch with him. In solemn and trembling tones he uttered the awful words of the text, "And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments." The sermon was hot, the preacher was hot, and the hearers were hot—metaphorically speaking, the glare of the fire was seen, the crackle of the flames was heard, the shrieks of the damned were piercing. My, what an awful hour it was! The preacher held in absolute contempt the quibbles and criticisms of all the heresies of the ages, and accepted the Christ of God as the source of authority, and the only one knowing the truth, as he was "the Truth." He was truth speaking. Jesus believed—knew—that there was a hell and startlingly warned people against it. Why should we doubt? Doubt and be damned; believe and be saved.

The congregation was tremendously stirred. Tears streamed from the eyes of penitents; cries for mercy went up to God; a large number were converted, and seventeen joined the church. The victory was complete. A man went to the pastor at the close of that service, and asked him if he believed in hell like the man who had just preached—"Why, sir, his picture of hell made ice-cold chills run up and down my back," he said.

My notion is, Henry, that if we would quit arguing about the matter and preach hell, and keep on preaching hell and never stop preaching hell, we would have better times mighty soon. Our Methodist people would kneel at prayer, and not "squat over." They would not run their autos so industriously on Sundays, pleasuring, but would fill the churches. I am sure cries for mercy would be clear and strong, constantly going up from our altars. Let us try it, my dear brethren.

Our present problems are menacing. The old ship of Zion looks as if she is in danger of losing her moorings. As preachers, let us stop diluting the gospel, and preach the fundamental and eternal truths. It will not make our preaching popular, but it will save the situation.

CHURCH MEN IN POLITICS.

By Rev. Christian F. Reisner, D.D.

It is interesting to note that all of the leading men of the two political conventions recently held are connected with the church. While some of the so-called "bosses" are not Protestant, yet the men who have been put forward as committee chairmen, as spokesmen, and as nominees are uniformly active members of the Protestant Church.

In the Republican convention former Governor Frank B. Willis, who nominated Senator Harding, is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and was district chairman of the Minute Men of the Delaware District of the Northeast Ohio Conference. Governor Henry J. Allen, who nominated General Wood, was also a Minute Man and has been for many years an active Methodist, having been converted under Evangelist W. A. Sunday. He was for many years the leader of the gospel team which led many men into church membership, including his intimate friend, William Allen White. While General Wood is a Protestant Episcopalian, his wife is a very active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Senator Lodge is a well-known member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. W. H. Hays, the national chairman of the Republican party, is an elder of the Presbyterian Church in his home town and regularly teaches Sunday school class there. As is well known, the Republican candidate for President is not a nominal member, but a very active official and worker in the Baptist Church. The candidate for Vice President, Calvin Coolidge, never misses attendance at his church, which is the Congregational. He has been a member from young manhood and takes his family with him when he attends. Senator James W. Watson, who was chairman of the Platform Committee, is an official member of the Meridian Street Methodist Episcopal Church in Indianapolis, to which also belong ex-Governor Hanly and ex-Senator Beveridge, and which was the church home of the late Vice President Fairbanks.

In the Democratic Convention Governor Gardner of Missouri, who was a very active delegate, is a closely interested member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Missouri. Vice President Marshall, as is well known, is an elder in the Presbyterian Church. Bainbridge Colby and William G. McAdoo belong to the Protestant Episcopal Church. Mr. McAdoo attended the service, as was his custom, on the Sunday during the critical time of the nominations. Attorney-General Palmer is a vital and well-known member of the Quaker Church, or Society of Friends, and is a graduate of their college, Swarthmore. Senator Carter Glass, like the chairman of the Republican Platform Committee, is also a Methodist, and was a Minute Man in the Southern Methodist Church. The candidate for President, Governor James M. Cox, was raised in the Methodist Episcopal Church, since both of his parents were members of that church, and he himself joined the United Brethren, which is quite generally known as practically the same as the Methodist Church in doctrine and organization. While his wife is a Protestant Episcopalian, he has never taken his membership from the little country United Brethren Church which he joined as a boy. The nominee for Vice President, Franklin Roosevelt, is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church and attends regularly. His wife, who is a niece of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt, being the daughter of his only brother, until her marriage was a member of the Reformed Church.

It is a notable fact that while many people neglect the church, it in some way always leads into leadership strength the men who are related to it. Roger Babson, after a personal interview with one hundred leading men in the business world, said recently that every one of them was religious. He further emphasized the atmosphere in which they had been raised by noting the fact that 5 per cent of them were sons of bankers, 10 per cent sons of merchants, 25 per cent sons of men in other professions, and 30 per cent sons of clergymen.

The young man must learn that as he stores up physical strength which may be used at times of need, and equips his brain for varied problems that arise, so he must fortify and feed his character by public worship and Bible reading and prayer, so that he will be strong enough to meet the character tests, when he must settle what is right or wrong, wise or unwise. Religion as vitally furnishes man for everyday decisions as sunshine flavors fruit. We can enter any realm of life and find that the men who lead it are church-trained men. In the recent war the three leading generals, Foch, Haig and Pershing, were all active members of the church. Surely "godliness is profitable" in the very best sense.—Zion's Herald.

WHO WAS AKINDRUM?

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

Some time since, while visiting in a home, I heard the children repeating this nursery rhyme:

"And my name is Akindrum,
For to do your work I'm come;
A bit to eat, a bed of hay,
You may give, but nothing pay."

"Who was Akindrum?" I asked, to get reply, "He was an old man who went about helping people without pay." And the youngster went on to tell of one person who insisted upon paying the generous old soul, which so insulted him that Akindrum never went there again.

That this character and incident were a figment out of the child's brain, I do not believe, but it was one of those stories handed down by some Uncle Remus, intended to teach a moral—that there are some things which are above monied consideration and whose value is in the principle of "more blessed to give than to receive." In this day of exacting unions, crying like the daughters of the horseleech, "Give, give," when no service is contemplated in the interest of humanity, when the man with public spirit has ceased in the land, we are wont to ask, "What has become of Akindrum?"

I recall a story of the long ago, when there gathered great men in a great convention reciting their great achievements in the different fields of endeavor. There sat one in the assembly unrecognized and modest of mein, who, when asked for his right to be in such a gathering of literati and nobles, made reply, "These are all my pupils." The dominie had received scant pay for his services, and scanter recognition, but this was the hour of his greatest triumph. "And their works do live after them."

The old district school masters may have "boarded around, and taught for nothing;" but they were the Akindrums of our earlier civilization; such even was Irving's Ichabod Crane. In a certain old Book I read of one who chose rather to suffer with his people than wear a royal crown, and of others who forsook all to follow the Master. Within the century just past we read of like sacrifices by our fathers in their zeal for their Lord and his sheep in this Western wilderness. Have their manties all been folded and put away as keepsakes only? It has been said of Lord Shaftesbury, England's great philanthropist and statesman, who reached beyond the four-score years, that his only regret at his going was that there was so much sorrow and want in England that he would relieve if possible.

For some reason, I know not why, that last paragraph in the 25th of Matthew has impressed me as none other, from my childhood up, and no lesson in it more than the thought that to keep books with the Lord is fatal to our best selves and most coveted rewards. And I am ready for Dr. Steel's addition to our Creed—"Who went about doing good."

In repeating the doggerel of the nursery, the little three-year-old said, "And my name is Akindrum." Yes, Akindrum. As Solomon has written, so must it be: "Let another man praise thee and not thine own mouth; a stranger and not their own lips."

Will some of the nursery folks answer, "Who was Akindrum?"

Religion is the best armor in the world, but the worst cloak.—Bunyan.

THE PROBLEM OF IRELAND.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

At the Annual Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, recently held in Hull, England, one of the most remarkable scenes ever witnessed in such an assembly took place. The significance of it was profound. Representatives from other lands made their report in the open session, and the Irish Deputation came last. The representatives were, Rev. Hy. Shire, Vice President, Rev. W. Moore, Rev. E. G. Young, M. A., and a layman, Mr. Ernest Mercier, J. P. There were two varieties of opinion, but the Conference listened to both with an overwhelming sense of impending calamity. It was a gentle reproach made, that among all the prayers offered for a distracted world, no special prayer had been made for Ireland. The appeal touched all hearts, and many tears were shed, and by invitation the Conference gave itself to prayer. The Conference was as the heart of one man, and never was there a more hallowed supplication of those who cry, in a dark day, for light from on high. There were no politicians, only an assembly smitten of God and afflicted for a land that was dear to all, and a people, our brethren in faith and practice, beset on every side. There were those who passed over the incident, or did not appreciate, it may be, at the moment its full value.

But it may be donbted whether the condition of Ireland is a question closer to the fortunes of religion, the churches, the empire and the world than most questions that were debated. It is pitiful and futile to go back and apportion blame. Things are what they are, and the distracted land is drifting to an appalling abyss. Mr. Ernest Mercier said it was difficult for any two Irishmen to agree on anything; he said that in contradiction to what the Rev. Hy. Shire had said, excepting that the Irish Methodists were never so loyal to their church as to-day, and valued the sympathy and help of their English brethren. Nor did they have the least desire to break one link of association with their English brethren, their aims were one. Both were confronted with problems, yet different. In England they were fighting against a gross materialism, which had spread over the community, an aftermath of the Great War. In Ireland they were contending with an ecclesiasticism which had been the bane of all social and moral development for many years. The Roman Catholic priest had always been supreme.

The Englishman's side of the case is put by the Rev. Wm. Bradfield in this manner: The average Englishman thinks of Ireland as a country towards which we have wished to be generous, fair and brotherly, throughout the whole lifetime of this generation. We have sought to heal the wounds of the past, and to meet liberally the needs of the present. We have desired that the Irish people should take their place side by side with us as equals, comrades, friends in all the great tasks of Empire. From time to time we have certainly been wearied with the necessity of attending to Ireland when we wanted to attend to other matters, but we have tried to do our duty. And we are bitterly disappointed with the results of it all. That is our side of the case. But when an Englishman goes to Ireland he is often extremely surprised to realize that practically all Irishmen, however deeply divided on all other points, agree in denouncing whatever Government is in power. They do not believe that it ever even meant well, and they think its performances inept, perverse, ineffective and unprincipled. They never think of themselves as having any part in it, or responsibility for it, although they have been and still are citizens of the "United Kingdom." What matters is, that we should realize that it has created a situation in which negotiation and compromise and a "fair deal" are quite impossible? Sinn Fein for instance wants complete separation and independence. It claims this as a natural right. It is not prepared to make any bargains until it is put in a position of complete isolation. It does not recognize that it is breaking up a family, but says, "Give me the portion of goods that falleth to me," as its undeniable and equitable claim. And Unionist Ulster denies with equal peremptoriness our right, or anybody's right, to cast her off from the United Kingdom of which she desires still to be an integral part. It seems to many of us that the Government with Parliament will have to decide rather than negotiate. And for such a decision freedom from anger and irritation is vital. We were never in greater danger of having our vision beclouded, at the very moment when it is essential that it should be clear. The murders and outrages form a terrible element in the situation.

At this distance I have no right to criticise the English Government. The conscience of England can make no sort of terms whatever with them, except to its own shame. Does it prove that Ireland is not ripe for self-government? Many think so. There are enough law-abiding men in Ireland to put down and eradicate these terrors of the night, if only these "men of good will" were themselves united and able to act together. But the terrible division between Roman Catholic and Protestant at present entirely prevents this, and this division has come to be accepted as a kind of inevitable fate.

The penalty of accepting its inevitability is being inflicted inexorably. So long as the people who desire good are divided, they are powerless to prevent the domination of the secret societies, and are doomed to live under their terror. England cannot drive away that hobgoblin for them, but they themselves could banish it promptly and effectually, if they, the men of good-will in all camps, would trust one another and bring their united power to bear.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE OPENING.

Millsaps College will begin its twenty-ninth session on September 15.

The next session promises to be one of the most successful in the history of the College. The campaign for students during the past summer has been more extensive in that several members of the faculty have been engaged in canvassing. At the present writing almost all of the space in the new dormitory has been reserved and additional applications are coming in every day.

Faculty Changes.

The College has sustained a great loss in the resignation of Dr. A. A. Kern, who has been at the head of the Department of English for the past sixteen years. He goes to Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, Va. The vacancy has been filled by the election of Professor M. C. White, of Austin College, Sherman, Texas. Professor White is a graduate of Southern University, Greensboro, Ala., and has the Master's Degree from Harvard. Professor White was a student at Southern University during Professor Hamilton's student days there and while Professor Key was a member of the faculty.

New Buildings.

The frame building constructed for the Preparatory School during the S. A. T. C. has been moved and divided into two parts: one for the book store, the other for the rest room for young ladies in attendance at the College. Heretofore the young ladies have had to use one of the reading rooms at the Library for a study room. The new arrangement will be much more satisfactory for all parties concerned.

James Observatory.

During the session the James Observatory will be open one night each week for visitors. It is hoped that the people of Jackson will take advantage of this opportunity to take a look into the heavens. The larger observatories provide a night for the general public and it is the desire of the Director of the James Observatory, Professor G. L. Harrell, to give the people of his community the same advantage that those near the other observatories have. The people of Jackson do not realize the opportunity that they have right in their midst for making a study of the stars, sun, moon, planets, nebulae, and comets. After the opening of college a day will be selected and it is hoped that all who feel so inclined will take advantage of the opportunity.

Football.

The second effort at intercollegiate football during the history of the College will be made during the present session. The first effort was during the session of 1900-'01. A few games were played that year before the sessions of the Annual Conferences were held, at which time football was legislated out of the institution. At the last sessions of the two Conferences the question of playing all forms of athletics came before the two bodies and they voted to put the whole matter of athletics into the hands of the Board of Trustees and the Faculty. As a result of that action Millsaps College will play football during the next session.

DURBAN.

By Wm. C. Allen.

We had been 24 days on the vast and lonely southern Indian Ocean and were weary of it. Storms and leaky cabins and much knocking about had been our portion. Rain on the sea always seems superfluous. The lights of Durban on the distant shore before dawn flashed a vivid welcome. Then a strange thing happened. The officials who came on board to examine aliens did not take our passports away from us as had been—to us—the foolish custom in foreign lands since the war. We involuntarily exclaimed "Enlightened Africa!"

When you look at the map of southeastern Africa and see the name of Durban on it, you wonder what the place is like. Is it a city of beauty and culture, transplanted to the Dark Continent, or is it a community of low-lying houses and almost naked black folk? In a sense it is both and much more. It is a handsome town where riches and squalor mix together.

Durban is a great port. When we were there in February, 1920, it was said that thousands of people were waiting to get away on the numerous steamship lines that normally carry passengers to Australia, the East Coast of Africa, India and the far East. The rich lands of Natal lie behind Durban. The English have developed the city—their warehouses and offices teem with business life—while shrewd Dutch factors, Arab traders and Indian merchants do the rest. The patient natives perform their part—what a debt white peoples owe to the dark-skinned races!

The aggregation of some 75,000 inhabitants lies close to the water front, and backs over the neighboring hills. A beautiful Esplanade clings caressingly to the bay. An excellent two-decked tram service conveys passengers to the pretty homes in the suburbs. The architects of Durban have done good work. The Town Hall and Post Office are fine structures and face onto a lovely little park in the center of all things. The Durban Club reveals a charming garden; some of the new office buildings are models of interior beauty; the hotels are excellent and restful. Truly this far-off city on the shores of eastern Africa entices the visitor within her gates!

Our hotel in Durban faced the bay. It was a good hostelry with a strange paucity of fruits on the table when we considered the hot days and abundance of garden stuff all about us. The Indian waiters with their brown skins and flashing black eyes, their white suits with broad scarlet sashes and white turbans surmounting all, made the dining room a gay and picturesque sight. The chamber work was done by negroes who, with naked legs and feet, were clad in white from the knees upward. You do not want to see them "wash out" the pitchers, bowls and tumblers in your room—ignorance, when travelling, is very, very often bliss.

The street scenes of Durban are fascinating. Well-groomed and well-gowned Europeans mingle in the streets with many shades of other races. Coolies from India are clad in their native costumes—the women in shawls and dresses of the most brilliant colors, their noses pierced with curiously wrought jewelry, their ears gay with marvellous ear-rings. They carry their babies on their backs. The native Africans also have strange ear-rings. The lobes of that part of their anatomy are often distended to an immense size with big round pieces of wood introduced into them. The Zulus are a fine people. Some of the Zulu women have amazing coiffures, their hair being built up in the form of towers fully 15 inches long, and extending aft at an angle of 45 degrees. One day I saw one of these dusky belles much bedecked with beads and bright clothing, and in bare feet, walking down the street with a languid air swinging a little walking-stick—quite a la English woman of fashion, if you please.

Through the blandishments of a young friend who could speak the language, I induced one of these ladies to pose for me. With many giggles the camera clicked and a sixpence closed the transaction. The Zulu ricksha men are the most striking of all. There are many (man-propelled) rickshas all over town. The pullers are physically a splendid type of men. How their bare legs and arms shine and move! They wear short trousers and their coats and decorations are of many colors. Their headgear is extraordinary. Many of them have huge feathers flaring all over their heads, whilst from either side branch great sharp ox-horns. This arrangement indicates that the wearer has the swiftness of the eagle and the strength of the bull. Sad to say, the alternate sweating and cooling down and the reckless manner of their lives make their business a man-exhausting service—tuberculosis or pneumonia all too soon closes the scene.

When you go out into the white people's districts of Durban, you see Zulu "boys" lolling in the shade watching the white children in their baby coaches. These men are declared to be faithful care-takers of their helpless little charges.

I always enjoy the market scenes in foreign cities—there you see "the people" as they really are. Securing an hour or so from work, one morning, we walked through the city market where auctioneers stood on high platforms. These men auctioned off butter, pineapples, potatoes, or anything that grows in any quantities, to the eager purchasers made up of all sorts of breeds of men and women—including white folks—that surrounded them. The coolie-market a few blocks distant is a motley kaleidoscope of shifting sights and color. Hard by is the "Municipal Native Eating House," where sat hundreds of negroes at long, unfurnished tables, not eating, but drinking native beer from huge tin mugs. The din of Kaffir voices was tremendous. This establishment is under the care of the city government and the beer is 2 per cent strength. With glistening eyes and gleaming teeth and tumultuous laughter some of the men—half drunk they seemed—invited me to join them. It was a sorry spectacle.

One of the sights of Durban is the Moslem Mosque. Under its walls I succeeded in gathering a group of Mohammedan children—the lads in red fezs, the girls arranged in gay dresses and oriental jewels. At first the little maids refused to pose, but finally, at the intervention of one of the older ones, they assembled. I had promised a sixpence to my bribed assistant. Immediately after the picture was taken, and the coin handed to her, she rushed off to a neighboring shop. The last I saw of her she was running back to her comrades counting in the palm of her little hand the pennies she had exchanged for the silver which she evidently was intending to honestly divide among them.

Prices are high in Durban. Many things are fully twice as expensive as they are in other countries. Only native labor is very cheap. Business methods are sometimes novel to an American. When I went to "Cook's" to secure railway reservations, one week before I needed them for Johannesburg, I did not simply pay for them and have them assigned to us on the spot. I paid the cash at once, but Cook's wrote a courteous letter to the railway folks asking for accommodation, and in a few days received a dignified reply. No promises were made and we did not know if our request was accepted, or where we might be placed on the train, until within a few hours of its departure. The city must be a watchmaker's paradise. When my faithful old watch, in harmony with the spirit of the age "struck," I took it to a jeweller who desired me to leave it with him until the following day, when he would report on it. When I called, he informed me he was so busy that he could not commence work on it until three months should have elapsed. He seemed to consider his suggestion a perfectly reasonable one.

When we went out to Inanda Mission—some 15 miles from Durban—we intended to make a one-day trip, but did not do so. A kind friend offered to take us in his motor car, but the roads were horrible, we lost our way and floundered among rivers and sandbanks. As a finale, our machine broke down and we walked, hours late, under a broiling hot sun to the mission. It is conducted by the American Board and the students are Zulu girls. This station was founded in 1869, and the venerable and charming Mary Edwards, who was first in charge at that date, still resides on the compound. Our accident ended well—all was for the best—we had a meeting with the young people in the evening. The reverent behavior of the girls was beyond praise and after I had addressed them they sang a few hymns in their native tongue with a dignity and sincerity delightful to behold. They take to music as ducks do to water and their voices have a wide range. The following morning we parted from the staff of the mission with happy memories of its generous hospitality. Our impromptu overnight visit had one unique and blissful feature associated with it—our baggage consisted only of my wife's comb!

BEETHOVEN'S PIANO.

A party of American tourists visited the old home of Beethoven a few years ago, many years after the noted pianist had died—but the house, the piano and many other things were still there. A young lady in the party seated herself at the piano and played Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." After she had finished, she turned to the guide and remarked, "I presume many travelers come to this famous place every year, don't they?"

"Yes," replied the guide. "Paderewski was here last year."

The young lady was interested to know that such a famous pianist as Paderewski had been there, and, being quite interested, she asked, "And did he play on Beethoven's piano?"

"No," replied the guide. "He said he was not worthy."

Great men and women are very humble. Their desire is not to "show off" or make themselves conspicuous, for there is more important work in this world to do than that. They feel that they are not worthy of much which the world does for them, but all the time they are doing for others.

The truly great person does not have to put himself forward, in fact he will not. He is like John the Baptist, who, telling the people that Jesus was coming after him, said that the Messiah was so much greater and better than he was that he himself was not worthy to unloose the latchet of the Messiah's shoes. And Jesus was even more humble than any other person, teaching a beautiful lesson of humility the last thing in his earthly life, saying he came not to be ministered unto but to minister. That is true humility, a Christian virtue.—Nathan Howard Gist, in the Congregationalist and Advance.

TO FIND OUT GOD'S WILL.

(1) Pray. (2) Think. (3) Talk to wise people but do not regard their decision as final. (4) Beware of the bias of your own will, but do not be too much afraid of it. God never necessarily thwarts a man's nature and likings, and it is a mistake to think that his will is in the line of the disagreeable. (5) Meanwhile do the next thing, for doing God's will in small things is the best preparation for doing it in great things. (6) When decision and action are necessary go ahead. (7) Never reconsider the decision when it is finally acted upon, and (8) You will probably not find out till afterward, perhaps long afterward, that you have been led at all.—Henry Drummond.

TRAINING FOR SINGERS.

Voice course for Beginners, Chautauqua, Lyceum, Evangelistic Solo and Conducting, Church Music. Rates to ministers. Method removes throat trouble in singing and speaking. Address Mrs. Rehekah Ellison Johnston, 1165 N. West St., Jackson, Miss., opposite Millsaps College Library.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

We live in an age of organization. So numerous are the churches, lodges, brotherhoods, parties, unions—that their names are legion. These overlap and underlap one another and satisfy the gregarious instinct of the race. Some trace their origin over the bygone years, others spring up like mushrooms in a meadow. The acid test of time declares them worthy of continuance or corrodes them to forgetfulness. Man, by nature, is not only a gregarious, hut also a religious being and this primal element must find expression. Possibly these social gatherings satisfy this elemental call, keep him in touch with others, and provide harmless diversion and amusement.

I now suggest we organize a new society. There is so much unholy criticism, so much biting, stinging sarcasm, so much cynicism—another name for dogishness—that it seems—yes, we need a new union. Let's have a new society. Its motto—"Kindliness." Its principle—"Consideration." Its purpose— "Helpfulness." Its sacred obligation—"Consciousness of Truth." Its constitution and by-laws—"Sincerity and Honesty with God and man." With guarded lips its membership should sometimes keep the golden troth of Silence, and learn when, where, and how to give the great password—"Charity."

I think this society, very much like the one of an elder day founded by the Christ who stilled the fury of a Galilean tempest, might, in some measure, hush the clamorous, envious speech of misguided men and women of a later age.

* * *

Woman now enters into a larger citizenship of civic life. Wby not this privilege granted to her long since? Never a man in any class without a woman heside him. In history she has shaped the destiny of empires; in literature she is crowned with an amaranthine chaplet of lasting fame; in science, climhing the rugged heights of new discovery, she walks hand in hand with the sons of the race; in social functions man has ever been the lesser factor; in the home sbe is queen by the divine right of motherhood. As far as I am concerned, she is welcome to all that citizenship brings to her. She will not trail our flag, nor endanger our commonwealth. All hail, Sister! be true to the fairest and best of the past and we bid you welcome to the greatest citizenship on earth to-day. The restless race needs the strong and gentle touch of some hitherto unknown guiding hand. May there come to you, and to all, a clearer vision with the larger responsibility, for there are tasks confronting us in these parlous times that will tax all combined reason, intuition and ingenuity of men and women to solve. May God, who created one for the other, them, grant to both wisdom, patience and faith to right the wrong and bring peace to a discordant world.

"FLOWERS FOR THE LIVING."

"You may let weeds grow on my grave, but if you have any flowers, I can enjoy them now," said some obscura persona to me the other day.

The above sentence is no text to justify me in flinging flowers, indiscriminately, but rather an opening sentence to recount some facts regarding an old and interesting preacher wbo still "dwells among us."

The 24th day of August was the seventy-seventh birthday of Rev. W. W. Simmons, who to-day is no more ready to recount the battles, the fortunes and the triumphs of forty years in the ministry in Southern Methodism than he is to discuss intelligently and vigorously the tremendous problems now confronting the American people.

With a past that may enumerate above three years' service in the Confederate Army, nineteen years as pastor, and elght years as presiding elder in the Southern Methodist Church, and that with a keen quick judgment of both men and movements, he is able to throw clear and clarifying light on over half a century of very interesting history.

It was a pleasure indeed to me to hear him recount the story from the days of battle where he was wounded at Port Gibson in '63 down through his early pastorate and presiding eldership. Among some of the most outstanding facts were the large numher of churches he had aided in building, over 2,000 members he had receIved into the church, and innumerable conversions under his preachIng, Including many preachers now filling prominent charges in the church.

Though in my work as travelling salesman it is not economically urgent that I enumerate or itemize the spiritual influences of the past, I could but consider with wonder the social, educational and spiritual influence of this one man on South Mississippi. It may be that it is due to the fact that my early childhood was surrounded by the noonday glory of his flaming ministry. At least it was in the time and place of my childhood that, through his preaching, farmers were put to praying in the fields, clerks behind counters, and young men to preaching the Gospel all over that part of the State. His renown as a strong and godly preacher was familiar to every household of that section of the country.

And his personality to-day bears out this record and reputation. His sentences come from him still with that fearless emphasis that makes one feel he would back them with his life. There is still smouldering in his eyes tbe fire of the fighter, and though his body sometimes trembles under the ravages of his wounds and the touches of his age, tbe spirit and the mind still flame with the vigor and conviction of ambitious youth and decisive maturity.

As one listens to his words, he is filled with a keen desire to see such a mind and spirit harnessed in the body of a youthful Apollo and given a new lease on life and in the pulpit once again. There could come from such a one no tepid discourse on ethics: nothing less than the eternal verities in language as clear as light and with a force and conviction that would drive it home to the heart of man. We can but believe that the Great Creator has a new field of service awaiting him.

We bope the editor will see fit to publish these few lines of unsolicited praise and tbat they may reach bis eyes before tbey are too dim to read, and that they may lift a throb of gladness in his heart before it is too cold to respond witb appreciation to the expression of our love and admiration.

Though he is old and now superannuate and sits at his home in Gloster, Miss., unable to enter into a fight that still calls him and he bungers to enter, we pray that he may have many years among us with the benediction of his rich spirit and the guidance of his sound and wholesome advice.

A FRIEND.

PART OF A GREAT CHORUS.

The last time I preached in Free St. George's, Edinburgh, I noticed something, which, I think, is somewhat exceptional in the arrangement of churches. The organist sits among the congregation. He has a little keyboard in a pew, and the great organ sounds above as he presses the keys below. Apt figure of the Christian's experience! The keys of joy and sorrow are pressed in every faithful human heart, and make harmony in heaven, whence it floods in blessing over the experience of humankind. This is the song of Moses and the Lamb. You are singing it in union with the blood-washed throng whose conflicts are past, but you are singing it none the less really because you are singing it as Moses sang it on the borders of the Red Sea, and as Jesus sang it in the shadow of the cross.

"Do lovely things, not dream them all day long:
And so make life, and death, and that for ever.
One grand sweet song."

—Reginald J. Campbell.

SIR BUSHYTAIL.

By Louise M. Oglevee.

When we go walking in the park
We often like to play
That we are in some far-off land
That's miles and miles away.

To-day we said, "Now we'll pretend
These trees so tall and grand,
Belong to some great nobleman—
The richest in the land.

"We wish he'd send a little page
To show us where to go,"
And then we cried, "Oh, hero one comes!
How did he over know?

For up there frisked the dearest squirrel
That seemed as if he knew
The game that we were playing,
And was asking to play, too.

Then we forgot the nobleman,
And had the finest play.
We didn't find a palace,
But we had a happy day.

WHEN POLLY SPOKE.

This is a parrot story told in a paper recently, and good enough to repeat.

Polly was a newcomer in the family. She was a little gray parrot, anything but showy as to plumage, though her former owners laid great stress on her accomplishments. But from the start she made it clear that she had no vulgar desire to "show off." When one after another of the household urged her to express her desire for a cracker, and insinuatingly addressed her as "Pretty Poll," she put her head on one side and looked as if she found the situation amusing. The weeks went by and the silence continued. It began to look as if the change in Polly's surroundings had deprived her of the power of speech.

"Oh, dear," fretted Mildred. "I thought it would be so much fun to have a parrot in the house, and she doesn't talk any more than a Maltese kitten. There's always something wrong with our things."

Mildred's mother sighed. It was her opinion that the chief thing wrong was Mildred's disposition, which made so much of little vexations. She had done her best to cure her, but sometimes she was afraid that Mildred would grow into a discontented woman, making gray skies for herself and others.

Then one morning Polly spoke. Mildred came into the dining room a little late. Polly, on her perch, cocked her head, and then said in a whining, fretful voice, "Oh, dear, dear, dear!"

The family roared, and Mildred stood aghast. She had not paid much attention when her mother had pointed out the rapid progress of her besetting fault. But now it seemed that even Polly had noticed it. Even a gray parrot associated her with the thought of peevishness and fretfulness. She dropped into a chair, too ashamed to make any comment, and Polly eyed her as she ate her muffins.

Polly has never lived up to her reputation for being talkative. Her lapses into conversation are very infrequent. But Mildred's father, noting the struggle his daughter is making against one serious fault, thinks that one speech of Polly's was worth the price he paid for her.—Selected.

THE WHIP-POOR-WILL.

"Before daylight in the morning the whip-poor-will was singing and I counted a hundred and eighty-two repetitions of the word 'whip-poor-will' without stop or hesitation to take breath on the part of the bird," writes Dan Beard in telling of an autumn bird hike in Boys' Life for September. "Two seasons ago we found a whip-poor-will's nest near the Outdoor School camp, that is, if one may be allowed to call any old place a nest when there is no semblance of a nest about it. The eggs, two of them, were laid on the brown leaves in a little open space amid dense underbrush and thickly set trees. The eggs were dull white in color, with indistinct markings of lilac hue and a few foggy gray and dirty brown spots on them.

"The whip-poor-will is a night watchman. He comes on duty when the other birds go to roost, and if it is a moonlight night, he keeps up his song as long as the moon shines, but if it is a very dark night he is quiet until the faint gray light in the east, known as the Wolf Brush, streaks the sky, and announces the coming dawn, then he wakes up with a start and proceeds to wake every one else up also.

"The way to find a whip-poor-will's nest is to walk along through the woods every day for a week at a time—maybe it will be necessary to keep it up for years—but bye and bye you will be startled by a large bird suddenly and silently flying from between your feet, flying with not so much as the sound of a whirr or flap of a wing as the phantom-like bird disappears, leaving you standing there with a creepy sensation because the whole thing is so mysterious. But when you look down between your feet, if your eyes are sharp, you will see the prize for which you have been searching—a real whip-poor-will's nest, marked by two eggs lying on the top of a flat stone in the midst of a path or on the brown leaves.

"This old whip-poor-will of Pike County hatched its young, but, bless your soul, the young were just as difficult to see as were the eggs. The babies are fuzzy little things of a reddish brown color. When the old bird would fly away she would kick her babies over, either accidentally or on purpose, and the little fuzzy brown whip-poor-wills would lie on the brown leaves, sprawled out just as mamma had knocked them! They would not move a feather, if the hairy stuff covering them could be called feathers, nor would they bat an eye. They were as immovable as the dead leaves upon which they sprawled. When one had one's nose almost touching them, it was hard to tell the little birds from the other brown trash strewed on the forest's floor."

SEE THESE FACTS AGAIN.

An investigation of the educational advantages enjoyed by the eight thousand persons mentioned in "Who's Who in America," for the years 1899-1900, brought out the following facts: Out of the nearly five million uneducated men and women in America, only thirty one have been sufficiently successful in any kind of work to obtain a place among the eight thousand leaders catalogued in this book. Out of thirty-three million people with a common school education, 803 were able to win a place in the list, while out of only two million with high school training, 1,215 have exhibited this marked efficiency; and out of one million with college or university training, 5,768 have reached this distinction. That is to say, only one man in one hundred and fifty thousand has been found in America, without education, to become a notable factor in the progress of his State, while the children with common school education have, in proportion to numbers, accomplished this four times as often, and those with high school education eighty-seven times as often, and those with college training eight hundred times as often. If this list had been selected by the universities or school teachers, or if literary leaders only were chosen, it might easily be claimed that the apparently greater success of the educated was due to the line of work from which the leaders were selected. But the selection of the men and women in this book was not in the hands of professors, but in the hands of a firm of business men. They selected leaders in all lines of industry, commerce, agriculture, and other fields of practical endeavor besides the professions, and still this enormously increased efficiency and productivity of those with education was found.

The child with no schooling has one chance in 150,000 of performing distinguished service; with elementary education, he has four times a chance; with high school education 87 times the chance; with college education 800 times the chance.—Boys' Life for September.

To-morrow, when you go into your business and find twenty thousand dollars that can easily be scooped up, and the law on your side—and the devil, too—look into the invisible and see the crown angels have for him who shall say, "Get thee behind me, Satan."—Beecher.

God has not given us vast learning to solve all the problems, or unfailing wisdom to direct all the wanderings of our brothers' lives, but he has given to every one of us the power to be spiritual, and by our spirituality to lift and enlarge and enlighten the lives we touch.—Phillips Brooks.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is hereby called to meet in regular annual session on Thursday, October 7, at 10 o'clock a.m., at the Advocate office, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La. Important business is to be transacted, and a full attendance of the Committee is desired.

AT HOME, AS WELL AS ABROAD—A THREE-MINUTE TALK.

It would be poor strategy that would mass all troops at the front and leave the rear of the line of advance wholly unprotected. A base must be established and maintained, and every provision necessary made for a constant supply of reinforcements and supplies if an army is to go steadily forward without the fear of disastrous defeat.

The church is thoroughly well aware of this elementary principle of tactics in the care it has taken to strengthen its work at home as well as abroad. It has established and is maintaining great centers of work in the needy fields of unevangelized lands; but it is likewise looking carefully to the needs of the situation at our very doors. Thousands of dollars are being expended to give the gospel to the unchurched masses, native and foreign, that live in our own land, and some of the most efficient men at its command have been put in charge of undertakings that are essential to the success of the work of the church as a whole.

These men are faithful and diligent in their work, and the results of their labors are manifest in the progress that has already been recorded. The success of our work among the Italians at Tampa, Florida, is a case in point. The Rev. Leon Picone, the pastor, labors among 10,000 immigrants of his own nationality, many of whom do not yet speak English. Each morning of the week he teaches school, in the afternoon and evening he performs the various pastoral duties which devolve upon him, while late at night he pursues the studies he has undertaken the better to fit himself for his work. Two days in each week he spends at the free clinic which the church has established, and on Sunday he preaches at two places, both morning and night, and conducts two Sunday schools. And he is not alone in this example of unstinted devotion to the cause to which he has consecrated his life. In the great cities, in the mountains, in the industrial centers, other men and women are spending their lives in self-sacrificing service that the whole world may be evangelized.

Those are left without ground to stand on who say that the church should minister to the heathen at home before it sends missionaries abroad; the church IS at work in the home land, and its work is being followed by the most blessed fruits.

GETTING READY FOR CONFERENCE.

In less than two months, the first of our three Annual Conferences will have been held, and the other two will follow in quick succession. The end of the year is almost upon us, and it is not too early to begin to get ready for the full enjoyment of this significant annual gathering. "A stitch in time saves nine"—and the principle expressed in this ancient saying applies to the affairs of the church as well as to the mending of garments. Diligent attention to business now will save many hours of anxiety over the situation just at the close of the year when so many things have to be looked after.

We hope the official boards will not wait until the very last minute to see that their pastors' salaries are provided for in full. If there ever was a time when our preachers needed every cent that was promisd them in the beginning of the year, that time is now. While it is gratifying to record the fact that a great many charges increased their assessment for ministerial support the past year, in no case that we have beard of has the increase been out of proportion to the increased cost of living; and in many instances the increase was not enough to offset the higher prices that have prevailed for many months. As a consequence, many of our most faithful ministers have been financially embarrassed throughout the year, and they will come to its close sadly perplexed as to how to make ends meet even if they receive all that they had a right to expect. Now is the time for the stewards to look into the situation, find out exactly how they stand as to their obligations, and go to work systematically and energetically to meet their pledges in full.

We should like to suggest in this connection that no law of the church would be violated if every board of stewards should present its pastor with a generous bonus at the close of the year's work. Many business institutions have adopted this custom as an effective way of showing their appreciation of the faithfulness of their employes, and the amounts thus distributed are really an investment that pays rich returns in the gratitude of the recipients. Attendance at Conference always entails extra expense for the preacher—and it would be a graceful act for the stewards to make practical provision for this fact.

Then the benevolent collections are to be provided for. Even if there were no higher motive, church pride should insure the full payment of every assesment laid against a congregation. Once in a while it may he true that peculiar circumstances have made it impossible for all claims to he met, hut such cases are so rare as to make them a negligible factor in the work as a whole. These collections can he secured in full in practically every charge if the right kind of effort is made at the right time.

But there is a higher motive than church pride for securing these collections in full. By so much as these collections fall short, hy just so much is the work of the Kingdom hampered. We have inaugurated a great, forward-looking program and we must carry that program out or acknowledge our inability to meet the obligations a new age has brought upon us. Every cause represented by these collections is a sacred cause, and it is our privilege no less that our duty to contribute to them to the full measure of our ability.

In addition to these claims, the second Centenary payment is due and should he in the hands of the treasurers at least before the Conference year closes. These Centenary pledges are definite promises to pay, made hy those who realized the obligations they were assuming, and whose names and subscriptions are on record. The record of the Centenary is a glorious one thus far, and not a single subscriber should cripple its efficiency by failure to meet his obligations a promptly as possible.

In many places there have been other financial obligations assumed, which should, also, be taken care of. Local enterprises have been set on foot that must be maintained, and generous contributions bave been promised for our orphanages, hospitals, etc. A good slogan for all our churches would be, "Everything in full by Conference, with a clean sheet for next year."

We have dealt here only with the financial side of getting ready for Conference; we have it in mind to call attention to some other matters in connection with this subject at a later date.

CHANGING THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

The suggestion has been renewed lately by influential leaders of the church that the time is ripe for a change of name that will eliminate the word "South" from our official title. Dr. T. N. Ivey, Dr. S. A. Steel, Bishop H. M. Du Bose, and others, have expressed themselves as believing that much is to be gained by such change, especially in view of the changed conditions of these latter days. Among the names that have been suggested, are the following: Methodist Episcopal Church in America; The Methodist Church; The Methodist Episcopal Church, Wesleyan; The Wesleyan Methodist Episcopal Church, or, after a union with several smaller bodies, The United Methodist Church.

We confess that we are deeply attached to the historical associations that made our present name so appropriate, and we treasure the sentimental significance of a name that has been bred into our very blood. There is nothing in it that we are ashamed of, and no part of its record needs to be apologized for. It has a glorious history, a wonderful present opportunity, and a magnificent future.

We cannot but feel, however, that the word "South" has largely lost its significance in a church that has become world-wide in the extent of its operations, and that its elimination would be in keeping with the present extent of our activities and the future enlargement of our program. A territorial designation of a world-wide church at least suggests an anomalous situation

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. S. Brisco has resigned the pastorate of the Winona circuit to accept the principalship of the Acona High School.

Our First Church, Baton Rouge, La., has had 134 additions to its membership this year under the pastorate of Rev. N. E. Joyner.

Rev. O. S. Lewis has bad a good year at Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksbuurg, Miss. The Sunday school attendance for the summer has been unusually good, nearly 100 per cent better than last year.

We have seen the statement that the reports of the spring Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church show a net increase of 68,628 in the membership. Last year there was a decrease throughout the church of 55,881.

Rev. M. E. Scott, of Black Hawk, Miss., reports that there have been good revivals throughout his charge, with several additions on profession of faith, and that he expects to be able to report everything in full by Conference.

Rev. R. F. Harrell, our pastor at Waterproof, La., was in the city last week with his mother, who has been seriously ill. Brother Harrell himself was slightly "under the weather." We sincerely wish for them both speedy recovery.

Dr. J. C. Ballard, a well-known Mississippi layman, who has been stationed at Houston, Texas, in the Federal reconstruction work, has been transferred to New Orleans, where he will continue the same service. We acknowledge the honor of a call last week.

We learn with sorrow that Mrs. M. E. Scott, wife of our pastor at Black Hawk, Miss., has been ill since the first of July. For the past four weeks she has been at Hot Springs, Ark., where her condition is gradually improving. We are sure many prayers will be made for her recovery.

Rev. H. M. Johnson, our pastor at Eden, Miss., requests us to announce that Bishop W. F. McMurry will dedicate our church at Eden on Monday evening, Sept. 20, at 8 o'clock. All former pastors are cordially invited to be present. This will be a great occasion for Methodism in that section.

We regret to learn from a personal note that Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, North Mississippi Conference, has been indisposed recently; we are glad to know, however, that he is now able to go forward with his work. The affairs of the district are in good shape.

Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, has been on the sick list most of this year, but we are glad to learn that his condition is greatly improved, and the indications are that he will soon be as strong as ever. During his illness, the pastors of the district have assisted him in every way possible in carrying forward his work.

Dr. R. A. Meek, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, has announced the following appointments on the fourth round: Eureka circuit, at Eureka, Sept. 5, quarterly conference, Nov. 6; Charleston, Sept. 12, quarterly conference, Oct. 5; Sardis, Sept. 19, quarterly conference, Oct. 4. The round will be published in full next week.

Fifty-five new teachers have taken up work in the public schools of Lake Charles, La., this year—teachers from "away." Upon arrival, every teacher found a cordial letter of greeting and invitation to attend its services from the First Methodist Church, of which Rev. W. W. Holmes is pastor. It was just such a letter as would make a stranger feel at home, and we are sure it was greatly appreciated by these new teachers.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, the pastor, has just closed, at Lewis Chapel, on the Buchatunna charge, Mississippi Conference, what the people pronounce the greatest revival that has ever been held in the history of the church. The meeting resulted in a revival within the church, and in the addition of thirteen members, all on profession of faith. During the meeting there was some old-time Methodist shouting. To date there have been 65 additions to the church on this charge.

We based our recent statement that Rev. Robt. Selby had been appointed director of the Educational Campaign in the Mississippi Conference upon a news item in one of our secular exchanges from Mississippi. We learn, however, from authoritative sources, that such appointment has not been made. We repeat, though, the statement of our opinion that Brother Selby is admirably equipped for the work of this responsible position.

Just before going to press, we received the following telegram from Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District, under date of September 6: "We buried Mrs. J. J. Brooks, wife of our pastor at Dublin, Miss., to-day at Holly Springs. She died at the parsonage in Dublin, Sunday morning." We extend sincere sympathy to Brother Brooks in this great sorrow, and join with his friends in remembering him at the throne of grace.

A note from Rev. C. Norman Guice, one of our general evangelists, informs us that he has just closed a great union tabernacle meeting at Lexington, Mo. His next engagement is at Glen Allen, Miss. He has recently changed his place of residence from Siloam Springs, Ark., to Conway, Ark., where his young daughter will enter the Freshman class of Hendrix College this week. Brother Guice has one or two open dates this fall, which he would be glad to give to the work where needed.

Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Barry, of Coquille, Oregon, are the guests of their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Barefield, Jr., Meridian, Miss. After making his report of a successful year's work to the North West Conference, which met at Spokane, Washington, on August 25, Brother Barry was transferred to the Little Rock Conference. Pending the meeting of that Conference, he will be glad to assist in meetings during the months of September and October. His address will be, Russel, Miss., Route 1.

Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, while in the city on personal business last week, honored the Advocate office with a greatly appreciated call. We learned from him that Bishop W. F. McMurry is scheduled to be in the bounds of the Winona District, Sept. 19-23, preaching and dedicating churches. His itinerary calls for him to dedicate the church at Itta Bena on the morning of Sept. 19, and at Moorhead on the evening of the same day, and to preach on the evening of the 20th at Belzoni, of the 21st at Indianola, and of the 22d at Marks.

One of the most interesting publications we have come across in a long time is the "Notes" of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, issued quarterly by the wide-awake presiding elder, Rev. S. L. Pope. It is full of interesting information, some items of which are as follows: not a charge in the district pays its pastor less than $1155, and thirteen of the nineteen pay $2000 or more; every church in the district has a minute man chairman; every pastor in the district has made a subscription to the Superannuate Endowment Fund; Indianola has something like $30,000 in bank toward a $75,000 church, and Belzoni has subscriptions amounting to about $75,000 for a new church and parsonage enterprise. A picture of Biship W. F. McMurry adorns the first page of the "Notes."

Rev. John L. Sutton, a member of the Louisiana Conference, and for twelve years superintendent of the Destitute Orphan Boys' Home of this city, has accepted the superintendency of the Mississippi Children's Home Society and will make his home hereafter at Jackson, Miss. Brother Sutton has devoted a great deal of time and study to prison reform work, in which field he has made a national reputation, as well as having achieved remarkable success in his management of dependent boys. For the past three years the Home for Destitute Orphan Boys has been located temporarily at Pass Christian, Miss., where Brother Sutton has been actively identified with every good community movement. The Coast Beacon of that place, in its issue of August 28, devotes almost a column to an editorial appreciation of his services.

THE NEW PRESIDENT OF EMORY UNIVERSITY.

The Board of Trustees of Emory University, at the last meeting of the Board in June, decided that thereafter the University should be conducted with a Chancellor, giving it general supervision, and a President to whom was committed the management of internal details under the advice and supervision of the Chancellor. Bishop Candler was called to the Chancellorship, and Dr. Franklin N. Parker was requested to act as President until a suitable man could be found to take the Presidency permanently, he being unwilling to serve except for that time.

Dr. Parker has served during the summer session of the University, and is now succeeded by Dr. Harvey Warren Cox, who, since 1912, has been professor of Philosophy and Education in the University of Florida, and since 1916 the Dean of the Teachers' College of that University. Dr. Cox received the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard University in 1910 and the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in the same institution in 1911. He was the Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy of Harvard University until called to the Chair of Philosophy in the University of Florida. He has served successfully in every grade of education as a teacher of rural schools, principal of high schools, and as a professor in universities.

Dr. Cox is a man of the finest Christian character, and is a very earnest Methodist. He brings to his work marked native ability, the most thorough scholarship, and a splendid record for successful work in every field in which he has been engaged. The University is to be congratulated upon securing the services of such a man at this period in its history.

Dr. Cox will enter upon his duties on September 15, and the Fall Term of the University will open under his presidency, September 30.

THE TRUE SCHOLAR.

A few years ago, there lived in Oxford a tutor named Nettleship. He was a modest teacher of philosophy, much loved by his own pupils, but comparatively unknown to the world, and indifferent to the world's applause. He was of athletic tastes and physical fearlessness. In 1892 he was climbing Mont Blanc with his guides, and perished there in a snow storm. His last word to the guide was the word of a true scholar. "Forward," he said, and fell dead. On Nettleship's monument in Balliol College Chapel are these words, which any man who wants to be a scholar might well write over his desk and read every day: "He loved great things and thought little of himself. Desiring neither fame nor influence, he won the devotion of men and was a power in their lives; and seeking no disciple, he taught to many the greatness of the world and of man's kind." That was the scholar's reasonable service.—Francis G. Peabody.

On Saturday, June 5, 1920, at the Vicksburg Sanatorium, Sister ELIZABETH SHARBROUGH fell asleep, to wake beyond the silent river. So quietly, so peacefully, did she face the death angel—serenely conscious and calmly submissive in her last moments—that we are reminded of the poet's words:

"As one who wraps the garment of his couch about him,
And lies down to pleasant dreams."

Sister Sharbrough had suffered for many weary weeks from an incurable disease. She was carried to the hospital early in January, where she underwent an operation about two weeks later; and since that time, although she has had every attention that medical skill and loving hands could render, her strength has gradually ebbed away, until finally relief came to her tired body when her soul took its flight into the Great Beyond. Her remains were carried to Port Gibson, Miss., for interment, on Sunday, June 6. Sister Sharbrough is survived by her husband, Brother F. W. Sharbrough, who is our Sunday school superintendent, steward, and lay leader of our church at Holly Bluff, a brother of Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, our pastor at Biloxi, Miss. Besides her husband, she leaves two sons: Messrs. W. C. and F. W., Jr., and two daughters: Mrs. A. W. Eaton, and Mrs. W. T. Hegman. Scarcely have I ever known a character so universally loved wherever known, as was Sister Sharbrough. Soon after I was appointed to the charge of Louise and Holly Bluff, I began to be impressed with the fact that so many people referred to Sister Sharbrough as "the preachers' friend," and as one who was "always good and kind to everybody." Her life was made up of a chain of kindnesses; and many a grateful heart cherishes the memory of some occasion when Sister Sharbrough extended the gentle, helping hand. Although I knew her only a few days before she was carried away to the hospital, I claim the privilege of bearing personal testimony to the saintliness of her character and disposition. Many hearts were saddened by the news of her death; but we find consolation in the thought that although she can never come back to us, we may go to her in the Beautiful City of God, and there live together in unspeakable happiness throughout the countless ages of eternity.

A Friend,
M. K. MILLER.

On Saturday morning, August 14, 1920, the spirit of Sister MARY CATHERINE MAULDIN, aged 71, widow of William Joab Mauldin, left its tired, pain-racked body and winged its way homeward to God. Sister Mauldin was one of the oldest citizens and one of the oldest and most faithful members of the First Methodist Church in Water Valley. She loved her church devotedly; and though an invalid for five years and confined to her bed for more than two years in intense suffering, she never lost interest in her church and longed to be back at its services. A more beautiful life or a more spotless character one rarely sees. The pain of her sufferings was almost unbearable at times, but she bore it with a beautiful patience, that brought more to light the charm and grace of her Christian character. How rich and ripe that life had become! The rare fragrance of her character arose in beauty and sweetness above the frailties of her body. She outgrew the house she lived in and God called her to a better house on high. Her life still speaks in the lives of her children, W. B. Mauldin, W. J. Mauldin, J. W. Mauldin and Mrs. S. N. Berryhill, to whom she leaves the rich heritage of her Christian character as a sacred trust. It was the crowning joy of her triumphant departure, to receive, from his own lips, statements of Christian faith, and assurance that he would follow her Christian life, of her only child that had not before made profession of faith. She never doubted that it would be so. Of this good woman it might be said, "Heaven was in her before she was in heaven." Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.

Her pastor, L. P. WASSON.

MRS. ROSA GREGORY GUICE was born April 14, 1861, in Tazewell County, Va. She was the daughter of James Gregory. In early childhood she went to live with her uncle, L. C. Gregory, in Texas. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1878, and in 1879 was very happily converted, near Smithfield, Tamar County, Texas. Ever afterwards she lived a faithful, consistent member. She was happily married to Dr. N. A. Guice, November 26, 1879. They moved to Franklin County, Miss., in 1882, and later to Jefferson County. Their home was always the Methodist preacher's home, and they were very careful to bring up their children, two sons and four daughters, in the Sunday school and church. Two other children died in infancy. The other children, with the husband, survive her. In November, 1917, they moved to Vicksburg, and the first Sunday after she came Sister Guice put her membership and that of her family in Gibson Memorial Church. Whenever health permitted, she was faithful and regular in attendance at church. It was always a privilege for me as her pastor to visit her and have prayer in the home. She was greatly beloved by her neighbors, and all recognized her as a strong Christian character. She was a blessing to all who knew her. There are many besides the family who miss her, and the dear loved ones have many friends to share their sorrow. And yet our sorrow is not without hope. On January 2, 1920, her tired, aching body yielded up the spirit to God. The next day we laid her body to rest in the Vicksburg Cemetery. Since then we look up and sing:

"Jesus, thou Prince of life,
Thy chosen cannot die!
Like thee they conquer in the strife
To reign with thee on high."

OSMOND S. LEWIS.

THE COLLINS CHARGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: Pickett, Cottrell, Downer and I are still on the job and happy in our work. Pickett is doing magnificent work on the Williamsburg charge, Cottrell is commanding the love and esteem of the people of Mt. Olive, and Charley is making things hum on the Seminary charge.

The Collins charge is made up of Collins, Ora, and Bethel, and the last named church is composed of the best people (outside of Collins and Ora) on earth. I have a great-hearted people to serve.

We have held all our revivals with good results. Brother B. W. Lewis assisted us at Ora and the young people were deeply impressed, and I believe much lasting good was accomplished. Brothers J. T., H. P., and O. S. Lewis assisted me at Collins, and a profound impression was made on the people of the little city and surrounding country. People were made to see what real home religion will do for a family when all the conditions as required by the Most High are faithfully met. I am here to tell you, Carley, that those dear sainted parents of mine met those conditions. We are what we are by the grace of God through the powerful influence of home religion.

Brother W. B. Jones, our efficient presiding elder, did the preaching for us at Bethel. He did some real heart-searching preaching, and the good Lord wonderfully blessed him; and many people testified to the fact that they were made stronger and many were saved and reclaimed. As a result of our year's effort, with the results from our meetings, we have taken into the church by vows and certificates about 50 souls.

Our Fourth of July service at Collins was very impressive. We took 23 into the church—one grown person and the rest boys and girls. The thing that impressed me in the reception of that large class was, the majority of them were boys. Every one of the class with the exception of the grown person came from the Sunday school.

The Lord is blessing us in more ways than one, and I will not weary you by counting those blessings—they are too many to count. Suffice it to say, I expect to go to Conference with a full report and more.

May the blessings of Almighty God be with all the brethren.

Ephraim Washington Flowers—An Appreciation.

Some lives remind us of meteors flashing across the midnight sky, brilliant for a moment but lost to view, and leaving the night the more sombre and chill. Once in a while a life is seen which, though not so radiant, shines through the darkness like a fixed star, with clear, steady and persistent lustre. To-night and to-morrow night and always it beams forth its blessed illumination and sweet influence. It comforts with the sense of stability and awakens unconscious gratitude for some thing to be sure of. Such was the life of my loved and now sainted friend, Ephraim Washington Flowers.

In 1813, or thereabout, Henry Flowers and his wife, Nancy Adams Flowers, came from North Carolina and established their home at what is now known as Smithdale, in Amite County, Miss. They were devout Christians and loyal Methodists, who at once began to make their influence count in the community for the kingdom of Christ. The wife was a member of the Adams family, for whom Adams Camp Ground was named—which must have been established almost immediately after the home-building of these new settlers, as the Mississippi Annual Conference held its third session there in November, 1815.

Ephraim Washington Flowers, the youngest of the ten children who blessed this happy home, was born March 28, 1832, and on December 31, 1919, from the same house where he first saw the light, he was called to the rewards awaiting the "good and faithful."

He gave his heart to God and joined the Methodist Church at Adams Camp Ground when he was but a little boy, and there was never any wavering in his allegiance and devotion. His father died when he was seventeen years old and, at his mother's request, he at once took his father's place in conducting the family worship, which beautiful custom he maintained without a break till the last days of the illness to which he succumbed.

Throughout the Civil War he made a faithful and heroic soldier, leaving the dear wife and five small children in the old home to the care of the heavenly Father. There faith burned bright and the family altar daily wafted its sweet incense up to God. He came out of the mighty and subtle temptations of those terrible years unscathed, and with a character that silently and potently witnessed to the power of the grace of God.

Brother Flowers was a man of clean life, free from the bad habits and inconsistencies which mar the example and pervert the influence of so many "good men." At no time in his life was he ever addicted to drink or the use of tobacco in any form. He was never heard to use even the bywords, which impair the usefulness of many, nor was his conversation made questionable with hyperbole and exaggeration.

He was one of the most reliable men I ever knew. Even under severest provocation he was never hasty in word or act. He took time always to think through the situation, and then his words and actions were as they ought to be.

One of his beautiful characteristics few men attain, namely: the ability at the same time to detest the evil practices of a man and yet love the man. Always the open and avowed enemy of evil, he was yet ever ready to do any kindness for the individual who was at fault. Every one who knew him knew this. One who had been notoriously lawless came to his last, lingering sickness. The Christians were concerned for his soul, and one asked that he allow the cottage prayer meeting held at his house. He replied: "Well, you may have it here if Ephraim Flowers will lead the meeting." He led the meeting, and it is believed that through this meeting and Brother Flowers' subsequent visits that lost soul was led to Christ, for he professed faith and joined the church.

Brother Flowers was a man of dauntless courage. He never boasted, never recited his exploits, but he was incapable of panic or fright. When I was his pastor, thirty years ago, in attempting to settle a community and church quarrel, I aroused the ire of some who would not make peace on any terms, and six or eight strapping fellows set on me to give me a thrashing. Just in the moment of crisis Enoch Carruth (of blessed memory) and Ephraim Flowers happed on the scene and one stepped to either side of me. They said not a word, but Brother Flowers significantly changed ends with the seasoned hickory he always carried. My assailants lost their enthusiasm instantly and remembered engagements elsewhere.

When the White Caps were burning property and running off and killing negro tenants in that section, the good citizens at last got together to devise means for suppressing these outrages. They determined to organize a company of militia, ask the governor for arms and elect a captain who should have full authority. Ephraim W. Flowers was elected captain. He accepted the dangerous post. He organized and drilled his company. Then, accompanied by chosen citizens, he rode to the homes of the suspected White Cap leaders, none of whom were found, and left the message that any further lawlessness would result in serious trouble for the perpetrators. That ended White-Capism in that section.

The Bible, Methodist Hymnal, Christian Advocate and agricultural journals furnished his reading matter. He loved his Bible and spent most of his spare time reading and studying it; and he loved the songs of Zion. Few laymen indeed have as clear and definite understanding of the Holy Scriptures as he had acquired.

His home life was beautiful. His wife and children looked up to him with that reverence, confidence and devotion that only such a life as his could inspire. And his relation with his neighbors was most cordial and hospitable. He never allowed any disagreements or differences of opinion to mar the friendly relations with them.

He was utterly devoid of egotism. As deep as were his convictions, as definite as was his purpose, as steadfast as was his consecration, as courageous as was his spirit, he chose always the inconspicuous place and task. And, though appreciative to the highest degree of the services rendered by others, it never seemed to occur to him that there was also value attached to his own.

He was twice married. His first wife was Mary Foster, who bore him eight children. One died in childhood and two, Mrs. J. B. Wilson and Ephraim W. Flowers, Jr., M.D., late of McComb, Miss., were called to their eternal reward some years ago, each leaving sons and daughters. Those surviving are, Mrs. H. F. Magee, of Smithdale, Miss.; Henry Flowers, M.D., of Brookhaven, Miss.; Mrs. N. R. Quackenbush, of Gloster, Miss.; Miss Florence Flowers, at the old home, and Mrs. S. E. Denman, of Auburn, Miss. All these are living in the faith of their ascended father and showing how deeply his Christly life has impressed their own.

I have known none more worthy to join St. Paul in his declaration: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me in that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing." (2 Tim. 4:7 and 8). A few swift passing years, and we shall meet again this quiet, faithful saint of God hard by the throne on high.

H. M. ELLIS.

McComb, Miss.

FROM NEW ALBANY CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you pleaso allow space in our Conference organ for a few words about the meeting just closed at Mt. Olivet, New Albany circuit, North Mississippi Conference? I am sure a number of the Advocate readers, and especially the former pastors of our church, will be glad to hear of the glorious revival we have had.

The meeting lasted one week. The pastor, Brother W. C. Beasley, did the preaching and the singing was directed by Brother Phil Grissom. Both did well their part, as was shown by the results of the meeting. Brother Beasley preached with earnestness and power. I wish to say just here that although Brother Beasley is young in the ministry, he is now a preacher of ability and power and is destined to be one of the really big preachers of our church in the near future.

At one of the morning services Brother Beasley did not preach; he said that was the peoples' service. We held the old-time love feast, which is so nearly obsolete, almost every one of the large congregation participating; and many of them shouted the praise of God in the old-time way. It was truly a great service. At the closing service on Sunday we had a flower service, which was very touching and beautiful.

Another gratifying feature of the meeting, was that the people of the different denominations entered whole-heartedly into it with us. The harmony was beautiful indeed. Taking it all in all, it was the greatest revival that has been held at Mt. Olivet in many years. Twenty-five were added to our church, seventeen on profession of faith and eight by letter. Many Christians were revived and brought into closer relationship with God, whose presence was felt in every service. We feel that the Lord will be glorified in this community in the future as a result of this meeting.

At the close of the meeting it was arranged to re-paint our church, and do other much needed work.

In conclusion, we wish to ask the prayers of all Christians everywhere that we at Mt. Olivet may continue on this high spiritual plane and go forward to even greater things in His name.

Sincerely,

W. M. STOKES.

NUXATED IRON

"Time and again I have prescribed organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and surprised patients at the rapidity with which their weakness and general debility was replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality," says Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner. "I took Nuxated Iron myself to build me up after a serious case of nervous exhaustion. The effects were apparent after a few days and within three weeks it had virtually revitalized my whole system and put me in superb physical condition."

GIRLS! USE LEMONS FOR SUNBURN, TAN

Try it! Make this lemon lotion to whiten your tanned or freckled skin.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion whitener, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands and see how quickly the freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

Druggists also sell larger "Bayer packages." Aspirin is trade mark Bayer Manufacture Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

OLD SORES.

Should Not Run on Forever.

While it may not look dangerous and may not rapidly grow larger, its progress may fool you. Dirt and millions of germs will attack it every day. Blood poison is likely to set in at any time. Buy a box of Gray's Ointment. It immediately soothes the pain, cleanses the wound, kills the germs and begins healing. It is immediately effective with sores, boils, cuts, stings, burns, bruises, eczema and the many similar forms of skin eruption. If your druggist cannot supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you free.—Adv.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231g Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Hens Lay While Moulting

First to lay is first to pay. "I used 'More Eggs' Tonic, and for the first time my hens laid through the moulting season," writes Mrs. C. Luginbuhl, of Norwood, Ohio. E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. Letters from many users tell how they actually got eggs during moulting! You, too, can make your hens moult fast, get eggs sooner and more eggs all fall and winter. This scientific tonic has been tried, tested and proven by over 400,000 chicken raisers. Try Reefer's "More Eggs" on his iron clad money-back guarantee of satisfaction.

If you wish to try this great profit-maker, simply write a postcard or letter to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 8259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and ask for his special free package $1.00 offer. Don't send any money. Mr. Reefer will send you two $1.00 packages of "More Eggs." You pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the price of just one package, the other package being free. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned at any time within 30 days, on request. So there is no risk. Write to-day for this special free package offer. Profit by the experience of man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

We are proud of the confidence doctors, druggists and the public have in 666 Chill and Fever Tonic.—Adv.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

From the 22d to the 27th of August, I was at Mize. I went there with the intention of teaching "The Pupil." While no one took the examination, I do believe that we did good work on the instruction and at the preaching services. Nine joined the church on profession of faith. This is a loyal church and has some fine, loyal, true members.

The fifth Sunday was spent at Williamsburg in the Fifth Sunday Institute. Three of the four schools were represented. We had a fine day. Some progress was reported and some progress promised. Their next institute will be held at Santee, the fifth Sunday in October.

It is just a short time now until the Annual Conference—just a few Sundays before a new Sunday school year begins.

I trust that every Sunday school will have Promotion Day, even if there are only two classes in the school. Promote those who ought to be promoted from one class to another.

If you are not a subscriber to the Church School, subscribe for it. It is the greatest magazine for those who are seriously studying Religious Education that I know.

Pray for the work and pray for the children.

Yours in Him,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Promotion Day program offered by the Publishing House will answer a double purpose. It will do for Promotion Day and Sunday School Day together. The programs and charts are 50 cents a dozen. If you get them, they will give you a big lift.

You might ask, why observe Promotion Day? For the same reason that children are promoted in our literary schools. If we make progress in religious education, we must advance the children to the next higher grades to the lessons adapted to their needs. No wonder that the children rebel against the folly of going in a circle year after year.

We are ready to hold institutes in every district before the meeting of the Annual Conference. How can this be done without the help of the men in charge of the church? What is the help needed? When a letter is written asking the privilege of holding an institute in your charge, the least that is expected is a reply, saying, "yes or no." Some sort of an answer gives a chance to work at another place. Silence is a species of "hold up." The Golden Rule ought to work in a case like the one mentioned.

Are you reaching every child in your charge? Is the Worship Service at the opening of the school satisfactory to you and helpful to the entire school? Have you all the teachers you need and are these teachers being trained to meet the needs of the developing children? Are you planning to observe Promotion Day or do anything towards building up your school? If you would have these questions answered, take time to attend the institute held to help you help the children. If you cannot attend, send some one.

Is every one that attends your Sunday school forming the habit of reading a portion of the Bible daily? If so, you are raising a Bible reading church for the future. Is every one being taught to pray daily? If so, you are raising up a praying church. Is every one being taught to attend the preaching service? If so, you are raising up a church-going people. Is every one being taught to sing? Then you will have a singing church. Is every one being taught missions? Then you will have a missionary church. Is every one taught tithing? Then you will have an honest church. If you are not teaching these things, then what are you teaching? Do you know what you are teaching? These questions are enough to make a man mad if he is not trying honestly to answer them.

Humanity lives in a world of impossibilities when God is left out of the reckoning.—Exchange.

REPORT OF FINDINGS COMMITTEE

To the Members of the Set-Up Meeting of the Educational Movement, Held at Little Rock, Ark., August 17-18, 1920.

We, your Committee on Findings, beg to report as follows: We have before us a copy of the paper adopted by the Set-Up Meeting recently held at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, and recommend that this meeting heartily endorse that paper as expressive of our own convictions and faith regarding the necessity, timeliness and reasonableness of the Educational Movement. There is no course open to the church except to undertake this task at this time. The paper expresses so fully and so well our own judgment and convictions that we wish to adopt it in its entirety.

Second—We recommend that this gathering urge that, in view of the vital interests involved, the plans as now formulated by the Educational Commission for presenting this cause to the approaching sessions of the Annual Conferences, be fully endorsed, and that the bishops in charge be requested to give every possible assistance and facility for presenting this cause, and that our Annual Conferences be urged to devote one whole day of their next session to the consideration of this important and vital part of our church life and work.

Third—We would express our profound faith in the ability of our church to carry this movement to complete success. The imperative need of Christian workers for all sorts of lines of service, the utterly inadequate facilities of our institutions of learning where these workers must be trained, the call of the world's needs, these and many other things constitute a challenge to the faith, prayer, energy, loyalty and liberality of the church. God has never yet laid a task upon His church beyond its ability to perform, and we believe that the church has resources of every kind fully commensurate to the demands now made upon it. We call attention to the fact that the amount to be secured in this movement is only 3 per cent of one year's annual income of Southern Methodism, and these gifts to be distributed through five years; and it is less than half of one per cent of the estimated wealth of the church.
